Other factors which underlie the commissioners' operation in pursuit of these aims are their responsibilities to make additional provision for the cure of souls in parishes, a trust inherited from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and to augment the maintenance of the poor clergy, inherited from the Queen Anne's bounty—their liabilities under the Clergy Pensions Measures; their other statutory obligations and their recognition of their partnership with parishes and dioceses who, increasingly, provide from giving for the maintenance of the Church's nationwide ministry. Without that giving, it could not be sustained.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Universities (Managers)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she is taking to increase universities access to high-quality management expertise. [3991]

Mr. Forth: Universities are responsible for taking their own decisions on management matters. They, like other employers, can benefit from the use of the national occupational standards for managers. These represent best practice by managers at all levels and form the basis for national vocational qualifications.

Student Loans

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is her Department's estimate of the total outstanding student loan debt in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97, (c) 1997–98, (d) 1998–99 and (e) 1999–2000. [4048]

Mr. Forth: The Department's estimates, to the nearest million, for the United Kingdom are:

Financial year-end	£ million
1995–96	1,940
1996–97	2,929
1997–98	4,012
1998–99	5,077

The Department does not hold figures for 1999–2000.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list projected (a) gross student loan and outlay and (b) student loan repayments in (i) 1996–97, (ii) 1997–98, (iii) 1998–99 and (iv) 1999–2000. [4053]

Mr. Forth: The estimated UK figures are:

			£ million
Financial year	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
Loan outlay	1,013.0	1,145.8	1,200.5
Loan repayments (principal and interest)	100.2	154.3	244.7

The Department does not hold figures for 1999–2000.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the cumulative total expenditure on computer systems for the administration of student loans by the Student Loans Company since 1990 in current prices; and what are the constituent parts of this sum. [3924]

Mr. Forth: These are matters for the Student Loans Company. I have asked the acting chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is her Department's estimate of the public sector borrowing requirement effect of the introduction of subsidised private sector loans in 1996–97 and each relevant year thereafter. [4047]

Mr. Forth: The extent of any overall reduction in public expenditure arising from the introduction of subsidised private sector loans to students will depend on what arrangements are made with the financial institutions and the extent to which students take out loans made under them. The plans announced at the time of the Budget made the following provisional assumptions about net savings.

1996–97	100
1998–99	250

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the meetings she or officials in her Department have had with (a) the Student Loans Company, (b) representatives of students and higher education institutions and (c) hon. Members regarding proposed reforms to the provision of student loans indicating the date of each meeting. [3926]

Mr. Forth: As I informed the hon. Gentleman during the Second Reading debate on 27 November, Official Report, column 954, I have personally spoken to the chairman and the chief executive of the Student Loans Company about our plans on two occasions. The first was on 16 August and the second on 19 September. My officials met with representatives of the company on 7 August, 16 October, 18 October and 20 October for discussions. This is in addition to their usual contacts with the company which provide frequent opportunities for discussion.

My officials have also invited representatives of the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals and the National Union of Students in to discuss our proposals. The meeting with the CVCP was constructive. The NUS has not yet replied.

No meetings were held with hon. Members prior to the First Reading of the Bill.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what were the (a) maintenance grant, (b) student loan and (c) allowances available to students aged (i) 26, (ii) 27, (iii) 28, (iv) 29 to 50 and (v) 50 years or over in each year since 1990–91, both in cash prices and current prices. [4323]

Mr. Forth: Data on the main mandatory grant and student loan rates are shown in the following table. The allowances shown are available in addition to the main rates of grant. The amounts shown in the "current" columns have been calculated in 1995–96 prices using the September retail prices indices, excluding mortgage interest payments, at the start of each academic year.

Student loans are not available to those who have attained the age of 50 before the date on which they begin their course. The older student's allowance is available according to the age of the student before the start of his course and provided that he meets the relevant earnings test. It is not available to most students who start their course on or after 1 September 1995.

College Fees Payments

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what is (a) the total recurrent grant and (b) the amount by which the recurrent grant has been reduced in recognition of college fees payment, for each university with recognised collegiate status in the current academic year; [4312]

(2) what is the total value of college fees payment to each university with recognised collegiate status in the current academic year; [4320]

(3) what is the current level of college fees reimbursed through the student's mandatory award in each of the colleges of universities which have recognised collegiate structures. [4313]

Mr. Forth: The Higher Education Funding Council for England determines the total recurrent grant and the amounts by which the recurrent grant is reduced in recognition of college fees payments at each of these universities. The total recurrent grant and the amount by which it has been reduced in the current academic year are given as follows for each collegiate university in England.

	Recurrent grant	Reduction
Cambridge	85,435,264	11,475,844
Durham	29,136,143	172,150
Kent	19,539,798	105,798

Oxford	82,561,694	13,419,264
York	20,565,594	90,244

The HEFCE estimated the total value of college fees paid to the colleges of these universities to be as follows:

Cambridge	28,689,610
Durham	1,223,208
Kent	736,230
Lancaster	1,132,250
Oxford	31,207,591
York	643,200

The current maximum levels of college fees reimbursed through a student's mandatory award in each of the colleges of the collegiate universities are shown.

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the spending per student in colleges of further education in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and what is her Department's estimate for each year from 1995–96 to 1998–99. [4322]

Mr. Paice: Information on the total amount of spending in further education colleges is not held centrally. FE colleges have access to many sources of income, other than public expenditure, and are free to take their own decisions on how these resources are deployed. The Further Education Funding Council, however, holds collated accounting information from colleges, and I am therefore asking the council's chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Training for Work

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the date of last claims criteria for training for work is still in force; and what are the numbers of training for work applicants rejected under this criterion. [4748]

Mr. Paice: Following discussions with training and enterprise councils and the Employment Service, the Government have announced plans to change from date of claim to an alternative measure of unemployment duration for funding purposes from 1 February next year. Eligibility for the programme is not based on this criterion, so no applicants will have been rejected on this basis.

Schools Expenditure

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) primary and (b) secondary schools reach his Department's recommended expenditure level for (i) books and (ii) other resource items. [4544]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Government do not recommend expenditure levels for books or other school resources. They believe that schools should be allowed to decide themselves how to spend their own budgets.

School Libraries

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many school library services have been closed in each of the past five years; [4542]

(2) what was the expenditure on books and materials in respect of school library services in each of the past five years, in real terms. [4545]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department does not collect this information.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the future of the schools library service. [4546]

Mr. Squire: The Government recognise that school library services can play an important role in supporting schools. They also believe that schools should have the freedom to decide themselves how to secure services, books and other resources to support learning.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools reach the chief inspector of schools' recommendation in respect of library resource items per head. [4543]

Mr. Squire: Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools does not make recommendations in respect of library resource items per head.

Nursing Vouchers

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment after what period she expects to evaluate the pilot scheme for nursery vouchers; and by what means. [4493]

Mr. Robin Squire: The operational arrangements for phase 1 will be evaluated in the course of 1996–97 in consultation with the local education authorities concerned and the company responsible for voucher issue. Inspection reports will also become available over that period.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for each scheme so far agreed under the private finance initiative the revenue commitment entered into by the Government for each year until the commitment ceases. [3397]

Mrs. Gillan: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 6 December.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the policy changes which will arise from the final agreement in respect of each scheme agreed under the private finance initiative. [3398]

Mrs. Gillan: The agreement of schemes under the private finance initiative does not result in changes to the policy of the Government on the PFI. Agreed schemes do, however, represent the application of the PFI policy and offer us the opportunity to refine further the process of implementation. The lessons learned are set out in the publication "Private Opportunity, Public Benefit". This is published jointly by HM Treasury and the private finance panel, and a copy is available in the Members' Library.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many mobile telephones there are available in her Department for the use of Ministers. [4255]

Mr. Robin Squire: Each Minister has his or her own personal mobile telephone—six in total. In addition, each Minister's private office has a mobile telephone—a further six. This makes a total of 12 immediately available for the use of Ministers.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what was the total amount paid by her Department to consultants in connection with the introduction of the job seeker's allowance; [4583]

(2) which firms of consultants were employed by her Department in connection with the introduction of the job seeker's allowance. [4586]

Mr. Forth: The Department for Education and Employment has to date paid £88,000 to Andersen Consulting.

Social Affairs Council

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement following the Social Affairs Council meeting on 5 December. [4940]

Mr. Forth: I attended the Social Affairs Council meeting on 5 December in Brussels.

There was an open discussion on employment issues. The Council's report for the employment discussion at the Madrid European Council, and the paper covering that report together with reports by the Economic and Finance Council and the Commission were agreed unanimously.

Unanimous agreement was reached on a fourth equal opportunities action programme with a budget of 30 mecu. There were no discussions on the draft community programmes on older people, health and safety—SAFE—and research and information exchange in the employment field—ESSEN. There were no other votes.

There were Commission presentations on three issues being taken forward under the other member states' agreement on social policy, on a Commission communication on the future of social protection, on a draft recommendation on the balanced participation of women and men in decision making and on the work of a Commission group on the information society. The draft posted workers directive was formally remitted to the Italian presidency.

The draft directive amending the use of work equipment directive was agreed as an A point, with the United Kingdom and Italy abstaining.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 8 December 1995

ENVIRONMENT

Environmental and Economic Policies

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the recent report by the European Commission on the effects of environmental and economic policies. [1169]

Mr. Clappison: Much of the analysis and policy prescription in the European Commission report is in line with the views of Her Majesty's Government as set out in the UK's sustainable development strategy. In particular, the Government are committed to promoting the use of economic instruments where this is appropriate, though each case should be judged on its own merits. In the case of the landfill tax, the Government also adopted the principle of using a tax on pollution to reduce more distortionary taxes on employment. However, individual countries should in general be left to make their own choice of the most appropriate instrument to achieve their environmental goals.

Pigeons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he has given to the use of birds of prey to control feral pigeons in London. [4690]

Mr. Clappison: Under the provisions of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 my Department and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food issue annual general licences permitting authorised persons to kill or take 13 species of pest bird, including feral pigeons, for specified reasons using any method not prohibited by section 5 of the 1981 Act. It is a matter for the authorised persons to determine the most appropriate method of control.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what evidence or representations he has been sent about the extent of the pigeon problem in London; what are the implications for public health; what is his programme of control; and if he will make a statement. [4689]

Mr. Clappison: My Department has regular correspondence on the subject of pigeon problems in urban areas.

Under the provisions of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, my Department issues an annual general licence permitting authorised persons to kill or take 13 species of pest bird, including feral pigeons, for purposes of preserving public health of public safety. Under part VI of the Public Health Act 1961, local authorities have a specific power to abate or mitigate any nuisance, annoyance or damage caused by the congregation of pigeons in any built-up area.

Dredging Licences

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the conditions attached to dredging licences; what mechanisms will be employed to monitor compliance with conditions; when they will be made public; and if he will make a statement. [4766]

Sir Paul Beresford: Dredging licences are issued by the Crown Estate Commissioners. A prerequisite to the issue of a licence is a favourable Government view issued by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. Government views contain any conditions specified by the Government under which the extraction should be allowed to go ahead. These conditions are designed to ensure protection of the marine environment and to prevent coastal damage arising from the dredging operation. They also include monitoring requirements and the provision of monitoring data for consideration by the Crown Estate, this Department and the Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food.

Letters containing Government views are issued to the Crown Estate, who include the conditions in their licences, and are copied to interested parties. They are available to the public. It would be for the Crown Estate Commissioners to decide whether to make licences public.

Public Car Parking Expenditure

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what powers he has to prevent Tyne and Wear development corporation or any other public agency from spending money from their grant allocation on land reclamation to provide car parking spaces. [4702]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 7 December 1995]: Under section 138 of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 the Secretary of State has powers to give directions to an urban development corporation for restricting the exercise of its powers or for requiring it to exercise those powers in a specified manner. The Secretary of State has similar powers in respect of English Partnerships.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to prevent Tyne and Wear development corporation or any other agency from spending money from their grant on reclaiming land to provide 1,400 car parking spaces as part of stage 2 of the development of the Wearmouth colliery site in Sunderland. [4707]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer given 7 December 1995]: No. Land reclamation is one of the prime functions of urban development corporations.

The stage 2 development will proceed only if a suitable regeneration use can be found. It is a proper use of public money to pump prime private developments on difficult sites.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what impact the changes in the composition of the standard spending assessment formula for 1996–97 have had on the levels of standard spending assessment and total external support for (a) Buckinghamshire county council, (b) Aylesbury Vale district council, (c) Chiltern district council and (d) Wycombe district council; and if he will make a statement. [4698]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 7 December 1995]: Changes in proposed 1996–97 standard spending assessments and total external support for these authorities are shown in the table.

The changes in SSAs reflect the SSA control totals shown in annex E to the draft local government finance report for 1996–97, and any proposed data and methodology changes.

The changes in TES for individual authorities reflect changes in authorities' SSAs, their share of the proceeds of the national non-domestic rate, and any entitlement to SSA reduction grant.

Local Government Reorganisation Orders

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the local government re-organisation orders covered by the financial provision referred to in his oral statement of 30 November 1995, Official Report, column 1333. [4703]

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 7 December 1995]: Structure orders have been approved by Parliament for reorganisation in Avon, Cleveland, Humberside and North Yorkshire in 1996 and Bedfordshire, Buckinghamshire, Derbyshire, Dorset, Durham, East Sussex, Hampshire, Staffordshire, and Wiltshire in 1997. Local authorities in these areas, and authorities in any other areas where future structure orders provide for reorganisation in 1997, will be eligible for assistance with transitional costs in 1996–97. I hope to make a more detailed statement on the timing of further structure orders soon.

Local Government Elections

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment with respect to those local authority areas which are still the subject of review by the Local Government Commission on what date he proposes that local elections be held for any authority that may be created; and on what date local authorities will take up their responsibilities. [4859]

Sir Paul Beresford: For all those districts which are the subject of fresh reviews by the Local Government Commission, the timing of any structural change will depend on the commission's final recommendations and on the Government's response to those recommendations. Where there is to be reorganisation, it is our policy that there should be full elections to the future unitary authority the year before the transfer of responsibilities.

Departmental Spending Programmes

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list (a) the individual name of, and total amount in cash terms planned to be spent on, each individual spending programme as a result of the Budget settlement 1994 and (b) the total amount in cash terms now planned to be spent on each of these individual programmes as a result of the Budget settlement 1995 (i) for each individual spending programme making up the broad spending headings contained in the table "Provision for Department of the Environment Programmes 1995–96 to 1997–98" in his Department's press release No. 668 and (ii) for each year from 1995–96 to 1997–98; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 7 December 1995]: The information requested is in the table which sets out spending plans announced at the time of the 1994 Budget and current plans for programme expenditure lines of £10 million and above. Detailed expenditure proposals for 1996–97 and beyond will be set out in my Department's main estimates and the 1996 annual report, to be published next March.

[2] 1995 plans for 1995–96 and 1996–97 include a transfer of £19 million from Housing Corporation capital to SRB residual programmes, for city challenge projects.

[3] Resources for the rough sleepers initiative are split between the Housing Corporation and Other Housing. At this stage the split is provisional, as final plans will be made after a consultation exercise.

[4] Provision for 1995–96 is for transfer to the Department of Social Security to meet the housing benefit costs of Large Scale Voluntary transfers. The 1995 Plans are lower since most of the transfers for 1995–96 have already taken place.

[5] A transfer of ERDF resources to the Department of National Heritage, totalling £5 million in 1996–97 and £3 million in 1997–98, was agreed subsequent to DOE press release 688.

[6] A transfer of £13 million a year from 1996–97 not reflected in these figures is also proposed from the Countryside Commission to MAFF in respect of the countryside stewardship scheme.

[7] 1995 plans for future years include the transfer of resources from the National Rivers Authority, waste regulation authorities, Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Pollution and certain DOE functions into the Environment Agency. It is also proposed to transfer £7 million a year from 1996–97 to MAFF in respect of the agency's fisheries functions. This transfer is not reflected in the table.

[8] Until July 1995 the Health and Safety Executive was part of the Department of Employment group.

[9] 1995 plans include the transfer of most of the resources for property holdings to the Cabinet Office, excluding the QEII conference centre and certain other buildings.

SCOTLAND

Forestry Commission

Mr. Cynog Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what criteria were employed in the selection of a new director general for the Forestry Commission. [3723]

Mr. Kynoch: The criteria used in selecting the new director general, including the qualities, experience and other attributes required, were set out in the leaflet, "Forestry Commission: Director General: Information for Applicants: B/2507", a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

North Lanarkshire Council (Appointments)

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whom he intends to appoint to conduct the inquiry into appointments made by North Lanarkshire council and if he will make a statement. [5514]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Under the powers conferred on me by section 211 of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973 I have appointed Mr. D. I. K. MacLeod to conduct the inquiry. Mr. MacLeod, a senior partner in Shepherd and Wedderburn WS, is a highly respected member of the legal profession in Scotland and an accredited specialist in employment law.

The formal terms of reference will be as follows:

> "To inquire into the question as to whether North Lanarkshire Council have, in relation to their appointment of Chief Officers, failed to comply with the duty imposed on them by section 7 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 to make appointments to paid office or employment on merit, and to report thereon."

The decision to establish this inquiry follows a number of complaints made to the Local Government Staff Commission (Scotland), which concluded that it was not able to give the council a clean bill of health.

The inquiry provides an opportunity to establish whether the complaints are justified and whether action such as re-running the appointment procedures is necessary. It is in the interests of all concerned that the matter should be resolved speedily but fairly and comprehensively and I have asked Mr. MacLeod to let me have his report by 31 January 1996.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) which firms of consultants were employed by his Department in connection with the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance; [4587]

(2) what was the total amount paid by his Department to consultants in connection with the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance. [4582]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 7 December 1995]: My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Social Security and the Secretary of State for Education and Employment are responsible for the jobseeker's allowance. No firms were employed and no moneys were paid by the Scottish Office.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Utility Industries (Mergers and Takeovers)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is (a) the average period and (b) the statutory minimum period within which the Directors General of Fair Trading, for Electricity Supply and for Water Services (i) receive and (ii) make recommendations with respect to the referring of proposed mergers and takeovers in the relevant industries to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission. [5057.]

Mr. John M. Taylor: There are no statutory minimum periods for consideration of mergers laid down in the Fair Trading Act for considering mergers. The other matters raised by the hon. Member are for the regulatory bodies concerned. I am arranging for the Director General of Fair Trading to send a reply to the hon. Member, in consultation with the Director General for Water Services and Director General for Electricity Supply as appropriate.

TREASURY

Finance Bill

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to publish the Finance Bill. [4963]

Mr. Jack: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Southport (Mr. Banks) on 7 December 1995, column 332.

Self-Assessment

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the savings to his Department from the introduction of tax self-assessment. [2690]

Mr. Jack: Self-assessment is expected to produce net staff savings of £50 million per year as a result of streamlining existing procedures within the Inland Revenue. Services to taxpayers will be maintained.

Government Debt

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the annual interest bill paid on Government debt for each year since 1978. [4328]

Mr. Waldegrave: Central Government net debt interest payments, which score in GGE(X), are shown in the table.

Coinage Changes

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will announce the results of the Royal Mint's consultations about changes to the United Kingdom coinage. [4567]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: In October 1994, the Royal Mint issued a consultation document seeking views about the possible introduction of a £2 coin for general circulation and on whether the existing 50p coin should be replaced by a smaller coin. In particular, the Royal Mint sought the views of those with special interests such as blind and elderly people and those who handle large amounts of coins and the manufacturers and users of coin-operated machines.

Responses to the Mint showed strong support for the introduction of a £2 coin and also a preference for a smaller 50p coin. I have carefully considered these responses and have now decided to introduce a new smaller 50p coin and a general circulation £2 coin. The new coins will be issued towards the end of 1997.

The new 50p coin will be smaller than the existing one but will be the same colour and shape. The £2 coin will be bicolour with a white centre and yellow outer ring. The precise specifications for the new coins will be issued early in the new year.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Montserrat

Sir Michael Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what request he has received for assistance because of renewed volcanic threats in Montserrat; and if he will make a statement. [4803]

Mr. Hanley: These threats caused an orderly evacuation of 5,000 people to prepared sites in the north of the island on 1 and 2 December. There is a continuous dialogue between Her Majesty's Government, the Governor and the Government of Montserrat. As a result, some of the associated costs are being met by the Overseas Development Administration within the £3 million committed to monitoring, relief and evacuation preparedness initiatives since this emergency began in July.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Marketing

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the amount of aid for marketing and processing by county in each of the last three years. [4742]

Mr. Baldry: The available information is in the table. No awards were made in 1994.

North Sea Dredging

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the dredging programme in the North sea, area 107; what proposals he has to ensure that full consultation takes place; what compensation is to be made available to the Lynn fishermen; what is the time scale for compensation; and if he will make a statement; [4765]

(2) what use is being made of the material being dredged from North sea, area 107; and if he will make a statement. [4767]

Mr. Baldry: A Crown Estate licence to dredge area 107 was first granted in 1968. Under the Government view arrangements, the current uplift in the annual extraction limit for the area has been agreed for a period of four years. Material extracted under this variation may be used only to complete the initial major beach renourishment programme being undertaken by the National Rivers Authority from Mablethorpe to Skegness in order to reduce the risk of flooding to some 35,000 people. Extensive consultation with fisheries representatives took place before the variation was agreed.

There is no provision for compensation, but in the Government view that we gave we made it clear that the consent was subject to a number of conditions which were designed to afford the maximum protection to fish stocks. Additionally, we required the dredgers to have a fisheries liaison officer aboard every vessel.

Spanish-owned Fishing Vessels

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make it his policy to require all Spanish-owned British-registered vessels eligible for compensation under the Merchant Shipping Act 1988 to land future catches at British ports as a condition of the compensation; [4950]

(2) how many claims for compensation he has received concerning the Merchant Shipping Act 1988; if he will list the vessels in respect of which those claims are made; from which ports they operate; and if they are currently fishing; [5051]

(3) what evidence he plans to request from Spanish vessels registered as British and claiming compensation for the time they were unable to fish. [5058]

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 6 December 1995, Official Report, columns 234–35.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many ministerial visits have been undertaken by each Minister in his Department between 6 July and 1 December; and how many and what percentage of these have involved the Minister travelling abroad. [4222]

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 6 December 1995]: My ministerial colleagues and I frequently undertake official engagements outside London, particularly in rural areas. We travel abroad as necessary to promote British interests overseas, including at Agriculture and Fisheries Councils.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many mobile telephones there are available in his Department for the use of Ministers. [4251]

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 7 December 1995]: There are eight mobile telephones available within MAFF for the use of Ministers.

WALES

Statutory Instruments (Health Services)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all statutory instruments in respect of health services from his Department of the present Parliament. [4055]

Mr. Richards: Ministers at the Welsh Office have made 61 statutory instruments in the present Parliament in respect of health services. Full details of those made to 31 December 1994 are shown in the annual volume of "Statutory Instruments", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. A list of statutory instruments made since 1 January 1995 will be placed in the Library of the House. Details of statutory instruments made in respect of health services in England and Wales are included in my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health's reply to the hon. Member today.

Council Tax

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State of Wales what is his estimate of the cost to the average council tax bill in Wales of an 11 per cent. increase in charges. [4294]

Mr. Hague: The average Welsh council tax per dwelling in 1995–96 is £330. An increase of 11 per cent. would add around £36.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway) 4 December 1995, Official Report, column 2, if he will place in the Library the basis for his calculation of the estimates of Government expenditure per capita in Wales in (a) 1979–80 and (b) 1993–94. [5025]

Mr. Hague: The figure for 1993–94 was taken from table 7.6B of the statistical supplement to the Financial Statement and Budget Report 1995–96, Cm 2821. The figure for the per capita spend in Wales in 1979–80 was based on an amount —£1,138—taken from written answer provided by the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 22 February 1995, Official Report, columns 608-18. This amount was brought to 1993–94 prices by the application of the latest GDP deflator at market prices. As I pointed out in my answer on 4 December, the figures for 1979–80 and 1993–94 are not directly comparable because of changes in the definition and coverage of identifiable territorial public expenditure.

Beaches

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what undertakings he has sought from Welsh Water as to the adherence of the company to the announced programme of capital expenditure in respect of the provision of 50 European blue flag beaches in Wales by the year 2000, and if he will make a statement. [4850]

Mr. Hague: I understand that Dwr Cymru/Welsh Water has committed itself to maintaining its capital programme. This includes the £38 million discretionary investment programme it announced earlier this year as well as the on-going five-year investment programme of £1 billion which is subjected to regulatory requirements.

Ministerial Adviser

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the requirements for candidates for the recent appointment for a political adviser to the Secretary of State; what factors determined whether this post was advertised; and if he will list the previous experience, the current pay and length of contract of the successful candidate. [4857]

Mr. Hague: With the approval of the Prime Minister and after interviewing a number of candidates I appointed Mr. Barnaby Towns personally as my special adviser.

His salary has been negotiated individually and in relation to previous earnings and is confidential. It is on a salary spine of 34 points ranging from £19,503 to £67,609; appointments are non-pensionable and the salary reflects this.

The appointments of special advisers terminate in the circumstances set out in the model appointment letter for special advisers. A copy is in the Library of the House.

Departmental Press Notices

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library copies of all press notices issued by the Welsh Office on Tuesday 5 December. [4975]

Mr. Hague: As is our normal practice, copies of all press notices issued by the Welsh Office on Tuesday 5 December have been sent to the Library of the House.

General Medical Practitioners

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, what is the general practitioner to population ratio in each health authority. [4929]

Mr. Richards: Information relating to the population per general medical practitioner in each family health service authority at 1 April 1995 is given in the following table:

FHSA	Population per GMP
Clwyd	1,807
Dyfed	1,587
Gwent	1,831
Gwynedd	1,484
Mid Glamorgan	1,809
Powys	1,382
South Glamorgan	1,659
West Glamorgan	1,767

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 5 December 1995, Official Report, column 147, if he will name and give the address of each school and the date on which the relevant constituency hon. Member was informed. [4971]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information is as follows:

Tongwynlais school, Tongwynlais
Birchgrove school, Cardiff
Whitchurch school, Cardiff

Young Enterprise Scheme
Cardiff high school, Cardiff
Stanwell school, Penarth
Woodland school, Cardiff

Notifications are as arranged since 1987.

Welsh Language

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will announce his conclusions on future responsibility for grants in support of the main non-statutory organisations which support the Welsh language. [5626]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend and I have considered carefully the responses to the consultation paper circulated by the Welsh Office last May and have concluded that the Welsh Language Board should assume responsibility for most of these grants from 1997–98.

The four organisations supported by these grants—the Welsh Books Council, the Welsh nursery schools movement—Mudiad Ysgolion Meithrin—the National Eisteddfod and the Welsh youth movement—Urdd Gobaith Cymru—all play significant roles in sustaining and developing the Welsh language and increasing the opportunities for its use in daily life in Wales. We consider it entirely appropriate for the Welsh Language Board, which was established by this Government to promote and facilitate the use of the Welsh language, to take on the responsibility for supporting these important organisations.

We have, however, been impressed by the argument put forward by the Welsh Books Council and others that support for the council's central function of promoting book publishing in Wales would not sit happily with the Welsh Language Board. The Welsh Books Council's core objectives include the encouragement of interest in English language books about Wales and support for authors and publishers in furtherance of this aim. As it would be impossible to disentangle support for non-Welsh books from the Welsh Books Council's central advisory service to Welsh language authors and publishers, we have been convinced that it would not be appropriate for the Welsh Language Board to assume responsibility for the council's core activities. We do, however, intend to transfer to the Welsh Language Board the responsibility for grant-aiding the Welsh Books Council to support individual publishers under the grants to publishers scheme, which is devoted to the production of Welsh language books.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Provincial Theatres

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what action she is taking to safeguard the future of provincial theatres. [4725]

Mr. Sproat: The development of policy in support of regional theatres is a matter for the Arts Council of England and the regional arts boards. The council is currently undertaking a review of publicly funded drama in England, and has recently completed an extensive process of consultation. Future funding proposals will be developed in due course, following the outcome of this review.

BBC Transmission Facilities

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many representations she has received (a) in favour of and (b) against privatisation of BBC transmission facilities; and from whom. [3257]

Mr. Sproat: Since the publication of our 1988 White Paper, "Broadcasting in the '90s: Competition, Choice and Quality", in which were stated our intention to separate the provision of television services from their delivery, a number of representations have been received, both for and against privatisation, but details are not recorded in the form requested.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make it her policy to retain a golden share in BBC transmission facilities. [3243]

Mr. Sproat: No.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if money raised by the privatisation of the BBC transmission facilities will be paid to the BBC. [3245]

Mr. Sproat: The net proceeds of sale of those transmission assets funded from the licence fee, which is the majority, will be available to the BBC, which is committed to investing them in digital production technology, while those from the sale of assets funded through grant-in-aid will return to the Exchequer.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if the BBC will be permitted to hire cheaper transmission facilities from other providers when its own transmission facilities are privatised. [3241]

Mr. Sproat: No decisions have been taken on the nature of future contracts with transmission providers for the services to the BBC.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage to what extent the proportion of the BBC licence fee necessary to pay for the use of its transmitters when privatised will be geared to (a) inflation and (b) the actual transmission charges. [3244]

Mr. Sproat: There is no set proportion of the licence fee related to specific items of BBC expenditure. Changes in the licence fee up to and including 1996 have been set at the level of changes in the retail prices index, as announced by the then Secretary of State on 4 November 1993, Official Report, column 309. The Government will determine the appropriate level for the licence fee in subsequent years in advance of the 1997 licence fee settlement, taking into account all relevant factors.

National Lottery

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to encourage communities and organisations in (a) Northern Ireland (b) the North East, (c) the east midlands and (d) south-west England and ethnic community groups and local groups in inner cities to make applications to the Millennium Commission fund. [3139]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I shall reply to the hon. Member in my capacity as chairman of the commission and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Tibet

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations have been made to the Chinese Government regarding human rights abuses in Tibet. [4723]

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary raised human rights abuses in Tibet during his discussions with Chinese Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister Qian Qichen, in London on 3 October.

EU Common Visa System

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the extra costs arising after the introduction of a common system of visa requirements by the European Union; and what action he has taken so far in respect of this estimate. [4489]

Mr. Hanley: The estimated cost of implementing council Regulation (EC) No 2317/95—the EU common visa list—is between £3,090,0900 and £3,390,000 in the start-up year. The estimated continued annual running cost is £1,740,000 at current prices. The funding will be found from within existing provision.

Common visa list-related entry clearance work will be subject to the FCO commitment to achieve full cost recovery in financial year 1996–97 in the case of non-settlement work and financial year 1997–98 for settlement work. These recoveries are remitted to the Consolidated Fund and are of no direct benefit, therefore, to the FCO.

The cost of implementing Council Regulation (EC) No. 1683/95 laying down a uniform format for visas cannot yet be quantified.

Burma

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Burmese Government regarding the restriction of democracy. [4728]

Mr. Hanley: The United Kingdom has had no ministerial contact with the ruling military regime in Burma, the State Law and Order Restoration Council, but we regularly raise at official level our concerns about the need for democratic reform in Burma.

Council of the European Union

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on forthcoming business in the Council of the European Union. [5294]

Overseas Trade Promotion

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) the number and (b) the location of staff in his Department employed to promote British trade overseas. [3026]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 4 December 1995]: The location and the number of staff whose responsibilities lie primarily in promoting trade with the United Kingdom are listed in the table.

There are in addition a large number of staff who contribute a lower proportion of their time directly to export promotion. For example, all heads of mission are an important part of the trade promotion effort. Staff engaged in political, economic and information also make a significant contribution to export and inward investment effort.

TRANSPORT

Motoring Offences

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department has conducted into the number of occasions in which a driver facing court action for motoring offences involving personal injury is subsequently involved in another motor accident prior to the original case coming to court; and if he will list the statistics collated by his Department over any convenient period. [5357]

Mr. Norris: The information requested is not available.

Brunel Thames Tunnel

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make an announcement on the latest application by London Transport for repairs to the Brunel tunnel under the Thames. [5017]

Mr. Norris: A revised application by London Underground Ltd. for listed building consent to carry out works to the Thames tunnel has recently been notified to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment. The application is currently under consideration. It is hoped that a decision on whether it should be called in will be made shortly.

Unleaded Petrol

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of petrol sales are accounted for by unleaded fuel. [4539]

Mr. Norris: Figures on petrol sales are not recorded. However, deliveries of unleaded petrol to retail outlets accounted for 63.75 per cent. of total petrol deliveries in September 1995.

Coaches

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many buses and coaches in Great Britain re-registered with Northern Ireland registration marks have consequently failed to meet the annual testing requirements for such vehicles; [4498]

(2) how many buses and coaches re-registered with Northern Ireland registration marks or first registered with Northern Ireland registration marks were subject to spot checks by the Vehicle Inspectorate were found to be (a) roadworthy, (b) unroadworthy, (c) unroadworthy and subjected to disciplinary action against the operator by the Traffic Commissioner, in each of the last five years. [4499]

Mr. Norris: The information is not available in the form requested. Test failure and enforcement statistics are not recorded in terms of registrations marks.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many buses and coaches in Great Britain which have been re-registered with registration marks originating from Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years were (a) between five and 10 years old, (b) between 10 and 15 years old, (c) between 15 and 20 years and (d) older than 20 years at the time of this re-registration. [4497]

Mr. Norris: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Street Furniture

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his powers to ensure that defective street lighting, traffic lights and street furniture in urban and rural areas is repaired. [4538]

Mr. Norris: Powers and responsibility for carrying out repairs to street lighting and traffic lights lie with the relevant highway authority—that is, the Secretary of State on trunk roads and local authorities for work on other roads. The Secretary of State has no powers to require such repairs on roads for which he is not the highway authority.

HEALTH

Hepatitis C

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) on what date screening for hepatitis C started in each regional blood transfusion centre; [3758]

(2) when screening for hepatitis C first started in blood products in each EC country. [3759]

Mr. Horam: Routine screening for Hepatitis C was introduced throughout the national blood service from September 1991, when reliable tests first became available.

We do not have full information about when other European Community countries introduced testing for Hepatitis C, but we know that some introduced testing before the United Kingdom. However, the expert committee which advises UK Ministers took the view prior to 1991 that tests should not be introduced in the UK because neither the screening test nor the confirmatory test was reliable enough.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all statutory instruments in respect of health services from his Department in the present Parliament. [4051]

Mr. Horam: Up to 6 December 1995, Ministers in the Department of Health have made 912 statutory instruments in the present Parliament. The great majority relate broadly to health services but some were made in connection with other responsibilities, for example the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. Full details of those made to 31 December 1994 are shown in the annual volumes of "Statutory Instruments", copies of which is available in the Library. A list of those statutory instruments made by my Department since 1 January 1995 will be placed in the Library. Of the 912, some 750 were made in connection with the establishment of national health service trusts under the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990. A detailed breakdown of all 912 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

GP Deputising Services

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the percentage of out-of-hours work done by private GP deputising services in each of the last six years. [5028]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available.

NHS Executive Letters

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how many executive letters have been sent out by the NHS management executive in each of the last six years. [5027]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Number of executive letters issued
1990	233
1991	151
1992	95
1993	118
1994	102
1995 (to date)	134

Tobacco Advertising

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his policy in respect of referring the Benson and Hedges gratis campaign to (a) the Advertising Standards Authority and (b) the committee for monitoring agreements. [5056]

Mr. Horam: Advertisements for gift catalogues and other promotional material produced by tobacco companies fall under the cigarette code and are considered by the Advertising Standards Authority. Complaints about the catalogues themselves fall under the cigarette promotion code and are considered by the committee for monitoring agreements on tobacco advertising and sponsorship.

Tiffield Secure Unit

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the capacity of the Tiffield secure unit; what is the capital cost per head; and what is his Department's guideline as to the annual operating cost per inmate (a) including and (b) excluding capital costs. [4805]

Mr. Bowis: The new secure unit at Tiffield will provide 16 places. The capital cost per place is £269,273. Northamptonshire county council is responsible for all revenue cost matters.

Good Hope Hospital

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on (a) the bed availability and (b) the level of temporary hospital closure at Birmingham's Good Hope hospital. [4965]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the debate about Good Hope hospital on 6 December, Official Report, columns 472–73. Details of bed availability at Good Hope hospital can be found in the publication "Bed availability for England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the effect on the timing of hospital developments of their inclusion in private finance initiatives. [4967]

Mr. Horam: We expect hospital developments using the private finance initiative to be completed earlier than would otherwise be possible.

GP Distribution

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the general practitioner to population ratio in each health district. [4928]

Mr. Malone: The information will be placed in the Library.

Capital Expenditure

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the levels of capital expenditure on hospitals in each year since 1979 and that planned in the next three years. [4968]

Mr. Horam: Capital expenditure on hospitals cannot be separately identified. Total capital expenditure by national health service bodies, which includes expenditure on hospitals, in each of the last 17 years is shown in the table.

The definition of capital has changed during this period so comparisons between years cannot readily be made. For 1993–94 the threshold value for the definition of capital expenditure was increased from £1,000 to £5,000. This technical change to accounting policy reduced capital expenditure, as money spent on tangible assets which was formerly classed as capital was, in 1993–94, recorded as revenue. In that year over £100 million was transferred from capital to revenue to take account of the increase to the capital threshold.

Figures for the current and forward years are not available centrally on a comparable basis.

Year	Total capital expenditure £ thousand
1994–95	1,805,240
1993–94	1,813,860
1992–93	1,926,438
1991–92	1,808,745
1990–91	1,485,404
1989–90	1,292,212
1988–89	1,087,936
1987–88	1,001,444
1986–87	936,291
1985–86	891,947
1984–85	795,404
1983–84	713,947
1982–83	686,386
1981–82	671,386
1980–81	563,174
1979–80	416,387
1978–79	376,352

1. The table shows figures for RHAs, DHAs and the London postgraduate teaching hospitals (SHAs). Figures post 1991-92 include NHS trusts.
2. Figures for 1994-95 are provisional.
3. The figures for 1991-92 onwards represent capital additions, as recorded in accounts, which include assets purchased by authorities/trusts and assets donated to authorities/trust.
4. The figures pre-1991-92 represent capital expenditure as recorded in authorities accounts.

Hospitality

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the hospitality budget for his Department in each of the last five years. [4348]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 6 December 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State gave the right hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) and the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 1 May 1995, Official Report, column 23. Due to technical changes in the Department's accounting system, the figure given for the Department for 1994–95 covered 13 months' expenditure.

DEFENCE

Mustard Gas

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research findings he has evaluated on the genetic effects of exposure to mustard gas; and what are the conclusions of this research. [4986]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mrs. Margaret Ewing dated 8 December 1995:

Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what research findings have been evaluated regarding the genetic effects of exposure to mustard gas has been passed to me to reply as the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency which includes the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment as one of its divisions.

The Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment has not carried out any research on the genetic effects of exposure to the chemical warfare agent Mustard gas nor has it evaluated any research findings relating to this subject.

I am sorry that I cannot be more helpful.

Theft

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many reported incidents of theft there have been in his Department in each of the last 10 years. [4565]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 7 December 1995]: The information as follows:

Year	Number
1985–86	3
1986–87	0
1987–88	5
1988–89	1
1989–90	1
1990–91	12
1993–94	20
1994–95	51

The figures for the two most recent years have been significantly affected by improved reporting procedures following the creation of the defence fraud unit.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about measures being taken by his Department to counteract theft in his Department. [4567]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 7 December 1995]: My Department has taken a range of measures to deter and detect theft and to make staff aware of the need for vigilance. All suspected cases are vigorously pursued and an internal statement entitled, "Fraud and Theft—Policy and Law", makes it clear that we shall not tolerate dishonest behaviour among MOD employees. Investigations into suspected fraud and theft are undertaken by the Ministry of Defence and Service police. The deterrence of fraud, including theft, forms part of high level management plans with requirements placed upon senior line management to impose sound controls, follow up suspicions and report suspected theft. There is a defence fraud unit which is tasked with collating information, assessing policy and raising awareness of the risk of fraud and theft. Physical security is an essential element at all MOD establishments and appropriate measures such as random gate checks and inventory reviews are among the key controls operated by management. Recovery is pursued wherever possible.

Surplus Munitions Material (Disposal)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current procedure for disposing of surplus explosives and other munitions materials; and if he will make a statement. [4985]

Mr. Arbuthnot: When explosives and other munitions material are declared surplus, the preferred option is for disposal by sale under strict Government guidelines. If this is not possible, either for safety reasons or because the material has become time-expired, it is disposed of in one of the following ways:

by an approved contractor;

by the Defence Test and Evaluation Organisation using a rotary kiln with environmental emission controls or by burning in the open under strictly controlled conditions; locally by technically qualified personnel on licensed demolition grounds on MOD property.

Type 23 Frigate

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce the contract for the type 23 frigate order. [5008]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I have yet to take a decision.

New Weapons

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received with regard to co-operating with EC and NATO allies in the research and development of new weapons systems; and if he will make a statement. [4988]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department pursues international collaboration on the research and development of equipment as an efficient means of achieving value for money in defence procurement. Details are provided in the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1995, paragraphs 436 to 438. My officials actively participate in a wide variety of collaborative arrangements and multilateral programmes. Opportunities for collaboration on research are identified in the NATO defence research group and in the Western European armaments group's EUCLID—European Co-operation for the Long Term in Defence—programme. Details can be found on page 57 of volume 2 of this year's "Forward Look on Government-funded Science, Engineering and Technology", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Arcadia Land plc

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contracts Arcadia Land plc has with his Department. [4979]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The central database maintained by my Department has no record of any contracts placed with Arcadia Land plc. A record of contracts placed by agencies or local purchase units is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

National Defence Industries Council

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the National Defence Industries Council last met; who was present; and what topics were discussed. [4980]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The National Defence Industries Council last met on 23 November 1995. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence chaired the meeting, which was attended by Ministers and officials from the Ministry of Defence and the Department of Trade and Industry and senior figures in the United Kingdom defence industry. The council discussed current topics in the field of defence procurement and the defence industry.

Civilian Employees, Scotland

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many civilians are employed by the Ministry of Defence in Scotland. [4987]

Mr. Arbuthnot: As of 1 October 1995, around 10,500 of my Department's 113,100 UK-based civilian staff were located in Scotland.

Domestic Property Sales

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service houses have been sold in each of the last 12 months; and what were the total receipts from these sales. [4978]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Sales of married quarters have historically been recorded on a quarterly basis. In the 12 months to 30 September 1995 a total of 1,062 properties were sold; 290,279,229 and 264 in each of the four quarters. The receipts from such disposals are not separately recorded and this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Battlefield Identification Technology

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he has taken to develop battlefield identification friend or foe technology for use in the armed forces; and when it is estimated that such technology will be deployed. [4972]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Work to develop a battlefield identification friend or foe system to help reduce fratricide is progressing well. However, this is an extremely complex technical requirement and it is vital that any deployed system be interoperable with our allies. In order to provide a system as soon as possible, a staged approach is being adopted which will allow an interim capability to be fielded in advance of the full solution. It is estimated that an interim capability will be available in around six months.

Light Vehicle Replacement Competition

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the decision to tender for the light vehicle replacement competition was announced; which companies placed tenders for that competition; when the decision to acquire 394 light vehicles from Steyr-Daimler-Puch was taken; when the contract was awarded to Steyr-Daimler-Puch; and if he will make a statement. [4976]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The decision to put future purchases of light and medium utility trucks for the Army to competition was taken in April 1985. Invitations to tender for the competition were issued in October 1991. Land Rover, Iveco Ford and Steyr-Daimler-Puch submitted tenders. The decision to purchase 394 of the heavy duty version of the medium utility truck from Steyr-Daimler-Puch was taken and the contract placed in June 1994.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of incapacity benefit are currently exempt from the all-work test by virtue of (a) receipt of the highest rate of disability living allowance care component, (b) in receipt of invalidity benefit and aged over 58 years on 13 April, (c) with a serious medical condition and (d) with a serious mental illness. [1832]

Mr. Burt: Pursuant to his reply of 27 November, Official Report, c.513. The information I gave regarding the number of former invalidity benefit recipients who received benefit from 1 December 1993 and who were aged 58 or over on 13 April was incorrect. The correct information is as follows:

Reason for exemption from the all work test	Number exempt
Receipt of the disability living allowance highest rate care component	20,976
Receipt of invalidity benefit between 1 December 1993 and 12 April 1995 and aged 58 or over on 13 April 1995	705,000
Severe medical condition, including severe mental illness	138,828

1. Figures for severe mental illness are not separately available.
2. Figures for exempt incapacity benefit claimants who are also in receipt of widow's benefit are not held on the computer system and are not included above.
3. Information available to end of October 1995.
4. Former recipients of invalidity benefit are tested as satisfying the all work test rather than being exempt from it.
5. The number of former invalidity benefit recipients who are treated as satisfying the all work test due to receipt of invalidity benefit on 1 December 1993 and being aged 58 or over on 13 April 1995 has been estimated and rounded to the nearest 5,000. Further information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total staffing cost of the Child Support Agency during each year since 1992–93. [2219]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Jim Cunningham, dated 7 December 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the staffing costs of the Child Support Agency.

The staff costs are as follows:

	£ million
1992–93	40.098
1993–94	78.761
1994–95	107.244

It is important to emphasize that comparisons between these figures are not possible for the following reasons:

1. The 1992–93 figure is a cash cost only whereas the 1993–94 and 1994–95 are on a 'full cost' basis as reported in the Agency's Accounts.

2. The 1992–93 figures cover the period before the Agency was launched and as such only include the liable relative field staff, the project staff and the first recruits into Hastings and Dudley centres. It does not include any proportion of the corporate overheads.

3. The 1993–94 figures do not include the full year costs of Plymouth and Birkenhead centres as these were not opened or fully staffed until late 1993.

4. The Agency has taken on work which was previously covered by the Lord Chancellor's Department (L.C.D.) and no comparative figures for the cost savings which have been made within this Department are available.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide a month by month breakdown of the benefit savings achieved by the Child Support Agency from April 1994 until the latest month available using the same headings as in his answer of 19 July 1995, Official Report, column 1499. [3205]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 7 December 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about benefit savings.

The tables attached show the monthly breakdown from April 1994 to September 1995. I wrote to you in July of this year giving a breakdown of the benefit savings collected from 1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995. I then replied to your Question on 16 November 1995 giving updated figures to 30 September 1995.

The tables show that in 1994/95 the Agency recorded savings of £480.60 million. So far this year the Agency has recorded savings of £195.03 million, but this does not include savings from Housing Benefit and Council tax which will be calculated later in the year.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many deduction of earning orders have been issued during 1995 by the Child Support Agency. [3520]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. John Spellar, dated 7 December 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Deduction from Earnings Orders.

Between April and the end of September 1995 22,066 Orders had been issued. You may be interested to know that this information is available in the Child Support Agency Statistical Information report, which is placed monthly in the Library.

I hope this is helpful.

Royal Mail

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what contingency plans exist to ensure the payment of benefits during industrial action at Royal Mail sorting offices. [4581]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. John Hutton, dated 7 December 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about what contingency plans exist to ensure the payment of benefits during industrial action at Royal Mail sorting offices.

The Benefits Agency (BA) has long standing instructions for staff covering disruption of postal delivery and collection services.

The instructions cover the impact of postal disruption, the options for dealing with girocheques and order books issued by Area Computer Centres and North Fylde Central Office, liaison within the BA and between the BA and the Post Office, and the arrangements for local BA offices to deal with the increase in callers and telephone queries. The instructions also cover local disputes and the arrangements for customers to either collect payment from their local BA office, or where they are unable to attend the office, for payment to be delivered by local office staff.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Nursery Education

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what was (a) the number and (b) the percentage of four-year-olds in maintained pre-school provision (i) in each local education authority and (ii) nationally at January 1995; [3998]

(2) what was (a) the number and (b) the percentage of three-year-olds in maintained pre-school provision (i) in each local education authority and (ii) nationally at January 1995; [3997]

(3) what was (a) the number and (b) the percentage of three and four-year-olds in maintained pre-school provision (i) in each local education authority and (ii) nationally in January 1995. [3999]

Mr. Robin Squire: Information on pupils aged three and four in maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in each local education authority in England in January 1995 is shown in the following table. The Department does not publish information on participation rates of individual age cohorts by local education authority.

Student Accommodation

Mr. Cynog Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what statutory provisions govern the responsibility of university authorities for damage done by students to student accommodation. [4311]

Mr. Forth: None. As independent bodies, universities are responsible for their own internal affairs. In the private rented sector landlords have recourse for damage caused by students through tenancy agreements and the legal system, as the would for any other renting accommodation.

Schools Funding

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if she will make a statement on the local authority allocations and capital grants to (a) voluntary-aided and (b) grant-maintained schools in 1996–97; [4506]

(2) if she will give a breakdown of the capital budget for schools for 1996–97. [4505]

Mrs. Gillan: Central Government support for schools in 1996–97 is broken down as follows:

Type of school	Capital budget £ million
Grant-maintained schools	138
City technology colleges	2
Aided schools	61
County and controlled schools	423
Non-maintained special schools	1
Total	625

The figures do not include the capital element included within the budget for the "specialised schools" programme, which includes both capital and recurrent expenditure on specialist schools in the grant-maintained and maintained sectors, and which has been allocated £23 million in 1996–97.

Individual allocations for aided schools will be announced shortly. Allocations to grant-maintained schools are a matter for the Funding Agency for Schools.

School Premises Regulations

Mr. Nigel Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what review has been conducted on the adequacy and operation of the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981 prior to the decision to modify the regulations; who was responsible for the review; what were their qualifications and experience; what was its cost; where and by what means its findings were publicised; and whom she consulted concerning its conclusions. [4492]

Mrs. Gillan: The review was announced on 2 October 1990. The terms of reference were to consider the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981 in the light of changes in educational practice over the last 10 years and to review priorities in the light of these.

The review team was led by a professional architect in my Department with 22 years' experience. The team included other experienced professional advisers and senior officials from my Department, representatives of the Welsh Office and Her Majesty's inspectorate of schools, and an observer from the Scottish Office.

No separate estimate was made of the cost of the review, as distinct from my Department's other work on school organisation matters.

As required in the terms of reference of the review, its findings were reported to the Secretary of State for Education and to the Secretary of State for Wales.

A consultation letter was sent out on 25 February 1991 to local education authorities, teachers' associations, voluntary bodies and other interested organisations. A similar letter was sent to grant-maintained school governors. The Welsh Office sent their own consultation letter to LEAs and organisations in Wales. Following the announcement of the Government's intention to bring forward a revised set of Education (School Premises) Regulations, a second consultation letter was sent out on 14 July 1995 to the same range of bodies as the previous letter.

Community Action

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if she will list all companies, by region, that have provided work placements for 50 or more unemployed people on community action programmes over the past 12 months; [4597]

(2) if she will list the companies that provide work placements to unemployed people on the community action programme, who will have their contracts reduced at the end of November, by region, indicating in each case the level of the reduction; [4601]

(3) what was the cost per unemployed person placed with the community action programme in the current financial year; [4599]

(4) how many people in each region are currently on community action programmes whose placements will be curtailed; [4603]

(5) what was the cost to public funds of the community action programme in the current financial year; [4598]

(6) what factors underlie the reduction of contracts to companies that provide work placements to unemployed people on the community action programme at the end of November 1995; [4602]

(7) if she will make a statement about the future of the community action programme; [4596]

(8) if she will list the companies that provide work placements to unemployed people on community action programme, by region, who will have their contracts withdrawn at the end of November indicating the reasons for the withdrawal of contracts; [4600]

(9) how many unemployed people are expected to be recruited onto the community action programme between 29 December 1995 and 31 March 1996. [4604]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 8 December 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about the closure of community Action, the cost of the programme and the people and organisations affected by the closure.

Community Action is a programme of jobsearch help which is integrated with part-time work experience. It is delivered by providing organisations, chiefly in the voluntary/charitable sector through contracts with Employment Service regional offices.

Following the Budget, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment announced that Community Action is to close and that recruitment to the programme will cease on 29 December 1995. Whilst Community Action is a useful programme, with falling unemployment and a necessary close scrutiny of the budgets of all government Departments, it no longer represents best value for money. As part of our current strategy to tackle longer-term unemployment in a more buoyant labour market we are changing programme provision to help more long term unemployed people receive help with jobsearch.

The organisations who hold contracts to deliver Community Action are responsible for administration, delivery of the jobsearch element of the programme and also arranging work projects and placements for Community Action participants. Work projects and placements are with a wide range of voluntary/charitable organisations and these change continually. It is not therefore possible to provide a list of all organisations who have provided work placements in the last 12 months. I can, however, provide a list, by region, of all organisations who hold contracts to deliver Community Action. This is attached.

This financial year, the average cost per person taking up a place on Community Action is £1,827. The budget for the programme is £70 million and at the end of October, the latest date for which figures are available, the programme had cost £44,947,987.

At the end of October there were 12,909 people participating in Community Action. It is not our intention to terminate any of these people's participation prematurely. Indeed, we are currently working closely with providers to ensure that this is the case.

I hope this is helpful.

Interview Travel Expenses

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what consideration she has given to making payments to job applicants for travelling expenses when they travel distances across London, within the M25 area, to attend job interviews; and if she will make a statement. [4680]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 8 December 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about travelling expenses for job applicants travelling to attend job interviews within the M25 area.

I know it can be very difficult for unemployed people to cope with the expense of getting to interviews and the Employment Service (ES) has been running a travel to interview scheme (TIS) for a number of years now to help with this. The scheme's main aim is to encourage people who have been unemployed for four or more weeks to widen their job search. It does this by helping them with travelling costs and, if necessary, overnight accommodation costs to attend job interviews outside their usual travel to work area. A few basic conditions must be met before assistance can be granted, to ensue the scheme is properly and fairly administered and gives good value for money. In the last year the ES has used TIS to help over 51,000 applicants with travelling costs totalling £1.8 m.

One of the eligibility rules is that the job interview must be beyond normal daily travelling distance of the applicant's home area. We appreciate that it is very difficult to draw the line around what constitutes "normal" daily travelling distance but we try to be fair about this. My jobcentre managers, working to broad guidelines supplied by my Head Office are authorised to decide for this purpose, what their local labour market is. The guidance given in respect of journeys around London is either 40 miles or a journey taking more than 1 hour 20 minutes. However, each application is considered individually. Factors such as distance, costs, availability of public transport and the length of time the journey takes are all checked and where any doubt exists, discretion is advised in favour of the applicant.

The scheme has recently been reviewed and my people were aware of the problem of the high transport costs around the London area. One of the changes suggested was that special consideration should be given where particularly high transport costs were involved, and that such considerations should be left to the discretion of my District or Regional offices for the reasons given earlier. The results of the review are currently under consideration

I hope this is helpful.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Fire Service Pension Scheme

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date and with what terms of reference the inter-departmental working group on the firemen's pension scheme was set up; and when he now expects it to publish its report. [5026]

Mr. Sackville: The review of the firefighters' pension scheme was announced in March 1994. The review group's terms of reference require it to identify ways in which the scheme could be made more comparable to other public service schemes. I hope that it will be possible to circulate a consultation document to the fire service organisations in the not too distant future.

Mr. Abiodum Igbinidu

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now defer implementation of the directions to deport Mr. Abiodum Igbinidu. [4854]

Miss Widdecombe: Directions for Mr. Abiodum Igbinidu's removal on 9 December were deferred to 5 December, following representations made on his behalf.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of the Minister of State, Foreign Office, on 5 December 1995, Official Report, column 214, for what reasons the letter concerning an interview of the sponsor in the United Kingdom was sent to the Foreign Office; how long it took his Department to send the letter to the Foreign Office; and what were the reasons for the delay. [4930]

Mr. Kirkhope: The hon. Member's letter of 6 November related to an entry clearance application which had been deferred to the Home Office for further inquiries to be made to enable the entry clearance officer to make a decision. Replies to letters in these circumstances fall to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

The hon. Member's letter was received in the immigration and nationality department on 13 November and was faxed to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office migration and visa correspondence unit on 1 December. I regret the delay in transferring the letter, which arose because it was not immediately recognised that it related to a deferred application.

Asylum and Immigration

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answers of 28 November 1995, Official Report, column 659 and of 4 December 1995, Official Report, column 22, concerning the bodies from which he (a) sought information or (b) had consultations with in respect of current asylum and immigration problems, if he will list such bodies in either category as can be given without incurring disproportionate costs. [4734]

Mr. Kirkhope [holding answer 7 December 1995]: I have nothing to add to the answers that I gave to the hon. Member on 28 November and 4 December.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many remanded prisoners in England and Wales who did not subsequently receive custodial sentences lost their homes following their remand to prison in each year since 1992; and if he will make a statement. [4310]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 8 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question on the numbers of remand prisoners who did not subsequently receive custodial sentences in each year since 1992 but lost their homes following their admission to prison.

The information requested is not recorded. Remand prisoners are not obliged to tell the prison authorities of difficulties in retaining accommodation and, once released, former remand prisoners are not required to maintain contact with the Prison Service or the Probation Service after release from custody.

The Prison Service's statement of principle on unconvicted prisoners, which is set out in the Prisoners' Information Book, is based on the presumption of their innocence. One of its provisions is that unconvicted prisoners will be allowed all reasonable facilities to preserve their accommodation and employment. Most prisons have staff trained in the provision of advice on housing and employment issues, and all will have a pool of such staff by next April.

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current remand population broken by (a) ethnic background and (b) gender in England and Wales. [3659]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Janet Anderson, dated 8 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking for the ethnic breakdown of the current remand population.

The information is shown in the attached table.

Remand population on 31 October 1995[1] by ethnic origin and sex, England and Wales

Ethnic origin	Total	Males	Females
White	9,292	8,910	382
Black	1,537	1,450	87
South Asian	313	308	5
Chinese and Other Asian	139	134	5
Other/unrecorded	220	200	20
Total	11,501	11,002	499

[1] Provisional figures.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of acquitted remand prisoners, who were in employment before their period of custody, return to employment on their release. [3513]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Jim Cunningham dated 8 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question on the percentage of acquitted remand prisoners who were in employment before their period of custody and who return to employment on their release.

The information requested is not recorded. Acquitted remand prisoners are under no duty to maintain contact with the Prison Service once they are released, nor are they under the supervision of the Probation Service.

The Prison Service's statement of principle on unconvicted prisoners (which is set out in the Prisoners' Information Book) is based on the presumption of their innocence. One of its provisions is that they will be given all reasonable facilities to preserve their accommodation and employment. Prisoner Suicides

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) prisoners and (b) remanded prisoners in England and Wales committed suicide in (i) 1991, (ii) 1992, (iii) 1993 and (iv) 1994. [4298]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 8 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about suicides in prisons in England and Wales.

Between 1 January 1991 and 1 December 1994 there were 191 self-inflicted deaths in prison in England and Wales. The attached table shows a breakdown of figures for each year for remand/unsentenced prisoners and sentenced prisoners.

Self-inflicted deaths[1] in England and Wales in 1991–1994: by status of prisoner

Year	Self-inflicted deaths—all prisoners	Self inflicted deaths of remand/unsentenced prisoners	Self inflicted deaths of sentenced prisoners
1991	42	16	26
1992	41	24	17
1993	47	26	21
1994	61	30	13

[1] The figures are for all self inflicted deaths which provide a more accurate representation than restriction to inquest verdicts of suicide.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the suicide rate for (a) sentenced prisoners and (b) prisoners on remand in each year since 1990. [3516]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Jim Cunningham, dated 8 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about suicide rates in the Prison Service since 1990.

Between 1 January 1990 and 1 December 1995 there were 298 self-inflicted deaths in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales. The attached table shows a breakdown of figures for each year for remand-unsentenced prisoners and sentenced prisoners.

Self inflicted deaths[1] in England and Wales 1990-1995 (as to 1 December): by status of prisoner

Year	Self inflicted deaths of remand/unsentenced prisoners	Self inflicted deaths of sentenced prisoners
1990	27	23
1991	16	26
1992	24	17
1993	26	21
1994	30	31
1995[2]	25	33

[1] Figures are provided for all self-inflicted deaths which provide a more accurate representation than restriction to inquest verdicts of suicides.

[2] As of 1 December 1995.

Child Sex Offences Abroad

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he intends to take against those who travel abroad to commit sex crimes against children. [5515]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend announced on 12 July 1995, Official Report, column 600, that he would urgently examine the law of incitement and conspiracy. As a result of that examination, the Government propose, subject to a suitable legislative opportunity being found, to extend the scope of the law of incitement and conspiracy. This extension would bring within the jurisdiction of the courts those who incite others or who conspire to commit sexual offences against children abroad.

Electoral Registers

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to prohibit the sale of electoral registers; and if he will make a statement. [4483]

Mr. Sackville: No; the electoral register is a public document, and it would not be practicable to restrict its availability to electoral purposes only.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to prevent the commercial use of the film from CCTV cameras without the permission of those being filmed. [3492]

Mr. Maclean: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the hon. Member for Thanet, North (Mr. Gale) on 5 December 1995, Offiical Report column 207.

Prison Population

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in England and Wales are currently serving (a) less than 12 months, (b) 12 months to three years, (c) three to four years, (d) four to 10 years, (e) 10 years or more and (f) life, broken down by (i) ethnic background and (ii) gender. [3660]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Janet Anderson, dated 8 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking for the ethnic breakdown of the current prison population, according to length of sentence and gender.

The information is shown in the attached table.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

HMSO (Privatisation)

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick upon Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission, what consideration the House of Commons Commission has given to the possible safeguards that might be required to protect the future provision of printing services to Parliament in the event of the privatisation of HMSO. [4901]

Mr. Beith [holding answer 6 December 1995]: After careful considering of the possible safeguards that might be required to protect the future provision of printing services to Parliament in the event of privatisation of HMSO, the Commission agreed to the following reply which Madam Speaker has sent to the Lord President of the Council and Leader of the House of Commons:

You wrote to me on 19 September to notify me of the Government's plan to privatise Her Majesty's Stationery Office, and to ask me what safeguards might be required to enable the House to continue its agreement with HMSO after privatisation. Before sending this reply, I have, as you know, consulted the Finance and Services Committee and my colleagues on the House of Commons Commission. We have also taken the advice of the House officials most directly concerned.

Although the services of HMSO are important throughout the public sector, they are of particularly vital significance to the House of Commons. Unlike Government Departments and agencies, the House places continuous daily demands on HMSO's printing services whenever it is in session. The timely production of the Order Paper, Hansard, bills and other documents—to very tight timetables and generally overnight—is essential to the transaction of parliamentary business: without the necessary documents, the House and its committees simply could not function.

Against this background, you will understand that I and my fellow Commissioners have concerns about the possible consequences, both short and long-term, of privatising a public sector organisation which has, in general, given good and reliable service to the House for most of this century. Our principal concerns, and the safeguards which we think necessary to meet them, may be summarised as follows:

(i) For some time to come the House will continue to be dependent on the Parliamentary Press in South London, with its trained and experienced staff, to ensure the overnight printing of documents to the timetables and standards which we have come to expect. This is a costly facility, and there must be some anxiety that a private sector owner would be tempted to experiment with cheaper methods for providing the service, not appreciating the unpredictability of the House's requirements and the large variations in parliamentary workload that can be experienced from one year (and even one week) to the next. We would therefore be seeking an absolute guarantee that the overnight production facilities in inner London will be retained for as long as the House continues to consider them necessary.

(ii) Staff of the House (the Editorial Supervisor of the Vote and his team) currently work alongside HMSO employees in the overnight compilation and preparation of the Vote Bundle. We would need a guarantee that adequate space and facilities in the Parliamentary Press will continue to be made available to those staff for as long as the House requires.

(iii) The House's documents and the procedural rules which underpin them, are complex. HMSO staff and management acquire experience and knowledge of those complexities as they progress from job to job in the organisation; and they are brought up in the tradition that in all circumstances the requirements of Parliament are paramount. We are concerned that a private company might seek to economise by employing less experienced staff or by appointing new managers who would not have the same appreciation of the House's needs. We would therefore be looking for an assurance that there will be substantial continuity in the staffing and management of the relevant sections of HMSO after privatisation, and adequate training for any new staff.

(iv) For similar reasons we seek an assurance of prior consultation with the House before any significant changes are made in the management or organisation of HMSO's directorate of Parliamentary and Statutory Publishing.

(v) At present, as an Agency, HMSO is under ministerial oversight and a minister is ultimately answerable to the House in the event of a failure in its services. After privatisation, that line of accountability will be broken. The House authorities will be responsible or contracting with the privatised company for the provision of printing and publishing services, but will not be in a position to account directly for a failure on the company's part to meet the requirements of the contract. We therefore think it essential that there should be an identified individual within the privatised Stationery Office who is responsible for the contract with the House and acknowledges an obligation to account to the authorities and committees of the House on all aspects of the service being provided.

(vi) The House has negotiated, and with the Commission's approval is on the point of concluding, a new Supply and Service Agreement (SSA) with HMSO. This agreement provides for a detailed specification of service standards, delivery schedules and related technical details. These specifications should, at least, maintain existing standards, and no attempt should be made to water them down after privatisation, without agreement with the House authorities.

(vii) Similarly, we consider that any prospective purchaser of the Stationery Office should be required to accept the agreed principles which are set out in the SSA, particularly so far as they concern the rights of the House to regulate the production and reproduction of its documents, both in paper and electronic form.

(viii) The first annual financial settlement under the new SSA will come into effect on 1 January 1996. Among other things, it provides for substantial reductions in the sale price of many House publications, including Hansard. This is an objective to which I, and many Members of the House, have attached great importance for some time; and it has been achieved without any significant increase in the payments to be made to HMSO by the House. Further improvements should follow from increasing use of new technology. Any prospective purchaser of HMSO should therefore be required to guarantee that it will not seek any increase (in real terms) in the charges paid by the House or the level of prices to the public above those negotiated for 1996, and that the House will be credited with a proportionate share of future savings arising from technological advances.

Roger Freeman's press statement on 27 September indicated that the Government's decision to privatise HMSO was conditional on satisfactory arrangements being made for the future provision of services to Parliament. Before deciding whether or not that criterion has been met, the Commission will need to be assured that the safeguards and guarantees which I have outlined in this letter are capable of being enforced, not just in the immediate aftermath of privatisation but over the longer term. In that connection we are particularly concerned at the possibility that an initial purchaser might subsequently wish to break up the business by partial sales. Fragmentation of the organisation, or sale to an overseas buyer, could pose serious, and perhaps unacceptable, problems for the House. We would like to know what mechanisms the Government proposes to guard against that possibility.

Assuming the Commission and the House can be satisfied on these points, it will be necessary to convert the SSA and the new safeguards, together with the service specifications and the settlement on prices and charges, into formal contracts which will take effect on privatisation. This is a complex and exacting task for the small team of House officials involved, and professional and legal support will probably be required. Every effort will be made to progress this work in accordance with the Government's programme for the sale, which I understand is aimed at completion in July next year; but we cannot at this stage be at all confident that it will be possible to resolve all the issues before that deadline. We therefore request that, if it proves to be necessary, the Government's timetable for the sale of HMSO, should be adapted to the progress of preparatory work, rather than the other way round.

In this letter, I have set out the views of the Commission, which has statutory responsibility for the House's services. But we also agreed that the House as a whole should be given an early opportunity to express its opinion on the Government's proposals. That debate might best be based on a prior ministerial statement. I am therefore copying this letter to the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. A copy goes also to the Lord Chairman of Committees in the House of Lords.

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Chairman of the Finance and Services Committee what consideration his Committee has given to the implications for the House of privatisation of HMSO. [5254]

Mr. Channon: The Finance and Services Committee considered the matter raised by the right hon. Gentleman during its deliberation on a new supply and service agreement with HMSO. The Committee's recommendations have been put before the House of Commons Commission which is giving the matter urgent consideration.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Consultants

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list those (a) consultants, (b) outside organisations and (c) individuals employed by his Department in each year since 1990, indicating the purposes of their employment and the total payments made to them. [3962]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: (a) This information has not been held centrally, and figures for the years before 1992–93 could be provided only at disproportionate cost. On the best information currently available, for the years 1992 to 1995 the following numbers of external consultants have won contracts, with the total spend on external consultancy as specified:

Numbers of consultants	34	63	69
Total spend	£1.2 million	£1.4 million	£1.5 million

(b) The answer to this question could be provided only at disproportionate cost to the Department.

(c) Copies of the civil service staff post summary tables from 1990 to 1995 can be found in the House Libraries and numbers of individuals employed by the Department may be found therein.

The purpose of each individual's employment is to assist the Department to attain its aims and objectives, as set out in the departmental report, which also details the relevant costs.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Chechnya

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe mission in Chechnya. [4961]

Mr. David Davis: The OSCE assistance group continues to operate in Chechnya. We receive regular reports on its activities from the OSCE. It continues to play a valuable role in promoting a peaceful settlement to the conflict, and has our full support in this work.

Nagorno-Karabakh

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress on the establishment of a peacekeeping force for Nagorno-Karabakh under OSCE auspices. [4960]

Mr. David Davis: The Budapest ministerial conference of the OSCE—7 to 8 December—decided that the signing of a political agreement on cessation of the armed conflict in Nagorno-Karabakh would enable the OSCE permanent council to take a decision on the establishment of the OSCE peacekeeping operation. The co-chairman of the Minsk group reported to the conference that the parties to the conflict have declared their commitment to continue respecting the ceasefire, and to establish direct contacts to achieve agreement on the principles governing the resolution of the conflict.

A high-level planning group has produced an initial report on the technical aspects of a peacekeeping operation and will make further recommendations.

Burma

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will outline (a) his Department's position in relation to trade with Burma and (b) that of other EU members; and if he will make a statement. [4774]

Mr. Hanley: There is no obstacle to United kingdom firms exploring business in Burma not covered by the European Union arms embargo. I set out to the House in some detail on July 19 the Government's policy towards Burma, including trade, Official Report, columns 1638–45.

We regularly discuss policy towards Burma with our EU partners, but do not have details of their policy on trade.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has received regarding the use of forced labour in Burma; and if he will make a statement. [4776]

Mr. Hanley: We have received representations about human rights abuses in Burma, including the use of forced labour, from a wide variety of sources including Church groups, non-governmental organisations and members of the public.

Officials have consistently expressed our concern about the use of forced labour in Burma, both in international forums and directly to the ruling military regime, the State Law and Order Restoration Council. We will continue to do so.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance his Department has provided in the last three years to United Kingdom companies interested in trade with Burma, or in operating in Burma; what is the cost of this assistance; and if he will make a statement. [4775]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade today.

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people have been held in detention on St. Helena as a result of allegations of non-payment of debts; how long they were held before their cases were heard in court; and what sentence they received. [4871]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The power of arrest arises only where an alleged debtor is about to leave St. Helena and has failed to furnish security for his appearance before a court. In the one instance during the last five years when the power was exercised, the alleged debtor was held for three hours and five minutes and was released on security being given. No question of sentence arises in such cases.

TRANSPORT

InterCity

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultations he has had with the Director General of Passenger Rail Franchising in relation to preservation of InterCity services west of Cardiff in the event of a franchise grant to the BR Western Region management and First Bus consortium. [5416]

Mr. Watts: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has regular discussions with the franchising director. The franchising director has specified those InterCity services west of Cardiff which, in his opinion, needed to be protected in the Great Western passenger service requirement. The franchise operator will be contractually obliged to provide these services. InterCity services west of Cardiff are also provided by Cross Country and will be included in the PSR for that franchise when it is developed in due course.

Railways

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he intends to revise the objectives, instructions and guidance issued to the franchising director under section 5 of the Railways Act 1993. [5434]

Sir George Young: I am today writing to the franchising director amplifying his instructions in relation to risk sharing in franchise agreements, the funding of services in passenger transport executive areas and the provision of concessionary travel for railway employees. I am placing a copy of my letter in the Library.

Tourism Signposting

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the Government's plans for liberalising tourism signposting. [5656]

Mr. Watts: We shall be laying a statutory instrument tomorrow to amend the Traffic Signs Regulations and General Directions 1994 as they apply in England, Wales and Scotland.

EU Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the statement of the Secretary of State for the Environment of 21 November, Official Report, column 454, if he will make it his policy to review past legislation in respect of additional burdens imposed by regulations implementing European directives. [5075]

Mr. Watts: It is the policy in my Department to ensure that we do not gold-plate European directives by the addition of unnecessary burdens when implementing them in the United Kingdom. We will take every opportunity to look at existing legislation in light of this policy.

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Andrew Smith: To as the Secretary of State for Transport what are the reasons for the difference between the figures for the effects of privatisation on the national railways' external financial limits in 1995–96, 1996–97 and 1997–98 in his Department's press notice No. 380 of 28 November and by the equivalent figures in table 2 of "Transport Report 1995"; and if he will provide an equivalent figure for 1998–99. [5194]

Mr. Watts: The figures for the effects of privatisation given in both publications referred to are the same, except in 1996–97 where rounding in the press notice to the nearest £10 million accounts for the small difference between the figures. A figure for 1998–99 is not yet available.

A419

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To as the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce the award of the contracts for the A419 Latton bypass and the A417 Cirencester/Stratton bypass. [4838]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Geoffrey Clifton-Brown, dated 11 December 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State for Transport, when he expects to announce the award of the contracts for the A419 Latton Bypass and the A417 Cirencester/Stratton Bypass.

As announced in Managing the Roads Programme published on 28 November, we have shortlisted bidders for the first four Design, Build, Finance and Operate (DBFO) projects, one of which embraces the Latton and Cirencester/Stratton Bypass schemes. Negotiations are continuing and we now expect to announce the award of the DBFO contract in the new year.

M1 (Fatal Accidents)

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) non-fatal and (b) fatal accidents took place at each junction section of the M1 from London up to junction 29 for each of the last three years; how many took place (a) in daylight and (b) in darkness; and if he will make a statement. [3200]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Sir Irvine Patnick, dated 11 December 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State for Transport, how many (a) non-fatal and (b) fatal accidents took place at each junction section of the M1 from London up to Junction 29 for each of the last three years; how many took place (a) in daylight and (b) in darkness; and if he will make a statement.

The Highways Agency is committed to contributing to the Government's target of reducing road casualties by one third by the year 2000 when compared with the average for the UK between 1981 and 1985. Although motorway traffic doubled between that baseline and 1994, casualty numbers increased by 73%, while the number of fatalities fell by 30%. The overall accident rate on motorways reduced from 0.13 to 0.11 personal injury accidents per million vehicle kilometres.

Rail Franchising

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) at what point in the franchising process a comparison of the costs of the preferred bidders against those of British Rail is to be considered for each of the first three train operating companies; [4974]

(2) if he will publish the comparative costs of services under (a) the preferred bidder and (b) British Rail for the first three train operating companies to be franchised; [4931]

(3) if he will make a statement on the costs using the preferred bidder for each of the first three train operating companies, relative to the costs of continuing the service under British Rail. [4973]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 8 December 1995]: Until franchise negotiations are complete information about the preferred bids is commercially confidential. The franchising director will award franchises to the bidders that offer the best overall value for money in terms of services for passengers and costs to taxpayers. He makes comparisons of the costs of preferred bidders against those of British Rail throughout the bidding process as these are an essential component of his value-for-money judgement.

For the funding of the British Rail train operating companies in 1995–96, I refer the hon. Member to my answer on 13 July to the hon. Member for Fife, Central (Mr. McLeish), Official Report, column 706. I will write to the hon. Member shortly on the level of support appropriate to each train operating company that has been agreed between the franchising director and the British Railways Board, and will place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

The franchising director expects to publish subsidy figures for the first three franchisees in the franchising director's register in due course; although, under section 73 of the Railways Act 1993, information may be withheld at the discretion of the Secretary of State or the franchising director if disclosure would be against the public interest or the commercial interests of franchisees.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Regional Challenge

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he expects to make an announcement of successful regional challenge projects, and if he will make a statement. [5468]

Mr. Eggar: I am today announcing the successful regional challenge projects in England which will receive grant totalling £140 million towards projects costing almost £800 million.

Regional challenge is designed to enhance local partnerships, stimulate innovative local development and maximise the contribution of the private sector. The projects announced today will bring a new dynamism and efficiency to local economies across England. Local firms will play a major role in projects ranging from industrial and transport infrastructure, tourism, research and development and environmental improvement to training and job creation.

I am particularly encouraged by the wide range of local bodies that have been involved in the development of regional challenge projects. The competition has encouraged the far greater involvement of the private sector. This involvement is clearly reflected in its contributions to projects which account for almost half the total costs of the winning projects, and have added considerably to quality and value for money. The value of the dialogue between the public and private sectors about what is needed in local communities is shown by the type of projects that have been put forward.

Regional challenge projects are typically larger in scale, more comprehensive in their effect, and better address the specific needs of local communities. This culture of co-operation will benefit not only today's winners. I hope that, as with previous competitions, many of the partnerships brought together by regional challenge will go ahead with part or all of their projects, even though they are not winners, thus spreading the benefits of the challenge even wider.

A list of winning projects is set out:

1 Lairdside (Birkenhead)

2 New Media Factory (Liverpool)

3 Eurogateway (Bootle)

4 Cornwall and Devon tourism development

5 Rural area training and information opportunities (Cornwall and Devon)

6 Swaffham eco-tech centre

7 Action to support planning investment for regeneration and enterprise

8 Networking Business and the community (Hereford and Worcester, Shropshire)

9 Whitby beacon

10 Hills of the North (Cumbria)

11 Lincolnshire access network

12 Adams Building (Nottingham)

13 Pumping life back into the Coalfield community (Broughton)

14 The Great Northern and Lowly Project (Manchester and Salford)

15 China Gateway North West (Manchester, Lancashire and Cheshire)

16 North West Business Excellence Initiative (Manchester, Lancashire and Cheshire)

17 Integrated Waste Management (Sheffield)

18 Technology Challenge (Yorkshire and Humberside)

19 Earth Centre (Dearne Valley)

20 The year of the electronic Image (Yorkshire and Humberside)

21 South Humber Bank Industrial and Technological Regeneration (Cleethorpes)

22 European centre for advanced industries (North Shields)

23 Teeside Innovation Partnership (Teeside)

24 Raising Regional competitiveness (Tyne and Wear, Northumberland, Co. Durham and Cleveland)

25 International centre for life (Newcastle)

26 Trent Challenge (Rugely and Armitage with Hansacre)

27 Renaissance Canal (area wide)

28 Creating a World Class Supplier Base (Birmingham, Coventry, Dudley)

29 Starting with a competitive advantage (Coventry)

30 Digital City of Stoke on Trent (Stoke on Trent)

31 West Midlands Interactive Technology Centre (Coalbrookdale, Telford)

32 East London and Lee Valley Teleregion

33 Manufacturing—a new future for East London (Tower Hamlets)

34 Robin Hood Regeneration Corridor.

Burma

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assistance his Department has provided in the last three years to United Kingdom companies interested in trading with Burma, or doing business there; what is the cost of this assistance; and if he will make a statement. [4769]

Mr. Nelson: Over the last three years, no financial assistance has been given to United Kingdom companies interested in trading with Burma. Our assistance has been limited to providing advice and information concerning the commercial, economic and political developments in the country via officials both in Rangoon and London. The cost of this assistance is not held on a central database and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Government's policy towards Burma, including trade, was fully set out in the speech by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley), on 19 July 1995, Official Report, columns 1641–45. There is no obstacle to UK firms exploring business in Burma not covered by the European Union embargo.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations his Department has received regarding the use of forced labour in Burma; and if he will make a statement. [4772]

Mr. Nelson: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer given by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes, today.

The Government's policy towards Burma, including trade, was fully set out in the speech by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 19 July 1995, Official Report, columns 1641–45. There is no obstacle to UK firms exploring business in Burma not covered by the European Union embargo.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assistance was offered by his Department to (a) the South of England Exports Association British trade mission to Singapore and Brunei, with the option to visit Myanmar, which took place on 4 to 12 November and (b) the London Chamber of Commerce and Industry seminar "An Introduction to Burma", which took place on 5 December; what was the cost of this assistance in each case; and if he will make a statement. [4770]

Mr. Nelson: (a) The DTI travel grant for Singapore and Brunei is £666 per eligible company. The South of England Exports Association was not offered any financial assistance to visit Burma and would have undertaken this leg of its planned visit as an unsupported option. In the event, the mission was cancelled due to lack of support.

(b) Delegates who attended the trade awareness seminar "An Introduction to Burma" at the London Chamber of Commerce and Industry—LCCI—on 5 December were charged a fee of £60 for non-LCCI members and £45 for members, including VAT. An exact breakdown of the costs incurred is not available so soon after the event, but we expect to recoup the costs from the amount taken in attendance fees.

The Government's policy towards Burma, including trade, was fully set out in the speech by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 19 July, Official Report, columns 1641–45. There is no obstacle to UK firms exploring business in Burma not covered by the European Union embargo.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on his Department's policy in relation to (a) trade with Burma, and (b) United Kingdom companies operating in Burma; and if he will make a statement. [4768]

Mr. Nelson: The Government's policy towards Burma, including trade, was fully set out in the speech by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 19 July, Official Report, columns 1641–45. There is no obstacle to UK firms exploring business in Burma not covered by the European Union embargo.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans his Department has to organise a trade mission to Burma in 1996; what assistance will be offered to United Kingdom companies attending; and if he will make a statement. [4771]

Mr. Nelson: We propose to organise a trade mission to Burma next February and will be providing financial assistance to a maximum of 20 eligible United Kingdom companies, in the form of a travel grant of £1,000, towards the cost of the visit.

The Government's policy towards Burma, including trade, was full set out in the speech by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 19 July, Official Report, columns 1641-45. There is no obstacle to UK firms exploring business in Burma not covered by the European Union embargo.

Nuclear Site Licensing

Mr. Home Roberston: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will instruct the Health and Safety Executive to send its consultation documents on changes to nuclear site licences arising from the privatisation of the nuclear industry to hon. Members with nuclear power stations in their constituencies; and if he will extend the consultation period. [4872]

Mr. Eggar: It is for the Health and Safety Executive, as the independent regulator of the nuclear industry, to specify those public bodies to whom applicants must provide details of licence applications and to decide on whether or not to extend the statutory consultation period.

Small Firms

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to regulate firms providing grant information to small firms. [5256]

Mr. Page: There are no plans to regulate such businesses.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action his Department is taking to promote the use of renewable sources of energy in the business community. [4711]

Mr. Page: The Government are stimulating the development of new and renewable energy sources and industrial and market infrastructure through a market enablement strategy. The strategy was published as "Energy Paper 62" in March 1994. The strategy's principal measure involves stimulating an initial market for electricity-producing technologies close to commercial competitiveness via renewables orders made under the non-fossil fuel obligation—NFFO.

As I announced in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Rochford (Dr. Clark) on 2 November 1995, Official Report, columns 441–42, the proposals for a fourth NFFO order for England and Wales for a further 400 to 500 MW of contracts for renewables-generated electricity.

Other measures are aimed at assessing and developing technology options in collaboration with industry, ensuring that the market is fully informed, removing inappropriate market barriers and encouraging international competitive industries to develop.

Specific actions under the new and renewable energy programme to date have included support for 11 studies undertaken with regional electricity companies and local authorities which identify the local availability of renewable resources; work with the financial community to promote the availability of suitable investment funds; and support for studies aimed at evaluating the prospects for retail sales of renewable electricity. Another measure funded under the DTI's new and renewable energy programme is the energy design advice scheme—EDAS—which aims to improve the energy and environmental performance of the building stock in both commercial and residential sectors, through the provision of specialised low-energy building expertise to building designers and their clients.

My Department also publishes, through the energy technology support unit, a wide range of literature on renewable energy and operates an inquiries bureau for businesses, local authorities and the general public.

The Government intend to work, through the NFFO and taking account of those factors which influence business competitiveness, towards a figure of 1500 MW DNC of new electricity generating capacity from renewable energy sources for the United Kingdom as a whole by 2000.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many Government-funded research projects are currently engaged on the development of renewable sources of energy. [4712]

Mr. Page: My Department is currently supporting 358 research projects under the new and renewable energy programme.

Energy Policy

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposal the United Kingdom intends to put to the EU Energy Council in Brussels on 14 December on ways to alleviate fuel poverty within the framework of the draft EU White Paper on energy policy. [4946]

Mr. Page: The EU White Paper on energy policy will be presented by the Commission for the first time at the Energy Council on 14 December. Therefore the United Kingdom will not be in a position to make any proposals within its framework until its contents have been thoroughly considered.

British Coal Pumping Stations

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the British Coal pumping stations which closed between 1965 and privatisation in the City of Durham constituency; and which closures after that date have been notified to his Department [5130]

Mr. Page: The first part of the hon. Member's question is a matter for the British Coal Corporation and I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member. I understand from the Coal Authority that the nine pumping stations in County Durham transferred to the authority on 31 October 1994 are all still being operated. There was and is no requirement for my Department to be notified in such cases.

London Electricity

Mr. Timms: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what financial assistance is being provided from public funds to London Electricity to transfer its customer operations functions out of London. [4786]

Mr. Page: I understand that London Electricity is transferring part of its customer operations functions to Doxford park in the Sunderland enterprise zone. As with any other company moving into an enterprise zone, the company will be eligible for capital allowances, and be exempt from the national non-domestic rate for the remainder of the life of the enterprise zone. No direct grants are being made to London Electricity from central Government.

Business Link Services Guide

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what definition of the personal business adviser service has been drawn up by the small firms and business link division; and if he will publish the guidelines that have been issued on the service. [4825]

Mr. Page [holding answer 8 December 1995]: A detailed definition of the business link personal business adviser service, including a model job description, is included in the "Business Link Services Guide", section C 25–36, which was published on 31 October 1995.

A copy of the services guide is available in the Library of the House.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many times mobile telephones used by Ministers in his Department have been cloned during (a) the last six months, (b) the last 12 months and (c) the last 18 months; and which Ministers within his Department have had their mobile telephones cloned. [4268]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 7 December 1995]: There have been no recorded incidents of Minister's mobile telephones being cloned within the last 18 months or prior to that period. Ministers in my Department are issued with digital mobile telephones which are inherently more difficult to clone than their analogue counterparts.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

National Lottery (Under-age Purchasing)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what steps she is taking to eliminate the sale of national lottery tickets to under-age children. [4719]

Mr. Sproat: Last week I welcomed the announcement made by the Director General of the National Lottery, who is responsible for regulatory matters, about the new action designed to stamp out under-age lottery sales. I am also holding discussions with the police, the Home Office and other parties about the enforcement of the law governing the sale of tickets to under-16-year-olds.

National Lottery

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to her circular letter to Members about the national lottery dated 10 November, reference C95/10129, if she will place in the Library (a) on paper and (b) on computer disk in a spreadsheet format compatible with the Library's computer information about each of the awards made from the good causes fund to date indicating in each case (i) the nature of the activity supported, (ii) the amount of money granted, (iii) the distributing body making the award and (iv) the parliamentary constituency in which the recipient body's headquarters is based. [4537]

Mr. Sproat: My Department already produces a monthly report of the distribution of lottery proceeds. Included in this report are financial details of the awards made each month and the total since the lottery began, for each distributor and by region of the United Kingdom. Copies of this report are placed in the Libraries of the House.

SCOTLAND

European Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the statement of the Secretary of State for the Environment of 21 November, Official Report, column 454, if he will make it his policy to review past legislation in respect of additional burdens imposed by regulations implementing European directives. [5071]

Mr. Kynoch: It is the policy in the Scottish Office to ensure that we do not gold-plate European directives by the addition of unnecessary burdens when implementing them in the United Kingdom. We will take every opportunity to look at existing legislation in light of this policy.

Nuclear Site Licensing

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will instruct the Health and Safety Executive to send its consultation documents on changes to nuclear site licences arising from the privatisation of the nuclear industry to hon. Members with nuclear power stations in their constituencies; and if he will extend the consultation period. [4992]

Mr. Kynoch: No.

Water Authorities

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland who are the chairman, chief executive and members of each of the new water authorities; and what are their correspondence addresses. [4456]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 6 December 1995]: The names of each of the chairmen, chief executives and members of the new water authorities and their correspondence addresses are as follows:

North of Scotland Water Authority—Mr. J. Robertson (Chairman), Mr. A. Findlay (Chief Executive), Mr. D. Addly, Councillor R. Bissett, Councillor J. Easten, Councillor N. Graham, Mr. A. Lewis, Mr. A. MacCallum, Councillor O. Macdonald, Mr. N. McAndrew, Councillor D. Nicholson, Mr. D. Paton. Correspondence should be addressed to: North of Scotland Water Authority, Caledonia House, 63 Academy Street, Inverness, IV1 1LU.

East of Scotland Water Authority—Dr. I. Preston (Chairman), Mr. R. Rennet (Chief Executive), Mr. D. Barlow, Mr. R. Bell, Councillor I. Berry, Councillor Ian Galloway, Councillor A. Dickson, Councillor T. Kerr, Councillor P. McCafferty, Mr. H. O'Hanlon, Sir Francis McWilliams, Mr. R. Summers. Correspondence should be addressed to: East of Scotland Water Authority, 27 Perth Street, Edinburgh, EH3 5RB.

West of Scotland Water Authority—Mr. J. Jameson (Chairman), Mr. E. Chambers (Chief Executive, Mr. N. Berry, Councillor M. Bryson, Sir Robert Easton, Mr. J. Goodwin, Mr. D. Gray, Mr. P. Kennedy, Councillor W. Petrie, Councillor R. Reid, Provost L. Rosin, Councillor I. Young. Correspondence should be addressed to: West of Scotland Water Authority, 419 Balmore Road Glasgow, G22 6NU.

Departmental Inquiry Line

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what percentage of the calls made to the Scottish Office inquiry line since its establishment were on matters on which his Department (a) was competent and (b) not competent to deal with. [4452]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 6 December 1995]: This information is not recorded but the inquiry officers consider that the majority of calls relate to matters for which the Scottish Office is responsible.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement indicating for each calendar month since its establishment the number of calls made to the Scottish Office inquiry line and how many of these calls have been (a) interactive and (b) non-interactive. [4434]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 6 December 1995]: The numbers of calls received are:

Information on types of calls is not recorded.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much in total it has cost his Department to establish, publicise and operate the Scottish Office inquiry line; and what are the annual costs of this service. [4451]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 6 December 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Scotland on 18 April 1995, Official Report, columns 79–80.

Fisheries Research Vessel

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to announce the signing of a contract for the construction of a fisheries research vessel; and if he will make a statement. [4555]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 7 December 1995]: I still expect to reach a decision on the tenders by 31 December 1995. I shall notify the hon. Member of my decision.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

International Development Association

27. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's policy in relation to the replenishment of IDA11. [3310]

Mr. Hanley: We are working to ensure a satisfactory outcome to the negotiations on the 11th replenishment of the International Development Association and to enhance IDA's effectiveness by strengthening its focus on poverty reduction, sound economic management and sustainable development.

International Labour Migration

32. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effect of United Kingdom bilateral aid on international labour migration. [3317]

Mr. Hanley: The effects of United Kingdom bilateral aid cannot be assessed separately from other factors affecting international labour migration. ODA seeks to help people in aid recipient countries to improve their lives, but accepts that any influence on their decisions to migrate will be modest.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place and with whom as to medical and food aid to Sri Lanka during the present conflict. [3314]

Mr. Hanley: We are in frequent contact with the Government of Sri Lanka and relief agencies about the provision of emergency assistance, including medical and food aid needs, to those affected by the present conflict in the north.

PRIME MINISTER

Nuclear Materials (Exports)

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Prime Minister what changes have been made in the guideline for the export of nuclear materials, equipment and technology by the United Kingdom beyond the measures set out in his answer to the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) of 13 January 1993, Official Report, column 745. [5393]

The Prime Minister: The guidelines for the export of nuclear materials, equipment, and technology by the United Kingdom remain the same with one exception. The guidelines of the nuclear suppliers' group, of which the UK is a member, will, in exceptional cases, allow such exports to non-nuclear weapon states without full scope safeguards agreements with the International Atomic Energy Authority, where they are deemed essential to the safe operation of existing facilities and if IAEA safeguards are applied to these facilities.

The NSG has also adopted guidelines for the transfer of nuclear-related dual-use material, equipment and technology. These exports are considered on a case-by-case basis.

Departmental Transfers

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has received concerning the transfer of (a) personnel and (b) responsibilities from Government Departments to Scotland; and what plans he has to make such a transfer. [5096]

The Prime Minister: I am not aware of any recent representations on this topic. My right hon. Friends the President of the Board of Trade and the Secretary of State for Scotland have, however, recently received representations from Grampian regional council and the City of Aberdeen district council about the scope for transferring to Aberdeen additional jobs in the Department of Trade and Industry's oil and gas division. My right hon. Friend the Minister for Industry and Energy will be meeting representatives of the councils shortly to discuss this issue.

Princess of Wales

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to hold consultations with other Prime Ministers of those countries where Her Majesty the Queen is Head of State about the future role and duties of the Princess of Wales. [4867]

The Prime Minister: None.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the future role and duties of the Princess of Wales. [4841]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the statement I made on 9 December 1992, Official Report, column 845.

Nigeria

Mr. Madden: To ask the Prime Minister what action he has taken following the disclosure of normally confidential information to the media of information concerning the application by Mr. Abiodum Igbindu, for political asylum in the United Kingdom. [4853]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 8 December 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Gateshead, East (Ms Quin) on 5 December, Official Report, column 136.

DEFENCE

Royal Dockyards (Privatisation)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total cost to date of consultancy payments made to firms in relation to work carried out to develop his Department's plans for the privatisation of (a) Devonport royal dockyard and (b) Rosyth royal dockyard. [5363]

Mr. Arbuthnot: During the period between 18 October 1993, when my right hon. and learned Friend the then Secretary of State for Defence announced our policy towards the future management of the royal dockyards, Official Report, 18 October 1993, columns 39–41, and 30 November 1995, expenditure charged to defence votes in respect of consultancy advice given in relation to the proposed privatisation of the dockyards amounted to some £8.4 million, including VAT. Further costs have been incurred, but final details will not be available until invoices have been presented and payments agreed. Costs attributable to one dockyard or the other cannot be separately identified.

Army Officers (Business Appointments)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by name, rank and service the former serving officers of the armed forces who (a) have applied under the business appointments procedure and (b) have had their application refused. [5323]

Mr. Soames: During the last two years, the following applications under the business appointments procedure were made by officers who had retired from the armed forces:

	Number
Admiral of the Fleet	3
Vice Admiral	2
Rear Admiral	9
Captain	3
Commander	3
Lieutenant Commander	8
Major General	20
Brigadier	2
Colonel	4
Lieutenant Colonel	4
Major	1
Captain	1
Marshal of the RAF	1
Air Chief Marshal	1
Air Marshal	4
Air Vice-Marshal	2
Air Commodore	1
Group Captain	3
Wing Commander	2
Squadron Leader	6

None of the applications was refused: restrictions were imposed on nine applications. It is not our practice to disclose the names of the officers concerned.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 24 November, Official Report, column 349, how the business appointments policy for former serving officers of the armed services is enforced; and what sanctions may be imposed. [5322]

Mr. Soames: Business appointment applications are approved unconditionally or subject to a waiting period of up to two years from the applicant's last day in Crown service, or to a condition banning the applicant from involvement in a particular project or area of work for up to two years. Where a condition is imposed, both the applicant and prospective employer are informed in writing of the nature of the condition.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many sites of special scientific interest on his Ministry's land have been de-listed in each of the last five years. [4726]

Mr. Soames: The Ministry of Defence owns or occupies over 200 sites of special scientific interest. Available records do not show any such sites as having been de-listed in the last five years.

Low Flying

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many instances of aircraft using reheat have been recorded by RAF police conducting covert monitoring of low flying in each year since 1990. [4486]

Mr. Soames: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many aircraft movements have been observed by RAF police conducting covert monitoring of low flying in each year since 1990. [4487]

Mr. Soames: The numbers of aircraft observed by the RAF police while conducting covert monitoring, including deployments with the Skyguard radar system, of military low flying in each year since 1990 are as follows:

1990: 461

1991: 780

1992: 850

1993: 788

1994: 265

1995[1]: 236.

[1] To 30th November 1995.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many complaints from the public his Department has received arising from low-level flying in each of the last five years. [4730]

Mr. Soames: The numbers of complaints and inquiries about military low flying received by my Department in each of the last five years are as follows:

1991: 4,846

1992: 6,295

1993: 5,738

[illegible]778

1995: [illegible],492.

[1] Up to 30 November 1995.

"The Nemesis File"

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the alleged Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers non-commissioned officer (a) required and (b) sought the permission of the Ministry of Defence before publishing "The Nemesis File". [4863]

Mr. Soames: Serving and former members of the armed forces are required to seek authorisation from the Ministry of Defence before publishing information gained during their service. "The Nemesis File" was not submitted.

Widows' Pensions

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many widows have received pensions under the special provisions for pre-1950 widows; and how much has been expended on these pensions in total. [4869]

Mr. Soames: Information on the number of former pensioners and total costs of the pensions paid to them is not available.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many widows are currently receiving a pre-1950 widow's pension; and at what rates these are currently being paid. [4870]

Mr. Soames: The number of widows currently receiving a pre-1950 widow's pension could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The current rates of special widow's pension, dependent on rank of the service man, are £12.39 to £22.19 a week. The pension is subject to the same index-linking arrangements as other public service pensions.

Tain Bombing Range

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence following the recent noise evaluation survey of properties in the vicinity of Tain bombing range, Ross-shire, if he will (a) publish the objective criteria upon which he decides subsequent eligibility for compensation and (b) provide a detailed breakdown of the findings involved; and if he will make a statement. [5016]

Mr. Soames: Under the terms of the Ministry of Defence noise insulation grant scheme, which was introduced in 1985, owners of properties severely affected by military aircraft noise are eligible for grants to cover the cost of installing noise insulation in bedrooms and up to two living rooms. Eligibility is limited to properties subject to a noise level of 70 decibels averaged over a 16-hour day. The environmental noise survey undertaken at RAF Tain air weapons range in August 1995 showed that, as a result of strictly enforced aircraft circuit patterns and an overall reduction in the number of aircraft movements, no local properties are now subject to noise in excess of the 70 decibel threshold. The noise survey report was made available to the Ross and Cromarty district council on 16 November and a copy will be placed in the Library of the House.

Military Aircraft Accidents

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to make available to the relatives of service or civilian personnel killed in military aircraft accidents the full text of the board of inquiry report into the accident. [5173]

Mr. Soames: Since December 1992, in recognition of the special position of next of kin, service board of inquiry reports have been made available to the nominated next of kin of deceased service—and associated civilian—personnel, should they so request, subject only to the essential minimum of security requirements.

Boarding School Allowance

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will publish a list of schools on the admissible schools list; [4624]

(2) if he will list the schools receiving funds from the boarding school allowance indicating the numbers of pupils at each school benefiting from the scheme. [4625]

Mr. Soames: A list of some 800 schools in respect of which boarding school allowance may be paid is kept by my Department. I am arranging for a copy of the most recent admissible schools list—June 1995—to be placed in the Library of the House. The list details the number of service children attending each school at the end of the summer term 1995 and whose parents claimed boarding school allowance.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many pupils have benefitted from the boarding school allowance in each of the past four years. [4626]

Mr. Soames: The total average number of children for whom boarding school allowance was claimed in the academic years in question was:

1992–1993: 15,120
1993–1994: 12,567
1994–1995: 11,363.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many pupils, and at what cost, are funded at the Quantock school, Taunton by the boarding school allowance. [4628]

Mr. Soames: The total number of service children attending Quantock school, Taunton, and whose parents have claimed boarding school allowance for the autumn term 1995, is 38. The total estimated cost to my Department for this provision is £81,969.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the annual cost of the boarding school allowance in each of the last four years. [4627]

Mr. Soames: The total cost to my Department of boarding school allowance for the years in question was:

1992–1993: £116.72 million
1993–1994: £113.61 million
1994–1995: £107.23 million.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment the Service Children's Education Authority has made of the suitability of the Quantock school, Taunton to remain on the list of admissible schools. [4629]

Mr. Soames: SCEA conducts an on-going assessment of the quality of pastoral care at schools on the Ministry of Defence admissible schools list. As part of that process, an informal visit to Quantock school, Taunton was carried out in June 1995. A number of reservations were expressed concerning the quality of pastoral care available and, as a result, the suitability of Quantock school to remain on the MOD admissible schools list is being reviewed.

Northern Ireland (Troops)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total number of British forces currently stationed in Northern Ireland; what the figure was in August in each year since 1993; and what plans there are to withdraw British forces from Northern Ireland during the coming year. [4611]

Mr. Soames: There are currently some 16,500 members of the armed forces stationed in Northern Ireland. This figure includes Royal Navy and Royal Air Force personnel as well as nine general service infantry battalions and six home service battalions of the Royal Irish Regiment. In both August 1993 and August 1994 the equivalent figure was approximately 19,000; by August 1995 this had fallen to approximately 17,500.

Force levels in Northern Ireland are kept continually under review. Since the terrorist ceasefires in 1994 three major units deployed in the infantry role have been relocated from Northern Ireland to bases elsewhere. Future measure of this kind will depend on the security situation.

Redirected Mail

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's policy with regard to forwarding the mail for members of the armed services serving abroad who have moved home. [4810]

Mr. Soames: The redirection of mail between British Forces Post Office addresses, whether in the United Kingdom or overseas, is a unit responsibility and no charges are made to customers for this service.

Redirection from a UK civil address to a BFPO address is handled under normal post office arrangements for which a charge is made. The charge is, however, set at the inland rate irrespective of the location of the BFPO.

Redirected mail from a civil UK address to an overseas civil address would be undertaken by the Post Office and its normal charges for this service would apply.

Equipment Reliability

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the cost to his Department each year of inadequate reliability and maintainability of defence equipment. [5361]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Ministry of Defence aims to maximise reliability and maintainability to the extent that this is cost-effective. Earlier and more systematic attention is paid to the R and M, and demonstrated achievement of R and M requirements is linked to contract payments. This approach has helped MOD achieve significance improvements compared with earlier generations of equipment, thereby saving costs and enhancing operational effectiveness. It is not possible to quantify the total yearly savings resulting from this R and M initiative.

Gulf Veterans Medical Assessment Programme

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the relocation of the Gulf veterans medical assessment programme following the forthcoming closure of RAF Wroughton. [5315]

Mr. Soames: The Gulf war medical assessment programme is currently being relocated to the central medical establishment, Kelvin house, 32–34 Cleveland street, London W1P 6AU. The physical move will take place during the next week, and routine appointments will be available in January, after a necessary period of adjustment to re-establish the programme's facilities.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost to his Department of the Gulf veterans medical assessment programme to date. [5317]

Mr. Soames: The assessments are funded from within my Department's normal secondary care programme and cannot be identified separately.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what medical tests were made on examinees under the Gulf veterans medical assessment programme. [5318]

Mr. Soames: All tests offered to individuals coming forward for assessment are tailored to the particular requirements of each patient after considering the medical and occupational history, the reported symptoms and clinical signs found on detailed initial examination. Possible tests include: a full blood assay, urinalysis, X-Ray, or CT/MRI scan, electrocardiograph, endoscopy and vitalograph studies. Further tests or referrals are available when required.

Aircraft Training (Scotland)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the (a) total Royal Air Force training hours, (b) total NATO training hours and (c) total non-RAF and non-NATO training hours flown over Scotland in the past 12 months. [4981]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 8 December 1995]: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Service Costs

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the annual cost per service person, including equipment, land, buildings, training and personnel expenditure for the (a) Army, (b) Royal Navy, (c) Royal Marines and (d) Royal Air Force. [4984]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 8 December 1995]: This information is not available in the form requested.

Service Housing Stock

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of Stae for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact on the housing market of his plans to sell off his Department's service housing stock. [4977]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 8 December 1995]: The large majority of the properties transferred will initially be rented back by MOD to meet service accommodation needs. Our proposal will conduce to a more efficient release of surplus properties by MOD over time. Whether those empty properties are then sold, re-let or redeveloped will be a matter for the future owner of the stock, who will no doubt have regard to market demand at the time.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many dwellings owned by his Department are (a) currently unoccupied and (b) have been unoccupied for six months or more in each parliamentary constituency in Cleveland. [3562]

Mr. Soames: [holding answer 4 December 1995]: The following empty dwellings are owned by my Department in each parliamentary constituency in Cleveland:

Hartlepool: 3

Langbaurgh: 1.

All four of these dwellings have been unoccupied for more than six months and are in the process of being sold.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many dwellings owned by his Department are (a) currently unoccupied and (b) have been unoccupied for six months or more in each parliamentary constituency in Essex. [3554]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 4 December 1995]: The following empty dwellings are owned by my Department in each parliamentary constituency in Essex:

	Number
Braintree	109
Chelmsford	1
Southend East	13
South Colchester and Malden	228

Seven of the properties in Southend, East, 34 properties in South Colchester and Malden and the one vacant in Chelmsford are all in the process of being sold. Information on properties unoccupied for six months or more is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many dwellings owned by his Department are (a) currently unoccupied and (b) have been unoccupied for six months or more in each parliamentary constituency in Cheshire. [3555]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 4 December 1995]: The following empty dwellings are owned by my Department in each parliamentary constituency in Cheshire:

City of Chester: 31

Warrington South: 24.

All the vacant properties in Tatton and seven of those in the city of Chester are in the process of being sold. Information on properties unoccupied for six months or more is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many dwelling owned by his Department are (a) currently unoccupied and (b) have been unoccupied for six months or more in each parliamentary constituency in Bedfordshire. [3556]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 4 December 1995]: The following empty dwellings are owned by my Department in each parliamentary constituency in Bedfordshire:

Mid Bedfordshire: 55

South-West Bedfordshire: 54.

Of the vacant properties in South-West Bedfordshire, 35 are in the process of being sold. Information on properties unoccupied for six months or more is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many dwellings owned by his Department are (a) currently unoccupied and (b) have been unoccupied for six months or more in each parliamentary constituency in Greater Manchester. [3558]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 4 December 1995]: The following empty dwelling are owned by my Department in each parliamentary constituency in Great Manchester:

Ashton-under-Lyne: 4

Bury South: 7

Heywood and Middleton: 1

Manchester Withington: 1

Manchester Wythenshawe: 9

Stretford: 3.

One of the vacant properties in Ashton-under-Lyne and all in Manchester, Wythenshawe and Stretford are in the process of being sold. Information on properties unoccupied for six months or more is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many dwellings owned by his Department are (a) currently unoccupied and (b) have been unoccupied for six months or more in each parliamentary constituency in Derbyshire. [3559]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 4 December 1995]: My Department owns no dwellings in Derbyshire.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many dwellings owned by his Department are (a) currently unoccupied and (b) have been unoccupied for six months or more in each parliamentary constituency in Kent. [3560]

Defence Agency Locations

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the principal locations of (a) the Army Base Repair Organisation, (b) the Meteorological Office, (c) the Military Survey, (d) the RAF Maintenance Group Defence Agency, (e) the RAF Training Group Defence Agency, (f) the Pay and Pensions Agency, (g) the Naval Aircraft Repair Organisation, (h) the Defence Accounts Agency and (i) the Defence Animal Centre; and how many (i) civilian and (ii) uniformed personnel are employed at each location. [4349]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 6 December 1995]: This is a matter for the agencies concerned. I have asked the chief executives to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Brigadier J. R. Drew to Dr. David Clark, dated 11 December 1995:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the principal locations of a number of Defence Agencies, including the Army Base Repair Organisation (ABRO), and how many staff, military and civilian, are employed at each location.

I have enclosed a table which gives the location of all the ABRO workshop sites and offices and the numbers employed at each, as at 1 November 1995. These range from major workshop facilities such as those at Donnington and Bovington to small offices arranging the repair of equipment under contract by industry. I have enclosed an information pack about the agency which includes the Annual Report and Accounts 94/95, the Corporate Plan 1995 and a brief history.

I hope that you find this useful.

Letter from J. C. R. Hunt to Dr. David Clark, dated 11 December 1995:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about principal locations of certain MOD organisations.

(a) The principal location of the Meteorological Office is at Bracknell, Berkshire

(b) 1238 people are employed at Bracknell

(c) All are civilians.

Letter from Brigadier A. J. Hoon to Dr. David Clark, dated 11 December 1995:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence in respect of the Military Survey Defence Agency principal locations and the number of Agency staff at each of these locations as this matter falls within my area of responsibility.

Please find attached a table which shows a list of our principal locations with a breakdown of the civilian and service staff employed by the Agency at each of these locations on 31 Oct 95.

I hope you find this information useful.

Letter from Air Vice-Marshal R. H. Kyle to Dr. David Clark, dated 11 December 1995:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence in which you asked for details of the principal locations of the RAF Maintenance Group Defence Agency and how many uniformed and civilian personnel are employed at each location, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility.

The information you requested is listed as an attachment to this letter. The figures are as at 30 September 1995, which is the most recent date for which centrally held figures are available.

As a result of the end of the Cold War and a reduction in the perceived threat, and in common with other elements of the Ministry of Defence, the Agency is in the process of rationalising its operations and reducing in size. This is expected to lead to the closure of RAF Carlisle, RAF Quedgeley and RAF North Luffenham over the next 3 years. In addition, the number of personnel in the Agency will reduce to approximately 2,400 uniformed and 5,400 civilian staff by 1999.

I hope that this information meets your requirements.

Letter from P. J. Trevelyan to Dr. David Clark, dated 11 December 1995:

DEFENCE ACCOUNTS AGENCY

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the principal locations of my Agency and the numbers of staff employed at each location.

The Defence Accounts Agency operates from five locations in the UK: two in Bath; and one each at Cheadle Hulme, Liverpool and Worcester. The numbers of staff currently employed at each location are as follows:

	Number
Bath (Pinesgate West)	119
Bath (Warminster Road)	294
Cheadle Hulme	277
Liverpool	641
Worcester	167
Total	1,498

These are all civilians—the Agency does not employ uniformed personnel.

You may also wish to note that the Agency is currently restructuring following its first three year review as a Defence Agency (Defence Accounts Agency Annual Report and Accounts 1994–95—HC Paper No. 542 refers). Some restructuring has already occurred and is reflected in the information given above. The remainder entails demerger into two separate agencies: the Defence Bills Agency and the Pay and Personnel Agency. This is expected to occur early in the New Year. Both organizations will continue to operate from their existing sites, ie: the Defence Bills Agency at Liverpool; and the Pay and Personnel Agency from Bath, Cheadle Hulme and Worcester, as listed above.

Letter from Colonel A. H. Roache to Dr. David Clark, dated 11 December 1995:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about locations and staff numbers in Defence Agencies. This falls within my area of responsibility.

The Defence Animal Centre operates from a single site at Melton Mowbray in Leicestershire and retains a training area at RAF Syerston in Lincolnshire. The number of staff employed as at 01 Nov 96 was 135 military and 48.5 civilian.

Contamination

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the locations of all Ministry of Defence estates in Scotland where (a) radioactive, (b) fuel and (c) other types of contamination is at a level that is above the maximum allowable level for a civilian residential area. [4983]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 8 December 1995]: There are no Ministry of Defence sites in Scotland where land contamination has been identified as posing a significant risk to health and safety or the environment and therefore requiring decontamination. Remediation work at RAF Lossiemouth following an accidental oil fuel spillage in April is continuing and will be completed shortly.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Competitiveness

12. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations he has received on his policy on competitiveness. [3289]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The White Paper "Competitiveness: Forging Ahead" has been widely welcomed by industry. Major representative bodies such as the CBI, the Engineering Employers Federation and the Chemical Industries Association, as well as many major companies, have all expressed their support.

Deregulation

15. Mr. Steen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the progress of the deregulation initiative as it affects (a) legislation in the United Kingdom and (b) directives from Europe. [3291]

Mr. Freeman: Recent progress on deregulation includes the passing into law of the first two deregulation orders under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994. Many other deregulatory changes are being made by secondary legislation and administrative action. I have been pressing the case for deregulation in the European Community. There has been a significant decline in the number of new Commission proposals for legislation in 1996. I am urging the Commission to make a commitment at the forthcoming European Council to improve the quality of future legislation and review existing European legislation.

18. Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what analysis he has made of the likely effects of the Government's campaign of deregulation on United Kingdom competitiveness. [3305]

Mr. Freeman: As we made clear in our second White Paper on competitiveness, deregulation is central to improving United Kingdom competitiveness. Unnecessary requirements stand in the way of market entry, innovation, investment and jobs. We have a programme for repealing or amending well over 1,000 regulations and are on target to have dealt with over 500 by the end of the year. We are also taking action to ensure that new regulations are introduced only where really justified and are enforced in a business-friendly way.

22. Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has to involve small firms in his campaign to reduce the burden of regulation. [3307]

Mr. Freeman: I have recently met a number of small firms representative bodies about deregulation. The deregulation task force includes a number of members drawn from the small firms sector. Small firms must also now be consulted as part of the compliance cost assessment procedure on new regulatory proposals to make sure they will not be disproportionately affected. The Prime Minister recently launched a series of seminars for small firms which is providing another channel for them to make their views known to us. I am also keen to hear direct from small firms about the problems they are facing and am issuing them an invitation to write to me.

25. Mr. Pike: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his Department's policy is on employee protection matters in co-ordinating the Government's deregulation policy. [3299]

Mr. Freeman: Deregulation is aimed at achieving better regulation and is not about removing necessary protection, whether for employees, or, for example, consumers or the enviornment. For deregulation orders made under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act, the responsible Minister must give details of how any necessary protection under existing legislation will be maintained.

26. Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what contacts he has had with industry about the Government's campaign on deregulation. [3309]

Mr. Freeman: The Government are advised by the deregulation task force about businesses priorities for deregulation and I have regular contact with the chairman, Francis Maude. The task force published its first report in September and of 52 recommendations the Government accepted 46 in whole or in part. In addition, I discuss deregulation with various representative bodies of industry and individual industrialists from time to time.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to discuss the Molitor report on deregulation with the European Commission. [3304]

Mr. Freeman: I discussed the Molitor report and the United Kingdom's objectives for European deregulation with the Commission on Monday 11 September and Thursday 23 November. I expect to continue these discussions next year.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many regulations which are now identified as suitable for repeal under the deregulation initiative were brought in by the Ministry of Defence between 1983 and 1986, the Department of the Environment between 1990 and 1992 and the Department for Trade and Industry between 1992 and 5 July 1995. [3781]

Mr. Freeman: The number of regulations for the dates in question are as follows:

Ministry of Defence: 0

Department of the Enviornment: 0

Department of Trade and Industry: 3.

Ministerial Priorities

16. Mr. Janner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what are his current priorities. [3292]

Mr. Denham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his priorities. [3287]

The Deputy Prime Minister: To promote the competitiveness agenda, the deregulation initiative and the effective administration on the services for which my Department is responsible.

Desk-top Diary System

17. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when his new desk-top diary system will be ready for use; and what the final cost of introducing it will be. [3293]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The strategic diary is now operating; the infrastructure on which it runs has cost about £150,000 to set up. Additional costs will be incurred as it is developed.

Government Policy Cabinet Committee

19. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the objectives are of the Cabinet Committee on the Co-ordination and Presentation of Government Policy. [3294]

The Deputy Prime Minister: As the title suggests, the Committee considers matters relating to the co-ordination and presentation of Government policy.

Civil Service Morale

21. Mr. Hall: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of morale in the civil service. [3296]

Mr. Willetts: Morale in the civil service is best maintained by allowing staff to perform to the best of their abilities in the career they have chosen. This Government's civil service reforms enable staff to focus their attention on delivering high-quality public services: this is the best way of satisfying both them and the users of their services.

Government Policies

23. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his policy for the co-ordination of the Government's long-term strategies. [3297]

The Deputy Prime Minister: We are pursuing economic prosperity and security for all, based on an enterprise economy; creating a nation of opportunity reflecting the Government's values of choice, ownership and reward; upholding decent common-sense values in the pursuit of law and order and justice; providing the people of Britain with first class public services; and reflecting pride in our nation and its place in the world.

"Competing for Quality"

24. Mr. Congdon: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what are the latest figures for efficiency savings resulting from the "Competing for Quality" programme. [3298]

Mr. Freeman: The results for the period April 1992 to March 1995 were published in the "Government Opportunities" special report in June. This report is available in the House of Commons Library.

Special Advisers

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what reviews he has undertaken on the pay and conditions of service of special advisers. [3290]

Mr. Willetts: We are implementing the Nolan recommendation that special advisers should be subject to the same scrutiny as other civil servants in respect of business appointments which they propose to take up within two years of leaving service. We are also considering changes in their pay arrangements to take account of changes in the civil service pay structure.

Science Cabinet Committee

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when the Cabinet Committee on science last met; and how frequently he expects meetings to take place. [3295]

The Deputy Prime Minister: Issues relating to science and technology now come under the remit of the ministerial Committee on Competitiveness.

Publicity Material

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many identical copies of an advertisement for the bus and coach driving manual were sent on the same day to Barton Accessories in Moreleigh road, Harbertonford, Totness, South Devon, in the same post, and for what reason; what is HMSO's policy regarding duplication of publicity information; and if he will make a statement on the cost of duplication by HMSO. [5031]

Mr. Willetts: As this question concerns a purely operational matter, I have asked the chief executive of HMSO to write direct to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mike Lynn to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 8 December 1995:

I have been asked to reply to your question (No 43N) to the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster about duplicate mailings from HMSO.

I am sorry that the Manager of Barton Accessories had to suffer no less than nine envelopes containing identical information, including a letter signed by Steven Norris recommending an HMSO publication.

As you probably know, it is common commercial practice to buy in mailing lists in order to reach specialised markets. HMSO brought this one, on an electronic disk, from a company specialising in passenger carrying vehicles. It has become clear to us that this particular list contained a number of duplications, and we have complained to the firm about it. They have apologised profusely, and waived all their charges.

I recognise that this is little consolation to your constituent, but I am grateful to you for bringing the matter to my attention.

Former Prime Ministers (Funding)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what funding Lady Thatcher continues to receive from Her Majesty's Government for her private office and staff costs; how much she has received to date since she ceased to be a Member of this House; and if he will make a statement. [4488]

Mr. Freeman: All former Prime Ministers are eligible to receive an allowance to assist them with the continuing heavy burden of office and secretarial costs arising from their special position in public life. The allowance is similar in purpose and amount to the parliamentary office costs allowance, but is paid in respect of public, not parliamentary, duties.

The maximum amount of the allowance available to former Prime Ministers during the current financial year is £42,754, plus £4,275 for contributions to pension schemes of members of staff whose salaries are paid from the allowance.

I do not think it right to disclose the amounts of this allowance claimed by individual former Prime Ministers, any more than the House discloses details of claims by individual Members under the office costs allowance.

Departmental Responsibilities

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what has been the reduction in the range of departmental responsibilities since 1979; and what staff savings have been made in each Department of State at each level from assistant secretary upwards, including redundancies announced but not yet implemented, together with the reduction in the numbers of Ministers. [4337]

Mr. Freeman: Departmental responsibilities are a matter of public record, set out in the relevant edition of the "List of Ministerial Responsibilities" and elsewhere.

Changes between 1 April 1979 and 1 April 1995 in the number of staff at each of grade levels 1 to 5 are shown in the table. Organisational and other changes between those dates limit comparability, but some approximate groupings of Departments and agencies have been made. Numbers of planned reductions by grade and method of release are not centrally available.

There were 82 Ministers, excluding Law Officers and Whips, in January 1979; there are 84 at present.

HMSO (Privatisation)

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) if he will list the individuals and organisations he has consulted about the implications for the service provided to the House of the proposed privatisation of HMSO; and if he will make a statement; [5252]

(2) what further consultations he plans about the implications for the service provided to the House of the proposed privatisation of HMSO. [5253]

Mr. Freeman: I, my colleagues and officials have consulted management and staff at HMSO, including at the Parliamentary Press, my advisers Coopers and Lybrand and those responsible for the existing arrangements in the House and in the other place on this matter. In addition, I gave evidence on the proposed privatisation of HMSO to the Finance and Services Committee on 21 November.

Parliament is HMSO's most important customer and the Government attach great importance to ensuring that all its requirements would be fully met by privatisation. My intention is therefore that all of these consultations would continue throughout any sale process, and I have invited those responsible for the existing arrangements in the House and the other place to be involved in the privatisation, including advising me on the selection of the preferred bidder.

GP Forms

Ms Harman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many forms relating to general practice he plans to abolish in the next year; and how many of these have been introduced since 1979. [3119]

Mr. Malone: I have been asked to reply.

Implementation of the "Patients not paper" recommendations for fewer, better forms will abolish 20 individual forms, of which three are new since 1979. General practitioners will have to complete about 15 million fewer forms a year as a result.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Data Protection Registrar

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications have been made by Government Departments to the Data Protection Registrar in the course of the last three years. [3306]

Mr. Sackville: I understand from the Data Protection Registrar that information about the number of applications for registration from Government Departments is not readily available. The registrar has, however, identified 802 register entries relating to Government Departments headed by members of the Cabinet or other Ministers. Registration is for a period of three years.

Asylum and Immigration

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the actual or estimated number of (a) applicants for political asylum in the United Kingdom and (b) persons not applicants but dependent on them, broken down to show those currently residing in (i) Tower Hamlets, (ii) Hackney, (iii) other parts of London, (iv) the west midlands, (v) the west riding, (vi) the north-west, (vii) the north-east and (viii) elsewhere in England and Wales. [4605]

Mr. Kirkhope: As at 31 October 1995, 66,655 principal applicants were awaiting an initial decision on their asylum applications. It is estimated that these applicants have approximately 20,000 dependants.

Information on the places of residence of people currently seeking asylum is not held centrally.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements he is making under his proposals in the Asylum and Immigration Bill to ensure he is regularly briefed on human rights and political conditions in overseas countries, with particular reference to those countries he designates as not giving rise to serious risks of persecutions; and what arrangements he is making to consider representations that certain countries should be (a) included and (b) excluded from such designation. [4610]

Miss Widdecombe: Conditions in countries of origin are continuously monitored by the asylum division on the basis of information from a wide range of sources including the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and non-governmental organisations. We are always prepared to consider representations.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy (a) to publish regularly reports which give profiles of human rights and political conditions prevailing in particular countries, (b) to list those countries on which home country reports are held, (c) to place all home country reports and revisions in the Library and (d) to ensure that the reports are available to immigration law practitioners and human rights organisations; and if he will make a statement. [4612]

Mr. Kirkhope: Asylum applications will continue to be considered on the particular facts of each case. Summary background briefs on Ghana and Nigeria have been sent to the immigration appellate authorities, the Immigration Law Practitioners Association and other interested organisations.

The Nigeria brief is being updated; when this has been done, both briefs will be placed in the Library and any further such briefs will be made available in the same way.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) the official statements and (b) documents other than those contained in the Asylum and Immigration Bill relating to the measures and methods that Her Majesty's Government intend to adopt in respect of current problems of asylum and immigration; and if he will list for each (i) change and (ii) innovation the information his Department has (1) obtained and (2) evaluated relating to its practicality and efficiency. [4745]

Miss Widdecombe: We have made available to the House a list of background papers which are relevant to the Asylum and Immigration Bill.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received on the Asylum and Immigration Bill; and how many have been in whole or in part opposed to the Bill. [5272]

Miss Widdecombe: We have received a substantial amount of correspondence about our asylum and immigration proposals expressing a wide range of views. To date, 43 representations have been received from members of the public in favour of the Asylum and Immigration Bill, and 38 against.

Exclusion Orders

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many exclusion orders have been withdrawn since August 1994; and under what powers and against whom those exclusion orders were imposed. [4618]

Mr. Howard: Forty-one exclusion orders have been revoked or allowed to lapse since 31 August 1994. Thirty-six orders remain in force. All these orders were made under the provisions of part II and schedule 2 of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989. It is not our practice to identify those excluded.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) the names of the individuals who are currently subject to exclusion orders, (b) their nationality, (c) the parts of the United Kingdom from which they are excluded and (d) under what powers the person was excluded; and if he will make a statement. [4617]

Mr. Howard: It is not our practice to identify those excluded, but all those subject to exclusion orders under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989 are believed to be citizens of this country or the Irish Republic or both. Thirty-two people are currently excluded from Great Britain under the Act, and four from the United Kingdom. None is excluded from Northern Ireland alone. These orders were made under part II and schedule 2 of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989.

Parole Board Hearings

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the parole board will conduct an oral hearing into the applications for release for Irish prisoners who had served 20 years of their sentences by July 1995. [4616]

Miss Widdecombe: Discretionary lifer panels of the parole board will hear these cases on 12, 13 and 14 December 1995.

Fine Defaulters

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many persons who had defaulted on a fine were jailed in England and Wales during 1994; and what was the average sentence length; [3437]

(2) how many persons have been jailed in England and Wales following default of a fine to date during 1995. [3438]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 11 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about fine defaulters.

Provisional information shows that 22,469 people were received into Prison Service establishments in England and Wales for non-payment of a fine in 1994. The average time imposed was around 18 days.

Provisional information for January–October 1995 shows that 17,650 people were received into Prison Service establishments in England and Wales for non-payment of a fine.

On 31 October 1995, the last available date for which figures are available, there were 414 fine defaulters in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales.

Prisons (Drugs)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the number of (a) members of staff and (b) other officially approved visitors to prisons in England and Wales who have been caught seeking to take illegal drugs into prisons in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [4500]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 11 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of (a) members of staff and (b) other officially approved visitors to prisons in England and Wales who have been caught seeking to take illegal drugs into prisons in each of the last three years.

The information requested is not recorded centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if a person convicted of attempting to smuggle drugs into a prison in England and Wales is allowed to make visits to prison inmates. [4504]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 11 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about whether a person convicted in attempting to smuggle drugs into a prison in England and Wales is allowed to make visits to prison inmates.

Guidance on visits policy is contained in Rules 33, 34 and 37A of the Prison Rules and corresponding Rules 10, 11 and 13 of the Young Offender Institution Rules. Standing Order 5A and Circular Instruction 11/1991 to governors sets out in more detail the arrangements which should apply.

There is no blanket policy to refuse permission for persons convicted of smuggling drugs into prisons to visit prisoners in prisons in England and Wales. It would be extremely difficult to enforce any such policy and it would be prohibitively costly for the Prison Service to extend the vetting procedures already in force for persons applying to visit category A prisoners to all family and friends wishing to visit prisoners throughout the prison estate. However, governors already have discretion to refuse visits on the grounds of security, good order or discipline, or in the interests of the prevention or discouragement of crime. A governor may use this discretion where a visitor is recognised to be an ex-prisoner convicted of drug offences or other serious crimes, or someone known to be involved with drugs or has already been found trying to smuggle illicit substances into a prison visits area. Alternatively, where security or control considerations require, the governor can stipulate that a closed visits room or visits box is used.

Under the arrangements for category A prisoners, prospective visitors are invited to complete a form and to submit two passport photographs. The local police force is asked to verify the photograph, to make checks concerning previous convictions and to provide any other information which may be of importance in relation to security. Previous convictions, by themselves, do not automatically preclude approval of an application but discretion can be exercised given all the known facts.

The Learmont report into prison security makes a number of recommendations to improve the supervision of visits for prisoners. These are under consideration. In addition, mandatory closed visits were introduced in June this year for those few prisoners who are category A exceptional risk. As part of its drugs strategy programme, the Prison Service intends to conduct a pilot study in a sample of prisons making it mandatory to impose a closed visit for any person found using or trafficking in drugs.

Departmental Employees Statistics

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those (a) consultants, (b) outside organisations and (c) individuals employed by his Department in each year since 1990, indicating the purposes of their employment and the total payments made to them. [3968]

Mr. Howard: For information on consultants employed by my Department relating to the financial year 1994–95, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 12 July 1995, Official Report, column 597. For information prior to 1994–95, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Darlington on 23 March 1994, Official Report, column 1223, by my hon. Friend the Member for Bexhill and Battle (Mr. Wardle), the then Under-Secretary of State, for the Home Department.

A list of outside organisations employed by the Department since 1990 and the purpose of their employment as well as total payment made to them could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

For information on individual employees, copies of the civil service staff in post summary tables for 1990 through to 1995 can be found in the Library. Each employee is involved in assisting the Department to attain its aims and objectives as set out in the departmental report. Pay bill figures for individuals employed by the Department are as follows.

Year (Outturn)	£ million
1990–91	886
1991–92	986
1992–93	1,104
1993–94	1,115
1994–95[1]	1,182

[1] Estimated outturn.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many female remand prisoners in each year since 1991 were single mothers; how many of these subsequently received a custodial sentence in each year since 1991; and if he will make a statement. [4300]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 11 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking how many female remand prisoners were single mothers; how many of these subsequently received a custodial sentence in each year since 1991; and if he will make a statement.

No information is held centrally on this subject. However, a study of mothers in prison was conducted in November 1994 by the Home Office Research and Planning Unit. 470 remanded women (unconvicted and unsentenced) were interviewed. Of these, 75 (16 per cent) were single mothers.

No information is available about the number of remanded single mothers who subsequently received a custodial sentence.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average time spent on remand in custody by (a) male and (b) female defendants before trial in each year since 1991; and if he will make a statement. [4299]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 11 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the average time spent on remand in custody by (a) male and (b) female defendants before trial in each year since 1991.

This information was provided in a written answer to Mr Jim Cunningham MP (Coventry South East) on 5 December (Col 210).

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of the prison population in England and Wales who had not been sentenced to imprisonment but were awaiting (a) trial or sentencing, (b) trial and (c) sentencing on 1 January 1991, 1992, 1993 and 1994 respectively; and if he will make a statement. [4297]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 11 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the total number of the prison population in England and Wales who had not been sentenced to imprisonment but were awaiting (a) trial or sentencing, (b) trial and (c) sentencing on the 1st January 1991, 1992, 1993 and 1994 respectively.

The available information relates to the remand population in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales on the last day of the month. Information has therefore been provided in the attached table for 31 December in all years since 1990.

Population of untried and convicted unsentenced prisoners in prison service establishments[1] England and Wales on 31 December 1990–1994

On 31 December	Untried	Convicted unsentenced	All remand
1990	7,444	1,598	9,042
1991	8,184	1,697	9,881
1992	6,718	1,772	8,490
1993	8,388	2,375	10,763
1994	8,771	2,709	11,480

[1] Includes those held in police cells. The population at the end of the year is depressed by the christmas/new year holiday; the magnitude and timing of the temporary effect can vary from year to year.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of (a) male, (b) female and (c) all remand prisoners on the 1 January of each year since 1991; how many in each case (i) did and (ii) did not receive a custodial sentence; and if he will make a statement. [4309]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 11 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking what was the total number of (a) male, (b) female and (c) all remand prisoners on the 1st January of each year since 1991; how many in each case (i) did and (ii) did not receive a custodial sentence.

The available information relates to the remand population in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales on the last day of the month. Information has therefore been provided in the attached table for 31 December in each year since 1990.

Information on the outcome at court for these prisoners is not available. Details of the outcome at court for remand receptions are given in table 2.5 of the 1993 edition of "Prison Statistics, England and Wales", Cm 2893, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Prison Population

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of (a) male, (b) female and (c) all prisoners in England and Wales on 1 January of each year since 1991; and if he will make a statement. [4308]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 11 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about what was the total number of (a) male and (b) female and (c) all prisoners in England and Wales on the 1st of January each year since 1991.

The available information relates to the population in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales on the last day of the month. Information has therefore been provided in the attached table for 31 December for each year since 1990.

Muhammed Naviede

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the (a) closed and (b) open prisons Muhammed Naviede has been held in since his prison sentence was imposed; [4502]

(2) which body is funding the private medical treatment being given to prison inmate Mohammed Naviede at St. Thomas's hospital, London; what has been the weekly cost of treatment; and when it is expected to conclude; [4501]

(3) what has been the number of prison officers and the hours they have spent guarding Mohammed Naviede, while at St. Thomas's hospital; what has been the total cost to date; and who is responsible for paying this cost. [4503]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 11 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about Mr Mohammed Naviede, who is at Brixton prison.

Mr. Naviede was convicted and sentenced on 7 July for fraud. Since this date he has been detained at Brixton prison and no decisions have been made to transfer him to open conditions.

Mr. Naviede was admitted to St. Thomas's Hospital as a NHS patient on 30 August. He elected to have the private treatment available at this hospital. The costs of the private care were not met by the Prison Service and we are, therefore, unable to comment upon who paid for the medical treatment and what the weekly costs were.

Mr. Naviede was at St. Thomas's Hospital until 18 September. Prison officers guarded him for the entire period. A total of six prison officers were deployed for each 24 hour period in line with standard security practice.

The Prison Service is responsible for paying for the staffing costs involved in the escort and guarding of prisoners. Approximately £11,500 was spent on staffing resources for this period. The same costs would have been incurred had Mr. Naviede received National Health Service treatment.

Director General of the Prison Service

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when he expects to appoint a permanent Director General of the Prison Service; and what procedures have been instituted to vet applicants for the post of Director General of the Prison Service; [3262]

(2) what criteria will be used to judge applicants for the post of Director General of the Prison Service; and what priority will be accorded to independence of judgment. [3263]

Mr. Howard: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) on 5 December 1995, Official Report, column 204.

EU Research and Development

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the indicative contributions to the EU budget in respect of research and development for his Department in 1993–94. [1912]

Mr. Howard: Table 2.1 of the statistical supplement to "Forward Look of Government-funded Science, Engineering and Technology 1995" contains indicative figures for the United Kingdom's contributions to the European Community budget in respect of research and development. Departments' policy responsibilities are subject to change and can vary from year to year. My Department currently has an 0.07 per cent. share of the indicative contribution of the United Kingdom in respect of this part of the Community's budget.

Ministerial Broadcasts

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the occasions during the parliamentary Session 1994–95 when he gave broadcast interviews on radio or television in respect of his ministerial responsibilities, indicating for each date and the main topic under headings of (a) the BBC Radio 4 "Today" programme, (b) other sound broadcasts and (c) television broadcasts. [4467]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 6 December 1995]: During the parliamentary Session 1994–95 I gave a great many broadcast interviews in response to requests from the media. These interviews covered a wide range of Home Office responsibilities.

Detailed information is not available in the form requested.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Income

37. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, what income is received annually by the Church Commissioners from non-church building based congregations. [3323]

Mr. Alison: The commissioners do not receive income directly from congregations. They do receive income from dioceses towards clergy stipends, which is then paid out directly to clergy with their monthly stipend payments. This income is mainly derived from parishes, but the commissioners have no information on individual parish contributions to such sums.

Turnbull Commission

38. Mr. Jenkin: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, what representations the Church Commissioners will be making to Lambeth palace concerning the report of the Turnbull commission on the future of the Church of England. [3325]

Mr. Alison: The commissioners welcome the aim of improving the machinery of the Church at national level in support of the ministry and mission to the whole nation and look forward to taking a constructive part in the debate on the Turnbull report and its vision.

The board of governors has identified three key principles which need to be safeguarded in the planning and implementation of the proposed structures. These are:

(i) the important Church/state link, which is exemplified in the commissioners' constitution, in recognition that the Church of England is the established Church;

(ii) the impartiality which the commissioners deliver in the discharge of many of their responsibilities, especially those under the Pastoral Measure 1983; and

(iii) the need within the timetable for adequate consultation and detailed planning to ensure that any change is right for the Church and delivers a national service as good as, or better than, that provided now.

Arising from these principles are a number of important matters which will need to be addressed including the protection and handling of the commissioners' charitable responsibilities and the interplay between asset management and distribution, for example, the balance between their pensions liabilities and the support of the active ministry.

These concerns have been transmitted to the archbishops orally and in writing. In addition, the commissioners are represented on the archbishops' advisory group which is following up the Turnbull report.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the consequences of the proposals of Her Majesty's Government concerning arrangements for asylum and immigration to cease to pay existing benefit to certain categories of person after 8 January 1996, on the administration and finances of local authorities for support of families with children required by section 17 of the Children Act 1989. [4613]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Proposals on social security payments to asylum seekers and other persons from abroad were presented to the Social Security Advisory Committee on 11 October. The committee has carried out a public consultation on these proposals and has received representations from many individuals and organisations, including housing associations and local authorities. The committee has evaluated those responses and we are currently studying its report. The effect on local authority responsibilities under the Children Act will be taken into account in the preparation of the Government's reply.

European Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to the statement of the Secretary of State for the Environment of 21 November, Official Report, column 454, if he will make it his policy to review past legislation in respect of additional burdens imposed by regulations implementing European directives. [5069]

Mr. Burt: It is the policy of this Department to ensure that we do not gold-plate European directives by the addition of unnecessary burdens when implementing them in the UK. We take every opportunity to look at existing legislation in the light of this policy.

Survey on Women, Pensions and Divorce

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he plans to publish the DSS-commissioned survey on women, pensions and divorce. [4990]

Mr. Heald: We expect to receive the final draft reports by the end of March 1996 and will publish the findings soon afterwards. Preliminary results of the research should be available to the Department by the end of this year.

Maternity Grant

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many maternity grants from the social fund were paid out in each quarter of 1992, 1993, 1994 and 1995, in each region of the United Kingdom. [5144]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Information is available by area directorate only and will be placed in the Library. Information about Northern Ireland is the responsibility of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Child Care Disregard

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was his Department's original estimate for the numbers of lone parents who would be eligible for the child care disregard in 1995–96; and how many lone parents are currently receiving the child care disregard. [5271]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: As at 31 July 1995, 19,000 lone parents were receiving the child care disregard.[1]

Original estimates were that, in the long run, 150,000 families would gain from the new help. Provision was made in the expenditure forecasts based on around 100,000 gainers from the child care disregard in 1995–96 of whom the majority were lone parents. This estimate recognised the uncertainty of behavioural effects and the pace at which they occur. These effects are occurring more slowly than anticipated. We regularly revise our estimates in the light of new data.

TREASURY

Civil Service Accounting Practices

Mr. Booth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to review civil service accounting practices. [3308]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Government are implementing resource accounting and budgeting across Government Departments. Details are set out in the White Paper "Better Accounting for the Taxpayer's Money", Cm 2929, published in July 1995.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the overshoot or undershoot in the public sector borrowing requirement in each year since 1992 with respect to the Red Book estimate for (a) the subsequent year up to 1996–97 and (b) two years up to 1997–98. [5145]

Mr. Waldegrave: The table gives the requested figures.

Forecast and outturn figures for the public sector borrowing requirement

FSBR November 1995	1996–97	22.4	–	–
	1997–98	15	–	–

Note:

The November 1994 FSBR figures are those published in the revised tables, January 1995, following the decision to leave the rate of VAT on domestic fuel and power at 8 per cent. and the further Budget measures announced on 8 December 1994.

Household Incomes

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of families with children with taxable incomes below the income tax threshold but above the lower earnings limit for national insurance; and if he will estimate the number of families with children who pay tax only at the lower rate. [79]

Mr. Jack: It is estimated that in 1995–96 about 250,000 families with children—defined as single parents and married couples with children—have no income tax liability but pay national insurance contributions. This figure includes people who have earnings for only part of the financial year. About 400,000 families with children are liable to income tax only at the lower rate. The estimates are based on information projected form the 1993 family expenditure survey and are therefore provisional.

Ms Corston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the disposable income of households in (a) the lowest decile and (b) the highest decile, in 1994–95, for households with (i) one adult, (ii) one adult, two or more children, (iii) one man, one woman and one child, (iv) one man, one woman and two children, (v) one man, one woman and three children, (vi) two adults, four or more children, (vii) three adults, one or more children and (viii) four adults, one or more children, following table 34 in the Central Statistical Office family spending report for 1992. [5009]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The deciles for 1994–95 corresponding to those in table 34 of the report on the family expenditure survey for 1992 are given in the table. The figures are estimates from the FES, and are subject to sampling variations. The figures have been rounded to the nearest pound.

	Average weekly disposable income (£)
	Lowest decile point	Highest decile point
One adult	62	302
One adult, two or more children	87	242

Two adults, four or more children	[1]—	[1]—
Three adults, one or more children	246	688
Four adults, one or more children	[1]—	[1]—

[1] Figures are not available as there are too few households in the sample to provide reliable estimates.

Ms Corston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the disposable income of households in (a) lowest decile and (b) the highest decile in 1994–95 in actual terms per week, and as a percentage of the median for (i) the United Kingdom and (ii) Greater London, following table 34 in the CSO family spending report for 1992. [4958]

Mrs. Knight: The deciles for 1994–95 corresponding to those in table 34 of the report on the family expenditure survey for 1992 are given in the table. The figures are estimates from the FES, and are subject to sampling variations. The figures have been rounded to the nearest 10p.

Greater London	75.50	698.90	265.10	28.5	263.6

Ms Corston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to table 9.7, how many adults in retired households participating in the family expenditure survey for 1994–95 were (a) dependent only on state pensions/income support and (b) dependent on state, occupational or personal private pensions from two or more sources; what was the average value of that income by gross income decile group; and what was the average weekly amount. [5011]

Mrs. Knight: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

VAT (Fuel)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to remove the obligation on individuals to produce a certificate in order to qualify for VAT on fuel at the rate of 8 per cent. for domestic users; and if he will make a statement. [5250]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: None.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many estates in each county in England were allowed conditional exemption from inheritance tax on grounds of public access to land for the most recent year for which figures are available. [3782]

Mr. Jack: In 1994–95 there were 18 estates in the United Kingdom where land and buildings were designated and given conditional exemption.

A breakdown of this total by county would identify counties where there were fewer than five designations. As this would compromise the normal rules on taxpayer confidentiality, I regret that I cannot provide the information requested.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will bring forward the date for the introduction of the new inheritance tax threshold to the date of his Budget statement. [4491]

Mr. Jack: The proposed increase in the inheritance tax threshold replaces the much smaller increase which would otherwise be due under statutory indexation from 6 April 1996.

Interest Rates

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the average real rate of interest for each year since 1975. [4330]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Real interest rates can be calculated in a number of ways, depending on the choice of nominal interest rate and the measure of inflation. Table 47 of "Economic Trends" annual supplement, Central Statistical Office, gives a number of possible measures of the nominal interest rate. Figures for various measures of inflation can be calculated from data in the same CSO publication.

Import Penetration

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the figure for import penetration for all the manufactured items covered by table 15.10 of the "Monthly Digest of Statistics". [4749]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The 1994 information is being prepared for publication and will be included in the December issue of the "Monthly Digest of Statistics".

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the Government monitor imports of manufactures; what is the target for publication of figures for import penetration in the "Monthly Digest of Statistics"; what has been recent performance against target; and if he will make a statement. [4558]

Mrs. Knight [holding answer 7 December 1995]: The Government use a range of figures to monitor the imports of manufactures. For example, aggregate figures on the imports of manufactures are published each month by the Central Statistical Office in the first releases on the balance of UK visible trade. More detailed statistics on trade with non-EC countries are published monthly in Business Monitor MM20, with corresponding statistics on trade with EC countries published quarterly in Business Monitor MQ20, both of which are published by HM Customs and Excise.

The CSO aims to make all data available in the public domain as soon as possible. The import penetration figures are published in the "Monthly Digest of Statistics" on this basis. The 1994 data will be published in the December issue; this issue will include a number of presentational improvements since the previous publication.

Home Income Plans

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current tax relief on mortgage interest for home income plans. [4956]

Mr. Jack: Tax relief for interest paid by someone over 65 who takes out a loan, secured on his or her home, to buy a life annuity—often called a home income plan—is given at the basic rate of income tax. This is currently 25 per cent.

VAT (Energy Efficiency and Supply)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the reasons for imposing different rates of VAT on energy efficiency and energy supply. [5013]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Any extension of the existing unique reduced rate of VAT on energy supply would add to the burden on business in the administration and collection of VAT. Moreover, adjustment to the VAT structure by way of a reduced rate for certain goods would be an inefficient means of addressing an objective such as energy efficiency.

Building Societies Acts

Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to publish the draft legislation on the reform of the Building Societies Acts; how long the consultative period will be; and if he will make a statement. [4846]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Government intend to publish a draft Building Societies Bill for three months' consultation early in the new year, with the aim of introducing new legislation during the life of this Parliament. The draft Bill will amend the Building Societies Act 1986.

Stamp Duty (Houses)

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the yield in the last available financial year from stamp duty in respect of house sale and purchase. [4962]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The yield from stamp duty on residential property in 1994–95 is estimated at £520 million.

Homeworking

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has made of the amount of homeworking in Lancashire.

Mrs. Angela Knight: This information is not at present readily available. All the information collected in the labour force survey will be released at county level following the publication of the full summer 1995 results in December 1995. However, the LFS includes questions about homeworking only in the spring and autumn quarters, so the information requested will not be available until the autumn 1995 results are published in March 1996.

External Trade Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to restore the annual supplement to the "Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics". [4559]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 7 December 1995]: The "Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics" is the responsibility of the Central Statistical Office which has no plans to produce annual supplements to this publication.

Residential Care Costs

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of elderly people who will not now sell their homes to pay for long-term care. [4858]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 8 December 1995]: Clearly the measures that my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in the Budget will benefit a large number of people. Raising to £16,000 the level of assets below which people can get some help for long-term care, and increasing to £10,000 the level below which they make no contribution at all, will help all those of modest means who need long-term care.

ENVIRONMENT

OECD Report

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of Stae for the Environment what assessment he has made of the 1993 OECD report on environmental policies and competitiveness. [1154]

Mr. Clappison: I have noted the OECD report with interest. It is a balanced report which examines a number of important issues. We remain committed to promoting the use of economic instruments to achieve our environmental goals, where this is appropriate. In the case of the landfill tax we have used the revenues raised by an environmental tax to reduce other distortionary taxes on employment. However, in considering the scope for new environmental taxes it is important to judge each case on its merits.

Process Guidance Notes

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what account was taken of the effects on environmental technology manufacturers, of the postponement of the upgrading deadlines in process guidance notes PG 6/7(91), PG 6/8(91), PG 6/13(91), PG 6/14(91), PG 6/15(91), PG 6/16(92), PG 6/18(92), PG 6/22(92), PG 6/28(92) and PG 6/32(92). [3107]

Mr. Robert B. Jones [holding answer 29 November 1995]: The deferral of the upgrading deadlines for all the listed process guidance notes will allow time for a thorough review; the Department was conscious of potential effects on environment technology manufactures.

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Enviornment what independent assessment he received of the cost estimates provided to his Department by the industry sectors directly affected by process guidance notes PG 6/7 (91), PG 6/8 (91), PG 6/13 (91), PG 6/14 (91), PG 6/15 (91), PG 6/16 (92), PG 6/18 (92), PG 6/22 (92), PG 6/28 (92) and PG 6/32 (92); and by whom such assessments were made. [3124]

Mr. Jones: All the listed process guidance notes, published in 1991–92, were drafted by environmental health officers seconded to the Department who took account of all information provided by industry consultees. The notes are now being reviewed and any cost estimates received will be carefully assessed. In particular, account will be taken of two studies being undertaken by consultants for my Department and for the Department of Trade and Industry into the costs of reducing emissions of volatile organic compounds from solvent-using industrial sectors.

Housing Associations (Tax Changes)

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Enviornment (1) what discussions he has held with (a) local authorities considering a large-scale voluntary transfer of housing and (b) non-charitable housing associations set up as a consequence of a large-scale voluntary transfer proposal about the potential impact on their business plans of his proposal to withdraw tax relief grant in April 1997; [4280]

(2) what consideration he gave to the impact on housing association rents of his proposal to withdraw tax relief grant from non-charitable housing associations; [4238]

(3) what assumptions he has made about the number of non-charitable housing associations which may alter their constitution and seek charitable status as a consequence of his proposal to withdraw tax relief grant in April 1997; [4279]

(4) what consultation he has undertaken with non-charitable housing associations, their tenants, their lenders and other interested parties before deciding to discontinue their entitlement to tax relief grant; [4277]

(5) what discussions he has held with large-scale voluntary transfer housing associations about the potential impact on their business plans of the proposed withdrawal of tax relief grant in April 1997. [4281]

Mr. Curry: In deciding that tax relief grant for non-charitable housing associations should be discontinued from April 1997, subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary legislation, the Government were aware that withdrawal would in many cases necessitate some adjustment to their business plans and finances. The Government none the less took the view that it was not appropriate for non-charitable associations to continue to have this financial benefit in the context of the Government's proposals to allow other bodies to compete for funds to support the provision of social housing.

My Department will be talking in detail to the National Federation of Housing Associations and other bodies concerned about the proposals.

Decisions on whether to seek charitable status are a matter for individual associations. Housing associations' rents depend on many factors, including the efficiency of their development and upkeep of property, and their management costs.

Sheffield City Council

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the total number of planning applications made by Sheffield city council for each of the last three years and the total number of public inquiries for each application; how many he has called in; and if he will make a statement. [4099]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The Department does not collect separate information on applications made by local authorities. However, Sheffield city council has provided the following figures on applications made by it:

1992–93 (from mid-July): 42

1994–95: 72.

No Sheffield city council applications have been called in during these three years and no public inquiries have therefore been held.

Green Belt

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further guidance he has given on PPG2 to local authorities to define the criteria for redesignation of green belt land. [4086]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: We have not published any further planning policy guidance on green belts since the revised PPG2 was issued earlier this year. Green belt boundaries can be altered only in exceptional circumstances.

Planning Applications

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the total number of planning applications for each of the last five years; how many in each year have been called in; if he will express those called in as percentage of the total number each year; what criteria are used for calling in by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [4087]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The information requested is as follows (England figures):

	Applications received	Applications called in	Percentage of applications called in
1990–91	530,358	132	0.02
1991–92	508,948	140	0.03
1992–93	461,982	101	0.02
1993–94	479,409	99	0.02
1994–95	479,188	167	0.03

My right hon. Friend's policy for calling in planning applications is set out in the reply he gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Beckenham (Mr. Merchant) on 26 January 1995, Official Report, columns 314–15.

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidelines his Department has issued to local authorities to ensure full public awareness of planning applications lodged; and if he will make a statement. [4085]

Mr. Jones: Advice to local authorities on publicising planning applications is given in the Department's circular 15/92.

Regional Offices

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to harmonise the terms and conditions of employees' working in the integrated regional offices who are employed by different Departments. [4507]

Sir Paul Beresford: The four Departments responsible for the government offices in the regions are seeking as far as possible to harmonise personnel management practices in the offices and are discussing proposals with management staff and the trade unions.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the total number of staff in each regional government office on (a) 1 October 1994 and (b) 1 October 1995; and in each case how many of those staff held temporary promotions. [4319]

Sir Paul Beresford: The table shows total numbers of staff in each of the government offices on (a) 1 October 1994 and (b) 1 October 1995. It also shows how many of those staff held temporary promotions at those dates.

	1 October 1994		1 October 1995

Vehicle Pollution

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people are currently involved in the research into pollution from fuel emissions with particular reference to the emissions of PM_{10}s; and if he will make a statement. [3302]

Mr. Clappison: The Departments of the Environment and of Transport have established a collaborative programme of research with industry into emissions of PM_{10} from vehicles. The aim of the first part of the programme was to design a test methodology and a measurement programme for PM_{10} in vehicular exhaust. This was achieved through the participation of experts from over 25 organisations in the project, including the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders, individual companies and universities. The second phase will measure the emissions of PM_{10} from a variety of road transport vehicles. My Department has also established a programme to measure emissions of PM_{10} from industrial sources. Results from both these research programmes are expected in 1996–97.

Climate Change Panel

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the inclusion of practitioners' cost-benefit analysis in the intergovernmental panel on climate change on the public perception of the scientific objectivity of the panel. [3747]

Mr. Clappison: The contribution of cost-benefit analysis to the assessment of man-made climate change is only one of the many issues being addressed by the intergovernmental panel on climate change. The second assessment report is to be considered at a meeting of the panel in Rome from 11 to 15 December.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will make it his policy for United Kingdom representatives at the intergovernmental panel on climate change meeting in Rome from 11 to 15 December, to oppose the inclusion in the IPCC's second assessment report of cost-benefit analysis material based on differing values for the lives of people in richer and poorer countries. [3748]

Mr. Clappison: Reservations on the cost-benefit analysis of climate change involving the differential evaluation of a statistical life are already reflected in the summary for policy makers of the report of WGIII of the IPCC, which was approved in Montreal in October.

The meeting of the intergovernmental panel on climate change in Rome, 11 to 15 December, will consider the policy maker's summaries to all three working group reports, and agree an overall executive summary.

Newham (Funding)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, pursuant to his oral answer of 30 November, Official Report, column 1343, concerning the funding of the London borough of Newham, he will make a statement on the areas, or total, of overspending referred to in his answer. [4704]

Sir Paul Beresford: My right hon. Friend was explaining to the hon. Member that under our provisional capping criteria Newham's permitted budget increase for 1996–97 is less than that of Westminster because Newham's budget this year is some 1.3 per cent. above its standard spending assessment whereas Westminster's is some 12 per cent. below.

Our proposals for 1996–97 mean that Newham's SSA per head will be one of the highest in the country. If it decides that spending on education should be below the amount which we have made available, that is a matter for it.

Housing Action Trusts

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is the planned financial allocation in the financial year 1995–96 in respect of each housing action trust; and in each case, what proportion of total housing action trust spending these allocations represent; [4826]

(2) what has been the annual financial allocation to each housing action trust in each year since their start; and, in each case, what proportion of total housing action trust spending these allocations represent. [4827]

Sir Paul Beresford: The grant in aid allocations to each housing action trust and the percentages these represent of each trust's total expenditure in each year from their start, including estimates for 1995–96, are as follows:

	1991–92		1992–93		1993–94		1994–95		1995–96
Housing action trust	Grant-in-aid £ million	Percentage of gross expenditure	Grant-in-aid £ million	Percentage of gross expenditure	Grant-in-aid £ million	Percentage of gross expenditure	Grant-in-aid £ million	Percentage of gross expenditure	Estimated Grant-in-aid £ million	Percentage of estimated gross expenditure

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the estimated total cost to public funds of each housing action trust completing its agreed programmes, giving the figures (a) in total and (b) for each trust. [4828]

Sir Paul Beresford: For North Hull housing action trust, the total cost to public funds is estimated to be about £115 million. For the other trusts, the estimated costs to public funds of the housing development and/or refurbishment programmes envisaged in the studies preceding the establishment of each HAT were as follows:

Housing action trust	Date established	Estimated development cost £ million
Castle Vale	1993	130
Liverpool	1993	130
Stonebridge	1994	100
Tower Hamlets	1993	65-85
Waltham Forest	1992	160–170

The trusts and my Department are currently reviewing estimates of trusts' lifetimes, costs and the balance of their funding in the light of updated assessments of their housing and other regeneration activities and the scope for engaging private finance to help meet their objectives. We plan to complete these reviews during 1996–97.

Building Research Establishment

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which consultancy group has been appointed to advise him on the privatisation of the Building Research Establishment; what are its terms of reference; when it will report; and which organisations are being consulted. [4809]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Greenwich (Mr. Raynsford) on 30 November 1995, Official Report, column 799, in which I stated that PA Consulting had been appointed to advise on the options for transferring the Building Research Establishment to the private sector. I also refer her to the answer which my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State (Sir P. Beresford) gave to the hon. Member for Greenwich on 21 November 1995, Official Report, column 93, indicating that he had placed in the Library a copy of the specification issued to all the consultants invited to tender.

The consultants have been asked to report by 31 January 1996. They are at present finalising a list of organisations whom they propose to consult. I shall write to the hon. Member when their list is complete.

Hedgerows

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to issue guidance to local authorities with regard to a hedgerow evaluation system against which the most important hedges could be evaluated and retained under the Environment Act 1995; and if he will make a statement on how he proposes local authorities fund the administration of such hedgerow schemes. [5029]

Mr. Clappison: Before introducing a scheme for the protection of important hedgerows under the Environment Act 1995, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment is required to consult all interested bodies, including those representing local authorities, on the detailed arrangements. As part of that exercise, we shall consult on the criteria to be used by local authorities in order to identify those important hedgerows which should be retained on the grounds of their historical importance or their values to the wildlife or landscape of an area; and on a system for evaluating hedges against these criteria. Before reaching decisions on the overall level of the local government finance settlement for 1996–97, the Secretary of State has taken into consideration any new financial burdens on local authorities, as well as potential efficiency savings.

Single Regeneration Budget

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made with the single regeneration budget; when he will be announcing the results of the second bidding round of the single regeneration budget challenge fund; and if he will make a statement. [5596]

Mr. Curry: The single regeneration budget is making an unprecedented contribution to local regeneration. Resources for the single regeneration budget for 1996–97 and the two subsequent years will total nearly £3.8 billion. Of that total, over £1.3 billion will go to support schemes approved under the challenge fund. The remainder will support on-going initiatives and existing commitments under programmes taken into the single regeneration budget including English Partnerships, urban development corporations, housing action trusts, city challenge and estate action.

Round 1 of the challenge fund, under which some 200 schemes were approved, started in April 1995. These schemes stand to attract, over their lifetime of up to seven years, some £1.1 billion in challenge fund support, and some £2.5 billion in private sector investment.

Round 2 of the challenge fund built on the success of round 1 and has attracted a wide range of high quality bids. We have decided to approve 172 bids. Many of those were unsuccessful in round 1 and were greatly improved and successfully resubmitted by local partnerships for round 2. On initial estimates, the successful bids should attract over their lifetime over £1 billion in challenge fund support, and some £2.5 billion in private sector investment. Details of the successful individual bids will be published tomorrow, and will be placed in the Library of the House and circulated to hon. Members.

Taken together, the schemes approved under rounds 1 and 2 of the challenge fund should create or safeguard 500,000 jobs, support over 80,000 new businesses, complete or improve nearly 170,000 homes and support over 20,000 voluntary and community groups. Over a third of these schemes are specifically directed towards ethnic minority communities.

Following the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Budget statement, provision totalling £250 million has been made for third and fourth rounds of the challenge fund. The third round will operate on the same lines as round 2. It will be launched next year for schemes starting from April 1997, with planned resources of £50 million in 1997–98 and £150 million in 1998–99. Resources for later years will be determined in the light of subsequent public expenditure settlements.

Waste Strategy

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish the waste strategy for England and Wales. [5657]

Mr. Gummer: The waste White Paper, "Making Waste Work: A strategy for sustainable waste management in England and Wales", will be published on 12 December. It builds on the ideas set out in the sustainable development strategy, published in January 1994. The strategy aims to improve the way we manage our waste. Only by taking responsibility for the waste we produce can we ensure that our environment is protected both now and for future generations.

Copies will be available in the Libraries of both Houses.

Environment Agency

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to issue a further draft of statutory guidance to the Environment Agency on its objectives, including the contribution it is to make towards the achievement of sustainable development. [5658]

Mr. Clappison: Together with my right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment is today issuing for consultation a draft of the statutory guidance which we must give to the Environment Agency about its objectives and about the contribution which it can make towards achieving the goal of sustainable development. To put that guidance in context, we are also issuing a more general document which restates the principles of sustainable development and offers a commentary on the duty which the agency has to take account of likely costs and benefits, including those to the environment.

Wind Farms

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many wind farms currently operate in the United Kingdom; and how many are planned over the next three years. [4715]

Mr. Page: I have been asked to reply.

At 30 September 1995, 37 wind projects, including 28 wind farms, were operating in the United Kingdom through contracts made under the first two renewables non-fossil fuel obligation orders for England and Wales, the first Northern Ireland NFFO order and the first Scottish renewables order—SRO. Up to three more wind farms are likely to become operational under NI-NFFO 1. The second NI-NFFO order has yet to be made. It is too early to estimate how many more wind farms under SRO-1 will become operational.

Of the 31 wind farm contracts made under NFFO 3 for England and Wales, about 20 are expected bo be commissioned; none is yet operating. In addition, 24 smaller wind projects under 1.6 MW DNC were offered NFFO contracts, none of which has yet been commissioned.

I announced in answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Rochford (Dr. Clark) on 2 November 1995, Official Report, columns 441–44, the proposals for a fourth NFFO order for England and Wales for a further 400 to 500 MW of renewables-generated electricity. As part of these proposals, the Government are considering separate bands for new generating stations including one for wind power split into two bands catering for large wind farms and for small cluster/single machines. The order is expected to be made in 1997. Also on 2 November 1995 I announced proposals for a second Scottish renewables order for 70 to 80 MW of renewables-generated electricity. As part of these proposals, the Government are considering four separate bands for generating stations including one for wind power. The order is expected to be made in 1996.

HEALTH

Occupational Health

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated as to the effectiveness of occupational health programmes in the workplace leading to (i) greater productivity, (ii) less sick leave, (iii) higher rates of retention of staff and (iv) better working relationships; and if he will make a statement. [3753]

Mr. Horam: Health promotion is one aspect of occupational health which falls to the Department. The Department of Health set up the workplace task force which evaluated the available research on health promotion programmes in the workplace. As a result, last month the Department published a resource pack for employers and will shortly be setting up a workplace health advisory team which will assist small and medium-sized firms to provide health promotion in the workplace.

Departmental Employees

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those (a) consultants, (b) outside organisations and (c) individuals employed by his Department in each year since 1990, indicating the purposes of their employment and the total payments made to them. [3959]

Mr. Horam: Information about each consultant and outside organisation employed by the Department of Health since 1990 and the total payments to them could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Details of individuals employed by the Department are contained in the civil service staff post summary tables, copies of which are available in the Library. Staffing costs since 1990 can be found in the relevant copies of the departmental report.

The purpose of employing consultants, outside organisations and individuals was and is to assist the Department in achieving its aims and objectives as set out in the departmental reports.

Health Authorities

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all health authorities with effect from 1 April 1996. [4063]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Hexham (Mr. Atkinson) on 23 November, Official Report, column 331, concerning the new health authorities.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the budget for each health authority in (a) 1994–95 and (b) 1995–96. [4966]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 8 December 1995]: 1994–95 final revenue cash limits and 1995–96 initial revenue cash limits for each district health authority will be placed in the Library.

Breast Cancer

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money was spent on breast cancer research in each year since 1989–90 by the Government. [4004]

Mr. Malone: The figures are shown in the table:

	Thousands
1990–91	3,220
1991–92	2,139
1992–93	3,791
1993–94	3,948
1994–95	4,284

Committee on Safety of Medicines

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) at what date and time the Committee on Safety of Medicines met to consider safety issues relating to the third generation oral contraceptive; [4301]

(2) at what date and time papers relating to potential safety concerns about third generation oral contraceptives were first made available to all members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines. [4302]

Mr. Malone: The Committee on Safety of Medicines met on Friday 13 October at 10 am to consider the issues relating to third generation oral contraceptives. The papers for the meeting were dispatched to all members of the committee at 4 pm on 11 October by express courier service and were received by members at 10.30 am the following morning. Prior to this, some members of the CSM and expert external advisers had met on 10 October to consider the papers. Some advisers were also provided with each element of the data as it became available and a series of meetings were held to discuss the evidence as it evolved between June and October.

Prior to the availability of the new epidemiological evidence on third generation oral contraceptives, the CSM had reviewed the safety of third generation oral contraceptives and gestodene-based oral contraceptives in particular on three occasions, in 1989, 1991 and 1995.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the costs, including travel costs and emoluments, of supporting the sub-committees of the Committee on Safety of Medicines, for each year since 1991. [4306]

Mr. Malone: The information requested in respect of the sub-committtees of the Committee on Safety of Medicines—biologicals, chemistry, pharmacy and standards, pharmacovigilance and safety and efficacy—is as shown in the table for each financial year since 1990–91. The figures include members' fees, travel, hotel, and other miscellaneous costs.

1991–92: £120,427.43

1992–93: £113,874.82

1993–94: £121,778.89

1994–95: £92,741.42.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the names, professional appointments, date of first appointment to the Committee on Safety of Medicines and the total duration of membership of each member of the Committee on Safety of Medicines as at 1 October; [4304]

(2) how many members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines have a qualification in epidemiology. [4303]

Mr. Malone: The membership of the Committee on Safety of Medicines and information requested is shown in the table. Dr. Janet Darbyshire has a formal epidemiological qualification and in addition Professor M. D. Rawlins, chairman, and Professor M. J. S. Langman have extensive experience in pharmacoepidemiology.

The committee consults as necessary other disciplines not represented on the committee, including experts in epidemiology, and when the need arises co-opts them on to the committee as "members for the day". The sub-committees of the Committee on Safety of Medicines additionally provide a range of expertise which may not be represented on the main committee.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the remuneration which the chairman and members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines received in respect of their work on the committee the last year for which figures are available. [4307]

Mr. Malone: For the financial year 1994–95, the chairman received £2,358 in attendance and preparation fees and the members received among them £34,294 in attendance and preparation fees in respect of 11 one-day meetings. In addition, the chairman and members were reimbursed their travel, hotel and other miscellaneous cost.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statutory provisions govern the Committee on Safety of Medicines. [4305]

Mr. Malone: The Committee on Safety of Medicines is a committee established by Ministers under powers in section 4 of the Medicines Act 1968. The committee was established by the Medicines (Committee on Safety of Medicines) Order 1970, S.I. 1970/1257, to give advice—with respect to safety, quality and efficacy—on medicinal products for human use and to promote the collection and investigation of information about adverse reactions, to enable such advice to be given.

The Medicines Commission and Committees Regulations 1970, S.I. 1970/746, made under powers in schedule 1 to the Medicines Act 1968, provide inter alia for the terms of office of members of committees established under section 4.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the numbers and cost of elderly patients blocking hospital beds. [4403]

Mr. Bowis: Patients' discharge from hospital may be delayed for a variety of reasons. We do not hold central statistics for patients who may be occupying a bed unnecessarily.

Medical Ethics

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about the code of practice published by the British Medical Association entitled "Advance Statements About Medical Treatment"; and if he will make a statement. [4535]

Mr. Horam: The code of practice was drawn up for health professionals, by a multi-professional group under the auspices of the British Medical Association, in response to a recommendation by the House of Lords Select Committee on Medical Ethics. Little representation has been made to the Department of Health about this code.

Childrens' Hospices

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to ensure that local health authorities meet the Government's target of 50:50 funding for children's hospices; and if he will make a statement on the future of children's hospices. [4549]

Mr. Bowis: The 50:50 target is no longer relevant, since funds have been built into health authorities' cash allocations to enable them to decide the level of funding required to meet the needs of their resident population for hospice services. Childrens' hospices are now able to benefit from health service funding through the contracts health authorities and general practitioner fundholders can make with service providers in both the national health service and the voluntary sector.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to encourage local health authorities to provide childrens' hospices with regular financial payments. [4547]

Mr. Bowis: We have funded a £5 million programme of pilot projects over five years to determine the type of services of most benefit to children with life-threatening illnesses and their families. The projects include services provided by childrens' hospices. The evaluation of the programme will help health authorities and general practitioner fundholders contract for the range of services necessary to meet the needs of locally resident children and their families.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average percentage of childrens' hospices' incomes derived from local health authority contributions. [4548]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases were on in-patient waiting lists in England on (a) 30 September and (b) the latest date for which figures are available. [4495]

Mr. Horam: Provisional figures show that on 30 September 1995, the latest date for which information has been published, 1,041,025 people in England were waiting for in-patient or day case treatment at national health service hospitals.

Health Service Commissioner

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which bodies other then aggrieved patients are able to submit complaints to the health service ombudsman for investigation. [4496]

Mr. Horam: The health service commissioner can investigate complaints from a person or body other than the aggrieved patient in certain circumstances. Complaints can be accepted from someone acting on behalf of the patient if it is clear the patient supports the complaint or is not capable of doing so. If, for instance, the patient has died or is incapable of making a complaint, complaints can be accepted from a close family member—preferably the next of kin. Complaints can also be accepted from a representative or adviser, who may be a national health service employee, if there are good reasons why a family member cannot make the complaint. The commissioner can also accept complaints from NHS bodies such as health authorities.

District Health Authority Meetings

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to permit community health council representatives attending meetings of district health authorities to speak and to have their observations recorded in the public minutes. [4515]

Mr. Horam: All district health authority meetings are open to members of the public. The chairman of the authority will decide whether members of the public will be permitted to make representations during the course of proceedings.

Employment of Children

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health from whom he has received representations in support of the proposal in his Department's consultation document "Employment of Children" to relax the law relating to children's employment. [4920]

Mr. Bowis: I have not as yet received any representations on the consultation document.

Disabled People

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to extend the health care payments proposed for patients in nursing homes to cover disabled people who choose to live in residential homes. [4796]

Mr. Bowis: We have no plans for health care payments in either type of home.

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many disabled persons entered residential homes in each of the last three years. [4795]

Mr. Bowis: Information on the degree of disability of individuals on entry to residential homes is not available centrally. Most people entering residential care would be regarded as having a significant degree of disability or dysfunction.

Medical Confidentiality

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many responses he received in relation to his discussion paper concerning medical confidentiality; what plans he has to bring forward proposals to protect medical confidentiality in the current Session of Parliament; and if he will make a statement. [5337]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) on 4 December, Official Report, columns 42–43.

We received 175 responses to the consultative document "Confidentiality, Use and Disclosure of Information".

Ambulance Response Times

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average response time for an ambulance on a 999 call in the City of Durham constituency. [5128]

Mr. Horam: Information is not available centrally by constituency.

Psychiatric Care

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements he has made for (a) the inspections, (b) the drawing up of reports and the drawing up of recommendations to him by persons he appoints (i) directly and (ii) indirectly, in respect of private psychiatric hospitals where fees for patients are paid for by national health service purchasers. [4623]

Mr. Bowis: Private psychiatric hospitals are subject to registration and inspection by health authorities under part II of the Registered Homes Act 1984. The primary concern of the registering authority is to ensure that the level of care provided is sufficient and suitable to meet the needs of individual patients.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what public funds have been paid to Partnerships in Care in respect of psychiatric treatment for patients paid for by purchasing bodies of the national health service in the financial year 1994–95; and if he will list the number of establishments concerned and the approximate number of patients for whom fees were paid; [4622]

(2) what public funds have been expended in respect of Mr. Stephen Laudat arising from his residential treatment at Kneesworth hospital. [4621]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally and it is not the practice to give details of the cost relating to the care of individuals.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the names and locations of the secure hospitals establishments (a) owned and (b) run by the firm Partnerships in Care, used by national health service purchasers, indicating for each (i) the number of beds, (ii) the number occupied by national health service patients and (iii) the number of qualified psychiatrists on the staff; [4606]

(2) what is the minimum number of persons with qualifications in psychiatric medicine that he requires, in full-time equivalent, to be on the staff of private psychiatric hospitals providing secure accommodation for national health service patients; and if he will indicate the nature of the qualifications required. [4620]

Mr. Bowis: Under the Registered Homes Act 1984, health authorities are required to register and inspect all mental nursing homes including privately owned secure hospitals in their catchment area. The Act requires that the health authority must satisfy itself that the home provides sufficient and suitable professional, technical, ancillary and other staff having regard to the size of the home and the number, age, sex and condition of the patients therein. Information about individual establishments is not available centrally.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which trusts and health authorities have now implemented the care programme approach for people discharged from psychiatric hospitals; and which have not. [5060]

Mr. Bowis: We have asked health authorities and trusts to ensure, as a matter of urgency, that the care programme approach is applied to all patients who have been accepted for care by the specialist psychiatric services. The latest reports suggest that this objective will largely be achieved by March 1996.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the statement of the Secretary of State for the Environment of 21 November, Official Report, column

454, if he will make it his policy to review past legislation in respect of additional burdens imposed by regulations implementing European directives. [5068]

Mr. Horam: It is the policy of my Department to ensure that we do not add any unnecessary burden when implementing European directives in the United Kingdom. We will take every opportunity to look at existing legislation in light of this policy.

Anti-smoking Campaigns

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the cost of the current campaigns by the Health Education Authority in England designed to encourage people to stop smoking in the current financial year; if he will make a statement on (a) the overall campaign and (b) the television advertising campaign; and if he will identify separately the costs of (b). [4860]

Mr. Horam: In the 1995–96 financial year, the Health Education Authority's budget for anti-smoking activity is £6,492 million.

The national smoking education campaign is designed to reduce the prevalence of cigarette smoking by preventing uptake among young people and motivating and assisting those in low-income groups, in particular parents and pregnant women, to give up.

The television commercials which will run from 26 December will cost £2.768 million.

Performance-related Pay

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to what extent the assessment of performance-related pay for family health services authority officials has taken into account changes in the number of GP fundholders in the FHSA area. [5059]

Mr. Malone: It is for individual national health service employers to set the aims and objectives for employees for the purpose of performance-related pay.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the available evidence on the connection between bovine spongiform encephalopathy and Creutzfeldt-Jakob dementia in humans. [4934]

Mr. Horam: The independent Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee provides the Government with an expert assessment of the scientific evidence as it develops. There is no current scientific evidence that BSE can be transmitted to humans or that eating beef causes CJD.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence he has on changes in the level of incidence of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease over the last 10 years. [4935]

Mr. Horam: The national Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease surveillance centre in Edinburgh investigates the incidence and epidemiology of CJD cases in the United Kingdom, paying particular attention to occupation and eating habits, to establish whether there has been any change in the pattern of the disease since the advent of BSE. There continues to be no evidence of an emerging CJD epidemic. The United Kingdom incidence of CJD is comparable to countries in Europe and elsewhere, with no or very little BSE.

Information on the incidence of CJD in the UK since 1985 is contained in the fourth annual report of the national CJD unit published on 5 October 1995, copies of which are available in the Library. The latest provisional figures for 1995 so far indicate that the incidence will be lower than in 1994.

Legionnaire's Disease

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Wakefield of 4 December, Official Report, column 42, on what date his Department first informed the Federation of Tour Operators about the outbreak of legionnaire's disease in Kusadasi; and if he will place in the Library copies of the letters sent to the Federation of Tour Operators and the Association of British Travel Agents. [5398]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health has an agreement with the Association of British Travel Agents that notifications about outbreaks of disease will be sent to it and it, in turn, will notify the travel industry. The Department first wrote to the Federation of Tour Operators about the outbreak of legionnaire's disease in Kusadasi on 29 September, although informal contact had been made by telephone a day earlier. Copies of the letters to ABTA and the FTO will be placed in the Library.

Stillbirths and Deaths in Infancy

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is (i) the procurement route for the tendering exercise for the confidential inquiry into stillbirths and deaths in infancy and what were the dates on which (a) the tender was announced, (b) information was made available, (c) expressions of interest had to be received, (d) organisations to be invited to tender were selected and informed and (e) tenders had to be submitted; and (ii) if all the procedures complied with the regulations set out by the European Union. [5278]

Mr. Horam: The tender exercise was announced in The Lancet and the Health Service Journal between 26 and 28 October 1995. The deadline for expressions of interest was 10 November. Every respondent to the advertisements was sent a statement of requirements on 13 November and was invited to attend a briefing meeting on 21 November. A full invitation to tender was issued to those who attended the briefing meeting.

A sift of responses to preliminary questions in the statement of requirements took place on Friday 24 November and organisations were informed in writing and by telephone on that day. Those remaining in the exercise have been asked to submit completed tenders by Friday 15 December.

I can confirm that the procedures comply with the regulations set out by the European Union.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was (a) the stillbirth rate, excluding foetal deaths at 24 to 27 weeks of gestation registered since 1 October 1992, (b) the neonatal mortality rate and (c) the post-neonatal mortality rate in England and Wales in each of the last 20 years; and what was the change in each rate in each of the periods (i) 1975 to 1980, (ii) 1980 to 1985 and (iii) 1985 to 1990 and in each single year since 1990. [5274]

[1] Stillbirths of 28 weeks gestation or more.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were his Department's objectives in establishing the confidential inquiry into stillbirths and deaths in infancy; what mechanisms were established to ensure that the objectives were achieved; what evaluations have been done of the inquiry; and if he will place in the Library such reports of evaluations which have been undertaken. [5276]

Mr. Horam: The confidential inquiry into stillbirths and deaths in infancy was established to:

investigate the circumstances of stillbirths, neonatal and post-neonatal deaths;

identify avoidable factors and seek their remedy;

and to improve understanding and clinical practice.

No evaluations have yet been completed. It is too soon to demonstrate any direct effect on infant and perinatal mortality.

The reports of the inquiry are a tool for improving understanding and copies have been placed in the Library.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the full costs to his Department and to the inquiry of the tendering process for the confidential inquiry into stillbirths and deaths in infancy. [5279]

Mr. Horam: The tender process for the confidential inquiry into stillbirths and deaths in infancy is still in progress. A record of identifiable costs is therefore not yet available.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff have been employed on work for the confidential inquiry into stillbirths and deaths in infancy in each year (a) centrally, (b) in the NHS regions and districts and (c) elsewhere. [5277]

Mr. Horam: The central secretariat of the confidential inquiry into stillbirths and deaths in infancy had four members of staff in the period 1992 to 1994 and five members of staff from the end of 1994 to present. Regional/district figures are not available for the years 1992 to 1994. In the current year there are approximately 30 people engaged in the inquiry's work at regional level. There is a large number of other people in the NHS who contribute to the inquiry, but no figures are available. There are no data on the number of people employed on the various special projects.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department established the confidential inquiry into stillbirths and deaths in infancy; and how much money was (a) allocated to and (b) spent on the inquiry in each year since it was established, showing separately the sums (i) for central organisation and analysis, (ii) allocated to NHS regions and districts, by region and (iii) allocated for other purposes. [5275]

Mr. Horam: I shall let the hon. Member have such financial information as is available as soon as possible.

Venous Thromboembolism

Mr. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the levels of risk of venous thromboembolisms per 100,000 women per year for (a) smoking and (b) non-smoking (1) women not using (i) oral contraceptives, (ii) second generation oral contraceptives, (iii) oral contraceptives containing desogentrol or gestodene and (2) in pregnancy. [5146]

Mr. Malone: Smoking is not clearly established to be a factor which affects the risk of venous thromboembolism. This is in contrast to its important effect on the risk of arterial disease associated with the use of oral contraceptives.

The approximate levels of risk of venous thromboembolism in women according to use of oral contraceptives and pregnancy are shown in the table.

	Risk of venous thromboembolism (per 100,000 women per year)
No use of OCs	5
Use of second-generation OC	15
Use of OC containing desogentrol or gestodene	30
Pregnancy	60

As indicated above, the levels of risk of venous thromboembolism are the same whether or not a woman smokes.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Animals and Animal Products (Import and Export) Regulations

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many inspectors appointed by himself or by a local authority whose duties include those set out in the Animals and Animal Products (Import and Export) Regulations 1995 are currently in post. [2390]

Mrs. Browning: For the purpose of the Animals and the Animal Products (Import and Export) Regulations 1995 in England, 366 inspectors, of whom 241 are veterinary inspectors, have been appointed by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. The number of inspectors appointed by local authorities under the regulations is not held centrally.

Animal Transport

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number of returns he has received during 1995 from owners and charters of vessels on which animals have been carried from the United Kingdom indicating (a) the number of animals that have died, (b) the number of animals killed, (c) the numbers of animals seriously injured, (d) the total numbers of each class of animal shipped and (e) the cause of such deaths, slaughter or injury. [3842]

Mrs. Browning: The Ministry has received no such returns.

Fishing Licences

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many different licences for instruments other than rod and line are required by law in order to fish in English rivers, what is the total licence duty received form each of these in each of the last two years, and if he will list the proposed increase in each licence for next year. [5032]

Mr. Baldry: The information requested is given in the table. For the sake of completeness the table includes data on instruments used in tidal estuaries and the sea. Details of licence duties applicable to instruments for catching eels have not been included.

Milk

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he is having with his European counterparts to increase the permitted amount of milk Britain is allowed to produce to enable British producers to make yoghurt, cheese and clotted cream. [5033]

Mr. Baldry: We have advocated the leasing of milk quota across member state frontiers as a means of allowing quota to migrate to those parts of the Community, like the United Kingdom, where milk can be produced most efficiently. Our EC partners and the Commission do not share our enthusiasm for reforming this aspect of the EC quota regulations, but we will continue to press the case whenever the opportunity arises.

Potato Marketing Scheme

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the recent consultation on the proposal to bring the potato marketing scheme to an end; and if he will make a statement. [5527]

Mr. Boswell: There were 24 responses to the consultation from a wide range of interests. Some of the organisations that responded either opposed the Government's decision to revoke the scheme or expressed disappointment with it, while others supported revocation. There was, however, widespread support for an industry body funded by a statutory levy to succeed the Potato Marketing Board, and it will be for the board to develop appropriate proposals, if that is what growers wish. Several respondents stressed the importance of introducing a lightweight EU regime for potatoes, and we again pressed for early progress on this at the Agriculture Council on 29 and 30 November. A copy of the consultation document, together with the list of responses, has been placed in the Library of the House.

In accordance with section 25(1) of the Agriculture Act 1993, we shall tomorrow lay an order before both Houses specifying 1 July 1996 as the beginning of the revocation process. This would mean revocation of the scheme on 30 June 1997, as previously planned.

Paignton Zoo

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make a statement on the progress of the extension to Paignton zoo; [4043]

(2) what assessment he has made of the adequacy of compliance with the procedures followed under the Protection of Badgers Act 1992 in respect of the extension to Paignton zoo; and if he will make a statement. [4044]

Mrs. Browning [Holding answer 7 December 1995]: No approach has been made to the Ministry in connection with the extension at Paignton zoo.

Under the Protection of Badgers Act 1992, English Nature is responsible for the issue of licences for the purpose of any development as defined in section 55(1) of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many times mobile telephones used by Ministers in his Department have been cloned during (a) the last six months, (b) the last 12 months and (c) the last 18 months; and which Ministers within his Department have had their mobile telephones cloned. [4252]

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 7 December 1995]: MAFF Ministers has been issued with digitally based mobile telephones which provide greater security features than their analogue counterparts since the beginning of July this year. We have had no cases of mobile telephones being cloned since then.

There have been four cases of mobile telephones used by MAFF Ministers being cloned within the last 18 months. These all occurred within the last 12 months. Those concerned were the then Minister, my right hon. Friend the Member for Bristol, West (Mr. Waldgrave), the then Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Fylde (Mr. Jack), the then Parliamentary Secretary, my noble Friend the Earl Howe, and the current Parliamentary Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member for Tiverton (Mrs. Browning).

Animal Exports

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what changes he proposes in respect of the regularity of inspections carried out by his officials of calves and sheep being exported through Dover. [4743]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 8 December 1995]: My officials are maintaining the practice of carrying out regular checks on calves and sheep at the port of export.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many horses, ponies and donkeys have been licensed for export from the United Kingdom since 1 January 1995 to (a) France (b) Belgium and (c) the Netherlands. [4747]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 8 December 1995]: Figures on the issue of licences, between 1 January and 30 November 1995, for the export of horses, and ponies and donkeys intended for breeding, riding or recreation are shown in the table. The include transhipments from Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland, but exclude thoroughbred horses which may be exported for racing or breeding with certification issued by a steward or the secretary of the Jockey Club:

MAFF animal welfare records.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many applications to export horses, ponies and donkeys from the United Kingdom have been rejected by him since 1 January; and how many animals were covered by these rejected applications. [4746]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 8 December 1995]: We do not record these figures. Between 1 April and 30 October 1995 the Ministry received more than 2,200 applications. When considering applications the Ministry takes into account the purpose of the journey and the welfare arrangements. During the course of these considerations a number of applications are then withdrawn by the applicant or not proceeded with.

Horse Sales

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the adequacy of compliance with the provisions of the Welfare of Horses at Markets (and Other Places of Sale) Order 1990 in respect of horse sales in Henley in Arden market; and if he will make a statement. [4744]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 8 December 1995]: Horse sales are held at the market on a monthly basis and there has been a regular assessment of compliance by both the state veterinary service and the local authority. In reports submitted so far this year there has been no evidence of unnecessary suffering. The Ministry, however, continues to give advice to both the market and local authority on the standards to be observed.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the circumstances of the birth, feed history and date of death of the bovine spongiform encephalopathy case in June 1993, referred to in his answer of 31 October 1995, Official Report, column 200. [4970]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 8 December 1995]: The animal was born on 17 June 1993, of a dam which was culled in 1994 when 10 years old and showed no symptoms of BSE. The suspect was slaughtered on 11 August 1995, and is known to have been fed on concentrate feed. We are currently tracing the feed ingredients, although the material consumed by this animal will clearly no longer be available for analysis.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Student Loans

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what costing her Department has (a) made and (b) commissioned for the collection of student loan repayments through the national insurance system. [3925]

Mr. Forth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Bath (Mr. Foster) on 4 December 1995, Official Report, column 119.

Higher Education Funding Council

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is her Department's estimate of the cost of (a) teaching and (b) research assessment exercises to be conducted by the Higher Education Funding Council (England) in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97, (iii) 1997–98 and (iv) 1998–99. [4321]

Mr. Forth: The Higher Education Funding Council for England determines the conduct of these assessments and what proportion of its running costs should be spent on them. I am asking the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will break down the £5 million estimate of administration costs for the nursery scheme; on what experience the estimates were made; and how the notice for tender was publicised. [4490]

Mr. Robin Squire: The estimated cost of inspection and administration in phase 1 of the nursery voucher scheme is based on: training inspectors for phase 1; inspections of that phase; training of inspectors in preparation for full implementation in phase 2; and the contract to administer the scheme in phase 1, which was awarded after competitive tender.

Advertisements inviting contractors to express an interest in tendering for the voucher contract were placed in a number of national newspapers, the Times Educational Supplement, The Economist and "Government Opportunities".

Ofsted

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will give a breakdown of the Ofsted budget for 1995–96; and if she will make a statement. [4514]

Mr. Robin Squire: This is a matter for Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools, who heads the Office for Standards in Education. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

Car Leasing and Subsistence Rates

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list members of staff in (a) the Department for Education and (b) the Department of Employment in June 1995; what the subsistence rates prevailing in each Department (i) were and (ii) are currently; what were the car leasing arrangements in each former Department; and how many of the staff in each former Department were receiving lease cars or car leasing support. [4819]

Mr. Robin Squire: At 30 June 1995 there were 2,020 staff in the Department for Education and 4,721 staff in the Employment Department.

The United Kingdom subsistence rates for staff in the former Department for Education and Employment Department are as follows and are still current.

Allowance	DFE system/rates	ED system/rates
Day subsistence
Absence over 5 hours	£4.25	£4.25
Absence over 10 hours	£9.30	£9.30
Absence over 12 hours	£13.55	£13.55
Overnight subsistence (24 hour rates)
Staying in a hotel	Use of hotel list offering discounts. A fixed rate of London £65, elsewhere £60 is paid	Actual cost of B&B arranged through booking agent plus £20.50 (tax free) and an additional £7.50 (taxable)
Staying with friends/relatives or making arrangements	£25.00 tax free	£35.00 tax free

Neither the former ED nor the DFE had leased cars in June 1995. The Department for Education and Employment has no leased cars currently. In the former Employment Department, and currently in the Department for Education and Employment vehicles have been purchased for official use. Staff who travel at least 5,000 miles each year on official business may be allocated an official car, which they are permitted to use for private purposes, in return for a monthly payment.

Teachers' Pensions

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the most recent statistics available for (a) the average amount paid out per pension under the teachers' superannuation scheme, (b) the number of pensioners currently receiving pensions under the teachers' superannuation scheme on a region-by-region basis, (c) the average age of the recipients of pensions under the teachers' superannuation scheme for each year since 1988 and (d) how many people have left the scheme to date to take up private pensions. [4821]

Mr. Robin Squire: The average amount paid out per pension under the teachers' superannuation scheme at 31 October 1995 was £6,144 per annum. The number of pensioners currently receiving pensions under the teachers' superannuation scheme at 31 October 1995 was 367,961. A regional analysis could be produced only at disproportionate cost. The average age of recipients of pensions under the teachers' superannuation scheme at 31 October 1995 was 66 years. Figures for earlier years are not available. Information on the number of teachers who have left the scheme to take up private pensions is not collected.

English-medium Schools Abroad

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what supervision her Department exercises over schools abroad which use English as a language of teaching and which prepare children for English GCSE and A-level examinations. [4800]

Mr. Forth: None.

Free School Meals

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children were in receipt of free school meals, by region, in each of the last five years. [4922]

Mrs. Gillan: Information on the take-up of free school meals in maintained schools in England in the years 1991 to 1995 is shown in the following table:

Mobile Classrooms

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment under which items of their budgeted provision governors of grant-maintained schools may make capital purchases of mobile classrooms. [4607]

Mr. Robin Squire: A grant-maintained school may make capital purchases of mobile classrooms using its formula or named capital allocations, or its annual maintenance grant.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment by how much the proposed budget for the assisted places scheme was underspent in the years 1992–93, 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96. [5034]

Mrs. Gillan: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett) on 24 October 1995, Official Report, column 623, for the years up to and including 1994–95; 1995–96 is still in progress.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many pupils benefited in the years 1992–93, 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96 from the assisted places schemes. [5035]

Mrs. Gillan: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett) on 24 October 1995, Official Report, column 623, and to the hon. Member for Rotherham (Mr. MacShane) on 4 December 1995, Official Report, column 117.

European Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to the statement of the Secretary of State for the Environment on 21 November 1995, Official Report, column 454, if she will make it her policy to review past legislation in respect of additional burdens imposed by regulations implementing European directives. [5065]

Mr. Forth: It is the policy in the Department to ensure that we do not gold-plate European directives by the addition of unnecessary burdens when implementing them in the United Kingdom. We will take every opportunity to look at existing legislation in the light of this policy.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what advice she has offered to the Funding Agency for Schools regarding publicity for agency proposals to open new grant-maintained schools; what financial limits are imposed in each case; and if she will make a statement. [5251]

Mr. Robin Squire: My Department issued general guidance, in circular 23/94, regarding consultations prior to the publication of statutory proposals. The Funding Agency for Schools is under a statutory duty to consult on its proposals to establish new grant-maintained schools. It is for the agency to decide what are appropriate consultations in the light of guidance from the Secretary of State and to determine expenditure accordingly.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Public Expenditure

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the allocation to individual programmes in Northern Ireland of the public expenditure totals announced on 28 November. [5433]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: In his unified Budget statement on 28 November my right hon. and learned friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced total public expenditure planning figures for the Northern Ireland programme. I have now decided on the allocations to individual programmes as shown in the following table. Copies of a more detailed statement have been placed in the Library. These allocations reflect my assessment of how best to distribute the Northern Ireland public expenditure totals in response to local needs and circumstances.

Notes:

[1] Figures are rounded to the nearest £1 million in 1996–97 and to the nearest £10 million in 1997–98 and 1998–99.

[2] The figures to 1996–97 will form the basis for preparation by Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office of main estimates for the coming year. These will be presented to Parliament in due course.

[3] Northern Ireland will also receive additional resources for the extra spending which will result from the Budget measures to help meet the costs of long-term care.

[4] The EU peace and reconciliation programme has been provisionally allocated to the individual programmes and is included in the figures above. The allocation set aside for the partnership measure is for the time being included with the environmental and miscellaneous services figures.

Road Safety Education

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the recommended staffing level for road safety education officers; and what is the current number of staff in post. [2718]

Mr. Moss: There are no recommended staffing levels for the road safety education officer service within Northern Ireland. The current number of staff in post is 13.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what have been the percentages of the Royal Ulster Constabulary who have been Protestant and Catholic in each of the past 10 years; [3530]

(2) what have been the percentages of men and women who have been recruits to the Royal Ulster Constabulary for each of the past 10 years; [3528]

(3) what have been the percentages of men and women in the Royal Ulster Constabulary in each of the past 10 years; [3527]

(4) what have been the percentages of recruits to the Royal Ulster Constabulary who have been Protestant and Catholic for each of the past 10 years. [3529]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is in the tables.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what records are kept of the geographical origins of recruits to the Royal Ulster Constabulary; and if he will publish them. [3531]

Sir John Wheeler: No records are kept of the geographical origins of recruits.

Church Attacks

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those Chief Constable's certificates issued since 1 January 1990 relating to attacks on Protestant churches and halls and Catholic churches and halls. [3538]

Sir John Wheeler: The information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, the Compensation Agency has produced a list of 182 Protestant and Roman Catholic church properties for which it has received a Chief Constable's certificate since 1 January 1990. I have arranged for a copy of this list to be placed in the Library.

Discussions (Irish Republic and USA)

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list each occasion since 1990 when reproductive health, population control or access to abortion and contraception, have been discussed by officials of his Department with representatives of (a) the Irish Government and (b) the Government of the United States of America; and if he will make a statement on the nature of each discussion indicating to what extent it referred to (a) the receipt of United States aid and (b) the peace process. [3985]

Mr. Moss: There have been no such discussions.

Consultants

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those (a) consultants (b) outside organisations and (c) individuals employed by his Department in each year since 1990, indicating the purposes of their employment and the total payments made to them. [3970]

Sir John Wheeler: Information in relation to consultants covering the financial years 1990–91 to 1994–95 has been placed in the Library. This is recorded under four categories—general management consultancy, information technology, privatisation and next steps. Total payment amounts are shown where this would not breach commercial confidentiality but is omitted in the cases of single contracts (marked *). The other information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list all statutory instruments in respect of health services from his Department for the present Parliament. [4050]

Mr. Moss: Full details of the statutory rules made to 31 December 1994 are shown in the annual volume of "Statutory Rules", a copy of which is available in the Library.

The list of the statutory rules in respect of health and personal social services made since 1 January 1995 is as follows:

NHS Trusts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list all NHS trusts (a) as of 30 November 1995 and (b) with effect from 1 April 1996. [4062]

Mr. Moss: At 30 November 1995 the following NHS trusts had been established in Northern Ireland.

Royal Group of Hospitals and Dental Hospital HSS Trust
Ulster North Down and Ards Hospitals HSS Trust
Craigavon Area Hospital Group HSS Trust
Green Park HSS Trust
Belfast City Hospital HSS Trust
North Down and Ards Community HSS Trust
South and East Belfast HSS Trust
North and West Belfast HSS Trust
Down Lisburn HSS Trust
Newry and Mourne HSS Trust
Craigavon and Banbridge Community HSS Trust
Mater Infirmorum Hospital HSS Trust
Causeway HSS Trust
Northern Ireland Ambulance Service HSS Trust
Armagh and Dungannon HSS Trust
United Hospitals HSS Trust
Altnagelvin Hospitals HSS Trust
Foyle HSS Trust.

In addition, the following units were approved for trust status on 8 November 1995 and will be established when a chairman has been identified:

Sperrin Lakeland
Homefirst.

It is anticipated that they will become fully operational on 1 April 1996.

US Financial Assistance

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the total amount of financial assistance made available by the United States of America, either directly or through the International Fund for Ireland, to assist with the regeneration of Northern Ireland, and to what extent that aid is governed by those aspects of section 104(d) of the United States International Development and Food Assistance Act 1978 which requires that all nations receiving United States foreign assistance must take steps to reduce their rate of population growth; and if he will make a statement. [3984]

Sir John Wheeler: There has been no direct financial assistance made available by the United States of America to assist with the regeneration of Northern Ireland. The United States of America has contributed a total of $250 million to the International Fund for Ireland over the period 1986 to 1995 inclusive. Under the terms of the agreement establishing the fund approximately three quarters of its resources are to be disbursed in Northern Ireland. The US contributions to the fund are governed by the US Anglo-Irish Support Act 1986 and fall outside the terms of section 104(d) of the US International Development and Food Assistance Act 1978.

Forensic Science Laboratory

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Northern Ireland forensic science laboratory was launched as a next steps agency. [5432]

Sir John Wheeler: I launched the Northern Ireland forensic science laboratory as a next steps agency on 1 September 1995, to be known as the Forensic Science Agency of Northern Ireland. The agency will continue to supply a wide range of forensic services to the RUC and the courts in Northern Ireland. The agency published its framework document and corporate and business plan in September and copies of both have been placed in the Library.

EC Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to the statement of the Secretary of State for the Environment of 21 November, Official Report, column 454, if he will make it his policy to review past legislation in respect of additional burdens imposed by regulations implementing European directives. [5070]

Sir John Wheeler: Within the NI departments, there is no such existing policy at the present time, but legislation influenced by EC directives is progressed on a parity basis with Great Britain. Any initiatives taken by Great Britain Departments to review past legislation implementing European directives which impose additional burdens will be closely monitored by departments.

Rugby League

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) financial; and (b) other assistance to rugby league is made available by the Northern Ireland Sports Council. [4993]

Mr. Ancram: None. Rugby league has no governing body to which financial or other assistance could be made.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many ministerial visits have been undertaken by each Minister in his Department between 6 July and 1 December; and how many and what percentage of these have involved the Minister travelling abroad. [4228]

Sir John Wheeler [holding reply 6 December 1995]: Ministers have spent the following numbers of days out of the office, each of which may have involved more than one visit:

	Ministerial visits (Days)	Travelling abroad
		(Days)	Percentage
Sir P. Mayhew	25	2	(8.0)
Mr. M. Ancram	24	2	(8.3)
Sir J. Wheeler	23	3	(13.0)
Baroness Denton	95	20	(21.1)
Mr. M. Moss	48	1	(2.1)

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many times mobile telephones used by Ministers in his Department have been cloned during (a) the last six months, (b) the last 12 months and (c) the last 18 months; and which Ministers within his Department have had their mobile telephones cloned; [4264]

(2) how many mobile telephones there are available in his Department for the use of Ministers. [4263]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 7 December 1995]: The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and my hon. Friend the member for Devizes (Mr. Ancram) both had their mobile telephones cloned within the last 12 months.

The five Northern Ireland Ministers have mobile phones fitted in their official London cars. There are also additional telephones carried by private secretaries which are available for use by Ministers as necessary.

WALES

Council Tax

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to maintain the current differential between council tax bills in Wales and England. [4293]

Mr. Hague: In some years it will be necessary for local authorities to raise a greater proportion of their revenue locally. The actual level of council tax will be set by local authorities but I expect there to be a large differential between council tax levels in Wales and England for the foreseeable future.

Planning Policy Guidance

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the organisations which have sent him responses to the draft planning policy guidance for Wales. [3423]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The organisations are as follows:

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library a copy of the written responses his Department has received to the draft planning policy guidance for Wales. [4400]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I am arranging for copies to be placed in the Library of the House as soon as possible.

European Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales pursuant to the statement of the Secretary of State for the Environment of 21 November, Official Report, column 454, if he will make it his policy to review past legislation in respect of additional burdens imposed by regulations implementing European directives. [5072]

Mr. Hague: It is the policy of my Department to ensure that we do not add any unnecessary burden when implementing European directives in the United Kingdom. We will take every opportunity to look at existing legislation in the light of this policy.

Welsh Regional Consumer Committee

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh customer services committee of the Office of Water and Sewerage, in relation to the impact of water and sewerage service customers of the agreed takeover of South Wales Electricity. [5417]

Mr. Hague: None. The Director General of Water Services has, jointly with the Director General of Electricity Supply, issued a consultation paper on the issues raised by the bid by Welsh Water plc for South Wales Electricity plc. The views of the Welsh customer services committee will be taken into account by the DGWS in formulating his advice to the Director General of Fair Trading.

Training for Work

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultation he has had with the chairman of the Welsh training and enterprise councils concerning flexibility between the last day of training and the first day of employment in the approval and funding for outcome and output-related payment methods under training for work schemes for the long-term unemployed. [5421]

Mr. Hague: None. However, with effect from 27 March 1995 arrangements have been agreed with training and enterprise councils in Wales for outcome-related payments to be made in respect of training for work trainees who get a job within six months of leaving the programme.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what monitoring systems he has available to him and what proposals he has to improve the monitoring systems with respect to the output and outcome of related funding methods for training for work schemes in respect of the numbers of former training for work trainees still in work three months or longer after completing their training for work training programmes; and if he will make a statement. [5420]

Mr. Hague: My Department's agreement with training and enterprise councils requires them to retain evidence of job outcomes achieved by training for work trainees, for whom a job outcome payment may be payable. A payment can be made in respect of a trainee gaining employment within six months of leaving the programme.

The administrative arrangements for training for work in 1996–97 are currently under review and my officials are in consultation with training and enterprise councils about potential changes to the programme.

Welsh Water

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consideration he has given to removing the 15 per cent. maximum shareholding in Welsh Water. [5414]

Mr. Hague: None. This is a matter for the shareholders.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimates he has made of the effects on financial markets of the 15 per cent. maximum shareholding rule incorporated in perpetuity by his Department into the articles of association of Welsh Water plc at the time of privatisation. [5415]

Mr. Hague: None.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the Welsh Development Agency concerning the funding of already signed contracts for commencement during the period November 1995 to 31 March 1996, and the consideration of abrogation; and if he will make a statement. [5422]

Mr. Hague: None. These are operational matters for the agency.

Departmental Correspondence

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the Western Mail as regards the form of publication of letters from Ministers and civil servants on behalf of Ministers and signed as approved by the relevant Minister; what proposals he has to clarify the distinction between the responsibility of Ministers for instructing and approving letters and civil servants for drafting and dispatching letters; and if he will make a statement. [5419]

Mr. Hague: It is standard practice across Whitehall for letters dictated by or approved by a Minister to be signed by a civil servant on behalf of the Minister in his absence. This is always made clear on the letter and is used to avoid delays in transmission. This happened with the letter from my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State, Member for Clwyd North-West (Mr. Richards) printed in the Western Mail on 4 December. The newspaper incorrectly carried the name of the civil servant rather than that of my hon. Friend whose letter it was. When the error was pointed out by an official the Western Mail carried a correction the following day.

It is also standard practice for officials to provide advice to Ministers on matters of official business, including letters.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library a copy of the original letter, relating to the health service in Wales, published in the Western Mail on 4 December in the name of the Welsh Office civil servant Richard Morgan. [5255]

Mr. Hague: I am today placing a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Child Abuse

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he is able to announce his decision on whether there should be an inquiry into the various allegations of child abuse in north Wales and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Richards: On 5 May the previous Secretary of State, the right hon. Member for Wokingham (Mr. Redwood), appointed Miss Nicola Davies QC to undertake an examination of relevant papers held by the various agencies concerned and to advise on whether an inquiry was required.

Upon the evidence contained in the documents examined Miss Davies has recommended that a public inquiry cannot be justified. The documents held by the North Wales police do contain allegations of abuse but the majority of the allegations relate to the period 1980 to 1988. The police investigations were triggered by letters from Clwyd and Gwynedd county councils and all the issues raised in those letters were properly investigated. With limited exceptions, children in care after 1989 were not interviewed by the police. Since 1989 there has been a radical revision of existing procedures.

An inquiry into events prior to 1989 would be primarily of historical interest. The documents examined by Miss Davies do not demonstrate that the problems of the pre-1989 period have continued. In the absence of such core evidence Miss Davies feels unable to recommend that reasonable grounds exist which would provide the basis for a public inquiry.

However, she has concluded that there should be a detailed examination of the practices and procedures of the social service departments of both Clwyd and Gwynedd county councils and of private homes in those areas to ensure that they are adequate and working effectively. She has recommended that this work be undertaken by an independent person experienced in social work and child care. This person should:

(a) examine documents held by the statutory agencies and all the private agencies in Clwyd and Gwynedd who provide residential care for children which are relevant to such provision for the period 1991 to the present. The purpose of the examination would be to scrutinise the procedures and to comment on their adequacy and effectiveness; such an examination should address the following issues:

(i) management, supervision and monitoring of staff at all levels;

(ii) personnel procedures, recruitment of staff, induction, probationary periods, promotion, redeployment of staff, training plans for staff of residential homes, overall planning and individual profiles;

(iii) implementation of care planning and review process, examination of children's records for supporting documentation;

(iv) implementation of complaints procedures for children and staff; assessment of child protection procedures;

(v) assessment of all books, diaries and logs kept in the various homes;

(vi) the understanding of the various procedures and systems on the part of staff, parents, children and carers. Such procedures to include planning and review, children's rights, complaints, advocacy and independent visitors.

(b) interview any individual whose knowledge and experience is deemed to be of relevance to such an investigation. The interviewing of any such individual would be in private;

(c) investigate the area of foster care;

(d) investigate the units in Clwyd county council and Gwynedd county council responsible for registering and inspecting homes.

I accept Miss Davies' conclusion that no case for a public inquiry has been established. That is the basis upon which I am proceeding unless any new compelling factor should come to light.

I am also accepting Miss Davies' other recommendations and am appointing, under section 80 of the Children Act 1989, Miss Adrianne Jones to head this examination.

Miss Jones is to start work immediately. I shall be asking her, in addition, to advise me upon the proposedpractices and procedures of the six new unitary authorities in north Wales who will take over full responsibility for social services matters in April 1996.

I am grateful to Miss Davies and to all of the various agencies who co-operated fully with her.

I have arranged for Miss Davies' conclusions and recommendations to be placed in the Library of the House.

TRANSPORT

Stansted Airport

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he is taking in respect of BAA's application for an increase in the air transport movements limit at Stansted airport. [5949]

Mr. Watts: We are today beginning consultation on raising the limit on air transport movements at Stansted. This follows the application by BAA plc, the airport operator, to increase the limit to 150,000 movements each year. The Department is seeking views on this option, as well as on an alternative option of increasing the limit to 120,000 movements a year.

When planning permission was granted for the development of Stansted, an upper limit was placed on the number of air transport movements each year to ensure that the local infrastructure could cope with air traffic growth. We now need to decide whether it is time to increase that upper limit, and if so by how much, taking account of local interests and without unduly restricting the airport's ability to grow.

The Department will be seeking the views of airlines, local authorities and other interested parties. Copies of the consultation document have been placed in the Library.

Motor Vehicle Tests (Deregulation)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimate saving to businesses from the Deregulation (Motor Vehicles Tests) Order 1996. [5556]

Mr. Norris: The estimated annual potential benefit to both business and private motorists is £3 million. It is not possible to apportion that estimate between the two categories of vehicle user without disproportionate effort.

Rail Privatisation

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will show for all consultants and other outside organisations or individuals currently or previously employed by his Department for advice or assistance in rail privatisation (a) the name of the consultancy, organisation or individual, (b) the length of the contract offered to each consultancy, organisation or individual, (c) the total amount inclusive of VAT paid to date to each consultancy, organisation or individual and (d) the services required by his Department from each consultancy, organisation or individual; and if he will make a statement. [270]

Mr. Watts [pursuant to his reply, 22 November 1995, c. 142–43]: Information about payments to individual contractors is commercially confidential.

Payments made to date to consultants currently or previously employed by the Department total £35.4 million.

Consultants currently employed by the Department on rail privatisation are:

Consultants
Linklaters and Paines	Legal advice
Freshfields	Legal advice
Samuel Montagu	Merchant Banking
Hambros	Merchant Banking
SBC Warburg	Merchant Banking
Merrill Lynch	Merchant Banking
KPMG Peat Marwick	Accountancy and Taxation

Debenham Tewson and Chinnocks	Property matters
NERA	Regulatory matters
Deloitte Haskins and Sells	Industry structure

Contracts for consultancy advice are normally offered on an on-going basis with provision for the Department to terminate the contract.

Mr. George Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those consultants, outside organisations and individuals employed to date by his Department to assist with the franchising of ScotRail. [5507]

Mr. Watts: No advisers have been appointed to assist exclusively with the franchising of ScotRail, but a number of advisers have been appointed to assist on a range of issues relating to rail privatisation. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Hampstead and Highgate (Ms Jackson) on earlier today.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultations he has had with the Director General of the Office of Rail Franchise Regulation concerning issues of competition relevant to the preferred bidder status of the Western Region management team and First Bus for the Great Western passenger rail franchise and the dominant supplier position of First Bus in bus transport on the Cardiff-Swansea express bus route; and if he will make a statement. [5418]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 11 December 1995]: Any competition issues raised by a rail franchise bid are for the franchising director, the Rail Regulator and the Director General of Fair Trading. My Department has been involved in discussions of a general nature.

The Railways Act 1993 confers on the Rail Regulator the functions of the Director General of Fair Trading with respect to any monopoly situation or anti-competitive practice relating to the supply of railway services. Qualifying mergers are investigated by the Office of Fair Trading under the Fair Trading Act 1973.

Lollipop People

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list (a) in total and (b) in each region, the number of lollipop (i) men and (ii) women employed in each year since 1979, and if he will make a statement; [5364]

(2) what is the average wage for lollipop (a) men and (b) women; and if he will make a statement. [5365]

Mr. Norris: The information is not collected centrally.

Foreign-owned Fishing Vessels

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many foreign-owned British-registered fishing vessels are (a) demersal vessels of 10 m and (b) beamers of 10 m; and what are their engine capacities and lengths. [4969]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 8 December 1995]: The information requested is not available.

Traffic Regulation Orders

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance his Department gives to local authorities to determine traffic regulation orders; and what procedures are available to the public to object to such orders. [5246]

Mr. Norris: Statutory procedures for local authorities to make traffic regulation orders in England and Wales under the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 are set out in the Local Authorities' Traffic Orders (Procedure) (England and Wales) Regulations 1989 (SI 1989/1120), as amended by the Local Authorities' Traffic Orders (Procedure) (England and Wales) (Amendment) Regulations 1993 (SI 1993/1500). These include requirements to consult parties that appear likely to be affected, to advertise the proposal and provide a general opportunity for objections to be submitted, and to give such objections due consideration before an order is made.

Airline Lost Luggage Compensation

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to uprate annually the "amount per kilo" calculation for lost baggage compensation on airlines under the Carriage By Air (Sterling Equivalents) Order 1986. [4822]

Mr. Norris: My right hon. Friend expects to make a new Carriage by Air (Sterling Equivalents) Order early in the new year.

Dr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he is taking to encourage other European partners to ratify the 1975 Montreal protocol relating to compensation levels for lost baggage so that provisions under the protocol can be brought into force. [4823]

Mr. Norris: The Government acknowledge that liability limits established by the Warsaw convention 1929 and the Hague protocol 1955 are inadequate. Montreal additional protocol No. 3, which includes provision for updating liability limits for baggage, is unlikely to come into force in the immediate future. We have therefore been exploring within the European Civil Aviation Conference alternative means of increasing liability limits.

Classic Vehicles

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many motor vehicles over 25 years of age are currently registered in the Sheffield area. [5243]

Mr. Norris: An estimated 18,250 vehicles over 25 years of age are currently licensed in the Sheffield post town area. Of these, 11,550 are in private and light goods, motorcycle or tricycle taxation classes and will qualify for exemption from vehicle excise duty as a result of the vehicle taxation changes announced in the Budget on 28 November 1995.

London Regional Transport Smart Card

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with London Transport in respect of the design of the smart card currently being considered by London Regional Transport with particular reference to data protection matters. [5339]

Mr. Norris: None.

Data Protection Act Certificates

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what occasions certificates under section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 were signed by a member of his Department; for how long each certificate was valid; if he will make a statement on the other circumstances in which vehicle owner records or driver licence details can be used for the purpose of safeguarding national security; to what extent circumstances will extend to the digitised form of the photograph on the new driving licence; and if he will make a statement. [5340]

Mr. Norris: Certificates under section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 must be signed by a member of the Cabinet or the Attorney-General or the Lord Advocate. The Secretary of State for Transport has not signed such a certificate. The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency is registered under the Act.

I also refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 25 January 1995, Official Report, column 367.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department spent on official hospitality in 1994–95 and the financial year to date; and what is the 1995–96 projected budget for official hospitality. [5579]

Mr. Norris: The Department of Transport, excluding its agencies, spent £127,247 on official hospitality in 1994–95. The overall budget for 1995–96, which now also includes some non-entertainment costs such as those for eyesight test for VDU users, is £202,524, of which £84,351 has so far been spent.

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in his Department in each of the last three years. [5562]

Sir George Young: The annual costs for the Department of Transport are as follows:

1993–94	1994–95	[1]1995–96
16,008.20	Nil	6,869.90

Figures exclude VAT.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Special Educational Needs Tribunal

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the first annual report of the president of the special educational needs tribunal will be published; and if she will make a statement. [5845]

Mrs. Gillan: The report has been published today, and copies have been placed in the Library.

I very much welcome the report which shows that, during its first year of operation, the special educational needs tribunal has met the targets it was set for dealing with appeals. This is an excellent start.

The SEN tribunal president, staff and members have worked very hard and have achieved a great deal during the year. This has been achieved despite extreme and unexpected pressure—the tribunal has done well to adapt to meet this. The report is a tribute to their hard work.

The tribunal has been very well received by both parents and local education authorities. It has gained a deserved reputation for impartiality, informality and, above all, fairness. This is something which I applaud.

This is an excellent base on which to build. I hope the tribunal will continue the excellent work it has begun.

Supported Employment (Disabled People)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what studies her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated of the net Exchequer costs of moving disabled persons off benefits and on to supported placement schemes; if she will list the (a) calculations and (b) conclusions contained in these studies; and if she will estimate the costs involved in respect of Remploy's employees. [4691]

Mr. Paice: A 1989 study "The Net Exchequer Costs of Sheltered Employment" examined these issues. It is available in the Library. More recently, the Department has commissioned a study by the Welsh Centre for Learning Disabilities to look at the effectiveness of supported employment agencies, which among other things will revisit some of the issues of the earlier study. This study has not yet been completed, and we will consider its findings in due course.

Standard Spending Assessments

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the average standard spending assessment provision for (a) primary pupils and (b) secondary pupils in each English county in 1995–96 and 1996–97, in current prices. [4919]

Mr. Robin Squire: The table sets out each English shire authority's education standard spending assessment per five to 10-year-old and per 11 to 15-year-old for the relevant years in cash terms. The figures for 1996–97 are provisional.

Discretionary Awards (Dance and Drama Students)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is her most recent estimate of the number of local education authorities that do not make discretionary awards to students of dance and drama. [4957]

Mr. Forth: Discretionary awards are a matter for local education authorities. The Department does not collect data on the discretionary awards policies of individual authorities.

Class Sizes

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what consideration has been given to health and safety issues in the context of increases in class size. [5286]

Mrs. Gillan: Local education authorities and school governors have a general duty to ensure that school premises are safe. They will obviously want to bear that duty in mind in considering how to accommodate any increase in pupil numbers.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the application of the Government's policy on age discrimination in respect of the training and enterprise council operating agreement with regard to priority for training for work for particular age groups. [5397]

Mr. Paice: No one has priority for entry to training for work solely on the grounds of age. Priority for entry to training for work is given to people who are regarded as being seriously disadvantaged in the labour market. This includes 18 to 24-year-olds who have been unemployed for two years or more. Priority comes into effect only when there is a waiting list for entry. It is unlikely that this has occurred in practice.

Classroom Assistants

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the function of classroom assistants; what is her policy on the extent to which they are expected to engage in formal class teaching; and what guidance her Department issues regarding their engagement and use. [5351]

Mr. Robin Squire: Decisions on the engagement and deployment of classroom assistants are for headteachers and governors in consultation with the teaching staff whose work is to be supported. The Department is currently funding a pilot programme of training for specialist teacher assistants, and has defined the competences that this group of assistants will need to offer effective support to classroom teachers, principally at key stage 1, in the teaching of the basic skills of reading, writing and arithmetic.

Jobcentre Staff

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the number of staff within jobcentres who are in receipt of family credit. [5426]

Mr. Forth: This information is not available from the Department for Education and Employment as individuals are required to contact social security (income support) directly if they wish to apply for family credit.

Job Creation (Construction Industry)

Mr. Hindchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the number of jobs in the construction industry which would be created by a building programme of 35,000 homes in one year. [5325]

Mr Forth: The Department has made no such assessment.

Quantock School

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the performance of the Quantock school, Somerset to establish if it meets the standards required by her Department. [5461]

Mrs Gillan: Standards at independent schools are monitored through educational inspection by Ofsted and, in the case of boarding schools, by local services departments for child welfare provision. Inspectors from Ofsted and Somerset social services department have visited Quantock school this year and reported that provision meets the minimum standards required by the Education Act 1944, as amended.

TREASURY

VAT Debt (Bankruptcies)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the number of firms closed down in each year as a consequence of the actions of VAT inspectors for each year since 1979 by county. [5362]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 11 December 1995]: Figures are not available prior to 1986 and are not available at all by county.

The number of bankruptcy and winding-up orders made by the courts following petitions laid by Customs and Excise in respect of VAT debts was:

Year to	Bankruptcy orders	Winding-up orders
31 March 1987	1,147	938
31 March 1988	778	690
31 March 1989	1,010	552
31 March 1990	1,047	1,172

Share Ownership

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the value of the United Kingdom equity market was (a) in the hands of private shareholders and (b) held by pension funds for each year since 1979. [1460]

Mr. Jack: The information requested is available for the years 1981, and 1989 to 1993 only. Details are in the table.

Beneficial ownership 1981–1993

	Percentage of total equity owned, 31 December

1981	26.7	28.2
1989	30.6	20.6
1990	31.6	20.3
1991	31.3	19.9
1992	35.1	20.4
1993	34.2	17.7
1994	27.8	20.3

Household Incomes

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the change in take-home pay after tax and inflation for a one-earner couple on average male earnings with two children for the years (a) 1978–79 and 1996–97 (b) 1991–92 and 1996–97 and (c) 1995–96 and 1996–97. [3729]

Mr. Jack: The estimates are as follows:

Growth in take-home pay after tax and inflation

	One earner couple on average male earnings with two children
	£ per week (1995–96 prices)	£ per year (1995–96 prices)
1978–79 to 1996–97	88.20	4,590
1991–92 to 1996–97	13.20	690
1995–96 to 1996–97	8.60	450

This information has been published in table 3 of the HM Treasury's living standards press release.

Consumption Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was (a) consumption as a proportion of gross domestic product and (b) consumer credit per capita in 1979, 1985, 1988 and 1994. [4508]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested for 1990 onwards, for consumption as a proportion of gross domestic product, can be derived from table 2.2 of "Economic Trends", November 1995 edition, No. 505, which is available in the House of Commons Library. Figures for earlier years are available in "Economic Trends" annual supplement, 1996 edition. They are also held on the Central Statistical Office database which can be accessed by the Library. The CSO database identifiers are:

Consumers expenditure: CCBH

Gross domestic product: CAOP.

The level of consumer credit for 1990 onwards can be obtained from table 3.4 of "Financial Statistics", November 1995 edition, No. 403, and the total population from 1984 onwards can be obtained from table 17.1 of "United Kingdom National Accounts 1995". Previous years will be available in earlier copies of these publications, all available in the House of Commons Library. They are also held on the Central Statistical Office database which can be accessed by the Library. The CSO database identifiers are:

Consumer Credit: AILA prior to 1987. VZRD 1987 onwards.

Total UK population: DYAY.

Pension Contributions

Ms Corston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to tables 1.3, 7.1 and 10.4 in the latest report on the family expenditure survey, what was the average weekly expenditure in 1994–95 of all non-retired households on (i) contributions to pension and superannuation funds deducted by employees, (ii) personal pensions and (iii) national insurance contributions paid by employees, by gross income decile or quintile group. [5010]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Estimates of the average weekly expenditure on these items by households where the head of household is non-retired are given below. The figures are estimates from the FES, and are subject to sampling variations. The figures have been rounded to the nearest 10p.

Average weekly gross income (£)

	Lowest quintile	Second quintile	Third quintile	Fourth quintile	Highest quintile	All households
Contributions to pension and superannuation funds deducted by employers	0.0	1.60	5.40	8.60	18.80	6.90
Personal pensions	0.60	2.70	3.70	6.30	17.90	6.20
National insurance contributions paid by employees	0.60	8.00	17.90	26.30	37.70	18.10

EC Convergence Criteria

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will raise the subject of the consequences of EU member states' attempts to meet the Maastricht convergence criteria at the EU Finance Council in Brussels on 11 December. [5647]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The ECOFIN Council provisionally scheduled for 11 December was cancelled as work on preparation for the Madrid Council had been satisfactorily completed.

Tax Simplification Report

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to publish and lay before Parliament the Inland Revenue's report on tax simplification. [5951]

Mr. Jack: The Inland Revenue report, entitled "The Path to Tax Simplification", has today been laid before Parliament in accordance with section 160 of the Finance Act 1995.

I warmly welcome this report. The Chancellor of the Exchequer said in his Budget statement that tax law has become too long and complicated and that he proposed that the Revenue tax code be rewritten in plain language.

This report suggests a practical way forward to deal with this issue. Its central proposal is a major project to rewrite tax law in clearer and simpler language. This would reduce the compliance costs which the tax system imposes, in one way or another, on every taxpayer in the country. It would also support the Government's deregulation initiative, the system of self-assessment we are introducing, and the Revenue's continuing efforts to improve customer service, quality and cost-efficiency in all its work.

A number of practical issues need further consideration including the parliamentary implications for dealing with the rewritten tax legislation. Meanwhile, the Chancellor has asked the Inland Revenue to proceed with preparatory work.

In addition to the report, the Inland Revenue has today issued "The Path to Tax Simplification—a background paper", which contains further material on tax simplification. This document has been placed in the Libraries of the House. Both documents will be on sale to the public from today.

PRIME MINISTER

Campbell Soups

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Prime Minister if he will visit the Campbell Soups Homepride plant in Mary port. [3603]

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 12 December. [3940]

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 12 December 1995. [3942]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Crown Jewels

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what public records exist covering the purchase and early history of (a) the imperial state crown of George I, (b) the coronation crown of George IV and (c) the crown of Queen Adelaide; [5282]

(2) what representations he has received about the ownership and future of the imperial crown of George I, the coronation crown of George IV and the crown of Queen Adelaide; [5280]

(3) what is his policy on the future of the imperial crown of George I, the imperial state crown of George IV and the crown of Queen Adelaide. [5281]

The Prime Minister: So far as I am aware, I have received no representations about the ownership and future of these crown frames. I understand that the crown frames have been acquired by Prince Jefri Bolkiah of Brunei and that the prince has most generously decided to present them to the nation. The applications for licences to export the frames have accordingly been withdrawn. A public record concerning the crown frames is in the annual report of the reviewing committee on the export of works of art, 1994–95, which was placed in the Library of the House on 24 October 1995.

Security Services Act

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister what arrangements have been made to appoint a commissioner under the Security Services Act 1989 when Lord Justice

Stuart-Smith's appointment expires on 17 December 1995. [5844]

The Prime Minister: Lord Justice Stuart-Smith has accepted re-appointment for a further two years until 14 December 1997.

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister how much has been spent on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in his Department in each of the last three years. [5558]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given today by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Digital Terrestrial Television

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will impose a universal service obligation on broadcasters on the introduction of digital terrestrial television. [5240]

Mr. Sproat: The term "universal service obligation" is used in telecommunications to mean a requirement on a provider to enable consumers, regardless of where they live, to be connected to networks at an affordable price. There is no exact parallel with digital terrestrial television, where constraints on frequency availability mean that it will not be possible in the short-term for all new services to be made available to all consumers in the United Kingdom.

The Government's policy document, "Digital Terrestrial Broadcasting", Cm 2946, published on 10 August, made clear that two of the key criteria on which applications from prospective multiplex providers would be judged would be their proposals to maximise the number of viewers who can be reached by digital terrestrial television, and their proposals to promote the take-up of digital receiving equipment, including through ensuring that it is made available at an affordable price. Analogue television transmissions will be maintained until a broadly similar proportion of the population as is now able to receive them can receive digital broadcast. No one will lose services that they are currently able to receive.

National Lottery

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much has been spent to date on the national lottery in each region of England and in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. [4540]

Mr. Sproat: This is an operational matter for Camelot Group plc. The director general of the national lottery, Peter Davies has licensed Camelot to run the national lottery and he regulates its operations. I have therefore asked the director general to write to the hon. Member, placing copies of his response in the Libraries of the House.

Cable Licences

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many cable licences have not been acted upon and have lapsed. [4947]

Mr. Sproat: Eight licences have been revoked because of the failure of the licensee to implement his proposals. In six of these cases, the area has been readvertised and new licences awarded in respect of five; an application for the sixth is currently under consideration by the Independent Television Commission. The remaining two licences have not yet been readvertised.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Visits to Brussels

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many hon. Members have used the facility for visiting Brussels in each year since its inception.

Mr. Newton: The facility for hon. Members to visit institutions of the European Community in Brussels, Luxembourg, and Strasbourg was introduced on 1 January 1992. For the purposes of the Resolution, the year begins on 1 April.

The number of visits by hon. Members to Brussels, for each year since the inception of the facility, is as follows:

1992–93: 64
1993–94: 60
1994–95: 49
1995–96 (part): 24.

WALES

NHS Trusts

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish information on the management costs of NHS trusts in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [6023]

Mr. Richards: NHS trusts are now required to publish their management costs in their audited annual accounts. The accounts most recently published are for the financial year 1994–95. The following table shows the management costs of NHS trusts in Wales for that year, as audited and reported in their accounts, in cash terms and as a percentage of each trust's income.

The definition of management used is the M1 figure devised by the Audit Commission. It includes the salaries of all managers—except those who are primarily clinicians—who earn more than £20,000 per year, and of managers in a few other specified posts regardless of salary, and the costs of management consultancy.

Hospitals and other services which are not part of a trust or did not become trusts until April 1995 are not included in the table.

Alongside ever-improving health, service and choice, first-class stewardship of resources is a key task for the health service. That is why, in "Caring for the Future", we set the target of transferring £12.5 million per year from management to patient care in the period from 1994–95 to 1996–97. Trusts in Wales are playing an essential part in this, and with the publication of trust management costs this year we can see the first fruits of that policy.

The figures are lower than they would otherwise be because of the transfers that have already been made. I expect next year's figures to be lower still, as they will reflect some of the transfers being made in the present financial year. Beyond that, we are about to set targets for transfers in 1996–97, so the cost figures to be published in two years' time should be lower again.

There are several reasons why trusts can have different management costs, so comparison should be approached carefully, but I hope that trusts themselves will find the figures useful in their efforts to contain and reduce costs further.

Unemployment

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Newport, East (Mr. Flynn) of 4 December, Official Report, columns 7–8, if he will make a statement on the criteria he used to calculate levels of employment and unemployment. [5012]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The figures used are from the claimant unemployment count as published monthly by the Central Statistical Office. For Wales as a whole, seasonally adjusted figures are available and used for month-to-month comparisons because they avoid the distortion of seasonal variation. Below this geographical level only unadjusted figures are published by the CSO, so where individual counties and parliamentary constituencies are compared with Wales, unadjusted figures are used.

Bus Services

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the effect of the increase in diesel fuel duty in his Budget statement on the operation of bus services. [5306]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This increase is very small in terms of the overall operational costs of bus services. There is, therefore, no reason for it to have significant impact on the levels of services. It should encourage the operators to be more efficient in their use of fuel, and reduce emissions from public service vehicles.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to maintain the frequency of local bus services. [5307]

Mr. Jones: Bus operators must be free to respond to changes in the market. It is for county councils to ensure that essential public transport services are provided where these cannot be provided commercially.

Angling Byelaws

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make a statement on the National Rivers Authority's proposed amendment to change the finish of the salmon and sea trout fishing season to 7 October, and its impact on fishing tourism in south-west Wales; [5374]

(2) what assessments he has made of the impact of the National Rivers Authority's proposed amendment to the rod and line byelaws on fishing tourism in south-west Wales. [5375]

Mr. Hague: I understand that the NRA is intending to amend its byelaws to conserve fish stocks. It has not yet submitted the byelaws for confirmation, but when it does so I shall consider the case for the amendments along with the comments of all objectors.

Welsh Health Common Services Authority

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh health common services authority concerning the effects on charges to NHS trusts in Wales for the authority's services of the authority reducing its occupancy of Crickhowell house to (a) less than 75 per cent. (b) less than 50 per cent. (c) less than 25 per cent. of the office space; and if the charges will reflect the rent paid by the authority for the whole building; [5640]

(2) what agreement he has reached with the prescription pricing division of the health common services authority in relation to its relocation from Crickhowell house, Cardiff bay; and what agreement he has made with the chairman of the Welsh health common services authority in respect of the market rent for the prescription pricing division in (a) its present location and (b) elsewhere; [5637]

(3) what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh health common services authority in relation to (a) relocations of parts of the authority outside Crickhowell house following market testing exercises and (b) the sub-letting of consequently vacated office space at Crickhowell house; what obligations his Department has in respect of rental guarantees at Crickhowell house regarding vacated space; and if he will make a statement. [5642]

Mr. Hague: My Department is discussing these matters with the authority. The whole of the building has been leased for 25 years from 31 August but there is provision for sub-letting.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh health common services authority concerning special redundancy terms for current employees of the authority over 50 years of age. [5638]

Mr. Hague: None. Following discussions with my Department the authority will be introducing a voluntary redundancy scheme in due course in line with criteria which it will be establishing.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time employees giving their full-time equivalents, there were in his Department on 31 December in each year since 1993; and what are the planned figures for 31 December 1996. [5644]

Mr. Hague: The information is as follows:

	Full-time staff	Full-time equivalent or part-time staff
31 December 1993	2,439	202
31 December 1994	2,357	199
1 December 1995	2,222	184

It is expected that staff numbers—full-time equivalent—will be reduced to 2,100 during 1996–97.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with trade unions regarding compliance with European Union directives on large-scale redundancies in respect of his Department's current staff reductions and redundancies programme. [5641]

Mr. Hague: Consultation on the current staff reductions has taken place with the trade unions in my Department on the basis of the appropriate departmental Whitely Council agreements. The consultations comply with the provisions of the relevant European directives.

Occupational Health

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many medical and nursing staff were working in occupational health within the national health service in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and if he will list the grades of those employees. [5428]

Mr. Richards: Information on nursing staff working in occupational health is not available centrally. Information on the whole-time equivalent number of medical staff whose main specialty was occupational health is given in the table.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Iran and Saudi Arabia (Unpaid Debts)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Governments of Iran and Saudi Arabia in respect of the problem of non-payment and late payment for medical products exported to these countries by Smith and Nephew. [5241]

Mr. Hanley: Smith and Nephew has not approached us about their payment problems with Iran. But the ECGD are dealing with both pre and post-revolutionary insured debt repayment matters in Iran. Current commercial debt claims by United Kingdom creditors are being administered through Credit Suisse in London.

Our embassy in Riyadh has addressed with the Saudi Government the question of payment arrears, particularly for medical supplies, including payments owed for deliveries from Smith and Nephew. A number of outstanding payments have issued in 1995, but considerable sums remain outstanding and our embassy continues to seek early payment of the remainder.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from (a) Smith and Nephew and (b) other United Kingdom manufacturers about the difficulty of securing payments for goods exported to Iran and Saudi Arabia. [5242]

Mr. Hanley: We have not received any representations from Smith and Nephew or other manufacturers about securing payment from Iran.

We have not had any approaches from Smith and Nephew about Saudi Arabia, but the company informed my right hon. Friend the Member for Chippenham (Mr. Needham), the then Minister of Trade, in June of its debt problem with Saudi Arabia. We have also had approaches from a number of other United Kingdom manufacturers. Some have been paid; most, like pharmaceutical companies, which supply on a regular basis, have been paid some of their older outstanding debts but one is still about a year in arrears.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many civil service personnel in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office are located in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland. [5106]

Mr. Hanley: At 1 April 1995, the latest date for which data are available, the figures were:

	Number
England	3,327
Wales	0
Scotland	475
Northern Ireland	0

Diplomatic Missions, Scotland

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the (a) nationality and (b) location of each diplomatic mission located in Scotland; and what representations he has received regarding the closure of these missions. [5107]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: There are no diplomatic missions located in Scotland; there are, however, 84 consular posts representing 37 countries.

Mohammed Rafiq

Mr. Hinchcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the outcome of his immigration appeal in Leeds on 16 August 1995; and when Mohammed Rafiq will be allowed to enter the United Kingdom to join his wife. [4996]

Mr. Hanley: Mr. Rafiq's appeal was successful and he has now been medically cleared. Entry clearance will be granted on application to the high commission at Islamabad.

Russian Visitors' Visas

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what quota system the British embassy in Moscow applies for the approval of visitors' visas for Russian applicants hoping to come to Britain. [5376]

Mr. Hanley: There is no quota system. Each application is considered on its merits by an entry clearance officer and in accordance with the requirements of the immigration rules.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the total number of Russian visitors' visas granted in the current year to date. [5378]

Mr. Hanley: In the first 11 months of 1995, the British embassy in Moscow issued 86,085 United Kingdom and Commonwealth-dependent territory visas, of which 84,315 were UK visa issues for Russians. During that same period, the British consulate general in St. Petersburg issued 15,164 UK and Commonwealth-dependent territory visas, of which 15,147 were UK visa issues for Russians.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria are used by the British embassy in Moscow to determine which visitors' visa applications from Russian citizens are approved. [5377]

Mr. Hanley: Entry clearance officers at the British embassy in Moscow consider all visa applications in accordance with the requirements of the immigration rules, as is the case at all our entry clearance issuing posts overseas.

Consultants

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the total cost to date of consultancy payments made to firms in relation to work carried out to develop his Department's plans for the proposed sell-off of its housing stock. [5379]

Mr. Hanley: No payments have been made to date in relation to such work.

High Commission Buildings

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much has been spent on the residence of the former British high commissioner in Kiribati on (a) the sub-lease, (b) ground rent and (c) fixtures, fittings and furnishings since the property was acquired on 31 March 1984. [5484]

Mr. Hanley: The information is as follows:

(a) Sub-lease purchased in 1984 for Australian $65,000 or approximately £30,000.

(b) Ground rent Australian $142 or approximately £64 per annum for 11 years, total £704.

(c) £9,974 has been spent on fixtures, fittings and furnishings since 1 April 1992. Figures before that date could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the residence of the former British high commissioner in Kiribati is to be handed over with fixtures, fittings and furnishings still in place; and if he will make a statement. [5485]

Mr. Hanley: All fixtures, fittings and furnishings of any value have been removed for use elsewhere.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what use the former British high commissioner's residence in Kiribati is to be put after handover to the Kiribati Government; and if he will make a statement. [5486]

Mr. Hanley: This will be for the Government of Kiribati to decide.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the locations of British high commissioners' residences overseas; which buildings are sited on foreign Government-owned land and sub-leased to the British Government on terms similar to the Kiribati property; and if he will make a statement. [5487]

Mr. Hanley: A list of the locations of British high commissioners' residences is given in "A". A list of those sited on foreign Government-owned land and sub-leased on terms similar to those for the high commissioner's residence in Kiribati is in list "B".

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the British high commissions that have closed in the last five years; how each property has been disposed of; what was the original purchase price and the sale price obtained for each property where appropriate; and if he will make a statement. [5488]

Mr. Hanley: The only high commission to have closed in the last five years is that in Kiribati. The high commission offices have been transferred to the Overseas Development Administration. It is intended that the former high commissioner's residence should be handed over to the Government of Kiribati. Details of the cost of sub-lease purchase and ground rent are in my earlier answer.

HEALTH

NHS

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) general practitioner, (b) consultant (c) junior doctor and (d) nursing midwifery posts were vacant in each of the last five years. [4185]

Mr. Malone: The available information is shown in the table. Information on vacancies for general practitioners is not centrally available. Figures on nursing and midwifery vacancies collected by the Office of Manpower and Economics are available in the annual report of the Review Body for Nursing Staff, Midwives, Health Visitors and Professions Allied to Medicine. Copies of the review body's report are placed in the Library each year.

The process of appointment of a doctor typically involves advertising the post and the selection of the most suitable candidate to fill it. The numbers of vacancies on 30 September will include many posts which happen to be vacant on that day but are in process of being filled.

Consultant vacant posts as at 30 September each year in England (whole-time equivalent)

[2] Vacant post figures for house officers are not collected.

Figures are rounded to the nearest 10, therefore individual grades may not add up to the total.

Smoking (Children)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what new campaigns his Department intends to introduce to alert children to the dangers of smoking. [4724]

Mr. Horam: A new three-year programme aimed at 11 to 15-year olds will be launched next year when the present Health Education Authority campaign comes to an end. Additionally, the current national smoking education campaign is particularly aimed at parents, who are a key influence on children's smoking behaviour.

Pharmacists (Reimbursement)

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the average length of time it takes for the national health service to reimburse pharmacists for the cost of medicines dispensed by them; [4916]

(2) what plans he has to take steps to speed the process whereby pharmacists are reimbursed for medicines that they have prescribed; [4918]

(3) what is his target length of time for the period between a claim for reimbursement by a pharmacist who has dispensed medicine and the payment therefor. [4917]

Mr. Malone: A payment representing approximately 80 per cent. of the amount due is paid on the first day of the month following that in which the prescription is submitted for pricing. The remainder is paid on the first day of the following month.

Pharmacists are currently paid on time, to a timetable originally agreed with the pharmaceutical services negotiating committee. There are no plans to change the arrangement.

Leg Ulcer Bandages

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the expenditure on general practitioner prescribed leg ulcer bandages via the PACT—prescribing analyses and costs—system in 1994 by nation, region and health authority; and what this expenditure is as an expenditure per head of population for each of the regions and health authorities. [4927]

Mr. Malone: It is not possible to identify reliably expenditure on leg ulcer bandages because the bandages used for the treatment of leg ulcers may also be used for other purposes.

Work Experience Trainees

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent guidances he has issued to the NHS on the involvement of work experience trainees in medical procedures. [5593]

Mr. Malone: None. This is a matter for local national health service employers. I understand that the General Medical Council has provided guidance to doctors about delegating care to non-medical staff and students in its booklet, "Good medical practice", which was issued to all doctors this autumn.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of food poisoning from the consumption of food on non-domestic premises have been notified in each year since 1985. [4999]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally. Formal notifications of the total number of cases of food poisoning are published annually in the MB2 series, "Communicable Disease Statistics", copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase public awareness about the causes of food poisoning. [5001]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food have a continuing programme of food hygiene publicity which includes promoting public awareness of the causes of food poisoning.

Advisory material is kept under regular review in the light of developments, including information from research and surveillance, and independent expert advice.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many successful prosecutions for food poisoning against (a) individuals and (b) companies there have been in each of the last five years. [5002]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

Intestinal Diseases

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many cases of (a) cholera, (b) typhoid fever, (c) paratyphoid fever, (d) dysentery and (e) food poisoning were notified in each year from 1985 to 1992; [4998]

(2) if he will make a statement on the incidence of (a) typhoid fever, (b) cholera, (c) paratyphoid fever, (d) dysentery and (e) food poisoning in England since 1985; [5000]

(3) what is his estimate of the costs to the NHS resulting from incidents of food poisoning in each year from 1985 to 1995. [4997]

Vibrio Cholera 01 Faecal Isolates England and Wales 1985–1992 DEP LEP confirmed laboratory reports to CDSC.

Information on paratyphoid fever, dysentery and food poisoning are available in OPCS's MB2 "Series Communicable Disease Statistics", copies of which are available in the Library. The latest available publication is series MB2 No. 20 (1993).

The great majority of cases of cholera, typhoid and paratyphoid fever are due to infections acquired abroad.

The rise in dysentery notifications in 1992 was consistent with the secular pattern of upsurges in incidence every seven to eight years, although the number of cases reported in 1992 was much greater than that reported during the previous upsurge.

No such estimate has been made of the costs to the NHS resulting from incidents of food poisoning.

There is no clear explanation for the increase in food poisoning notifications. On 22 October 1993 my noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State announced the start of a major study of infectious intestinal diseases in England. The purpose of the study is to establish the incidence, sources, causes and socio-economic costs of infectious intestinal disease. This is the most comprehensive study of its type ever attempted. It will involve 70 general practices and more than 20,000 volunteers. The study will be completed in 1996 with results available in 1997.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

European Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the statement of the Secretary of State for the Environment of 21 November 1995, Official Report, column 454, if he will make it his policy to review past legislation in respect of additional burdens imposed by regulations implementing European directives. [5066]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 11 December 1995]: It is the policy in the Department to ensure that we do not gold-plate European directives by the addition of unnecessary burdens when implementing them in the United Kingdom. We will take every opportunity to look at existing legislation in the light of this policy.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research he (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into food treatment methods for destroying the infective agent of BSE prior to consumption. [4936]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 11 December 1995]: The Government's policy on BSE is to ensure that all cattle suspected of suffering from BSE, and specified bovine offals from all cattle which might or might not be incubating the disease, are removed from the human and animal feed chain.

The United Kingdom and European Commission jointly funded an experiment to assess the effectiveness of various rendering systems used within the EU in deactivating the BSE and scrapie agents. The scrapie experiment is still in progress, although the BSE experiment has been completed. It found that some systems failed to inactivate the BSE agent, whereas others did so to a significant extent. The results formed the basis for Commission decision 94/382, which sets standards for rendering ruminant material and prohibits the use of systems which fail significantly to inactivate the BSE agent. These standards are being met by rendering plants in the UK.

Herbicides

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to ban the herbicide bentazole; and if he will make a statement. [5147]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 11 December 1995]: There is no pesticide or pesticide active ingredient by the name of bentazole approved in the United Kingdom. The Government have no plans to ban the approved herbicide active ingredient bentazone.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what resources he will make available to authorities that have been or are to be reorganised on 1 April 1995, 1996 or 1997 for reorganisation costs incurred by them in 1995–96, and if he will make a statement. [3687]

Mr. Curry [pursuant to his reply, 29 November 1995, c. 733–34]: An error occurred in the figures given in the answer. The maximum amounts that it would be appropriate to allocate towards the amount of expenditure by local authorities on transitional costs of reorganisation in 1995–96 are:

American Bullfrog

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to eliminate the threat to indigenous wildlife of the American bullfrog. [4731]

Mr. Clappison: The north American bullfrog is covered by the provisions of section 14 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, which makes it an offence to release, or allow to escape into the wild, any animal which is not ordinarily resident in, and is not a regular visitor to Great Britain.

As a result of a small number of sightings in the wild this summer we are consulting English Nature, our statutory scientific advisers, to identify the scale of any threat. Where sales outlets have been identified, the Department has made known the potential threat of such illegal releases.

Home Improvement Agencies

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans his Department has to increase support for home improvement agencies. [4710]

Mr. Clappison: We are increasing support for home improvement agencies from £4.25 million in 1995–96 to £4.8 million from 1996–97. This will enable grant support to be extended to more agencies across the country and ensure that the advice and help provided by agencies is available to more elderly and disabled people, and people on low incomes.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to introduce more severe penalties for the destruction of sites of special scientific interest. [4727]

Mr. Clappison: None, although we have agreed in principle to consider further powers for requiring the restoration of a site's special interest. The level of fines is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary.

Pensioners (Central Heating)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of pensioner households lack central heating. [4551]

Mr. Clappison: An estimated 19 per cent. of households headed by a person over retirement age lacked central heating in England in 1994–95.

This estimate is from the 1994–95 survey of English housing. Like all estimates from surveys it is liable to sampling variability.

Housing (Elderly and Disabled People)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, what measures he proposes to ensure that private sector building companies provide housing that meets the specific needs of people (a) over the age of 65 years and (b) the disabled. [4552]

Mr. Clappison: The Government consulted earlier this year on proposals to extend the requirements of the building regulations to help disabled people in new dwellings in England and Wales. The proposals are intended to identify a range of reasonable provisions which could be incorporated into new dwellings in order to allow future occupiers:

(a) to be able to invite disabled people to visit them in their own homes; and

(b) to be able to cope better with reducing mobility as people grow older and hence to be able to "stay put" longer in their own homes.

Over 1,000 responses have been received to that consultation, and these are at present being analysed.

Trichloroethylene

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the permitted levels for the occupational exposure level of trichloroethylene following the decision of the Swedish Government to reduce permitted exposure levels. [4550]

Sir Paul Beresford: Trichloroethylene is one of the priority substances being reviewed under the European Union's existing substances regulation. The United Kingdom, through the Health and Safety Executive and the Department of the Environment, leads on this review, which will include a comprehensive risk review of all available scientific data on the human health and environmental effects of trichloroethylene. The conclusion of the review at EU level will help determine whether there is a need to revise occupational exposure limits. Trichloroethylene currently has a maximum exposure limit set under the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1994.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further steps he is taking to promote energy efficiency in industry. [4708]

Mr. Clappison: My right hon. Friend has plans further to encourage the efficient use of energy in the industrial sector through new initiatives such as a strategy for small and medium enterprises which is currently being developed under the energy efficiency best practice programme—EEBPP—and projects planned by the energy saving trust aimed at small businesses. These complement measures aimed at the industrial sector through the EEBPP and the making a corporate commitment campaign.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent estimates his Department has made of the cost of wasted energy through energy inefficient homes, offices and industrial buildings in the United Kingdom. [4716]

Mr. Clappison: In 1994, the last year for which figures are available, energy consumption in the United Kingdom housing, offices and industrial buildings sectors was worth about £17.5 billion. It has been estimated that around 20 per cent. of energy could be saved through investment in cost-effective energy efficiency measures.

Red Squirrels

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposal he has to prevent further erosion of the red squirrel population in north-east England. [4951]

Mr. Clappison: Measures to safeguard the red squirrel population include full protection under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 and a prohibition on the release of grey squirrels to restrict their spread. English Nature's species recovery programme, which aims to achieve long-term sustainable survival of endangered species, includes the red squirrel. The programme features the restocking of small populations.

The Red Alert North-East partnership, which English Nature has part funded, is taking steps to improve status and general awareness of the red squirrel. They are also carrying out research into the sorts of conifer preferred by red squirrels.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he plans to put to the EU Environment Council in Brussels on 18 to 19 December on the harmonisation of EU policies of self-sufficiency for the management and disposal of toxic and radioactive waste. [5014]

Mr. Clappison: There are no plans to discuss EU waste policies at the December Environment Council.

Areas of Tranquillity

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce a definition of areas of tranquillity. [4824]

Mr. Clappison: Ministers have looked with interest at the recent work by the Council for the Protection of Rural England which aims to define tranquil areas. The Government have no plans to introduce such a definition.

Accomodation (Tourist Areas)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment his Department has made of the extent to which business organisations advertise the availability of residential vacancies in hotels, hostels and houses in multiple occupation in tourist areas to attract unemployment benefit claimants; what is the nature of such organisations; and if he will make a statement. [5392]

Mr. Clappison: My Department has not commissioned any research into this topic, but we have received evidence, both from right hon. and hon. Members, and the public, of this practice. The Government have already taken measures to tighten the planning controls on the switch of hotels into hostel use and have announced that we will shortly be bringing forward legislation to improve conditions and management standards in this type of accommodation.

County Hall, London

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the financial arrangements between Whitbread plc and Shirayama Shokusan Ltd. in respect of county hall, London SE1; and if payment of the deferred element of the original purchase price will now be made to the London residuary body. [5311]

Sir Paul Beresford: The arrangements between Shirayama Shokusan and Whitbread are a matter for those two parties. Under the terms of its purchase of the riverside building, Shirayama is required from April 1997 to pay the deferred £10 million at the rate of 50 per cent. of the annual net profit of the hotel and other business activities in the riverside building, and in any event to pay the full sum by 2012, irrespective of any profits.

Water Leakages

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what leakage reduction targets each water company set out in their submissions to the Director General of Water Services at his five-year price review; [4608]

(2) if he will publish, company by company, the leakage reduction target plans submitted in their asset management plans at privatisation. [4609]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 11 December 1995]: Projections for national reductions in leakage were contained in Ofwat's occasional paper 1, "Future levels of demand and supply for water", published in November 1994. Individual company projections of water balances provided for the periodic review were not necessarily on a consistent basis and are commercially confidential.

The Office of Water Services is currently assessing trends in leakage since privatisation on a comparative basis, as part of its contribution to the report for my right hon. Friend on the lessons to be learnt from the drought.

Housing, Kirklees

Mrs. Elizabeth Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the number of new (a) private and (b) social houses commenced in Kirklees for each year since 1974. [4938]

Mr. Clappison: The table shows figures as reported to the Department by Kirklees borough council and the National House Building Council:

Off-shore Conservation

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on (a) the funding of the seabirds and cetaceans branch of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee, and (b) its role in promoting off-shore conservation. [4994]

Mr. Clappison: The seabirds and cetaceans branch of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee is responsible for carrying out the special nature conservation functions of the three country conservation agencies—English Nature, Scottish Natural Heritage and the Countryside Council for Wales—in off-shore areas, and provides advice on the animal species which live there. The budget for the seabirds and cetaceans branch in 1995–96 is £416,000.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of income (a) the Joint Nature Conservation Committee, and (b) its seabirds and cetaceans branch, receive from the oil industry. [4995]

Mr. Clappison: In 1995–96 contributions from the oil industry represent 3.2 per cent. of the overall budget of the JNCC and 28 per cent. of the seabirds and cetacean branch budget.

Housing Association Homes

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what estimate he has made, on the basis of the level of the housing association expenditure announced in the 1995 financial statement, of the number of housing association homes for rent which will be constructed in 1996–97; and what was his estimate of funding levels for 1996–97 on the basis of the 1992 financial statement; [5150]

(2) if he will estimate the funding available for new rented housing association homes in 1996–97 if the expenditure levels in the 1992 autumn statement had been maintained for each local authority in Yorkshire and Humberside; [5157]

(3) what estimate he has of the number of housing association homes for rent which will be built in 1996–97 in each local authority in Yorkshire and Humberside; [5158]

(4) what is the total central Government funding for new rented housing association homes for 1996–97, excluding tenant incentive schemes, do-it-yourself share ownership and major repairs of sales programmes for each local authority in Yorkshire and Humberside. [5159]

Mr. Clappison: The 1992 autumn statement provided indicative funding levels for 1993–94 to 1995–96, and not 1996–97. In 1996–97, funding for the Housing Corporation's approved development programme will be over £1 billion. Together with homes provided from local authority funding for housing associations and other sources, this is expected to provide around 60,600 homes for rent or shared ownership in 1996–97.

Separate figures for rent and the sale and incentive programmes will be available when the Housing Corporation has assessed housing associations' bids for 1996–97 projects and finalised the approved development programme, in late January. The corporation will thereafter publish details of ADP funding allocations in each local authority area.

Housing Subsidies

Mr. Hinchcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the current housing need for under 25-year-olds; what plans he has to meet that need; and if he will make a statement. [5151]

Mr. Clappison: The Government estimate that newly arising need for subsidised housing for all age groups for England lies within a range of 60,000 to 100,000 units a year between 1991 and 2001.

We estimate that Housing Corporation funding over the next three years—1996–97–1998–99—together with homes being provided from other resources, are intended to provide an average of around 60,000 new social lettings a year.

The estimates of newly arising need and the planned new lettings are not subdivided by age group.

Neighbourhood Noise

Mr. Robert Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the Government's response to the consultation on the review of the effectiveness of neighbour noise controls. [5762]

Mr. Clappison: The review of the effectiveness of neighbour noise controls made recommendations relating to the management of local authority noise services; liaison between local authorities and the police; powers of confiscation; and the introduction of a night-time noise offence.

On 27 March this year, we consulted on these recommendations and we received 354 responses. A list of the responses has been placed in the Library of the House: copies of individual responses may be obtained through the Department of the Environment's library.

We have carefully considered the recommendations made by the working party, together with the responses to the consultation exercise and the results of initial trails of the proposed night-time noise offence. The recommendations represent a package of proposals which have a great deal of support and we propose to accept them in full. We believe that they will bring substantial improvements in the four areas identified in the review.

First, as the working party recognised, there is a wide variation in the type of noise complaint service provided by individual authorities. Some authorities provide excellent and very effective services and, of course, the level of service is a matter to be decided locally in terms of what is appropriate for the area taking account of local circumstances and resources. However, many people are concerned by the disparity between levels of service provided by neighbouring authorities with similar levels of problem and uncertainty as to the responsiveness and effectiveness of the service being offered. We therefore propose to encourage local authorities, largely through the dissemination of best practice and professional guidance, to adopt a graduated service standard which will clearly identify the type of noise service which is being offered.

The second area studied by the working party was the role of the police in dealing with noise complaints. There are many examples of excellent liaison locally between environmental health officers and the police. We want to encourage these informal arrangements by supporting the representative bodies in drawing up a code of practice on effective liaison between the agencies.

The police will, of course, continue to have responsibility to support local authority staff where there is a threat to public order, though the judgment about the support required remains an operational matter for the police.

There is overwhelming support for clarification of the current powers under which some authorities temporarily confiscate noise-making equipment. Many respondents to the consultation paper take the view that confiscation has a significant deterrent effect.

The fourth area is the creation of a new offence to deal with excessive noise from domestic premises during the night-time period. Noise makers would be given a warning by a local authority officer to reduce the noise below a measured standard, based on the World Health Organisation guidelines of 35dB(A) as necessary for the restorative process of sleep. Failure to comply with this warning would be a criminal offence. There would be a fixed penalty set initially at £40; alternatively the offender could be prosecuted by the local authority. This new offence would supplement the existing statutory nuisance regime and local authorities would have a choice as to whether to adopt it for their area.

The third and fourth elements of the package will require new legislative powers and we will look for an early opportunity to introduce these. We will also wish to consult further with local authorities on the detailed definition and operation of the new powers and what supporting guidance on their use may be appropriate.

We believe that this package of measures represents a major step forward in tackling the problems of noise nuisance from domestic premises.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to encourage local authorities to become involved in renewable energy projects. [4714]

Mr. Page: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 11 December 1995, Official Report, column 467.

DEFENCE

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made towards cutting energy consumption in Government buildings for which he has responsibility in each year since 1990. [1454]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for State for the Environment on 17 May 1995, Official Report, columns 259–62. The figures for 1994–95, currently being compiled, are not expected to differ significantly from the achievement over the previous three financial years.

Departmental Efficiency Savings

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total efficiency saving implied by his Department's public expenditure settlement. [4874]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him on 4 December, Official Report, column 3.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply of 4 December, Official Report, column 3, if he will provide a breakdown of the £3 billion-worth of savings as a result of his Department's efficiency programme. [4873]

Mr. Soames: A year-by-year breakdown of MOD's efficiency gains since 1988 is set out in figure 6 of the Ministry of Defence departmental report 1995, Cm 2801. Taken together with our current estimate of efficiency gains in 1995–96, the total exceeds £3 billion. Analyses of these efficiency gains have been published in successive departmental reports.

Low Flying

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the dates, locations and circumstances of each of the incidents since 1992 which have led to his Department paying compensation for personal injury involving low-flying aircraft; what is the statutory basis for such payments; and what is his policy on the payment of compensation for personal injury in respect of low-flying incidents. [5184]

Mr. Soames: It would not be appropriate to publish details of individuals' claims, but from the beginning of financial year 1991–92 to the end of 1994–95, a total of £268,000 compensation has been paid in respect of 72 personal injury claims arising from military low-flying activity in the United Kingdom.

The basis on which the Ministry of Defence pays compensation in respect of loss or damage sustained as a result of military low flying was set out in Lord Drumalbyn's statement on 22 November 1971, Official Report, column 838, in another place.

Compensation paid as a result of loss or damage arising from military low-flying activity is calculated on the basis of normal common law principles.

RAF Fast Jet Aircraft

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those manoeuvres in respect of each RAF fast jet aircraft type for which standard operating procedures require the use of reheat. [5174]

Mr. Soames: The manoeuvres for which the Tornado GR1, F3 and Jaguar aircraft require reheat are:

Take Off
Single Engine Overshoot
Low level Abort
Maximum rate turns
Maximum performance climb
Acrobatic manoeuvres in the vertical.

Reheat may also be required during air combat manoeuvring—above 5,000 ft—and in the interests of flight safety.

Tomahawk Missiles

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which weapons ranges will be used for test, practice and exercise firing of the Royal Navy's Tomahawk missiles. [5168]

Mr. Soames: Due to the long range of Tomahawk and the infrastructure required to support Tomahawk missiles firings, the current intention is that test, practice and exercise firings of the Royal Navy's Tomahawk missiles will be conducted on US Tomahawk ranges. The US has ranges on both the west and east coasts of the USA.

Highlands Restricted Area

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many aircraft are permitted to operate in the highlands restricted area at any one time (a) in formation with each other and (b) independently of each other; and what changes have been made to these limits since the establishment of the highlands restricted area. [5178]

Mr. Soames: Regulations do not specify a maximum number of aircraft which are permitted to operate in the highlands restricted area. However, the area is allocated to a single squadron at a time, with that squadron then responsible for ensuring the safe deconfliction of its aircraft. There have been no changes to these regulations since the establishment of the highlands restricted area.

RAF (Overseas Training)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) on how many occasions in (a) 1994 and (b) 1995 Ministry of Defence personnel have visited facilities in Romania to assess their suitability for training use by the Royal Air Force; [5186]

(2) on how many occasions in (a) 1994 and (b) 1995 Ministry of Defence personnel have visited facilities in the Czech Republic to assess their suitability for training use by the Royal Air Force. [5185]

Mr. Soames: Extensive military co-operation now exists with both countries. As yet, there have been no visits to either to assess training opportunities for the Royal Air Force.

Goose Bay

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Royal Air Force Hercules squadrons have sent aircrew to Goose Bay for training in each year since 1992. [5188]

Mr. Soames: No. 47 Squadron sent aircrew to train at Goose Bay in 1994 and 1995.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the dates of deployments to and from Goose Bay of aircrew from each Tornado squadron during 1994 and 1995. [5187]

Mr. Soames: The information is as follows:

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the minimum altitude flown by Royal Air Force Hercules aircraft during training at Goose Bay in each year since 1993. [5189]

Mr. Soames: RAF Hercules aircraft have flown at a minimum separation distance of 250 ft, during training at Goose Bay, in each year since 1993.

Hercules (Crash)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evidence was obtained during the investigation of the RAF Hercules crash on 27 May 1993 as to the possibility of the aircraft having struck the side of the valley before stalling. [5359]

Mr. Soames: Evidence from examination of the aircraft wreckage by the air accidents investigation branch and computer reconstruction of the flight path led the RAF board of inquiry to conclude that the aircraft did not strike the side of the valley before stalling.

Tornado Aircraft

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what speed restrictions have been placed on Tornado aircraft since 7 June 1994; and on what dates have such speed restrictions been lifted. [5413]

Mr. Soames: As a precautionary measure, varying speed limits were imposed on the Tornado fleet in July 1994 to keep engine pressure within acceptable limits. Following modification of the engine, the Tornado F3 speed restrictions were lifted in April 1995.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the circumstances of the damage caused to Tornado GR-1A serial number ZG726 on 17 May. [5175]

Mr. Soames: On 17 May 1995 the aircraft concerned was subject to a birdstrike while flying over the sea north of RAF Lossiemouth. As a precaution, the crew diverted into Lossiemouth, but no damage to the aircraft was found.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures have been introduced to provide a permanent solution to the problems that caused the RB199 engine failure in the Tornado accident of 7 June 1994. [5394]

Mr. Soames: The loss of Tornado ZE809 on 7 June 1994 was caused by a faulty engine seal. A technical solution to the failure has been identified and the intended seal modification is currently being trialled. If these trials are successful, modification of the engine fleet is expected to start in April 1996.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the current standing instructions to the Royal Air Force Tornado F3 crews concerning the execution of (a) air combat manoeuvring and (b) combat air patrols within advisory route airspace. [5167]

Mr. Soames: There are no standing instructions to RAF Tornado F3 aircrew specific to the conduct of air combat manoeuvring and combat air patrols within advisory route airspace. Aircrew are, however, required to follow all normal flight procedures.

Surplus Land

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all his Department's surplus land in Humberside. [5132]

Mr. Soames: The only surplus MOD land currently in disposal in Humberside is 7.42 hectares of tenanted agricultural land at RAF Driffield. Thirteen surplus married quarters are also in disposal.

Harrier GR7 (Crash)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the speed of Harrier GR7 serial number ZD349 at impact on 14 January 1994. [5176]

Mr. Soames: It was 428 knots.

RAF Spadeadam

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to install (a) air combat manoeuvring instrumentation, (b) a television ordnance scoring system or (c) a range measurement and debriefing system at RAF Spadeadam. [5236]

Mr. Soames: There are currently no plans to install air combat instrumentation or a television ordnance scoring system at RAF Spadeadam; consideration is being given to establishing a range instrumentation and debriefing system.

Apache Helicopters

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the effects on the availability of airspace for fixed-wing low-flying training, of requirements for low-flying by the Army Air Corps' Apache helicopters. [5169]

Mr. Soames: No changes to the organisation of the UK low-flying system are currently planned as a result of the introduction into service of the Apache helicopter.

Aircraft (Colours)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those aircraft types which are planned to be painted black to increase their conspicuity at low level. [5179]

Mr. Soames: Hawk and Tucano aircraft are being painted black to increase their conspicuity at low level. Further investigations are being carried out to determine the most appropriate colour schemes for other slower moving training aircraft and gliders.

RAF Aircraft (Availability)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 4 December, Official Report, column 4, if he will list the 44 aircraft which were unavailable for use and in each case the RAF base at which they were deployed. [5062]

Mr. Soames: The details requested are as follows:

1 x Gazelle: RAF Shawbury
2 x Harrier: RAF Laarbruch
2 x Hawk: RAF Valley
2 x Jetstream: RAF Cranwell
1 x Sentry: IAF Aviano, Italy
8 x Tornado: RAF Bruggen
4 x Tornado: RAF Coningsby
4 x Tornado: RAF Cottesmore
5 x Tornado: RAF Leeming
4 x Tornado: RAF Leuchars
10 x Tornado: RAF Lossiemouth
1 x Tornado: RAF Marham.

Only one of these aircraft was deployed on operations. The remaining aircraft were assigned to their usual duties including training. The unavailability of the aircraft did not affect the RAF's ability to meet its operational commitments.

Bosnia

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to answer of 27 November, Official Report, 482–83, if he will provide a breakdown of the British troops who are part of the Bosnian peace implementation force. [5061]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence earlier today.

Submarines

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning the revised submarine code of practice; and if he will place a copy of the code in the Library. [5149]

Mr. Soames: My officials and representatives of the fishing industry have agreed a number of revisions to the code of practice which governs the conduct of dived submarines in waters frequented by fishing vessels. The key amendments reflect the appointment by flag officer submarines of a fisheries liaison officer, and the introduction of a fishing vessel safety ship during exercises which involve both dived submarines and surface naval vessels.

The steady progress made in this important area reflects the greatly improved relations which now exist between the submarine and fishing communities. I am most grateful to the fishermen's representatives for their very constructive and helpful contribution to this process.

The revised code will be promulgated in January 1996 and a copy will be placed in the Library of the House.

Arcadia Land plc

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply of 22 November, Official Report, columns 181–12, if Arcadia Land has shown any interest in purchasing any of his Department's housing stock under his new housing scheme announced on 30 November, Official Report, columns 810–11. [5404]

Mr. Soames: No.

Attack Helicopters (Orders)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his Department's order for attack helicopters will be made in kit form by McDonnell Douglas in America and assembled in Britain. [5529]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Apart from the first eight aircraft which will be manufactured and assembled by McDonnell Douglas, parts of each of the other airframes will be manufactured in kit form by McDonnell Douglas in the US and assembled in Britain. The UK manufactured content of the aircraft will increase as production progresses.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Telesales

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to review the need for controls on cold calling telephone marketing; and what plans the European Commission has on this issue. [4924]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Government see a legitimate role for telesales calls but want to encourage responsible business practices for companies using this technique. Regulation of telesales calls is partly achieved through conditions in telecommunications licences but there is considerable practical difficulty in developing regulations that can be effectively implemented and enforced. The Office of Telecommunications has encouraged the setting up of the telephone preference service, launched last January. It is a voluntary scheme supported by the industry and provides a welcome means for telecommunications subscribers to let it be known if they do not wish to receive such calls.

A common position on the European Commission proposals for a directive on distance selling was agreed on 29 June 1995 which satisfied United Kingdom concerns. However, this text is currently under scrutiny by the European Parliament, which can recommend changes.

I am concerned about a number of the amendments which the European Parliament is considering, which, if implemented, would mean that telephone sales calls would be subject to a statutory prior consent requirement. Such recommendations would be unwelcome to UK business and we are briefing MEPs accordingly.

Arms Exports, Nigeria

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assistance his Department has given to British companies exporting arms to Nigeria since 1993. [2878]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 28 November 1995]: The Department has not been involved in the promotion of any defence sales to Nigeria since 1993.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many export licences for military equipment to Nigeria have been granted in 1995 and into which military category list they fell; in how many cases in which export licences for the export of arms to Nigeria have been granted since 1993, equipment has not yet been delivered to Nigeria; and under which military category list the equipment falls. [5403]

Mr. Oppenheim: Earlier this year detailed statistical analyses of export licences which were granted for military, para-military and security equipment in the calendar years 1993 and 1994 were placed in the Library of the House. These analyses included all countries of destination for which these licences were issued, including Nigeria. Early in 1996, I intend to place in the Library of the House a similar analysis for the full calendar year 1995. I shall write to the hon. Member when this is done. The Department of Trade and Industry, under the export licensing system which it administers, does not require exporters to report to the Department details of shipments of goods which have been so licensed. An export licence is valid for two years from its date of issue.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade against which private sector organisation the Insolvency Service is being benchmarked in the contracting-out of its work; and if he will set out the basis of the comparisons. [5666]

Mr. Oppenheim: As part of the current contracting-out exercise to determine whether the contracting-out of official receivers case administration functions would offer additional value for money, the service has established its own costs for undertaking such work and these will be used as a benchmark against which the bids received will be compared.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the application of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 to staff transfers under contracting out in the Insolvency Service. [5671]

Mr. Oppenheim: It will not be possible to establish whether TUPE applies to the case administration work which may be contacted-out from official receivers offices until bids have been fully evaluated and legal advice sought. However, on present information it is believed that TUPE will apply to any contracting-out.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which Insolvency Service offices throughout the country have been earmarked for benchmarking; and what criteria was used in the evaluation process. [5668]

Mr. Oppenheim: The benchmark cost of undertaking the official receivers case administration function has been established for each official receivers' office.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how benchmarking costs have been formulated for the contracting out of constituent parts of the Insolvency Service; and what is the number of staff involved. [5672]

Mr. Oppenheim: The benchmark cost of each official receiver's office has been taken as the cost of that office undertaking the work offered for tender, to the specified level, in 1996–97. Up to 900 staff would be involved.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the time scale involved in the contracting-out of the Insolvency Service; and if he will make a statement. [5667]

Mr. Oppenheim: It is likely that a decision on the award of contracts will be made at the end of January 1996. If that decision is to proceed with contracting-out it is envisaged that contractors will begin work on 1 May 1996.

Arms Embargo

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which parts and groups of the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994 fall within the European Union embargo on arms, munitions and military equipment sales to Nigeria; and if licences already issued are being withdrawn if the equipment has not yet left the United Kingdom. [4750]

Mr. Oppenheim: The arms embargo applies to all equipment listed in schedule 1, part III, group 1 of the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994. The embargo does not extend to existing contracts for defence equipment for which individual export licences have been issued in accordance with the measures which were agreed and implemented by EU partners in 1993.

Investment

Mr. Macshane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the total amounts of inward and outward investment by year since 1980. [4785]

Mr. Oppenheim: The information is published by the Central Statistical Office in table 1.4 of the United Kingdom balance of payments "Pink Book" for 1995, which is available in the Library of the House.

Official Receiver

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about his proposals to contract out functions of the official receivers; what functions he proposes to contract-out; how many bids he has received; when contracts will be awarded; how many representations he has received on this subject; and how many of these have been in favour of contracting-out. [5257]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 11 December 1995]: No decision to contract-out the case administration work of official receivers has yet been taken; a decision will only be made once the six bids received have been financially and technically evaluated. Contracting-out will proceed only where to do so would represent additional value for money. It is expected that any contracts will be awarded by the end of January 1996.

Since the Government's intention to test the viability of contracting-out was announced on 10 October last year, my Department has received some 232 representations on this matter, the majority of which were from or on behalf of members of Insolvency Service staff and which generally opposed any contracting-out.

Company Procedure

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he expects to introduce legislation for a 28-day moratorium on credits' actions for small firms. [5259]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 11 December 1995]: As I announced in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Blaby (Mr. Robathan) on 27 November 1995, Official Report, columns 429–30, this will be done when parliamentary time allows.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what safeguards he intends to put into practice with regard to the new company voluntary arrangements. [5260]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 11 December 1995]: As I announced in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Blaby on 27 November 1995, Official Report, columns 429–30, the intended legislation will be broadly as described in the recent company voluntary arrangement consultative document which makes reference to various safeguards.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he expects to announce his decision on a requirement to give five days' notice of the intention to appoint an administrative receiver. [5258]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 11 December 1995]: As I announced in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Blaby on 27 November 1995, Official Report, columns 429–30, not until it is clear whether, in response to the invitation I have issued to the British Bankers Association, the banks can come up with a binding code of practice which obviates the need for such a notice.

Radio Communications Agency

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many staff are currently employed by the Radio Communications Agency to evaluate reports from the five type-approvals laboratories with regard to granting CE marks under the Electromagnetic Compatibility Directive. [4699]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 7 December 1995]: Fourteen staff are engaged in the handling of type approval and EMC certification applications which are received from a wide range of manufacturers, dealers and importers.

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will ensure that Scope Marketing (Communications) Ltd., Totnes, has a CE mark granted to it by the Radio Communications Agency before 1 January 1996; [4701]

(2) when he expects Scope Marketing (Communications UK) Ltd., Totnes, to be granted their CE mark by the Radio Communications Agency under the electromagnetic compatibility directive; how many requests have been submitted for this CE mark; and how many CE marks have been granted under the electromagnetic compatibility directive. [4700]

Mr. Taylor [holding answer 7 December 1995]: The Radiocommunications Agency has currently no application from Scope Marketing (Communications UK) Ltd. for an EC-type examination certificate under the Electromagnetic Compatibility Regulations 1992 No. 2372.

The agency has received 96 applications during the period April–November 1995 inclusive and has issued 29 certificates.

European Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to the statement of the Secretary of State for the Environment of 21 November, Official Report, column 454, if he will make it his policy to review past legislation in respect of additional burdens imposed by regulations implementing European directives. [5064]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 11 December 1995]: It is the policy in my Department to ensure that we do not gold-plate European directives by the addition of unnecessary burdens when implementing them in the United Kingdom. We will take every opportunity to look at existing legislation in the light of this policy.

Unlawful Goods and Services

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the products and services which are illegal to purchase for use in the United Kingdom which can be purchased in the UK under European Union law on the basis that they will be used or consumed in other parts of the European Union, with particular reference to obscenity and items considered to be pornographic. [4517]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 7 December 1995]: As for items or services which are obscene or pornographic, there is no obligation on the United Kingdom to permit sale in the UK of any product or service for use in other member states of the European Union, the use of which is illegal here.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what procedures are available to local authorities to determine whether unlawful goods or services purchased in the United Kingdom for use in other parts of the European Union are taken abroad for such purposes. [4518]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 7 December 1995]: The United Kingdom authorities may take action against any products or services on the UK market which are illegal for purchase here, regardless of country of destination.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Identity Cards

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will report on the outcome of the public consultation organised on the proposal to introduce a personal identity card scheme; and if he will indicate the size of the response to the invitation to the public to make submissions. [5402]

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. and learned Friend to the hon. Member for Dartford (Mr. Dunn) on 19 October 1995, Official Report, column 325.

Boards of Prison Visitors

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have sat on boards of prison visitors in each year since 1990; and if he will make a statement. [5366]

Miss Widdecombe: The total number of members of boards of visitors in post on 30 June 1993 was 1,647

30 July 1994 was 1,692

31 July 1995 was 1,702.

Information about the numbers of members of boards from 1990 to 1992 is available only at disproportionate cost.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a breakdown of the number of asylum seekers held in detention in (a) 1979, (b) 1983, (c) 1987 and (d) 1992 by (i) nationality, (ii) gender, (iii) length of detention, (iv) place of detention and (v) immigration status at the time of application; and if he will make a statement. [5368]

Mr. Kirkhope: The available information on the number of asylum seekers detained as at 3 April 1992 is given in table 7.1 of Home Office statistical bulletin, "Asylum Statistics United Kingdom 1990–91", issue 12/92. A copy of this publication is available in the Library. Information on the number of detained asylum seekers for earlier years is not available.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his oral statements on asylum and immigration, Official Report, column 335, if he will list for each of the principal abuses cited the steps he has taken by (a) administrative and (b) by other means to eliminate each one other than by means of pursuing a change in legislation. [4480]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 6 December 1995]: As my right hon. and learned Friend made clear in his statement on 20 November, substantial resources have been invested in our asylum procedures. Further investment as well as procedural and administration improvements are now proposed in addition to our own proposals for primary legislation.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average cost of introducing one closed circuit television camera into a high street area; what is the average annual maintenance cost of one closed circuit television camera; and if he will make a statement. [5370]

Mr. Maclean: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many closed circuit televisions are currently operating in England and Wales in local and national crime prevention programmes; and if he will make a statement. [5369]

Mr. Maclean: Our most recent data indicate that there are over 300 public space closed circuit television systems either currently operating or imminently planned in England and Wales. The figures are currently being updated, however, and the situation is changing rapidly as new systems come on stream.

Drug Trafficking

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) in how many drug trafficking cases in 1994 evidence was given by alleged or confirmed drug users against their drug dealers; and if he will make a statement; [5400]

(2) in how many drug trafficking cases in 1994 the evidence given by alleged or confirmed drug users against their drug dealers was deemed vital in conviction; and if he will make a statement. [5401]

Mr. Sackville: There were 8,635 persons convicted in 1994 by the courts in the United Kingdom for drug trafficking offences. The information requested regarding the nature of evidence given in individual drug trafficking cases is not available.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines exist for the police concerning the employment of drug users in attempts to convict drug dealers; and if he will make a statement. [5371]

Mr. Maclean: None that are specifically geared to drug users and drug dealers, but there are guidelines strictly controlling the use of informants more generally. The management and use of informants in specific operations is a matter for the police force concerned.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many drug trafficking cases were tried by the courts in each year since 1991; and if he will make a statement; [5372]

(2) how many drug trafficking cases were tried and convicted by the courts in each year since 1991; and if he will make a statement. [5373]

Mr. Maclean: The information is given in the table.

Number of defendants proceeded against for drug trafficking offences by type of court 1991 1994

England and Wales

	1991	1992	1993	1994
Magistrates' courts
Prosecutions	8,535	9,971	8,939	10,376
Committed for trial at the Crown Court	5,684	6,407	5,857	6,815
Convictions	1,770	2,000	1,674	1,817
Crown Court
Total for trial	4,661	5,427	5,180	5,641
Convictions	4,094	4,781	4,579	4,969
All courts
Convictions	5,864	6,781	6,253	6,786

Probation Officers

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the social work skills required as essential in respect of the training of probation officers. [5327]

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the core competences for probation officers published by the Home Office in March 1994, a copy of which is in the Library.

Police Station Civilian Staff

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many unpaid civilians are currently working in police stations in each of the local police authorities; and if he will make a statement. [5367]

Mr. Maclean: This information is not collected centrally.

Bull Bars

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 29 November 1995, Official Report, column 781–82 if he will ensure that bull bars are removed from Metropolitan police vehicles. [4937]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 11 December 1995]: This is an operational matter for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis. However, I understand that he is reviewing the use of bull bars on police vehicles following the initiative by the Association of Chief Police Officers referred to in my answer to the hon. Member on 29 November 1995, or, columns 781–82.

Liquor Measures

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated saving to business from the Deregulation (Long Pull) Order 1995; for what reasons; and when it was introduced. [5554]

Mr. Kirkhope: This order, which was introduced on 27 November, repeals the offence—created by the Licensing Act 1921–of supplying more than the amount of intoxicating liquor requested by the customer. The object was to end offering over-measures, then perceived as an unfair trading practice. No direct saving to business has been estimated, but the customer and business may benefit from the freedom to use in confidence a wider range of means of dispensing liquor—for example, serving draught beer by hand pump into "over-size" glasses.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated saving to businesses from the Deregulation (Special Hours Certificates) Order 1996. [5555]

Mr. Kirkhope: Business respondents to the consultation which preceded the order considered that it would produce substantial, although unquantified, financial benefits by reducing planning uncertainty, creating greater investment confidence and promoting tourism.

Metropolitan Police Committee for London

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) who employs the staff of the Metropolitan police committee for London; [5264]

(2) what are the annual costs of the Metropolitan police committee for London. [5265]

Mr. Maclean [holding answers 11 December 1995]: The estimated cost of the Metropolitan police committee for 1995–96 is £399,000. This includes the cost of the secretariat—eight full-time staff and two part-time staff, all seconded from the Home Office—accommodation costs and other expenses.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when and with whom the Metropolitan police committee for London has held public meetings since its inception; [5262]

(2) how the Metropolitan police committee for London will maintain liaison with hon. Members in London; [5266]

(3) what publicity materials are being prepared by the Metropolitan police committee for London; [5268]

(4) how the Metropolitan police committee for London will consult the boroughs' police consultative committee; [5261]

(5) if he will list the organisations and individuals with whom the Metropolitan police committee for London has consulted since its inception. [5263]

Mr. Maclean [holding answers 11 December 1995]: These are all matters for the chairman of the Metropolitan police committee.

However, I understand that since the inception of the Metropolitan police committee the members have met representatives of the Association of London Government, the Outer London Metropolitan Police Consultative Association and the Government office for London, made more than 40 visits to individual police and community consultative groups, lay visitors' panels and community groups, held a meeting for all PCCG chairmen, open to the press and public, and held nine full, formal meetings, and several meetings of sub-committees on remuneration matters and performance indicators.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home department (1) what recommendations the Metropolitan police committee for London has made to the Commissioner of Police for the Metropolis; [5267]

(2) what issues have been discussed by the Metropolitan police committee for London. [5269]

Mr. Maclean [holding answers 11 December 1995]: The duty of the Metropolitan police committee is to advise Ministers on policy and the minutes of their meetings are therefore confidential. I expect the chairman to produce an annual report and I shall place a copy of that in the Library in due course.

Asylum and Immigration Bill

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, in respect of each principal proposal and related amendment contained in his Asylum and Immigration Bill, he will publish a document which lists (a) the principal amendment or addition to annual legislation, (b) related paving amendments, (c) any consequential amendments and (d) the reasons for and the purposes of each change; and if he will circulate the document to each of the bodies referred to in his answer of 28 November 1995, Official Report, column 658. [4464]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 6 December 1995]: Notes on clauses will be made available after Second Reading in the usual way. Copies will be available to interested parties from the Home Office.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what requests he has made to his Metropolitan police advisory committee to (a) consult and (b) report to him on the (i) operational, (ii) financial, (iii) police public relations and (iv) other implications, of the implementation of the measures contained in his Asylum and Immigration Bill; [4466]

(2) when and by what measures he has consulted the main organisations representing police constables concerning his proposals in the Asylum and Immigration Bill. [4468]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 6 December 1995]: A copy of our consultation exercise on the prevention of unauthorised employment has been sent to the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list any legislative link between the list he intends to publish relating to countries whose citizens will not be eligible to apply for political asylum and any list of nations arising from article 100c of the treaty on European Union relating to a common system of visas within the European Union. [4477]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 6 December 1995]: There is no link between the list of countries which will be designated under clause 1 of the Asylum and Immigration Bill as in general not giving rise to a serious risk of persecution and any list of countries under article 100c. Applicants from countries designated under clause 1 of the Bill will still be able to apply for asylum, but there will be a rebuttable presumption against granting asylum. Accelerated appeal procedures will apply, and there will be no further right of appeal from the special adjudicator to the immigration appeal tribunal.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to circulate to (a) hon. Members or (b) other interested bodies and persons the public response of bodies and persons to the proposals and operation of the measures contained in his Asylum and Immigration Bill. [4478]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 6 December 1995]: The result of the consultation exercise that we are conducting on our proposals for the prevention of unauthorised employment will be made known to Parliament. However, it will be for individual organisations to decide whether to make public their responses to this exercise.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will send the text and full details of his Asylum and Immigration Bill to each of the statutory police community consultative committees in the Greater London area, asking for (a) their general observations and (b) their suggestions as to the means of achieving his purposes by alternative means. [4479]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 6 December 1995]: My right hon. and learned Friend made clear in his statement to the House on 20 November why he considered the proposals in the Asylum and Immigration Bill to be necessary. We are happy to make available a copy of the statement and this Bill to any interested body on request and to consider any representations that may be received. Copies of our consultative document on prevention of unauthorised employment have been sent to more than 150 bodies, including the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will be present in Committee during the Standing Committee stages of the Asylum and Immigration Bill. [4481]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 6 December 1995]: The composition of Standing Committee is a matter for the House and will be announced in due course.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations he has conducted with high commissions of any member states of the Commonwealth prior to the publication of his Asylum and Immigration Bill. [4465]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 6 December 1995]: It is not normal practice to consult high commissioners about domestic legislation.

EU Data Protection Directive

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement concerning progress towards the introduction of primary legislation based on the European Union's data protection directive; to what extent manual files are covered in the directive; and if he will make a statement. [5346]

Mr. Sackville: We hope shortly to issue a consultation paper seeking views on the implications of the directive for United Kingdom law. The directive applies to automatically processed records, and to manual records held in "filing systems". The consultation paper is likely to invite views on the scope of this expression.

Night Clubs (Security)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to introduce legislation requiring night clubs to improve security and entry checks in respect of knives and other dangerous weapons; [4780]

(2) how many times in the last year he has met representatives from police authorities to discuss security in night clubs; [4781]

(3) what plans he has to undertake a review of the sale of knives and the rate of knife-related assaults. [4782]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to introduce legislation to require night clubs to improve security and has not discussed this with police authorities. He is currently consulting the Association of Chief Police Officers about the problem of unlawful knife-carrying, and whether the law needs changing. Night club owners may require customers to undergo a search for weapons before entering the premises.

Cheshire Constabulary

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library the weekly orders for the Cheshire constabulary, the titles of which have been sent to him. [4530]

Mr. Maclean: No. The weekly orders are internal documents for the information of the force. Any wider dissemination is a matter for the chief constable.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Emergency Calls, London

Mr. Dicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average response time to 999 calls by the Metropolitan police. [4814]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the Commissioner of the Police of the Metropolis that in the 12-month period to 30 November the average time taken to answer a 999 call was 12 seconds. In the six months to the end of November 1995, the average time for officers to respond to a 999 call graded "immediate" was 12 minutes. The relevant Metropolitan police charter standards are to answer 999 calls within 15 seconds in 80 per cent. of cases—latest statistics give an achievement rate of 84 per cent.—and to arrive at urgent incidents within 12 minutes in 75 per cent of cases, for which latest statistics give an achievement rate of 90 per cent.

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many 999 calls are received by the Metropolitan police each year; and what is the average number per hour. [4815]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the Commissioner of the Police of the Metropolis that in the year 1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995 the Metropolitan police received 1,534,978 calls on the 999 system. Since 1 April this year 1,145,809 999 calls have been logged. This represents an average of 200 such calls received per hour. The other metropolitan forces in England receive between 16 and 50 calls per hour via the 999 system.

National Lottery (Fraudulent Claims)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases involving fraudulent national lottery claims have been successfully brought to court. [4722]

Mr. Sproat: I have been asked to reply.

This is an operational matter for Camelot Group plc. I have therefore asked the Director General of the National Lottery, who is responsible for regulating the operation of the lottery, to write to the hon. Member and to place copies of his response in the Libraries of the House.

SCOTLAND

Munitions Dumped at Sea

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 22 November 1995, Official Report, column 162, what consideration he has given to representations that the scope, extent and nature of the surveys by the Marine Laboratory into dumped munitions and chemicals should be extended; and if he will make a statement. [3515]

Mr. Kynoch: The need for and scope of any further survey will be decided once the full results of the recent Marine Laboratory survey of the Beaufort's dyke area are available.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all statutory instruments in respect of health services from his Departments for the present Parliament. [4065]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As the reply is lengthy, I shall arrange for copies of the list to be placed in the Library of the House.

Loans (NHS Executives)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much has been paid in loans to senior executives of (a) each NHS trust in Scotland and (b) each health board in Scotland in each of the last four financial years; what guidance his Department has issued on this matter; and what procedures his Department has to scrutinise those loans. [4445]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 8 December 1995]: This information is not held centrally. Payment of loans is a matter for the employing authority. For senior executives on national terms and conditions of service, the provisions of the General Whitley Council handbook will apply.

NHS Capital Projects

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of capital projects in the NHS in Scotland begun in 1994–95 and funded outwith the private finance initiative indicating in each case the total capital cost. [4533]

National health service in Scotland major capital projects[1] started during 1994–95

	Value (£ million)
Western Infirmary, Glasgow Beatson oncology centre extension	2.5
Western General, Edinburgh Breast unit out-patients clinic	1.0
Lochmaben community hospital development	1.7
Stirling Royal Infirmary Out-patients department	1.6
Dumfries Royal Infirmary Overcladding	2.7
Monklands hospital day unit and dermatology department	2.8

[1] Net building cost excluding value added tax, professional fees and equipment, in excess of £1 million.

Foreign Ownership of Land

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many titles to land are held by foreign nationals. [4948]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on the number of titles to land in Scotland which are held by foreign nationals is not available. Information on land transactions is, however, available from the Registers of Scotland executive agency.

Hospital Services, Stonehaven

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the responses received by Grampian health board and his Department relating to the proposal to put out to open tender the provision of hospital services at Stonehaven. [4926]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Grampian health board has allowed until 5 pm on 21 December for the registration with it of expressions of interest in providing a new hospital and services for the Kincardineshire area. I will write to the hon. Member after that date. No such responses have been made to the Scottish Office Department of Health.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library copies of the basic information pack in relation to the contract to build new hospital facilities in Stonehaven. [4923]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I am arranging to have a copy of the information pack prepared by Grampian health board placed in the Library.

Edinburgh Royal Infirmary

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library a copy of the briefing documents prepared by the Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh NHS trust and issued to parties interested in tendering for the design, building and financing of the new Edinburgh royal infirmary and the operation of a range of non-clinical support services. [4954]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: All such documents are in the public domain and are normally available on request from the relevant NHS organisation. Because of the volume of documents issued by the Royal Infirmary, the trust has made these available for viewing to any interested party by arrangement at the trust's offices and has expressed a preference, in the interests of economy, not to produce further copies.

Health Board Boundaries

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what proposals he has to make health board boundary changes in Scotland; and what they are; [5116]

(2) what discussions he has had with Argyll and Clyde health board about boundary changes; and if he will make a statement; [5114]

(3) what representations Greater Glasgow health board has made to him about boundary changes. [5115]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government are considering the implications of the establishment of the new unitary local authorities for the boundaries of health boards. Discussions have been held by officials with the health boards whose boundaries are not coterminous with those of the new local authorities to obtain the information necessary to inform our consideration of this matter. The health boards concerned are Greater Glasgow health board, Argyll and Clyde health board and Lanarkshire health board.

Highlands and Islands Enterprise

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library a statement of the specific criteria and objectives for consideration of financial assistance to business to which local enterprise companies in the Highlands and Islands Enterprise area are currently required to work. [4806]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 11 December 1995]: I have arranged for a copy of the guidelines under which my right hon. Friend expects Highlands and Islands Enterprise to operate to be placed in the Library. Under the terms of their contracts with Highlands and Islands Enterprise, local enterprise companies are required to observe the terms of those guidelines. Further guidance is also issued by Highlands and Islands Enterprise and I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member about its guidance to local enterprise companies on the provision of financial assistance to business.

Further Education Colleges

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what research he has commissioned or evaluated into possible over provision of further education in Scotland; and what assessment he has made of the optimum number of further education colleges in Scotland. [5015]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: No specific research has been commissioned on the level of provision of further education in Scotland but colleges' annual development plans and other student numbers and costs information are analysed. This shows that colleges increased student activity by 6 per cent. in 1994–95 and achieved 4 per cent. efficiency gains. Cost information does not suggest that there is an optimum number of colleges in Scotland.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many ambulances equipped for emergency and urgent calls are available to the Scottish Ambulance Service in the Greater Glasgow health board area on each shift on each day of the week. [5082]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Ambulance Service NHS trust's accident and emergency vehicles covering the Greater Glasgow health board area are available as timetabled below:

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish statistics for the numbers of emergency and urgent calls for ambulances in the Greater Glasgow health board area over each of the last five years. [5083]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is as follows:

	Responses
Period	Emergency	Urgent	Total
1990–91	41,756	34,615	76,371
1991–92	45,321	32,435	77,756
1992–93	47,841	32,665	80,506
1993–94	49,227	34,925	84,152

Period	Responses Emergency	Urgent	Total
1994–95	53,003	34,482	87,485

[1] Based on 1 April 1995–30 November 1995.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what (a) citizens charter and (b) other standards he applies to the Scottish Ambulance Service; and how the service has performed in respect of those standards in recent years. [5084]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Ambulance Service NHS trust charter details the time within which the service aims to respond to emergency calls and to urgent calls. These target times and the information on how the trust performed against the targets are set out in the tables below. The target times for responding to emergency calls vary according to population density. The standard for urgent calls is for the service to have collected and delivered the patient to hospital within 15 minutes of the time agreed with the clinician requesting the ambulance.

Emergency calls

Population density	Target—95 per cent. of calls responded to within	Performance 1993–94	1994–95	[1]1995–96
High (>3 people per acre)	14 minutes	90	92	92
Medium (0.5–3 people per acre)	18 minutes	94	96	96
Sparse (<0.5 people per acre)	21 minutes	88	90	91

[1] Based on 1 April to 30 November 1995.

Urgent calls

	Performance against standard 1993–94	1994–95	[1]1995–96
Standard—95 per cent. of patients in hospital within 15 minutes of time agreed with clinician	88	89	91

[1] Based on 1 April to 30 November 1995.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what rights of redress are available to individuals receiving inadequate service from the Scottish Ambulance Service. [5085]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Ambulance Service NHS trust's charter sets out the standards of ambulance services that patients should expect to receive. The charter also advises patients on how to progress any complaint they may have about the service they have received. Where a patient is dissatisfied with the trust's handling of a complaint the charter invites them to contact the Health Service Commissioner for Scotland.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of requests for an urgent ambulance from the Scottish Ambulance Service are met within (a) 15 minutes, (b) 30 minutes, (c) 60 minutes, (d) two hours, (e) three hours, (f) four hours (g) five hours and (h) more than five hours in the Greater Glasgow health board area. [5087]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The standard for urgent calls is for the Scottish Ambulance Service to collect and deliver the patient to hospital within 15 minutes of the time agreed with the clinician requesting the ambulance.

Performance against this standard in the Greater Glasgow health board area is as follows:

Percentage

Period	Performance against 95 per cent. target
1994–95	84

[1] Based on 1 April to 30 November 1995.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the (a) staff, (b) vehicles and (c) financial resources made available to the Scottish Ambulance Service in the Greater Glasgow health board area in each of the last five years. [5088]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of accident and emergency staff, vehicles and the financial resources made available to the Scottish Ambulance Service in the Greater Glasgow health board area has increased steadily during the last five years.

Staff on accident and emergency duties within the area have increased from 156 in 1991–92 to 195 in 1995–96. Accident and emergency vehicles have increased from 27 to 43 during the same period.

The revenue allocation for the provision of the ambulance service in Greater Glasgow has increased from £6.16 million in 1991–92 to £9.884 million in 1995–96, an increase of 43 per cent. in real terms.

Television Licence Fine Defaulters

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) women and (b) men were imprisoned and for how long for their failure to pay a fine for not possessing a television licence in each of the past five years; how many were on income support or in receipt of other social security payments; and if he will make a statement. [5036]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on the number of fine default receptions to prison for failure to pay a fine for not possessing a television licence is not available centrally. Information is available on the number of fine default receptions to prison in respect of all offences under the Wireless Telegraphy Act 1949. Failure to possess a television licence is one such offence. The available information is set out in the table below. The totals represents less than 1 per cent. of all fine default receptions in any one year. Information is not collected centrally on whether individuals received for fine default are in receipt of income support or other social security benefits.

Deportees

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the prisons within which (a) illegal immigrants and (b) other deportees are detained while awaiting deportation to their countries of origin; what was the number of these detainees in each of the prisons concerned in each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement. [4829]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Dr. Norman A. Godman, dated 12 December 1995:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question relating to the prisons within which illegal immigrants and other deportees are detained whilst awaiting deportation to their countries of origin.

Illegal immigrants and persons awaiting deportation can be detained within any penal establishment but are normally held in the nearest local prison.

Information on the number of persons held as illegal immigrants and persons awaiting deportation is not collected in the form requested. Information is, however, collected monthly on the average population of such detainees and the tables below show the average in each of the past four years.

Prisons (Drugs)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many relatives and friends of prisoners and those prisoners on remand were apprehended while attempting to smuggle illegal drugs into prisons in each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement; [4831]

(2) if a person convicted of attempting to smuggle illegal drugs into a prison is allowed to visit prisoners; and if he will make a statement; [4834]

(3) what was the number of (a) prison officers and members of prison staff and (b) other officially approved visitors to prisons who were apprehended while attempting to smuggle illegal drugs into prison in each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement. [4833]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the questions relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Dr. Norman A. Godman, dated 12 December 1995:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your three Questions on drugs in prison, which made particular reference to attempted smuggling by visitors to prisons and prisoners, and by prison staff.

All prisons face the risk of prisoners' visitors seeking to bring illegal drugs into establishments and take a variety of measures to prevent it. Appropriate action is taken where there are reasonable grounds for suspicion, and any visitor who is caught is referred to the police. Records are not, however, maintained centrally of the numbers of arrests or convictions. There are no recorded examples of anyone who could be described as an "officially approved" visitor who has been apprehended while bringing illegal drugs into an establishment. At present, a police investigation is proceeding into allegations that drugs were brought by staff into another.

Civil Servants

Mr. George Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to increase the civil service support for the Scottish Office ministerial team; and what estimate he has of the annual cost of these plans. [5508]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: On the basis of an interim official study, some additions are being made to the support provided to Ministers to reflect a greatly increased work load. This in part reflects my desire to invite groups from all walks of life in Scotland to meet me and to follow up on their suggestions. It also reflects the intensive programme of visits carried out by my Ministers. There will be no additional costs as they will be met from within existing resources.

Staffing will be further reviewed when we have the outcome of a Scottish Office efficiency unit review which is currently under way.

Landfill Tax

Mr. George Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the costs of the new landfill tax to Scottish local authorities over the next three years. [5510]

Mr. Kynoch: The costs of the landfill tax and the offsetting reductions in national insurance employers' contributions will be estimated and taken into account in discussions with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities about the local government finance settlement for 1997–98.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Housing Benefit

12. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the numbers of households in receipt of housing benefit. [3580]

Mr. Lilley: The number of housing benefit recipients in Great Britain at the end of May 1995 stood at 4,734,000.

Long-stay Hospital Care (Benefit)

14. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidance is given to benefit officers when advising clients who are likely to lose their homes through loss of benefit due to long stay hospital care; and if he will make a statement. [3582]

Mr. Roger Evans: Appropriate guidance is provided to all staff on the action to be taken on benefits when a person goes into hospital.

Social Security Expenditure

15. Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current real rate of growth of social security spending and what were the figures in 1992–93. [3584]

Mr. Lilley: Social security spending has grown on average by almost 5 per cent. a year faster than inflation since the welfare state was established. Over the next three years it is expected to grow by just over 1 per cent. a year.

Work Incentives

16. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the place of work incentives in his review of the benefit system. [3585]

Mr. Burt: Throughout my right hon. Friend's review of the social security system, helping people to return to work has been a central focus. Initiatives include the earnings top-up scheme and our planned introduction of a four-week extension of help with housing costs to smooth the transition into work.

We are building on existing work incentives. For example, the child care disregard in family credit and disability working allowance will be increased by £20 per week to £60 next April.

Identity Cards

17. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to introduce a social security card for the payment of benefits. [3586]

Mr. Heald: We intend to phase in the replacement of order books and giros with benefit payment cards starting next year. We estimate this will save £150 million per year in benefit fraud when fully implemented.

Occupational Pensions

18. Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of retiring people currently receive an occupational pension and what the proportion was in 1979; and what was the average value of an occupational pension in 1979 and in the latest year for which figures are available. [3587]

Mr. Heald: In 1979, 55 per cent. of recently retired pensioners were receiving an occupational pension with an average value of £56.10 per week. By 1993, the latest year for which figures are available, the proportion in receipt had risen to 66 per cent. and the average value to £89.10.

Allowances (Disabled People)

19. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will review the recent changes in allowances for people with disabilities. [3588]

Mr. Burt: The only recent change affecting benefits for disabled people was the replacement of sickness and invalidity benefits by incapacity benefit on 13 April. All aspects of the new scheme are very closely monitored to ensure that the benefit goes to those who are genuinely incapable of work.

National Disability Council

20. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to announce the membership of the new National Disability Council. [3589]

Mr. Burt: We expect to announce the membership of the National Disability Council in January 1996.

Smoking

21. Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy to ban smoking in all public buildings under his control. [3590]

Mr. Roger Evans: It is the Department's policy that smoking is not allowed in public reception and interview areas of its offices. In certain other parts of our buildings smoking is prohibited and we also aim to provide a smoke-free environment in working areas.

Departmental Priorities

22. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the current priorities of his Department. [3591]

Mr. Lilley: My priorities are:

to focus benefits on the most needy;

to improve incentives to work and save;

to encourage personal responsibility;

to bear down on fraud and abuse;

to simplify the benefits and contributions systems; and to ensure that the social security system does not outstrip the nation's ability to pay.

Private Pension Funds

23. Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total amount of funds in private pension provision in the United Kingdom; and what is the equivalent figure for the other European Union countries. [3592]

Mr. Heald: In 1992, the total amount of funds in private pension provision in the United Kingdom was around £500 billion. This is more than the equivalent figure of around £480 billion for all the other European Union countries combined.

24. Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total amount of funds in private pension provision in the United Kingdom; and what is the equivalent figure for the two next largest European Union countries. [3593]

Mr. Heald: In 1992, the total amount of funds in private pension provision in the United Kingdom was around £500 billion. This is more than three times the amount in either of the two European Union countries with the next highest level of pension funds—£160 billion for Germany and £140 billion for the Netherlands.

Asylum Seekers

25. Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the effect of his proposals to withdraw benefit from asylum seekers on local authorities. [3594]

Mr. Roger Evans: Local authorities have been consulted on these proposals through their associations. I will consider their responses shortly.

Incentives to Work

26. Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what reforms of the benefit system he is planning to help unemployed people back to work. [3595]

Mr. Roger Evans: Helping people back into work is a key theme of our reforms of benefits for the unemployed. When the jobseeker's allowance is introduced in October it will include a range of incentives to strengthen people's contact with the labour market.

Residential Care Homes

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are his estimates for spending in future years on income support payments to nursing home residents. [3331]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table:

Spending in future years on income support nursing home residents

1997–98	997

Source:

1995 Departmental Report.

Revised estimates will appear in the 1996 departmental report.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if current residents of residential and nursing homes will continue to receive the higher rate of mobility in disability living allowance in 1996–97; if new residents to such establishments in 1996–97 will also receive these benefits; and if he will make a statement. [5483]

Mr. Roger Evans: Yes. There are no plans to change the current arrangements.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security to what extent and in what respects the outcome of claims for incapacity benefit has differed from the estimates made prior to the introduction of the benefit. [3459]

Mr. Burt: The Benefits Agency is controlling the throughput of incapacity benefit claims to ensure that the flow of work does not exceed operational capacity. This controlled take-on of work means that the cases processed so far are unrepresentative of the case load as a whole. It is not yet possible to draw any firm conclusions about the effectiveness of the incapacity benefit in meeting the objectives set prior to its introduction.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of those in receipt of invalidity benefit in the Merthyr benefit area have been subjected to the review under the new incapacity benefit rules; how many of those were (a) men and (b) women; and how many have had invalidity benefit withdrawn. [4101]

Mr. Burt: Information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Second-tier Pensions

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to encourage provision of second-tier pensions for non-working women; and if he will make a statement. [3488]

Mr. Heald: The state earnings-related pension legislation provides, for people reaching pension age after April 1999, that regulations may be made to enhance the SERPS entitlement of those who are precluded from regular employment by caring responsibilities at home. It is intended that regulations will be brought forward at the appropriate time.

War Pensions

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many former service personnel are currently receiving war pensions due to exposure to asbestos in disability bands (a) 20 per cent. to 39 per cent., (b) 40 per cent. to 60 per cent., (c) 60 per cent., and (d) 100 per cent; [4811]

(2) how many former service personnel are currently receiving a war pension attributable to exposure to asbestos. [4812]

(3) what is the total annual payment to former service personnel in war pensions due to exposure to asbestos. [4813]

Mr. Heald: The information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the saving to public funds in each of the last five financial years which has resulted from not disregarding war pensions in assessment of income support payments. [5639]

Mr. Roger Evans: The figures set out in the table represent the additional costs which would have been incurred over the five-year period.

Cost of fully disregarding war pensions in the assessment of income support

Financial year	Cost £ million
1991–92	30
1992–93	20
1993–94	35
1994–95	30
1995–96	35

Estimates are rounded to the nearest £5 million and relate to the benefit levels in that financial year.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current policy of the Child Support Agency to improve the level of return of assessment forms; and what changes are planned in the near future. [3521]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. John Spellar, dated 11 December 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State about improving the return of Maintenance Application Forms (MAFs) and Maintenance Enquiry Forms (MEFs).

Due to the nature of child support work, and varying levels of co-operation, reaching a full maintenance assessment will, on average, involve a period of months rather than weeks. There may be a degree of non-cooperation from some absent parents and several parties are often involved, some of whose financial circumstances can be complex. Some delays can be attributed to the time taken by clients to return their forms despite our reminders, but we are currently aiming to complete the maintenance assessment process within 26 weeks for 60% of cases and are progressing well towards this target.

The Agency has already introduced a number of operational improvements to ensure that straightforward cases, in which both parents co-operate with the Agency, are cleared quickly. In addition, greater use is now made of staff working in local child support offices to deal with the collection and verification of information, and the resolution of queries and discrepancies.

Where an absent parent fails to return the MEF even after receiving reminders, the Agency can make an Interim Maintenance Assessment (IMA), usually of a higher amount than that made where an absent parent returns a fully completed form. This often prompts either the return of the completed MEF or at least some co-operation. If necessary though an IMA can be collected by a Deduction from Earnings Order (DEO) direct from the absent parent's salary. Imposing a DEO in these circumstances often results in the completed MEF being returned and for many months we have placed increased emphasis on this work.

A legislative change was introduced in April 1995 to encourage absent parents to co-operate with the Agency. Liability for child maintenance normally commences from the date a MEF is issued, but if the completed MEF is returned within 4 weeks, the absent parent's liability will be 8 weeks after MEF issue.

Finally we are making increasing use of the telephone as a point of contact with clients to follow up enquiries and resolve queries. This way of doing business is proving to be very effective in speeding up all our processes, not least the return of MAFs and MEFs.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for each month since April 1993 the amount of maintenance owed to the Child Support Agency indicating the amount attributable to (a) interim maintenance assessments and (b) full maintenance assessments. [4095]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 11 December 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency maintenance assessments.

You asked for a list by month since April 1993 of the amount of maintenance owed to the Agency. Although it is not currently possible to provide this breakdown, overall figures show that as at the end of September 1995, maintenance amounting to £738.4 million was owed to the Agency. This figure includes arrears amounting to £100 million that have been rescheduled for future payment. Approximately 65% of the total (£480 million) related to interim maintenance assessments.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update his answer of 18 May 1995, Official Report, column 331, to the hon. Member for Newham, North-East (Mr. Timms) concerning maintenance assessments, by reference to the most recent data from the case load of the Child Support Agency. [4172]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 11 December 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency maintenance assessments.

You asked for an update concerning child support maintenance assessments. The figures you require are provided in the tables shown on the attached pages and are based on a 5% sample of cases carried out on 31 May 1995. The table showing the benefit status of parents with care and absent parents has been amended to reflect fully assessed cases only, which gives a more accurate picture.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the definition of maintenance assessment accuracy referred to in paragraph 28 of the memorandum CS 7 submitted to the Social Security Select Committee in October 1995. [4094]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 11 December 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency maintenance assessment accuracy.

You asked for a statement on the definition of maintenance assessment accuracy referred to in paragraph 28 of the memorandum CS 7 submitted to the Social Security Committee in October 1995.

For a case to be accurate the assessment must be for the correct cash value and the effective date must be correct. Then number of cases found to be accurate is expressed as a proportion of the total number of cases checked in the period.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 24 November, Official Report, column 362, on maintenance arrears, in what circumstances provisional debt due to interim assessments may be disregarded. [4167]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 11 December 1995:

I am replying to your Parliament Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency assessments.

You asked in what circumstances provisional debt due to interim maintenance assessments may be disregarded. There are no circumstances in which IMA debt may be disregarded but one of the measures introduced in the April 1995 policy changes has a bearing on this issue.

In April 1995 the provision was introduced, that once an absent parent had provided the information required by a Child Support Officer to make a full maintenance assessment, liability under a previous IMA would revert to the FMA rate, which would normally be lower. This measure should show an improvement in compliance for IMAs and assist absent parents in meeting their regular maintenance payment liabilities.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the number of staff dismissed from the Child Support Agency since its launch, indicating which month they were dismissed and which office they worked in. [4078]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 11 December 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the number of staff dismissed from the Child Support Agency.

Staff can be dismissed for a variety of reasons ranging from failure to meet the required performance standards during probation, through inefficiency and up to misconduct.

The figures for staff dismissed for straight forward inefficiency are not readily available as they are not collated centrally.

The figures for staff dismissed for misconduct and the month in which the dismissal occurred are as follows:

Month	Number of dismissals
May 1993	1
January 1994	1
April 1994	1
August 1994	2
September 1994	2
October 1994	1
February 1995	4
March 1995	3
April 1995	2
October 1995	1

To protect the identity of staff dismissed for misconduct, the office location has not been included in this response. I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the temporary employment agencies with which the Child Support Agency has an arrangement. [4079]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 11 December 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the temporary employment agencies with which the Child Support Agency has an arrangement.

The Child Support Agency does not directly have arrangements with temporary employment agencies. Temporary employment agencies are only used to acquire casual secretarial staff on an ad hoc basis in Central London.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give a breakdown of the amounts of weekly maintenance demanded by the Child Support Agency using the same bandings as in his reply of 20 April 1995, Official Report, column 280, (a) in cases where there are arrears and (b) in cases where there are no arrears. [4108]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 11 December 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency assessments.

You asked for a breakdown of the rates of weekly maintenance demanded by the Child Support Agency in cases where there are arrears and cases where there are no arrears.

The breakdown of the rates of weekly maintenance are shown in the table attached. Figures have been obtained from a 5% sample of Child Support Agency cases undertaken by Analytical Services Division on our behalf carried out on 31 May 1995.

Unfortunately it is not possible to determine which of these assessments in specific bands are in arrears. However a scan of the Child Support Computer System on 15 September 1995 showed that there are 161,309 cases in arrears to some degree.

Social Security Policy

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the effect on inequality in the United Kingdom of his Government's social security policies. [3583]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Analysis by the Central Statistical Office, based on the family expenditure survey, shows that the tax and benefits systems help to reduce the gap between the bottom and top fifth of the income distribution—by more than four fifths of its original size.

Lone Parents

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are paid allowances as single parents; what sum of money is involved; and if he will make a statement. [3941]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Total expenditure on lone parents in 1994–95 is estimated to be £9.1 billion and is expected to reach £9.4 billion in 1995–96.

The numbers of lone parents receiving income support, family credit and one-parent benefit are shown in the table:

Benefit:	Case load at May 1994:
Income support	1,039,000
One-parent benefit	911,000
Family credit	236,000

Notes:

1. Expenditure includes spending on income-related benefits, child benefit, one-parent benefit, and maternity benefit.

2. For income support single parents have been defined as those persons in receipt of the lone parent premium. For family credit the numbers are single persons with dependants.

3. Numbers have been rounded to the nearest thousand.

4. Some people may receive more than one of the named benefits.

Benefit Reform

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what reforms of the benefit system he is planning to help unemployed people back to work. [5037]

Mr. Roger Evans: Throughout the review of the social security system, helping people to return to work has been a central focus. In July, we increased family credit by £10 per week for those working 30 hours or more. Last month, we published the draft rules for the earnings top-up scheme, to help those without dependent children. From April 1996 we are smoothing the transition into work through a four-week extension of housing costs. We are encouraging employers to take on those who have been unemployed for more than two years, by introducing a "holiday" from national insurance contributions. We are now building on existing work incentives. In his statement on the Budget, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced an increase of £20 in the child care disregard in family credit and disability working allowance. Child care costs to the value of £60 will now be disregarded during benefit assessments. Helping people to return to work is the best way to improve people's living standards and the best way to improve their prospects.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been spent on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices for which he is now responsible in each of the last three years. [5568]

Mr. Willetts: Expenditure on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in each of the last three years is included in the running cost expenditure of the Cabinet Office which is published in the annual report.

Internet

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when the final report of the Central Computing and Telecommunications Agency study of ethical issues and the Internet will be (a) published and (b) placed in the Library. [4787]

Mr. Willetts: The report by CCTA, the Government centre for information systems, on the ethical issues of information super-highways is currently being completed. I expect it to be published early in January. A copy will be placed in the Library of the House as soon as it is available.

Charter Scheme

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what objectives for more efficient service and customer care have been (a) set and (b) met, by the citizens charter office and the office of charter mark (i) to date and (ii) for the future; [5541]

(2) what targets have been set for the time taken to answer incoming phone calls by the citizens charter office and the office of charter mark. [5540]

Mr. Willetts: The unit is currently working to the following targets;

> (a) to reply to letters from members of the public within 15 working days of receiving them. Between 1 January 1995 and 30 September 1995, 85 per cent. of all replies have met this standard. Of those replies not needing information from other services to provide a full reply, 92 per cent. were sent within 15 working days.
> (b) to answer telephone calls within five rings. A monitoring exercise, covering the week 30 October 1995 to 3 November 1995, found that calls to the unit were answered, on average, on six rings.

The unit is consulting its customer on whether these targets should be formalised into a charter standard statement.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what is his estimate of the total cost to date of running the charter mark publications line, number 0345 223242; what date was this line established; and how many calls there have been since establishment. [5532]

Mr. Willetts: The citizens charter publication line on 0345 22 32 42 was set up on the 16 March 1994. Calls are charged at a local rate.

	Publications Line 16 March 1994 current
Total calls	£13,811
Set-up costs	£1,880.00
Operating costs	£46,161.62

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what is the total annual cost of running the charter mark assessment office. [5534]

Mr. Willets: The cost of the assessment for the 1995 charter mark scheme is estimated to be approximately £500,000. A final figure is not yet available.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what is his estimate of the cost of running the charter mark seminars inquiry line since it was established; what was the date on which this line was established; what is the total number of calls to this line to date; and what is the budgeted expenditure for this line in 1995–96 and 1996–97. [5536]

Mr. Willetts: The charter mark seminar inquiry line is provided by the contractor, Glasgow and Associates, and was set up on 9 January 1995 as part of the overall seminar package. There are no separate running costs for this service. So far, 5,000 calls have been received.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what was the cost of producing, publishing and distributing the rural services check list, devised by the charter unit. [5538]

Mr. Willetts: The cost of producing, publishing and distributing the rural services check list was £4,756.99, excluding VAT and postage.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many complaints about the offices of the citizens charter and charter mark have been received since their establishment; and what procedures to handle complaints have been established. [5539]

Mr. Willetts: Complaints about the workings of the charter unit have historically been dealt with under the procedures for handling general correspondence; they have not been recorded separately. Between April 1992, when records were started, and September 1995 the unit dealt with 7,802 letters. A very small number of these have involved complaints about the unit.

Formal complaints handling guidance was drawn up for the unit in April 1995. This sets out action to be taken on receiving a complaint, targets for responding, and procedures for review.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many copies of "Charter News" are printed and distributed quarterly and at what total cost; and what is the total cumulative cost to date of producing, printing and distributing this publication. [5531]

Mr. Willetts: In its present format, 88,000 copies of "Charter News" are printed and distributed quarterly at an average total cost of £78,299. The total cumulative cost to date of producing, printing and distributing nine issues of "Charter News" has been £623,277.17.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what is his estimate of the total cost to date of seminars held in relation to charter mark; what is the estimated cost for such seminars in 1995–96 and 1996–97; and what is his estimate of the number of such seminars which will be held. [5535]

Mr. Willetts: Before 1994, informal charter mark seminars were held at the charter unit—the cost of these is not recorded. The total cost of the 13 seminars held for organisations interested in applying for charter mark in 1994–95 was £153,000. The estimated cost of the 19 seminars being held in 1995–96 is £200,000. We plan to hold about 20 charter mark seminars in 1996–97 at a total estimated cost of £200,000.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what was the date on which the citizens charter mark office was established; what assessment of its performance has been made to date; and if he will publish the assessment. [5537]

Mr. Willetts: The charter mark award scheme is administered by the citizens charter unit in the Cabinet Office, Office of Public Service. The charter unit was set up in July 1991 and the first charter mark awards were made in October 1992.

The performance of the charter unit can be measured by an increase in the number of applications of more than 250 per cent., and the increase in the number of winners of more than 600 per cent. In 1995, 1,824 people attended charter mark seminars around the country.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list each publication produced in relation to the charter mark scheme since its establishment; and if he will estimate for each publication the total cost of production , printing and distribution. [5533]

Mr. Willetts: The publication are as follows:

	Cost
1995
Guide for Applicants 1995 What is Charter Mark? Why You Should Apply	£31,000
Charter Mark Awards 1995: The Winners	£40,000
Make Your Mark (public nomination leaflet)	£123,000

The costs shown relate to printing and production. Total distribution costs for the year amounted to £132,000, reflecting the distribution of leaflets as part of the public nomination campaign.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what has been the total annual cost of running the citizens charter unit since its establishment; and what is the projected annual cost for each year until 1998–99; [5543]

(2) what assessment of value for money has been made of the citizens charter unit; and if he will publish it. [5542]

Mr. Willetts: The annual cost of running the citizens charter unit since its establishment and the projected annual cost for each year until 1998–99 are set out in the following table:

Financial year	Cost £
1991–92	700,000
1992–93	2,300,000
1993–94	5,100,000
1994–95	3,800,000
1995–96[1]	4,600,000
1996–97[1]	4,600,000
1997–98[1]	4,100,000
1998–99[1]	4,100,000

[1] Projected expenditure.

More than £250 billion of taxpayers' money was spent on public services last year. The charter programme aims to improve public services by raising standards, making them more responsive to their users, and by encouraging them to apply for the charter mark scheme. The results are reported annually in the charter White Paper.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 13 December 1995

TREASURY

National Security

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what occasions certificates under section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 were signed by members of his Department; for how long each certificate was valid; and in what circumstances taxation records may be used for the purpose of safeguarding national security. [5342]

Mr. Jack: No such certificates have been issued.

No circumstances have so far been identified in which taxation records may be used for the purpose of safeguarding national security.

Inland Revenue Personnel

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many civil service personnel in the Inland Revenue department are located in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland. [5104]

Mr. Jack: (a) 50,510, (b) 4,391, (c) 6,253 and (d) 1,179 respectively on 1 November 1995, the most recent date for which figures are available.

Treasury Personnel

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Treasury personnel are located in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland, (d) Northern Ireland. [5109]

Mrs. Angela Knight: All 1,049 Treasury staff, as at 1 November, excluding those on loan or secondment to other Government Departments or the private sector, are located in England.

Diesel Duty (Buses)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what evaluation he has made of the likely impact of the increase of duty on diesel fuel in his Budget statement on (a) the prices of bus transport to consumers and (b) the frequency of local bus services. [5305]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Bus operators are able to claim a rebate on the majority of their diesel duty payments. Depending on the price paid for diesel the actual duty element is likely to represent less than 20 per cent. of the total VAT-exclusive price. Prior to the Budget net duty payments represented around 3 per cent. of total costs for bus operators: this will rise to around 3.5 to 4 per cent. post-Budget. The effect of these cost increases on fares and frequency of bus services will depend on the decisions of individual operators.

Unemployment

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people were registered unemployed in the month of August in (1) Scarborough and Whitby, (2) Torquay, (3) Weston-super-Mare, (4) Bournemouth, (5) Brighton, (6) Eastbourne, (7) Newquay, (8) Ramsgate, (9) Margate, (10) Southend-on-Sea, (11) Clacton, (12) Great Yarmouth, (13) Barmouth, (14) Pwllheli, (15) Llandudno, (16) Rhyl, (17) Prestatyn, (18) Southport, (19) Lytham St. Annes, (20) Fleetwood, (21) Morecambe, (22) Skegness, (23) Cleethorpes, (24) Minehead, (25) Worthing, (26) Bridlington, (27) Bognor Regis, (28) Torbay, (29) Polperro, (30) Brixham, (31) Falmouth, (32) St. Ives, (33 Ilfracombe, (34) Burnham-on-Sea, (35) Weymouth and (36) Herne bay in the years 1987 to 1995 inclusive. [5193]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Information on the numbers of people claimant unemployed in local area can be obtained from the Nomis database accessed by the House of Commons Library.

Motability (VAT)

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what VAT regulations apply to the Motability scheme; and to what extent these differ from the regulations applying to the commercial sector (a) before and (b) after August. [5094]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The VAT Act 1994, schedule 8 group 12, items 14 and 15, allows zero-rating for the leasing of unused motor vehicles for a period of not less than three years to disabled people who are in receipt of the mobility component of the disability living allowance, and for the first sale of those vehicles after the end of the leasing period. Neither of these zero rates are restricted to supplies by Motability. Any car-leasing business whose sales consist predominantly of the provision of vehicles in these circumstances may take advantage of these zero rates, although to date only Motability has done so.

Motor dealers have always been able to buy back ex-lease cars from Motability free of VAT. In August, however, the VAT regulations governing the sale of second-hand motor vehicles changed. This has potential repercussions both for Motability and for the second-hand car market generally and so Customs and Excise will shortly be entering into discussions with all the interested parties.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department spent on official hospitality in 1994–95 and the financial year to date; and what is the 1995–96 projected budget for official hospitality. [5582]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Expenditure by Her Majesty's Treasury on official hospitality in 1994–95 was £84,249 and in year 1995–96 to 30 November, £53,665. The projected budget for 1995–96 is £92,000.

Taxpayer Statistics

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the number and percentage of taxpayers in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Wales and (c) Mid-Glamorgan who pay at (i) 25 per cent. rate and (ii) 40 per cent. rates of tax; and what will be the change on the numbers paying at these rates following the Budget. [5427]

Mr. Jack: It is not possible to provide a reliable breakdown below United Kingdom level for 1996–97, either before or after the Budget. The latest available information covers 1993–94 and is given in the table.

	Top rate of tax of 25 per cent		Top rate of tax of 40 per cent
	Thousands	Percentage[1]	Thousands	Percentage[1]
United Kingdom[2]	18,090	72.3	1,740	7.0
Wales	799	71.8	48	4.4
Mid Glamorgan	140	71.5	7	3.7

[1] of total number of taxpayers including those liable to only the lower rate of tax.

[2] includes members of HM Forces, the Merchant Navy, civil servants serving overseas and non-residents liable to UK tax who cannot be allocated to regions.

EU Rebate

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the value of the rebate from the European Union for each of the years since it was negotiated. [5499]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The value of the United Kingdom's abatement for the financial years 1985–86 to 1994–95, along with the Government's latest estimate for the year 1995–96, is set out in the table.

UK abatement

Year	£million
1985–86	823
1986–87	1,343
1987–88	1,137
1988–89	1,600
1989–90	1,317
1990–91	1,838
1991–92	2,428
1992–93	1,993
1993–94	2,350
1994–95	1,648
1995–96	1,564

Occupational Pensions

Mr. Denham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if tax exemption of compensation for those who were wrongly advised to (a) opt out, (b) transfer from and (c) not join an occupational pension scheme extends to those who were similarly advised in respect of SERPS; and if he will make a statement. [5441]

Mr. Jack: The Securities and Investments Board is currently carrying out research into past sales of personal pensions for contracting out of SERPS. SIB is due to publish the results of this research early next year and it would not be appropriate to anticipate SIB's recommendations.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Electricity

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to revise the electricity licence exemptions regime, in the light of the planned liberalisation of the electricity supply market in 1998. [6301]

Mr. Eggar: The electricity industry and the Director General of the Electricity Supply are working towards full supply competition on 1 April 1998, bringing choice of supplier for all customers. As part of that process, we need to review the exemptions to the electricity licence regime.

I want to examine the scope for promoting competition in electricity generation and supply by reducing the regulatory burden placed on small generators, own generators, and small suppliers, while taking account of the interests of customers.

We have today issued a consultation paper which seeks the views of all interested parties by 22 January 1996. I propose to announce my preliminary conclusions in February 1996. Copies of the consultation paper have been placed in the Library of the House.

Burma

Mr. Alton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what account his Department takes of human rights of abuses, with special reference to the Karen people, in the provision of assistance to British investors in Burma. [5119]

Mr. Nelson: My Department's efforts have focused primarily on making United Kingdom companies aware of trade opportunities that exist in Burma, rather than investment. We continue to adopt a cautious approach with regard to investment in Burma.

We remain acutely concerned about the continued abuse of human rights in Burma, including against the Karen and other ethnic groups. We and other EU partners have made it clear to the ruling military regime that normalisation of our relations depends on progress in key areas, including human rights.

Mr. Alton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what activities his Department has (a) undertaken and (b) will be undertaking to assist British investment in Burma from November 1995 to February 1996. [5118]

Mr. Nelson: During the period November 1995–February 1996, my Department will continue to provide information relating to investment issues in Burma and the associated risks. We held a trade awareness seminar, "An Introduction to Burma," at the London chamber of commerce on 5 December 1995. This will be followed by a trade mission to Burma from 26 February to 1 March 1996. However, both events are focused primarily on the trade opportunities that may exist for British companies, rather than investment where we continue to take a cautious line.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much his Department spent on official hospitality in 1994–95 and the financial year to date; and what is the 1995–96 projected budget for official hospitality. [5578]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The cost of hospitality for my Department, including agencies, was £712,309 in 1994–95. Figures for this financial year up to 30 November are £411,047.

The projected budget for 1995–96 is £734,657.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what occasions certificates under section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 were signed by a member of his Department; for how long each certificate was valid; and in what circumstances personal details held by his Department can be used for the purpose of safeguarding national security. [5336]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Inquiries completed in the time available indicate that no exemptions under section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 have been signed by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade in the period since the reply by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Industry and Energy, 15 April 1993, Official Report, column 707. If my further inquiries reveal that exemptions have been authorised during that period I will respond further to the hon. Member. In accordance with section 27 of the Act, a certificate may be signed by the President if an exemption is required for the purpose of safeguarding national security. Such a certificate is conclusive evidence of the fact that exemption is, or at any time was, required.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many staff in his Department worked in other Departments before June 1995; and if he will list the departments. [4818]

Mr. John M. Taylor: A total of 1,735 members of my staff worked in other Departments before June 1995. The cost of listing the individual Departments in which these staff worked could be provided only at disproportionate expense.

Internet

Mr. French: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had with his international counterparts about the possibility of joint action being taken to regulate the content of material disseminated via the Internet. [5474]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The nature of the Internet means that measures to control the content of disseminated material are difficult to devise, although normal national laws apply just as much to the Internet as to other media. Before any action to regulate the Internet specifically could be contemplated, either national or international, it would be vital to have a clear view of precisely what measures would be effective. My Department, the Home Office and others are monitoring the development of the Internet, and assessing the feasibility of various measures, including self-regulation. We also compare notes with other Governments as appropriate.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. French: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what estimate he has made of the cost to the industry of the practice of the cloning of mobile telephones; [5473]

(2) what measures his Department is taking to combat the cloning of mobile telephones; [5524]

(3) what plans he has to amend the Telecomunications Act 1984 in order to outlaw the cloning of mobile telephones. [5471]

Mr. Ian Taylor: On 24 October, Official Report, column 549, I announced the recommendations of the industry and Government study group on mobile telephone fraud. One of the main recommendations was that the Government should consider extending the range of offences under section 42 of the Telecommunications Act 1984 so that it would cover the possession or supply of equipment capable of use in the course of or in connection with the current section 42 offence of dishonestly obtaining telecommunication services with intent to avoid payment. I am considering this recommendation carefully.

Figures regarding the cost to the industry of the practice of cloning mobile telephones are not held by my Department. The mobile telecommunications industry did provide some estimates for the overall scale of mobile telephone phone fraud as part of its contribution to the work of the industry and Government study group mobile telephone fraud. These have been reproduced in the briefing paper, which has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Electronic Mail

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps are being taken to regulate the electronic mail services to protect (a) British commercial interests and (b) the consumer. [5459]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Electronic mail is an important example of the new services which are increasingly available as the information society develops. The effective exploitation of these services and opportunities is important for the competitiveness of British business. My Department monitors developments in this area to assess whether there is any need for action to protect consumers or the interests of companies.

There are several groups helping to develop electronic mail services with which the Department is in contact.

Timeshare Directive

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he has taken to implement the 1994 timeshare directive. [4845]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I plan to initiate a consultation exercise on the implementation of the timeshare directive in the near future.

Foam-filled Furniture

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what steps he is taking to prevent foam-filled furniture which does not comply with the

1988 regulations being imported into the United Kingdom; [4844]

(2) if he will launch an advertising campaign to publicise the exemption from the provisions of the Furniture and furnishings Fire Safety Regulations of upholstered furniture manufactured before 1990; [4842]

(3) what measures his Department will take to deter second-hand furniture dealers from illegally selling foam-filled furniture. [4843]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Day-to-day responsibility for enforcing a wide range of consumer safety legislation, including the Furniture and Furnishings (Fire) (Safety) Regulations 1988, as amended, rests with local authority trading standard departments under a statutory duty set out under the Consumer Protection Act 1987. Trading standards departments have all the necessary powers to act against importers and second-hand traders who supply furniture that does not comply with the regulations. Since 1990 these departments have initiated 274 cases against suppliers of illegal furniture and have been involved in nearly 1,500 enforcement actions. There continues to be a high level of enforcement activity which my Department fully supports. The penalties for non-compliance with the furniture regulations are a £5,000 fine, a maximum of six months in prison or both, for each offence.

Following the making of this legislation my Department publicised detailed guidance for all suppliers of domestic upholstered furniture, setting out the requirements of the regulations in simple terms and explaining the penalties for failure to comply. The Department also published a guidance booklet for consumers explaining the new requirements and emphasising the precautions that should continue to be taken to reduce household furniture fires. Typically, more than 1,500 copies of this guide are circulated throughout the country each month by the Department and local authority trading standards departments. I believe these measures are sufficient to acquaint consumers with the requirements of the regulations and the dangers of unsafe furniture.

In the year the furniture regulations were made nearly 5,000 fires involving furniture killed 247 people. Since 1988 these numbers have fallen dramatically, with 146 people killed in 3,746 fires in 1993. My Department believes that the regulations will continue to play a major part in helping to further reduce these numbers.

Minimum Wage

Mr. MacShane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which countries outside the European Union have minimum wage legislation. [3894]

Mr. John M. Taylor: This information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Metrication

Mr. Marlow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many shops sell goods by weight (a) in metric units only and (b) in metric and other units; and what proportion this represents of (i) all shops and (ii) all goods sold. [4820]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Approximately 62,000 shops sell by weight. The Department has no information on the proportion of shops selling in metric units compared with the proportion selling in metric and other units.

Gas and Electricity Regulation

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had with the regulators of the gas and electricity industries over changes to the regulatory regime to take account of recent profit and dividend announcements; and if he will make a statement. [5678]

Mr. John M. Taylor: No such discussions have taken place. We believe the regulatory regime is working well.

Energy Division Personnel

Mr. Salmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received concerning the transfer of (a) personnel and (b) responsibilities from his Department's energy division to Scotland; and what plans he has to make such a transfer. [5112]

Mr. Eggar: In addition to those representations made by the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan, I have received representations from Grampian regional council and the city of Aberdeen district council about the scope for transferring additional jobs and responsibilities to the Department of Trade and Industry's oil and gas office in Aberdeen. A review of the current staffing position is taking place and, once this is complete, I will meet with representatives of the councils.

Estimated Funding

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list immediately the figures that determined the estimated funding of the (a) National Association of Citizens' Advice Bureaux, (b) National Consumer Council, (c) Gas Consumer Council, (d) Post Office Users National Council, (e) POAC, (f) Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents, (g) DTI's consumer safety programme and (h) Central Rail Users Consultative Committee for each year from 1993–94 at 1995 prices, together with the percentage change (i) per annum and (ii) since 1993–94, including the 1996–97 figure following the November Budget statement. [5283]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 12 December 1995]: The information in respect of the earlier years was provided in the reply which I gave to the hon. Member on 6 December 1995, Official Report, columns 290–91. I shall provide the figures for the 1996–97 allocations when they have been determined.

Share Ownership

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Derby, South, (Mrs. Beckett) Official Report, 5 December 1995, columns 154–56, what percentage of total shares and individually owned shares were represented by personal equity plans for the years referred to. [5636]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I have been asked to reply.

Table A shows the available information on the percentage of total shares held in personal equity plans.

Table A: Personal equity plans[1] as a percentage of total shares in issue[2]

	Percentage of Total Shares
December 1987	0.1
December 1988	0.2
April 1990	0.5
April 1991	0.8
April 1992	1.2
April 1993	1.8
April 1994	2.6

[1] Personal equity plans were introduced on 1 January.

[2] Fully listed UK companies on the London stock exchange. The available data for PEPs includes investments in other companies as well as those listed on the London stock exchange. These other investments are thought to be very small by comparison and are unlikely to have a significant affect on the figures given in the table.

Estimates of the proportion of shares held by individuals in PEPs are not available because of timing differences in when data are collected. Table B shows the available information.

Table B

Shares held directly by individuals	£ million	Shares held directly by individuals in PEPs	£ million

December 1994	154,600	April 1993	5,710
		April 1994	6,870

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to the answer to the right hon. Member for Derby, South of 5 December, Official Report, columns 154–56, if he will state all holdings of personal equity plans with special reference to such holdings in the form of bonds, collective investments such as unit trusts or collective funds or directly held shares treated as individually owned shares. [5635]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to figure 4 of the publication "Share Ownership, A report on the Ownership of Shares at 31 December 1994", which is available in the House of Commons Library.

ENVIRONMENT

Rating Appeals

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Enviornment how many rating appeals in England and Wales have been outstanding for more than one year; and what percentage they represent of the total number of rating proposals (a) submitted and still outstanding and (b) submitted in total. [4789]

Sir Paul Beresford: A total of 35,877 appeals against the 1973, the 1990 and the 1995 rating lists have now been outstanding in England and Wales for more than one year. This represents 8.3 per cent. of all rating proposals still outstanding, and 0.6 per cent. of the total number of proposals received.

Valuation Tribunals

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average length of time taken from the acknowledgement of a proposal to a valuation tribunal hearing date. [4790]

Sir Paul Beresford: This information is not collected.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Enviornment what is the average cost of a valuation tribunal hearing per case in England and Wales. [4792]

Sir Paul Beresford: Details of the costs of individual tribunal hearings are not held centrally. In 1994–95, expenditure on the tribunal service in England and Wales amounted to £11.6 million, and 807,500 appeals transmitted to valuation tribunals were cleared.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of valuation tribunal members are aged over 70 years. [4794]

Sir Paul Beresford: This information is not held by my Department. However, no one who has attained the age of 72 years may be a member of a valuation tribunal.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to ensure that each case heard before valuation tribunals is presided over by a single paid chartered surveyor or lawyer who is an expert in property rating. [4788]

Sir Paul Beresford: None.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to introduce a statutory time limit for the listing of a valuation tribunal hearing in respect of rating appeals. [4791]

Sir Paul Beresford: None. Valuation tribunals are independent judicial bodies.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many hours training per annum valuation tribunal members receive and what is the average cost of training per tribunal member in England and Wales. [4793]

Sir Paul Beresford: Around £100,000 is provided annually from my Department's votes for training by the National Committee of Valuation Tribunals for the 2,500 members in England, and £12,000 by the Welsh Office for the 285 members in Wales. Other training is also carried out by the individual tribunals themselves. No information is collected on the number of hours training provided.

Tyne and Wear Development Corporation

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussion his Department has held with (a) the Tyne and Wear development corporation and (b) the city of Sunderland regarding the transfer and hand over of Tyne and Wear development corporation functions in preparation for 1997. [5121]

Sir Paul Beresford: I discussed issues relating to the wind-up of the Tyne and Wear development corporation at the corporation's corporate plan meeting earlier this year.

The Department has not held formal discussions with the city of Sunderland about the wind up of the urban development corporation in 1998.

Battersea Power Station

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last received a report on the condition of Battersea power station; what assessment his Department has made of the current state of the building's fabric; and what applications have been received for demolition. [5313]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Secretary of State for the Environment has received no reports on the condition of the building. The building is regularly inspected by English Heritage and was last inspected on 9 November 1995. I understand that the next visit is scheduled for 5 January next year. We have received no applications for demolition.

Brent Irish Centre

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library a copy of the district audit public interest report on the Brent Irish centre; and if he will issue guidance to the council on the status of this report. [5595]

Sir Paul Beresford: This is not a matter for Government, but for the London borough of Brent and its appointed auditor. It is the council's responsibility to make copies of the report available, under section 18A of the Local Government Finance Act 1991. Sections 5 and 6 of the Local Government Act 1992 specify the follow-up action that Brent council must take.

Home Owners

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the number of home owners who can expect to (a) be in negative equity and (b) to lose their homes through repossession in 1996; and if he will make a statement. [4862]

Mr. Clappison: The Government do not make such forecasts. Homeowners will continue to benefit from the range of Government policies which have brought about sustainable falls in interest rates and have made home ownership more affordable than for many years.

Dioxins

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action (a) has been taken and (b) is proposed by (i) Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, (ii) the National Rivers Authority and (iii) the local waste regulation authority in respect of each dioxin hot spot. [5462]

Mr. Clappison: Where dioxins are released all the agencies work together within the proper legal framework to protect the environment.

PRIME MINISTER

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the compliance of the Security Service, GCHQ and the Intelligence Service with their obligations in respect of registration under the Data Protection Act 1984; if all personal data held by them are processed for the purpose of safeguarding national security; what external legal advice he has taken on whether registration of personal data is necessary; and if he will make a statement. [5314]

The Prime Minister: Under section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984, personal data are exempt from the provisions of part II and sections 21 to 24 of the Act if the exemption is required for the purpose of safeguarding national security. Personal data are held and processed by the Security Service, GCHQ and the secret intelligence service in accordance with their respective functions set out in the Security Services Act 1989 and the Intelligence Services Act 1994. Such data are exempt from the relevant provisions of the Data Protection Act in order to safeguard national security.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister how much his Department spent on official hospitality in 1994–95 and the financial year to date; and what is the 1995–96 projected budget for official hospitality. [5575]

The Prime Minister: The figure is £36,000 in 1994–95. No projection has yet been made of the outturn for 1995–96.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much has been spent on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in his Department in each of the last three years. [5574]

Mr. Hanley: Expenditure on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in each of the last three years is included in the running cost expenditure of my Department, which is published in the annual report.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much his Department spent on official hospitality in 1994–95 and the financial year to date; and what is the 1995–96 projected budget for official hospitality. [5588]

Mr. Hanley: In 1994–95 the cost of hospitality, which is included in the running cost budget for this Department—Diplomatic Wing and ODA—was £7,680,934. The Natural Resources Institute, an agency of the ODA, spent £3,386; and Wilton Park, an agency of the diplomatic wing, spent £455.

Figures for the financial year to date—1 April to 31 October—are £4,759,666 for this Department; £2,770 for the Natural Resources Institute; and £562 for Wilton Park.

The projected budget for this Department for 1995–96 is around £8.2 million; for the Natural Resources Institute, £5,000; and for Wilton Park, £1,000.

European Convention on Human Rights

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what decisions the Government have taken about the United Kingdom's adherence to the European convention on human rights. [6004]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We have decided to renew for five years our acceptance of the two optional articles of the European convention on human rights which expires for the United Kingdom on 13 January 1996. Individuals will therefore continue to be able to bring cases under article 25—the right of individual petition—and the Government will continue to accept the jurisdiction of the European Court of Human Rights under Article 46. The United Kingdom first accepted these articles in 1966. They have both been renewed for consecutive periods of five years for the last 20 years.

As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister informed the House on 7 December, Official Report, column 488, the Government were not satisfied with some of the rulings made under the convention by the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg. We will initiate discussions with other members of the Council of Europe, and representatives of its institutions, to change and improve the way in which the convention system works. We are developing specific proposals to achieve this, which we believe will be widely welcomed.

Entry Clearance (Right of Appeal)

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of Sate for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he intends to lay before the House the 1994 report by the independent monitor of refusal of entry clearance where there is no right of appeal. [6249]

Mr. Hanley: Copies of Dame Elizabeth's 1994 report have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. I welcome the report, which confirms Dame Elizabeth's satisfaction with the decisions taken by the entry clearance officers in the overwhelming majority of the cases she monitored. We will consider carefully Dame Elizabeth's recommendations, some of which are already being implemented.

SCOTLAND

Relocation, Stirling

Mrs. Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) agencies and (b) non-departmental public bodies have been located in Stirling in the last two years; on what dates decisions were taken to set up those bodies in these locations; and if he will list those agencies and non-departmental public bodies which will locate in Stirling in the next 12 months. [2801]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None of the agencies for which my right hon. Friend is responsible have located in Stirling in the last two years and there are no plans for any to do so in the next 12 months.

Of his non-departmental public bodies—NDPBs—the Red Deer Commission, which has its headquarters in Inverness, set up a small sub-office in Stirling in April 1995. The decision to do this was taken in the autumn of last year.

Over the next 12 months the Scottish further education unit will move to Stirling and the headquarters of the new Scottish Environment Protection Agency will be located there. These decisions were made following a thorough assessment of a range of options, and taking account of the policy in "Scotland in the Union" (Cm 2225) to seek opportunities for dispersal of NDPBs from Edinburgh and Glasgow where it is operationally acceptable and financially attractive to do so. They were recommended to Ministers by the bodies concerned and were approved in June and October 1995 respectively. Plans to locate the Scottish children's reporter administration in Stirling are currently under consideration.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many assisted places are available for pupils in Scottish schools in the current session; and what is the average level of assistance. [3921]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Independent schools participating in the assisted places scheme in Scotland are each allocated an amount of fee remission grant for each school session, within which they may provide assistance to individual pupils, in accordance with the rules of the scheme. Some schools have yet to submit grant claims for the 1995–96 school session, so the information requested is not yet available. However, provisional figures indicate that just over 3,000 pupils are currently receiving assistance, at an estimated average cost of around £3,550 per pupil.

I shall write to the hon. Member when the information she has requested is available.

Exports

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received regarding the diversification of Scottish export markets; and if he will make a statement. [5113]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I am delighted that the most recent figures show that Scotland's manufactured exports have grown in the last year by 23.6 per cent. to reach an all-time record of £14.3 billion, which is more than £40,000 per manufacturing employee. That is more than the United Kingdom as a whole and more than Japan.

I am aware, however, that we could do even better. Scottish Trade International, the export arm of my Department recently took the lead in the production of an export development strategy for Scotland. This strategy, "The International Challenge" launched in September, sets out the steps that need to be taken to strengthen export support arrangements throughout Scotland. A key part of that strategy is a commitment to achieving greater diversification of Scotland's exporting industries. Special programmes will be devised to maximise exports from eight priority manufacturing and service sectors. The strategy also sets out priority markets where there are particular opportunities for Scottish companies.

I have arranged for a copy of "the International Challenge" to be sent to the hon. Member.

Scottish Homes, Inverclyde

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will allow the Inverclyde district council to take over the ownership and management of those houses in the Inverclyde district which, at the moment, are owned by Scottish Homes if the tenants indicate, by way of an independently controlled ballot, that it is their wish to become tenants of the council; and if he will make a statement. [4830]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Existing arrangements do not preclude local authorities from bidding for Scottish Homes stock. However, this would be allowed only in exceptional circumstances which do not compromise the objective of promoting diversity of choice in rented housing stock.

My right hon. Friend announced on 30 November that he will consider this policy further in response to representations from the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities. His decision will be announced in due course.

Students (Allowances)

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes are planned in the student support and tuition fee arrangements for Scottish domiciled students in session 1996–97. [6378]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: I am publishing today the main rates of maintenance allowances payable under the students' allowances scheme and the postgraduate students' allowances scheme, including rates for those courses which do not attract student loans, together with the rates for the various supplementary allowances payable to both undergraduate and vocational postgraduate award holders.

The support available to undergraduate students in 1996–97 through the main rates of maintenance grant and loan, taken together, will be 2.6 per cent. higher than in 1995–96, thus maintaining its value in real terms. Postgraduate maintenance grants and supplementary allowances will be increased by a similar amount.

Tuition fees will continue to be reimbursed to institutions through the student support system on behalf of eligible students. The undergraduate rates will be the same as in 1995–96.

These changes are consistent with those for England and Wales announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment. Details have been placed in the Library.

"The Way Ahead"

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the study of Scottish Natural Heritage which was announced in May. [6421]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Ministers received the report of the study group in October and I will make arrangements for copies to be placed in the Library of the House.

The Government have noted that since Scottish Natural Heritage was established in 1992 it has been asked to undertake a range of new initiatives. Amongst these have been implementation of the EC Habitats Directive, initiatives on biodiversity arising out of agreements reached at Rio and programmes commissioned by the Secretary of State for Scotland on the Cairngorms, Loch Lomond and environmental education. Taken together, this new work means that the balance of SNH's work has moved, from that envisaged by the Government when they published their plans for SNH in "The Way Ahead" in 1990. I have accepted the main proposal of the report of the study group that a new "The Way Ahead" should be prepared, taking account of changes in natural heritage priorities and levels of Government grant-in-aid likely to be available. I have asked Scottish Office and SNH officials to draft a new version of "The Way Ahead" to take us to the millennium. This will be published in the first half of next year. At that time we shall also announce our full response to the report.

Overseas Companies

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the sums his Department has paid out for each financial year since 1979–80 to companies establishing in Scotland; if he will indicate the number and names of companies involved; and what proportion this represented of the total awards made under regional selective assistance. [1716]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 23 November 1995]: Data are not collected in precisely this form. Data are, however, collected on regional selective assistance offered to overseas-owned firms—this will include some overseas-owned firms reinvesting in their existing operations in Scotland and will not include firms owned elsewhere in the United Kingdom which are starting or reinvesting operations in Scotland. Details on individual firms are affected by commercial confidentiality but the other data which the hon. Member seeks are given, for overseas-owned firms, in the table:

Year	Number of offers accepted	Of which overseas owned firms	Value of offers accepted (£ million)	Of which overseas owned firms	Percentage of offers to overseas owned firms by value
1979–80	186	25	32.2	14.9	46

This table refers to the year in which an offer was originally accepted.

Year of initial offer	Number of offers	Of which number accepted
1979–80	199	191
1980–81	177	164
1981–82	134	127

1992–93	214	199
1993–94	259	243
1994–95	246	238

Notes:

1. This table refers to the year in which an initial offer was made. Its subsequent acceptance may have taken place in a subsequent year.
2. In the most recent years, some offers are still outstanding and have not yet been accepted or declined by the company.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many applications for regional selective assistance have been (a) rejected by his Department and (b) accepted for each financial year since 1979–80; and what proportion those rejected represent of the total number of applications received; [1718]

(2) how many offers of regional selective assistance were made to companies by his Department in each financial year since 1979–80; and how many of these were fully accepted by the companies involved. [1733]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 23 November 1995]: The data which the hon. Member seeks are set out in the tables.

Year of application	Number of applications received	Number subsequently rejected	Percentage of applications rejected	Number of applications progressing to acceptance
1979–80	300	9	3.0	241
1980–81	97	2	2.1	74
1981–82	189	9	4.8	145

1991–92	203	12	5.9	162
1992–93	246	10	4.1	198
1993–94	307	21	6.8	248
1994–95	307	25	8.1	247

Notes:

1. This table refers to the year in which the application was received. Its acceptance or rejection may have taken place in a subsequent year.
2. As well as being accepted or rejected, applications may be withdrawn by the company before an offer is made, or, if an offer is made, it may be declined by the company.
3. In the most recent years, some offers are still outstanding and have not yet been accepted or declined by the company.
4. Application forms are normally only made available when prior discussion with the company concerned has indicated a reasonable possibility that an application will be successful.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many jobs his Department estimates have been (a) safeguarded and (b) created in Scotland in each financial year since 1979–80 by payments made under regional selective assistance; [1725]

(2) how much money was paid to companies operating within each new town in Scotland in regional selective assistance for each year since 1979–80; and how many companies were in receipt of this assistance; [1732]

(3) if he will list (a) the amounts spent on regional selective assistance by his Department, (b) the number of projects covered by his expenditure, (c) the average amount awarded for each application for regional selective assistance, (d) the amounts of money recouped by the Scottish Office in regional selective assistance, (e) the number of companies from which money was recouped and (f) the names of the companies from which the Scottish Office recouped this money for each financial year since 1979–80. [1735]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 23 November 1995]: As regards money recouped from companies which had been in receipt of regional selective assistance, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 2 May 1995, Official Report, column 580.

Statistics on regional selective assistance are not collected by reference to new town boundaries.

The other information which the hon. Member seeks is set out in the table.

1994–95	246	113.0	12,319	3,965	0.459	77.1

Notes:

1. This table refers to the year in which an offer was initially accepted. The final column relates to total expenditure in the year in question, some of which will arise from offers accepted in earlier years.

2. Where jobs are forecast to be created or safeguarded, that will be over the lifetime of the project, typically 3 to 5 years. Experience indicates that fewer jobs are actually created or safeguarded than originally forecast: around two-thirds. Actual grant payments are set in line with the actual number of jobs created or safeguarded and the level of investment actually undertaken.

Red Deer

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many estates have killed (a) fewer than five, (b) six to 10, (c) 11 to 50, (d) 51 to 100, (e) 101 to 250, (f) 251 to 500 and (g) more than 500 red deer in each year from 1990 to 1995. [2077]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 30 November 1995]: The information is set out in the table and has been supplied by the Red Deer Commission from its records.

Number of red deer killed	Number of estates 1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95

NORTHERN IRELAND

Traffic Schemes

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if his Department followed the 1986 SACTRA recommendation in respect of the breaking down of large traffic schemes at the Balmoral Avenue junction. [2512]

Mr. Moss: In view of the scale and nature of the scheme proposed at the Balmoral Avenue junction, the SACTRA report is not considered to be relevant.

Schools Statistics

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the number of (a) secondary and (b) primary schools broken down by (i) size and (ii) sex and indicating if they are controlled, maintained or voluntary school status in each of the education and library board areas in Northern Ireland. [4510]

Unemployment

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has to change the 21-hour rule in Northern Ireland; and what impact they will have on the freedom to study. [4511]

Mr. Moss: Currently, certain unemployed people, broadly those who have been unemployed for three months or more in the last six and who are undertaking part-time study of not more than 21 hours a week, are treated as available for work provided that they are prepared to give their course up if a job becomes available. This is in addition to the provisions that allow claimants to study part-time provided they remain available for and are actively seeking employment.

Under the jobseeker's allowance in Northern Ireland, there will be similar rules designed to allow the same number of unemployed people to study part-time while claiming benefits as do so now.

Stormont

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what work has been carried out to restore the parliamentary debating chamber at Stormont since the fire. [5681]

Mr. Moss: The complete restoration of the chamber forms part of the major refurbishment of Parliament buildings which began on 1 November, but work to the chamber itself has not yet started. Archive material from the time of the construction of the building has been assembled and wood for the re-panelling of the walls has been purchased. Work is scheduled for completion in January 1997.

Mr. Gerard Burns

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements have been made to appoint a successor to Mrs. McIvor in the offices of the Northern Ireland Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration and Northern Ireland Commissioner for Complaints. [6302]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Her Majesty the Queen has approved the appointment of Mr. Gerard Burns to succeed Mrs. McIvor in both posts, with effect from 1 February 1996.

Crown Solicitor's Office

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to carry out a prior options study of the functions of the Crown Solicitor's office and when he expects to have a report of the study. [6303]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I have arranged for a prior option study of the functions of the Crown Solicitor's office to be carried out and for the findings of the study to be reported not later than 28 February 1996.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Photocopiers

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Chairman of the Administrative Committee when the new contract for paper for photocopiers in the Palace of Westminster was agreed; how many faults have been reported since then; how many were reported in the equivalent period under the old contract; and if he will make a statement. [4118]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: The introduction of recycled copier paper was agreed as part of an overall review of stationery carried out by the Administration Committee in November 1994. It as introduced in all areas by May 1995 when stocks of existing paper had been used up.

It is not possible to isolate faults specifically due to paper handling. However, the number of faults reported up to May 1995 averaged 41 per month and from May to July averaged 38 per month.

Members' Handbook

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee when the next edition of the Members' handbook will be published; and if it will be available (a) in disk form and (b) on the PDVN. [5891]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: The "Members' Handbook", which was first issued in February 1992, is being revised and the new edition should be available to Members immediately after the Christmas Adjournment. The text will be available also on the PDVN by way of the parliamentary electronic document distribution service—PEDDS—and, on request, on disk in WordPerfect 6.1.

State Opening (Photographer)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee on what basis a photographer was present in the Gallery during the State Opening of Parliament. [4964]

Mr. Michael J. Martin [holding answer 8 December 1995]: The Central Office of Information contract photographer was present in the Gallery to enable photographs of the State Opening used in official and educational publications to be brought up to date.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Khat

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration he has given to making khat a controlled substance. [5550]

Mr. Sackville: The khat plant is not subject to control under the United Nations drug conventions. In 1988, the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs advised that there was no evidence of a social problem arising from its misuse such as to justify bringing the plant under the controls of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971. We have no current plan to bring khat under legislative controls, but will continue to monitor the position.

Identity Cards

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many submissions he has received in respect of the introduction of identity cards which expressed specific concerns as to the impact such cards would have on the black and ethnic minority communities; [5385]

(2) when he expects his Department to provide a full report on the public consultation on the subject of identity cards; and how his Department now intends to proceed on this issue. [5386]

Mr. Sackville: We received some 3,000 replies to the Green Paper on identity cards and I intend to make available shortly a summary of the responses. The Government have yet to decide whether an identity card should be introduced and, if so, what type of identity card scheme to propose.

Entertainment Licences

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what legislation applies in respect of places of entertainment which wish to remain open over midnight on Sunday 24 December and Sunday 31 December 1995; and in what circumstances such venues may remain open. [5353]

Mr. Kirkhope: The following legislation applies every day of the year. The Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982 and the London Government Act 1963 require places providing music and dancing to be subject to licences which may stipulate the times, including beyond midnight, during which music and dancing may take place. The Licensing Act 1964 provides for the holders of such licences to the granted special hours certificates, or special orders of exemption, both of which may permit the sale of alcohol beyond midnight. In addition, the Sunday Observance Act 1780 prohibits charging for admission to a public dance held on a Sunday.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what occasions certificates under section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 were signed by his Department; for how long each certificate was valid; what procedures apply when such certificates are signed; by what methods he is notified whenever a Cabinet Minister signs a certificate; and if he will make a statement. [5348]

Mr. Sackville: I am aware of none as far as the Home Office is concerned. Disclosing details of such certificates would itself not be in the interest of national security.

National Security

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the procedures for liaison with other Government departments in respect of access to personal details held by them in cases involving the signing of warrants or certificates for the purpose of safeguarding national security. [5349]

Mr. Howard: No.

Volunteers (Screening)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking to help voluntary groups check the suitability of volunteers working with children. [5134]

Mr. Sackville: In 1993, the Home Office, in consultation with the Department of Health, the Department of Education and Employment and the Welsh Office, published a code of practice entitled "Safe from Harm". This offers voluntary organisations with responsibility for the care and welfare of children a guide to good policy and practice in areas such as the recruitment, supervision and management of staff and volunteers. Voluntary organisations can also check directly with the Department of Health's consultancy service whether the names of any of their staff or volunteers appear on lists held by the service of people who have ceased to be employed in circumstances which show that they would be unsuitable to work with children in the future. The consultancy service will also carry out a check against "List 99" which is a list compiled by the Department of Education and Employment of people who, because of previous misconduct, are barred from employment in any school or further educational establishment if their job would involve them in regular contact with children. Further safeguards will be proposed in our forthcoming White Paper on access to criminal records for employment vetting purposes.

Second Passport Holders

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on the number of British nationals in possession of a second, foreign passport. [5447]

Mr. Kirkhope: United Kingdom passports are issued to British citizens, including those who have been naturalised, British dependent territories citizens, British nationals (overseas), British overseas citizens, British subjects and British protected persons. In some cases, passports may be issued to persons who also hold the nationality of another country but information about dual nationality and second passports is not collected.

Private Security Firms

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give details of the European regulations which preclude the Home Department excluding from Home Office contracts private security firms which are not members of self-regulatory bodies. [138]

Mr. Howard: The European Community procurement directives lay down criteria to be followed in the award of Government contracts. All three directives for works, for supplies and for services contain provisions to ensure fair treatment and to prevent discrimination in the selection of Government contractors.

In the case of private security service contracts, article 3(2) of the European Community services directives, 92/50/EEC applies. This states that > "Contracting authorities shall ensure that there is no discrimination between different service providers".

The exclusion of a tenderer who was not a member of a voluntary self-regulatory body would discriminate against those who, for whatever reason, were unable, or unwilling to join such a body. Membership of such a body would not, in itself, indicate the ability of the tenderer satisfactorily to perform the service and there are other non-discriminatory means of ensuring that they can do so, for example by requiring them to demonstrate in their tender the necessary experience or technical ability to perform the contract.

Illegal Entrants (Employment)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many employers were convicted of employing an illegal entrant to the United Kingdom in each of the last five years; what was the average fine imposed on such employers; how many employers were found not guilty; and how such illegal employment was detected. [2760]

Mr. Kirkhope [holding answer 28 November 1995]: It is not an offence under current legislation for an employer to employ an illegal entrant.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the statement of the Secretary of State for Environment of 21 November, Official Report, column 454, if he will make it his policy to review past legislation in respect of additional burdens imposed by regulations implementing European directives. [5067]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 11 December 1995]: It is my Department's policy not to make regulations implementing European directives which add to the burdens imposed by such directives. We keep existing legislation under review in the light of this policy.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Mr. MacLaughlan (War Pension)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how long Mr. MacLaughlan of Newcastle has waited for a war pension appeal hearing, appeal ref. 94/3544/A; why his appeal hearings for October and December 1995 were cancelled; what factors have led to the delay in holding a further hearing; and when he can expect his appeal to be heard. [5490]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Mr. MacLaughlan appealed against his interim assessment to the War Pensions Agency on 2 June 1992. The appeal papers were received by the pensions appeal tribunals on 8 November 1994. Due to an unexpected and unprecedented growth in appeals, waiting times have lengthened and although measures have been put in hand to accommodate the sustained increase, it is unlikely that Mr. MacLaughlan's appeal will be heard until February or March 1996. No record can be found of an earlier date having been allocated and cancelled.

Court Service Accountability

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he is taking to ensure that companies successful in bidding for contracts for support work in the Court Service will maintain the accountability of the present system. [4718]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Barry Sheerman, dated 13 December 1995:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about how private companies bidding to carry out support work for the Court Service will maintain the accountability of the present system.

Any contractor to the Court Service will be required to deliver services to the specified standard. The Court Service will retain full control of its polices and strategies.

Probate Offices

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment his Department has made of the impact on the public of the closure of probate offices in respect of access to the facilities offered by these officers. [4733]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Barry Sheerman, dated 13 December 1995:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the impact of the proposed closure of probate officers.

The recommendation that a number of Probate Sub-Registries and Probate Offices should close follows a review of the locations in England and Wales where a probate service is offered to personal applicants. This review considered, amongst other things, the effect of closure on travelling distances and the cost for individuals applying for probate.

Both local and national consultation on the proposals is currently taking place and consideration will be given to the comments received before I send a recommendation to the Parliamentary Secretary and Lord Chancellor.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what savings he estimates will accure from the closure of probate offices. [4721]

Mr. Evans: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Barry Sheerman dated 13 December 1995:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the savings that will accrue from the proposed closure of probate offices.

Closure of the Probate Sub-Registries would result in savings of accommodation staff and other associated running costs.

Similarly, closure of Probate Offices (caller offices used for the purpose of interviewing personal applicants only) would result in savings of ad hoc accommodation costs and reduce the amount of court staff time spent travelling to Probate Offices.

Overall savings would be approximately £400,000 per annum.

Magistrates Bench (Doncaster)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what action he plans to take in respect of the political imbalance of the Doncaster bench. [4485]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Lord Chancellor, through his advisory committee for Doncaster, will continue to encourage applications from suitable people who would improve the political balance on the bench. The advisory committee has undertaken a number of initiatives, including press advertising, in the recruitment round which has just been completed and will be asked to repeat these initiatives. The Lord Chancellor would be grateful for any encouragement that the hon. Member can give to applicants locally.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment his Department has made of the effect on confidentiality of the private finance initiative for the Court Service. [4720]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Any contractor will have to satisfy the Lord Chancellor's Department that confidentiality will be protected.

Court Service (Computer Systems)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what professional advice his Department has sought regarding the computer systems of the Court Service. [4718]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Barry Sheerman, dated 13 December 1995:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the professional computer advice sought by the Court Service.

The Court Service has obtained professional advice from a wide range of consultants and expert I.T. contractors, as appropriate, in the development of all its computer systems.

Child Support Commissioners (Appeals)

Ms Lynne: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many appeals to a child support commissioner have been (a) lodged and (b) determined. [4681]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Between April 1993, when the Child Support Act 1991 came into force and 6 December 1995, 50 appeals had been lodged with the child support commissioners and 18 determined.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Family Planning

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many and which non-governmental organisations are being funded by the seedcorn fund for family planning and reproductive health projects; in which countries they are based; what are these projects; what is the amount of funding granted; and for what length of time. [4840]

Mr. Hanley: ODA's seedcorn fund for reproductive health presently supports 13 projects. Further details are given in the table.

Organisation	Title	Country	Budget £000s	Time in years
Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine	Voucher system to improve health services and control sexually transmitted diseases	Nicaragua	227	3
University of Cambridge	Action-orientated initiative relating to female genital mutilation and fistulae	Ethiopia	17	1
Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine	Subsidising adolescent sexually transmitted disease services through a private laboratory	Nigeria	91	2

London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine	Expanding choice for women: initiating and evaluating a new emergency contraceptive service in Fortaleza	Brazil	172	2
Marie Stopes Consultancy	To ascertain the practicalities and economics of initiating a social publishing programme in Almaty	Kazakhstan	6	1

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total budget of the seedcorn funding for family planning and reproductive health projects for each of the years 1994 and 1995. [4839]

Mr. Hanley: ODA's seedcorn fund for reproductive health was established in 1995 to support small-scale, innovative projects to improve reproductive health in developing countries and countries with economies in transition. Expenditure in the 1994–95 financial year was £69,000. The budget for the 1995–96 financial year is £472,000.

Consultative Group to Assist the Poorest

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to consult non-governmental organisations on the Government's involvement in the consultative group to assist the poorest. [5192]

Mr. Hanley: ODA advisers have taken part in setting up an informal network of British NGOs and other organisations interested in micro-finance. In September, they briefed a meeting of relevant NGOs, hosted by Action Aid, on the formation and operation of the consultative group to assist the poorest. The network will be meeting again in February 1996, and ODA advisers will use the opportunity to consult with NGOs on the current progress at the consultative group.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to ensure that credit from the consultive group to assist the poorest initiative will be directed at the very poorest. [5191]

Mr. Hanley: The consultative group to assist the poorest is a forum where donors supporting the provision if micro-financial services exchange experiences, and review options for extending and improving the impact of their programmes. The difficulties of providing appropriate financial services, both credit and savings facilities, to the very poorest is a central issue for all donors. ODA is actively feeding the lessons from its programmes in countries such as Bangladesh and Kenya into the CGAP process, and likewise learning from the experiences of other donors' programmes.

Micro-enterprise Development

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to develop micro-enterprises in bilateral United Kingdom aid programmes. [5190]

Mr. Hanley: There are a growing number of micro-enterprise development activities within the current UK bilateral aid programme. These are principally in Bangladesh, India, Kenya, South Africa and also in Poland and Russia. There are also some in other Asian and African countries. We are now supporting well over 100 projects, with a total value of nearly £100 million in the small enterprise sector. We are looking, within available resources, to further develop the small and micro-enterprise component of our bilateral aid.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

High Court Cases

Ms Harman: To ask the Attorney-General on how many occasions for each year since 1960 High Court judges have referred details of a case to the Director of Public Prosecutions. [5548]

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service does not maintain such records.

WALES

"General Household Survey"

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to ensure the statistics collected in Wales as part of the United Kingdom's annual "General Household Survey" permit a reliable disaggregated report on the state of wealth and poverty in Wales to be isolated from the aggregated United Kingdom database. [5023]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I understand from the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys, which conducts the "General Household Survey" on a Great Britain basis, that there are no plans at present to increase the coverage in Wales. Further information relating to Wales is available from a range of other sources including the "Family Expenditure Survey" and the "Family Resources Survey".

Accidents in Schools

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many fatal and major accidents occurred in the schools of Wales, by local education authority area in (a) 1990–91, (b) 1991–92, (c) 1992–93, (d) 1993–94; and if he will make a statement. [4801]

Mr. Richards: I refer the hon. Member to the information I provided on 30 November, a copy of which I have placed in the Library of the House.

Access to Work Scheme

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what evaluation the Welsh Office had undertaken into the working of the access to work scheme; and if he will make a statement. [5244]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: None. The access to work programme for disabled people was introduced from 6 June 1994 to extend and simplify the existing special schemes provided by the Employment Service. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment announced a review of the scheme in July.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations his Department has received on the working of the present access to work scheme; and if he will make a statement. [5245]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: None. The access to work programme is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment.

School Expenditure

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much has been spent per head per pupil in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) 1994–95; what is the figure for the 1996–97 year; and what account has been taken in that figure of the increase in the school population. [5247]

Mr. Richards: Figures for 1993–94 are currently being calculated. As soon as they become available they will be incorporated in a new issue of the Welsh Office's "Education Finance Bulletin", a copy of which will be placed in the Library of the House. Local government expenditure outturn figures for 1994–95 will not be available before spring 1996; spending per head figures will be calculated as soon as possible after that and incorporated in the "Education Finance Bulletin". Figures for 1996–97 will not be available until 1998. Changes in school population influence the calculation of standard spending assessments for local authorities but actual expenditure on education is determined by the local authorities themselves.

Free School Meals

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the number of children having free school meals in (a) Wales, (b) West Glamorgan, (c) Mid Glamorgan, (d) South Glamorgan and (e) Dyfed. [5545]

Mr. Richards: On the schools census day of 17 January 1995, the following numbers of children took free midday meals in maintained schools in:

	Number
Wales	90,408
West Glamorgan	12,052
Mid Glamorgan	21,926
South Glamorgan	14,155
Dyfed	9,429

Local Government (Compensation Costs)

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what supplementary credit approvals he proposes to issue to local authorities for compensation costs which they incur in 1995–96 in connection with local government reorganisation. [6379]

Mr. Hague: I propose to issue supplementary credit approvals totalling £3,570,025 to 32 councils which are abolished by the Local Government (Wales) Act 1994 and which submitted bids to me. The approvals will be for the financial year 1995–96 and will be limited to expenditure on mandatory compensation costs incurred as a result of the reorganisation.

The allocations will be as follows:

Delyn Borough Council	76,377
Clwyd County Council	67,392
Colwyn Borough Council	56,160
Wrexham Maelor Borough Council	40,884

Welsh Water

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what steps he took immediately (a) before and (b) after 31 December 1994 to ensure appropriate publicity in financial markets in relation to the redemption of his golden share in Welsh water; [4120]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact on market integrity of the publicity in December 1994 and January 1995 regarding the golden share in Welsh Water and the absence of any corrective publicity; [4176]

(3) what steps he took to correct the publicity in financial markets in December 1994 and January 1995 concerning the continued existence of his Welsh Water golden share; [4177]

Mr. Hague [holding answer 5 December 1995]: The arrangements for the redemption of the special shares held by the Secretaries of State in water holding companies were set out in section 1, chapter IV, of the prospectus for sale, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. The special share held in Welsh Water plc was redeemed on 31 December 1994 in accordance with these arrangements. No further publicity was considered necessary.

The prospectus for sale—section 9, chapter V—also gave details of special provisions in the articles of association of Welsh Water plc which prevent any person from owning or controlling more than 15 per cent. of the company's voting share capital, subject to certain limited exceptions. This remains in effect other than by a special resolution of 75 per cent. of the company's shareholders to change its articles of association. It was agreed to incorporate this provision in the company's articles of association following concerns about the retention of Welsh interests in the water resources of Wales.

Anti-smoking Campaign

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the 1995 campaigns of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales to encourage people to stop smoking, indicating the cost of each campaign in the relevant financial year. [4861]

Mr. Richards [holding answer 11 December 1995]: Health Promotion Wales's programmes are recorded on a financial year basis. For 1994–95, the latest year for which figures are available, the information is as follows:

1994–95	Thousand
No Smoking Day 1995 and pilot project with pharmacists for Non Smoking Day	37.2
Evaluation of Quit and Win	0.2
Pilot project on prevention of smoking during pregnancy	3.1
Pilot project on prevention of smoking by teenage girls	12.0
Pilot project on Quit and Win Challenge for 15–19 year olds	15.8
Pilot project on smoking policies in public places	32.8
Issue of set of educational posters for schools on benefits of not smoking	41.6
Smokebusters Cymru	67.0
Seminar to raise awareness of smoking and pregnancy booklet	0.7
Presentation to 9th World Conference on Tobacco and Health in Paris	1.0
Advice and information service	11.8
1994–95 total expenditure on smoking related projects	223.2

[1] Includes operational and manpower costs.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what television advertising campaigns at what cost have been funded in full or part by the Health Promotion Authority for Wales designed to encourage people to stop smoking. [4933]

Mr. Richards [holding answer 11 December 1995]: The Health Promotion Authority for Wales has funded no television advertising campaign for smoking cessation, either in full or in part.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the latest estimates of the proportion of (a) incapacity benefit claimants receiving all work test questionnaires who fail to return them, (b) those returning questionnaires who fail to attend for medical examination, (c) medical examinations for the purpose of the all work test which result in the claimant being found capable of work, (d) those failing the all work test who appeal and (e) such appeals which succeed or are superseded by a decision in favour of the appellant. [3462]

Mr. Burt: The information available is in the table.

	13 April to 31 October
Disallowed for failure to return questionnaire (IB50) without good cause	3,268
Disallowed for failure to attend medical examination without good cause	613
Found capable of work following all work test	28,597
Appeals lodged with ITS	8,882
Successful appeals at hearing	146
Superseded by adjudication officer	335

The data reflects activity during a time when the take-on of cases has been carefully controlled to match capacity as experience of the new procedures grows. It is not representative and it is too early to draw firm conclusions about the effectiveness of the new procedures.

Notes:

1. Figures include only Incapacity Benefit claimants and are subject to change.

Capital Limits (Benefits)

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what estimate he has made of the number of people in residential care who will be eligible (a) for increased benefits as a result of raising the lower capital threshold as proposed in the Budget and (b) for benefits as a result of raising the upper capital allowance as proposed in the Budget; [3995]

(2) what estimate he has made of the annual increase in benefit expenditure as a result of (a) raising the lower capital threshold as proposed in the Budget and (b) raising the upper capital allowance as proposed in the Budget. [3994]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table.

	Approximate numbers affected	Approximate net cost (£ million)
Lower Capital Limit	40,000	20
Upper Capital Limit	10,000	5
Total	50,000	25

These estimates do not include the cost to local authorities of applying the new limits when assessing residents' ability to contribute to the cost of their care.

National Disability Council

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) when the membership of the National Disability Council will be announced; what consultations he is undertaking with which organisations in Wales; and if he will make a statement; [3855]

(2) how many people from Wales will be members of the new National Disability Council; and what will be the full complement of the Council. [3854]

Mr. Burt: We expect to announce membership of the National Disability Council in January 1996 and will be seeking to appoint between 10 and 20 members drawn from throughout Great Britain, including Wales. A number of organisations in Wales were invited to put forward nominations for membership.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of those in receipt of invalidity benefit on grounds of mental health problems have been subjected to review under the new incapacity benefit test within the Merthyr benefit area. [4116]

Mr. Burt: Information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Age Addition

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the additional age allowance for pensioners over 80 years of age was first introduced; when it was last increased; what would the value of the additional age allowance now be if it had been uprated by inflation in each year since its last increase; and if he will make a statement on the purpose of the age allowance. [4682]

Mr. Roger Evans: The age addition of 25p per week for pensioners over 80 was introduced in 1971 and has remained at that level since. If it had been increased in line with inflation it would now be worth £1.60 a week from April 1995.

We have no plans to uprate it. Our policy is to focus help on the most needy. We have allocated substantial additional resources to increasing the premiums for pensioners on income support and other income-related benefits—an extra £1.2 billion, over and above inflation, since 1988.

National Insurance

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if it is his intention to proceed with the one-year holiday from national insurance contributions for employers who take additional workers from among those unemployed for more than two years, as announced in his November 1994 Budget; and what is the start date for the holiday; [5406]

(2) if he will estimate the effect in terms of reducing the claimant count of unemployed people of a one-year holiday from national insurance contributions for employers who take additional workers from among those unemployed for more than two years; [5407]

(3) if he will estimate the cost to the Exchequer of a one year holiday from national insurance contributions for employers who take additional workers from among those unemployed for more than two years. [5408]

Mr. Heald: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Ribble Valley (Mr. Evans) on 28 November, Official Report, columns 643–45. This measure will cover lone parents, carers and certain trainees as well as the long-term unemployed. Based on the working assumption that employers of around 130,000 new employees will benefit from reduced national insurance payments, it is expected to cost around £50 million in a full year. This does not include the impact on the level of unemployment as we cannot estimate with certainty the response of employers and the size of any displacement effect.

Prince's Trust

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the contacts his Department has with the Prince's Trust in respect of problems for young people with particular reference to homelessness; and if he will make a statement. [5686]

Mr. Burt: The disability unit in this Department is in regular contact with the Prince of Wales's advisory group on disability about the transition from school to further education, training or employment of young people with disabilities. Also, some Benefits Agency offices liaise with the trust in their areas. The Department of the Environment is the lead Department on homelessness issues.

Benefits Agency Medical Services

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what his proposals are for the introduction of the private sector into Benefits Agency medical services under the competing for quality agenda. [6251]

Mr. Burt: We propose that the work of Benefits Agency medical services, with the exception of policy and adjudication functions is contracted out to the private sector. A competitive tendering process is to be undertaken which will lead to the award of a contract, or contracts, at the earliest opportunity and no later than April 1997.

Details of the successful bidders will be placed in the Library.

Income Support

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress the Benefits Agency has made in checking live claims to income support where potential entitlement to the severe disability premium has not been considered; and what further action is being taken on those claims where income support is no longer in payment. [6300]

Mr. Roger Evans: The exercise carried out by the Benefits Agency to examine claims from customers currently in receipt of income support who may be entitled to the server disability premium is nearing completion. These investigations have resulted in approximately 24,000 customers receiving payment of arrears of benefit. Of these, around 18,000 have continuing awards of the premium.

I have also instructed the Benefits Agency to take all reasonable steps to identify and where possible, contact customers no longer in receipt of income support who during the period of their claim to income support, may have been entitled to the SDP. I have not however asked them to take any specific steps in respect of customers now deceased.

Benefit Expenditure

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average daily cost per person in work in terms of hours worked of (a) social security payments for recipients below pension age, (b) all social security payments, (c) contributory health services and (d) contributions to education services. [4594]

Mr. Burt [holding answer 7 December 1995]: The information is not available in the format requested.

However, the estimated equivalent cost per working person per working day for 1995–96 is as follows:

	Cost £
Social security payments for recipients below pension age	9
All social security payments	15
National health service	6
Education services	5

The figures are rounded to the nearest £1.

TRANSPORT

Crossrail

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the construction of the Crossrail link through London to begin. [3866]

Mr. Norris: This will depend on the view the Government take on the project following their consideration of the latest crossrail study, on appropriate powers being obtained through the Transport and Works Act procedures, and on the necessary private sector financial contribution being secured.

Public Service Vehicles (Accessibility)

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is his timetable in respect of making regulation under section 40 of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and what criterion he will use to determine whether such regulations will be necessary; [5493]

(2) what public service vehicle accessibility regulations he has made under section 40 of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; [5492]

(3) what assessment he has made of the extent to which he will need to make PSV accessibility regulations under section 40 of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. [5491]

Mr. Norris: No PSV accessibility regulations have yet been made.

Discussions between officials and representatives of the bus and coach industry on the detail and shape of regulations have begun. The timescale for introduction will be confirmed in the light of those discussions and when viable technical solutions to achieving accessibility are identified. We expect that it will be necessary to introduce separate regulations for the various technical types over different timescales.

Road Safety

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ensure that transport policies and programme bids are considered with due regard to improved safety for pedestrians and road users. [5443]

Mr. Norris: Safety for all road users is a primary concern in our assessment of TPP bids.

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will review his Department's restrictions governing funding for local safety schemes. [5442]

Mr. Norris: I am not clear what restrictions the hon. Member is referring to. However, all aspects of my Department's system of funding local transport infrastructure are reviewed as a matter of course, in consultation with the local authority associations, before publication in spring of the annual circular setting out requirements for transport policies and programme submissions.

A540

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ensure that Cheshire county council's case for borrowing approval in respect of the A540/Raby Road junction is examined immediately. [5444]

Mr. Norris: It is for Cheshire county council to decide the priority it attaches to minor improvement schemes on its roads. Each local highway authority gets on annual capital allocation of resources for such schemes. They have wide discretion on the use of these allocations.

A1

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the original estimated cost of the east of Knottingley A1 to Hook Moor highway development; what is now the estimate; and if he will make a statement. [5293]

Mr. Watts: The estimated cost of the east of Knottingley objector's alternative route is £176.6 million. The estimate was prepared immediately prior to the public inquiry following agreement by the promoter of the east of Knottingley route to the detailed plans.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Normanton of 30 November 1995, Official Report, column 351, what transcript system was used by the inspector doing the public inquiry into the A1 Ferrybridge to Hook Moor motorway proposals. [5289]

Mr. Watts: The conduct of inquiries concerned with Highways Act Orders is governed by the Highways (Inquiries Procedure) Rules 1994, SI 3263, which came into force on 10 January 1995. It is for the inspector to decide whether there should be any recording of statements. A transcript service is normally provided by the Department of Transport for trunk road inquiries which are expected to last more than 16 sitting days.

Motorways (Public Inquiries)

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the types of transcript services used in recording the proceedings at public inquiries into motorway developments. [5300]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. William O'Brien, dated 13 December 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State for Transport, if he will list the types of transcript services used in recording the proceedings at public inquiries into motorway developments.

The "Notes for Guidance of Independent Inspectors holding inquiries into orders and special road schemes made under the Highways Act 1980" revised June 1995 state that "a transcript service will normally be provided by the Department of Transport for trunk road inquiries which are expected to last for more than sixteen sitting days". The type of transcript service is agreed with the Inspector at each inquiry; since June 1995 verbatim, unchecked records and live note system with checked records, have been used on inquiries into motorway developments lasting more than sixteen sitting days.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what changes have taken place since 1976 to the rules concerning motorway public inquiries. [5295]

Mr. Watts: The Highways (Inquiries Procedure) Rules 1994, SI 1994 No. 3263, came into force on 10 January 1995 replacing the 1976 rules. I am writing to the hon. Member explaining the changes brought about by the new rules.

A63

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the construction of the A63 Melton grade separated junction to begin. [5133]

Mr. Watts: The A63 Melton grade separated junction scheme remains in the main programme. Further development work will be taken forward when resources become available.

Departmental Cars

Mr. Macshane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the cost of chauffeur-driven cars used by his Department in each of the past five years. [5849]

Mr. Norris: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him on 28 November 1995 Official Report, column 549.

ScotRail

Mr. George Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff have left ScotRail since January 1993 under redundancy or early retirement arrangements; and what has been the total cost of payments made to those staff. [5513]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 12 December 1995]: The total number of staff to leave the ScotRail Train Operating Company since 1 April 1994 equates to 218 staff at a cost of £3,475,500. ScotRail became a separately identified organisation within British Rail on 1 April 1994. Figures for the period prior to that date are available only at a disproportionate cost.

Speed Limits (Paddington–Plymouth Line)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 21 November, Official Report, column 54–5, what is the estimated cost of obtaining the details in respect of the 16 speed restrictions in place between Paddington and Plymouth. [5030]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 11 December 1995]: I refer the hon. member to my reply of 21 November, Official Report columns 54–55.

Newbury Bypass

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what date the decision was taken to give the go-ahead to a bypass at Newbury; who took the decision; what is the estimated cost of the scheme; and what is the estimate of the total amount for the acquisition of land for the scheme. [5326]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 12 December 1995]: The decision to go ahead with the Newbury bypass was taken by the then Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Member for Peterborough (Dr. Mawhinney), and announced on 5 July.

The estimated cost of the scheme is £101 million, excluding VAT.

The estimated cost of land acquisition is £82.5 million.

HEALTH

In-patient Episodes

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his latest estimate of the average cost per in-patient episode. [4494]

Mr. Horam: The information is shown in the table. Figures relate to the net expenditure incurred on hospital specialities and include overhead costs. The figures are based on patients using a bed, including day cases, and relate to finished consultant episodes.

Average cost per patient episode in England

	Average cost per episode £
1992–93	1,240
1993–94	1,163
1994–95	1,092

Figures for 1994–95 are provisional.Source: Annual financial returns of regions, districts and special health authorities for the London postgraduate hospitals and NHS trusts.

Rubella Notifications

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 8 November 1995, Official Report, column 978, what are the reasons for the differences in rubella notifications between 1992 and 1993. [5043]

Mr. Horam: The number of rubella cases for 1992 was 201.

There was a large increase in rubella notifications, and laboratory confirmed infections, in 1993. The majority of cases were in young men, who form a pool of susceptibles to the disease.

Vaccination

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 8 November, Official Report, column 976, on the report of the Public Health Laboratory Service on advance techniques for the surveillance of adverse reactions to measles, mumps and rubella immunisations; and if he will (a) put a copy of the report in the Library and (b) initiate a study to evaluate the adequacy of the present arrangements to monitor adverse reactions to the MR campaign. [5045]

Mr. Horam: A copy of the paper by Farrington P Et al in The Lancet entitled, "A new method for active surveillance for diphtheria/tetanus/pertussis and measles/mumps/rubella vaccines" is available in the Library.

Monitoring of adverse reactions during the 1994 measles/rubella immunisation campaign was based on the yellow card scheme for reporting of suspected adverse reactions to all medicines by doctors, dentists and coroners. This scheme has been in operation since 1964 and its effectiveness in identifying possible safety hazards is well recognised. All reactions reported as suspected to be due to MR vaccine were handled as high priority. These monitoring arrangements proved more than adequate and there is no need for the suggested study. A report on adverse reactions reported to MR vaccine has been published in "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance", which was distributed to all doctors in November 1995, copies of this publication are available in the Library.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health further to his departmental report, "Measles Rubella Immunisation Campaign in England—One Year On", published in November, page 1, what is the basis for his statement in respect of the recovery of the children who suffered immediate serious adverse reactions. [5050]

Mr. Horam: Information about recovery from immediate serious adverse reactions following immunisation with measles/rubella vaccine was obtained as part of detailed follow-up from doctors who reported these reactions on yellow cards. All children with immediate serious reactions recovered regardless of whether or not the reaction was likely to have been caused by the vaccine.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 8 November, Official Report, column 976, on the effects of the notification of the natural immunological response by vaccines in relation to the increase in auto-immune diseases, if he will publish in the Official Report the letter of reply sent to the hon. Member. [5024]

Mr. Horam: The letter my hon. Friend the then Under-Secretary of State gave the hon. Gentleman on 8 November is as follows.

I look forward to receiving the further clarification requested from the hon. Member and I will then publish a final reply in the Official Report.

Letter from Tom Sackville to Mr. Llew Smith, dated 8 November 1995:

You have tabled the above parliamentary question. I am afraid it is not possible to give an appropriate reply without further information on which increases, in which autoimmune diseases you are interested in. One of my officials has sought your clarification of the question but has not received a response. Could you please clarify the specific diseases to which your question refers and I shall do my best to provide you with a prompt reply.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 8 November, Official Report, column 975, on the disposal of surplus measles vaccines, what was the value of the reimbursement credit for the vaccines returned to the manufacturers; and what arrangements have been made to activate the credit in future. [5022]

Mr. Horam: For reasons of commercial confidentiality, it is not the practice for the Department of Health to disclose such information. All of the sum reimbursed has been used against other subsequent vaccine purchases.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 8 November 1995, Official Report, column 977, if he will list the documents which were sent to doctors and other health professionals on adverse reactions to the MMR vaccinations; and for what reasons each respective document was chosen as suitable to pass on to the health professionals involved in administering the campaign. [5042]

Mr. Horam: Information concerning possible adverse reactions to measles/rubella vaccine and guidance on the reporting of such reactions was contained in many of the letters and circulars issued to doctors during the planning and implementation of the measles/rubella immunisation campaign. The documents were prepared specifically for the campaign and contained information about the adverse reactions which health professionals might most commonly see during the course of the campaign. Information addressing the more specific concerns which it was thought might arise was also provided. In addition, the Department's memorandum "Immunisation Against Infectious Disease", which is issued to all doctors, and the British National Formulary contain information about possible adverse reactions to vaccines. The principal documents issued for the campaign, copies of which are in the Library, were:

PL CMO(94) 10/PL CNO(94)13: National measles and rubella immunisation campaign, issued 27 July 1994;

EL(94)60: Measles/rubella schools immunisation campaign, issued 27 July 1994.

Measles Fact Sheet (Health Education Authority) issued 1 September 1994;

PL CMO(94)12/PL CNO(94)15: Measles and rubella immunisation campaign, issued 27 September 1994;

Measles/rubella: Information for health professionals (issued under cover of above);

EL(94)73: School-based measles/rubella immunisation campaign, issued 27 September 1994;

PHLS Factsheet on measles for parents and children, issued October 1994;

The measles/rubella immunisation: your questions answered (Health Education Authority) issued in October 1994.

NHS Pensions

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he has discussed with the chief executive of the NHS pension scheme the position of NHS employees applying for sickness retirement pension on the grounds of myalgic encephalomyelitis; and if he will make a statement; [5297]

(2) how many employees in the NHS have applied for ill-health retirement because of myalgic encephalomyelitis; [5299]

(3) how many employees in the NHS have been awarded ill-health retirement pensions because they suffer from myalgic encephalomyelitis; and if he will make a statement; [5298]

(4) if he will set up an independent inquiry into the work of the NHS Pensions Agency with particular reference to their refusal to acknowledge myalgic encephalomyelitis as a medical condition in respect of ceasing work; and if he will make a statement. [5296]

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the availability of NHS pensions to persons who leave the NHS as a result of myalgic encephalomyelitis; [5006]

(2) if he will introduce an appeal structure for persons who are refused an NHS pension. [5007]

Mr. Malone: Under the national health service pension scheme regulations, an employee must be accepted as permanently incapable of efficiently discharging his or her duties before an ill-health retirement pension can be awarded. The scheme's medical advisers examine each application on the evidence available and with full regard to prevailing professional opinion. Applications in respect of myalgic encephalomyelitis are treated no differently to other conditions. In all cases, the scheme's medical advisers must be satisfied about the permanent nature of the condition.

ME is recognised as a potentially debilitating and distressing condition which affects thousands of people. However, it presents particular difficulties because of its nature and because opinions vary about it in the medical profession. The medical consensus suggests that in the majority of cases the effects should not be permanent.

Since 15 August 1994, when separate records were first kept, there have been 200 applications for ill-health retirement from ME sufferers. In 19 cases, pensions have been awarded.

Scheme members are currently able to challenge decisions about entitlement through the NHS Pensions Agency's comprehensive internal review procedures. If scheme members are dissatisfied with the outcome, they may ask my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to determine their case. The pensions ombudsman also has powers to investigate individual complaints.

I am satisfied that the chief executive and his staff are administering the scheme in accordance with the scheme's regulations in all of these cases.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what occasions certificates under section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 were signed by a member of his Department; how long each certificate was valid; and in what circumstances medical records can be used for the purpose of safeguarding national security. [5338]

Mr. Horam: No such certificates have been signed in the Department of Health. I cannot deal in advance with the circumstances that might apply if an application for a section 27 certificate were to be made.

Occupational Health Staff

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many medical and nursing staff worked in occupational health within the NHS in England and Wales for the last three years for which figures are available; and what were the grades of these employees. [5388]

Mr. Malone: The information available for England is shown in the attached tables. Information relating to Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

NHS Capital Charges

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health over what period the weighted average of the gross domestic product deflator and the indexation applied to NHS capital charges forecast is to rise 2.73 per cent., as stated in paragraph 15 of the NHS finance director's letter, FDL (95) 59; by how many percentage points his Department's index of hospital and community health service pay and prices forecast is to rise over the same period; and by how many percentage points the national health service pay and price index has exceeded the gross domestic product deflator in each of the last five years. [5292]

Mr. Horam: The forecast weighted average of the gross domestic product deflator and the indexation applied to national health service capital charges quoted in FDL(95)59 applies to the period 1 April 1996 to 31 March 1997.

The Department does not forecast hospital and community health services pay and price inflation.

Estimates of hospital and community health service inflation, family health service inflation and general inflation as measured by the gross domestic product deflator are shown for the five latest available years in the table.

Doncaster Healthcare Trust

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of Doncaster Healthcare trust's compliance with EU procurement regulations. [5504]

Mr. Horam: I am satisfied on the evidence available that the trust has acted in full compliance with the requirements of the public supply, works and services contracts regulations.

Beds

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total number of (a) day care beds, (b) pay beds for day care in each national health service hospital in the Sunderland district health authority area in each year since 1989. [5469]

Mr. Horam: Information on numbers of pay beds is not available centrally. The available information is shown in the table.

Average of daily number of available beds—wards open day only—Sunderland area

[2] City Hospitals (Sunderland) and Priority Health Care Wearside Directly Managed Units.

[3] City Hospitals Sunderland NHS Trust and Priority Healthcare Wearside NHS Trust.

Health Authority Appointments

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he expects to receive recommendations from the NHS executive, west midlands region, for the appointment of a chairman of the new South Staffordshire health authority; [5502]

(2) if he will examine the consultation procedures and periods adopted by the NHS executive, west midlands region, leading to their recommendation for a chairman for the new South Staffordshire health authority; [5503]

(3) what guidance is issued regarding the consultation period and names to be considered for appointment of chairmen to the new health authorities. [5501]

Mr. Malone: Ministers are now considering regional chairmen's recommendations on the appointment of chairmen to the new health authorities.

The regional chairmen followed the guidance on appointments procedures published by my Department in February this year, together with supplementary guidance prepared in response to the Nolan committee's recommendations. Copies of the guidance are available in the Library.

Local Members of Parliament were consulted on all candidates recommended to Ministers.

Redundancy and Retirement

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 5 December, Official Report, column 190, relating to redundancy and retirement payments what guidelines his Department has issued to trusts regarding redundancy payments and retirement packages; and what monitoring his Department undertakes of such arrangements. [5440]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 5 December, column 190 relating to guidance issued. My Department does not monitor national health service trusts' redundancy and retirement arrangements.

Medium Secure Units

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what account is taken of the costs of care in medium secure units for patients discharged from special hospitals in the distribution of funding to health authorities. [5478]

Mr. Bowis: The formula for determining health authorities' share of overall resources takes account of the age and needs of their resident populations and the relative cost of providing services. No particular adjustments are made in respect of individual patients who are transferred from the special hospitals to medium secure units or any other national health service service.

NHS Transport

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of annual NHS transport hire expenditure devoted to staff taxis and private hire. [5003]

Mr. Malone: The information is not available centrally.

Unregistrable Children's Homes

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what written guidance he has issued to directors of social services in respect of how placing authorities should communicate concern about poor practice in unregistrable children's homes to area authorities; and if he will make a statement. [5466]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 6 December 1995, Official Report, column 228.

Each local authority which places a child carries full responsibility to satisfy itself that the proposed placement is likely to promote and safeguard that child's welfare.

Meningitis

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of meningitis have occurred in each of the last 48 months; and what has been (a) the number and (b) percentage of fatalities. [4804]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 8 December 1995]: The information is shown in the tables.

Notes:

[1] Denotes provisional data regarding deaths.

[2] Denotes Provisional data regarding notifications.

1. 1995 data for deaths up to and including November are provisional occurrences relating to the most recently available registrations.

2. 1995 data for notifications are provisional notifications and do not contain the corrected notifications which can be received up to 3 months after original notification.

3. New procedures for coding cause of death from 1993, and the absence of medical enquiries, mean that figures for 1993 onwards may not be exactly comparable with earlier years. For most conditions however, including meningitis, these effects are small. More details may be found in OPCS Series DH2 for 1993, which was published in October 1995. Copies are available in the Library.

4. Notifications are assigned to month by date of end of week of notification.

5. Deaths are assigned to month by date of occurrence.

6. International Classification of Disease codes used for deaths are 013.0, 036.0, 047.0, 047.1, 047.8, 047.9, 049.0, 049.1, 053.0, 072.1, 091.8, 094.2, 320.0 and 322.0.

7. Percentage fatalities is the deaths as a percentage of notifications.

8. The notifications including meningococcal, pneumococcal and HIb meningitis.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Consultants

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those (a) consultants, (b) outside organisations and (c) individuals employed in his Department in each year since 1990, indicating the purposes of their employment and the total payments made to them. [3957]

Mr. Boswell: Consultants employed in the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in each financial year from 1990–91 to 1994–95, and the subjects with which they were concerned, are indicated in the attached lists. Central records are not yet available in a form which directly relates the two lists, and such correlation could only be achieved at disproportionate cost. Total expenditure in each of the years concerned was:

1990–91: £4,495,793

1991–92: £5,374,284

1992–93: £7,010,814

1993–94: £12,169,785

1994–95: £11,551,382

Badgers

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many badgers have been (a) captured and (b) destroyed in each of the last three years following (i) direct action by his Department and (ii) the issuing of licences to third parties. [5309]

Mrs. Browning: The total number of badgers captured and destroyed in removal operations carried out by the Department following tuberculosis breakdowns in cattle in each of the last three years was as follows:

Year	1993	1994	1995[1]
Total captured	1,246	1,864	1,926
Total destroyed	1,094	1,682	1,448

[1] To date.

In the three years from 1993 to date, 10 badgers have been captured and one badger destroyed under licences issued to third parties by this Ministry.

Imported Fish

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to ensure that fish imported for angling do not spread disease to native fish species. [5551]

Mr. Baldry: All imports of live fish into this country have to meet strict rules intended to prevent the spread of disease. All fish from elsewhere in the European Union that are susceptible to the diseases infectious haematopoietic necrosis and viral haemorrhagic septicaemia have to come from zones approved by the Commission as free of these diseases, and all other fish must either come from such zones or from enclosed waters isolated from natural watercourses; all coarse fish susceptible to the disease spring viraemia of carp have to be certified by the member state of origin as coming from a site that has been tested and found free of SVC. Similar rules apply to fish from third countries, with the exception of tropical fish that cannot survive in the natural environment in this country and goldfish and koi from countries outside the geographical range of SVC.

Over the past year, we have stepped up our efforts to ensure that these rules are observed. We have increased the number of spot checks on imported consignments of coarse fish, and have recruited an additional fish health inspector with an investigative background to concentrate full time on monitoring fish imports. As recommended by the Agriculture Select Committee's recent fifth report, a leaflet and publicity campaign "Don't Import Disease" was launched by my right hon. Friend the Minister on 12 July. This reminded all concerned of the need to follow the rules on imports; of the risks they run if they buy fish of dubious origin; of additional precautions they can take to avoid disease; and of the efforts, including prosecution, we are making to stop illegal imports.

Dioxin Hot Spots

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all the dioxin hot spots identified by his Department; and what action has been taken in respect of each site. [5463]

Mrs. Browning: Surveillance conducted by the Ministry since 1990 has found unacceptable concentrations of dioxins only in cows' milk from three farms in the Bolsover district of Derbyshire. Milk from these farms was prevented from entering the human food supply. Regular monitoring of cows' milk from this area continues. No other areas have been identified where concentrations of dioxins in cows' milk are above the normal background range.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to monitor wind-blown deposition of dioxin-contaminated particles arising from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food identified dioxin hot spots in the United Kingdom. [5682]

Mrs. Browning: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food will continue its programme of monitoring the dioxins content of cows' milk produced in the vicinity of selected industrial sites which are representative of processes that may release dioxins. This programme assures the safety of the food supply and assesses environmental contamination.

Pesticides

Mr. Mans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what changes he plans to make to the system of approving pesticides. [6520]

Mr. Boswell: Ministers make decisions on the approval of pesticides on the basis of recommendations from the independent expert Advisory Committee on Pesticides. I have agreed with my colleagues in the other regulatory Departments that its present sub-committee on pesticides will be replaced by a smaller, more flexible, inter-departmental secretariat to ensure that the UK can make a timely and effective input into the European regulatory system for plant protection products. The new body begins work immediately on the European front and will take over the processing of applications under the UK system during the course of next year.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about bovine spongiform encephalopathy. [6521]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A further report on BSE in Great Britain will be available tomorrow. I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library of the House at 11.00 a.m.

The report provides detailed statistics on the progress of the BSE epidemic, updated to the end of October 1995 and information about the latest EC measures for the export of beef to other member states, the new legislative controls to reinforce the measures already in place for the disposal of specified bovine offal and the announcement I made on 28 November, Official Report, columns 530–31, in which I indicated my intention to legislate to prevent the use of bovine vertebral column in the production of mechanically recovered meat. We shall shortly be making an order to effect this change, to come into force on 15 December.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Graduation Rate

15. Mr. Wolfson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the current graduation rate in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) the other European Union. [3882]

Mr. Forth: In 1992, the United Kingdom rate was over 20 per cent.—virtually double the European Union average for Bachelor's degrees of about 10 per cent. and second only to Denmark's rate of some 22 per cent. Since 1992, our graduation rate has risen further as a result of recent increases in participation.

Grant-maintained Status

16. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a progress report on the transition to grant-maintained status by state schools. [3883]

Mrs. Gillan: There are now 1,085 grant-maintained schools and 62 more schools have embarked on the GM process.

21. Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the number of schools balloting on grant-maintained status. [3891]

Mrs. Gillan: Parents are voting now, or will be voting, in about 19 schools' ballots, and have voted in 27 more ballots since the start of the autumn term.

Schools (Standards)

17. Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures she is taking to boost overall standards in schools. [3884]

Mr. Robin Squire: All our education reforms, from the national curriculum to local management of schools, act to raise standards. Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools has confirmed that standards are, indeed, rising.

18. Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action she is taking to improve standards of reading. [3886]

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We are taking action across the board from nursery education to training and education for adults.

Higher Education (Access)

19. Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is her policy in respect of access to higher education levels determined by A-level grades. [3887]

Mr. Forth: It is for higher education institutions to determine their admissions policies and to decide on individual applications. In doing so, they rightly take into account a wide range of qualifications for entry, including GCE A-levels.

Education Spending (Cheshire)

20. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on education spending in Cheshire. [3889]

Mr. Robin Squire: Education spending in Cheshire is a matter for Cheshire local education authority. Cheshire's provisional education SSA for 1996–97 is £349.051 million—an increase of £17.024 million or 5.1 per cent., which is above the national average.

Arabic Teaching

22. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make it her policy that the teaching of Arabic in schools where appropriate and practicable shall be made available to school children at the time when their imitative linguistic ability is at its zenith. [3892]

Mr. Paice: All secondary school pupils must study a modern foreign language as part of the national curriculum. Primary schools are free to teach languages but are not required to do so. Arabic is one of 19 languages which schools may teach as a national curriculum subject. It is for schools to decide whether to teach Arabic, according to their resources and parental demand.

GCSE Results (English and Mathematics)

23. Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she has taken to address the decline in GCSE results in English and mathematics in the current year. [3893]

Mr. Paice: The numbers achieving higher grade GCSEs in mathematics and English actually increased in 1995, consolidating the significant improvements in performance in recent years. But we cannot be complacent and there is still room for further improvement if we are to meet the demanding national targets. The new national curriculum at key stage 4 will be introduced from September 1996 and places greater emphasis on English and maths. That will help schools to help pupils achieve even better results in those core subjects.

Teachers (Information Technology Expertise)

24. Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to increase the level of expertise in information technology amongst teachers. [3895]

Mr. Robin Squire: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 21 November, Official Report, column 99.

Student Loans

25. Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what organisations or interested parties have expressed support for her proposed reforms of the provision of student loans. [3896]

Mr. Forth: My officials have had a number of positive discussions with banks and building societies. But these have been on a commercial-in-confidence basis and must remain so for the present.

My officials have also invited representatives of the Committee of Vice Chancellors and Principals and the National Union of Students to discuss our proposals. The meeting with the CVCP was constructive. The NUS has not yet replied.

Secondary Schools (Expenditure)

26. Mr Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the current annual total average expenditure per pupil in secondary schools; and what the equivalent figure was in 1979. [3897]

Mr. Robin Squire: Net institutional expenditure per pupil in LEA-maintained secondary schools was £607 in cash 1979–80 and £2,245 in 1993–94, the latest year for which figures are available. In real terms that is a 50 per cent. increase.

Assisted Places Scheme

27. Mr. Charles Wardle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent representations she has received about the assisted places scheme. [3898]

Mrs. Gillan: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral answer that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Cirencester and Tewkesbury (Mr. Clifton-Brown) earlier today.

Special Needs Education

28. Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to increase provision for special needs education. [3899]

Mrs. Gillan: It is for local education authorities to allocate funds to the schools they maintain, including funds for special educational needs. The recent local government finance settlement took account of the need to spend across all educational services, including special educational needs.

Training and Enterprise Councils

29. Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the impact of the Budget on TECs. [3900]

Mr. Paice: We plan that programmes delivered by TECs in 1996–97 to be £1,437 million, a rise of 5 per cent. over anticipated expenditure this year.

Primary Schools (Reading Ability)

30. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action she intends to take to improve children's reading ability in primary schools. [3901]

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have recently announced proposals to establish a network of literacy centres which will work with groups of local primary schools to improve teaching and learning. This will complement action already taken, including the revised national curriculum, regular statutory test and assessment, publication of the results, regular inspection, measures to deal with failing schools, and improvements in teacher training.

Parental Choice

31. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received on parental choice and catchment areas in the past year. [3902]

Mrs. Gillan: The Department receives a great many inquiries from parents, both in writing and by telephone, about parental choice in relation to school admissions. No central register of such inquiries is kept.

Student Loan Scheme

32. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list (a) those banks which have communicated their willingness to take part in a private sector student loans scheme and (b) those which have communicated their unwillingness to do so. [3903]

Mr. Forth: My officials are continuing discussions with a number of banks and building societies. These have been on a commercial-in-confidence basis. That must remain the position for the time being.

Social Chapter

33. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she last met other EU employment ministers to discuss the social chapter. [3904]

Mr. Forth: The Government have consistently said that it will not accept the draft social chapter, which my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister refused to agree at Maastricht. That remains our position, and we make it clear to other member states when the issue arises.

School Budgets, Nottinghamshire

34. Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools in Nottinghamshire will not face budget reductions in 1996. [3905]

Mrs. Gillan: The budgets of Nottinghamshire schools are set by the county council. The Government have made an extra £18 million available to the authority through the education standard spending assessment. It is up to the authority to make effective use of this additional resource.

Education Resources (Lancashire)

35. Mr. Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received from Lancashire county council about education resources. [3906]

Mrs. Gillan: An all-party delegation visited me on 16 November, and we had a most helpful discussion about capital resources for schools.

Consultants

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list those (a) consultants, (b) outside organisations and (c) individuals employed by her Department in each year since 1990, indicating the purposes of their employment and the total payments made to them. [3961]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Remploy

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will publish the detailed calculations of flow-back benefits to the Treasury of Remploy's employees. [5081]

Mr. Paice: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 24 November, Official Report, column 408.

Workstart

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what estimate she has made of the redundancy, deadweight and substitution effects of the pilot workstart schemes; and what estimate she has made of the proportion of Workstart beneficiaries who remain in paid employment with the same employer (a) six months and (b) one year after the end of the wage subsidy; [5383]

(2) what research has been undertaken by or on behalf of the Government into the cost effectiveness of the workstart scheme in creating jobs for the long-term unemployed; and if she will summarise the results of that research. [5384]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Michael Meacher, dated 13 December 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about research issues surrounding the Workstart pilots.

Evaluation was carried out in 1994 and the report was lodged in the House of Commons Library at the end of last year. The survey covered a wide range of issues including characteristics of participating firms, attitudes towards the scheme, and estimates of deadweight and substitution. The programme has been set up to preclude vacancies which come about through the redundancy or dismissal of an existing employee.

Employers were asked about the extent to which Workstart created new vacancies. For the sample as a whole, 17% of all jobs registered under Workstart were generated as a direct result of the subsidy.

Information on the proportion of beneficiaries remaining in employment is being collected three months after leaving or completing Workstart. Results from this follow up study will be available in late 1996.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many pilot schemes were run under the workstart scheme following the announcement by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in November 1994; how many new job opportunities she estimates were created by these pilots; and what was their total cost; [5405]

(2) how many people were placed under the workstart scheme at the start of each month since its inception. [5409]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Michael Meacher, dated 13 December 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about operational aspects of the Workstart pilots.

Workstart was piloted in four areas between June 1993 and December 1994. The aim of the pilots was to test the effectiveness of encouraging employers to recruit people unemployed for two years or more by paying a subsidy for one year. Under these pilots, employers were paid £60.00 for the first six months, and £30.00 for the remainder of the year.

In his November 1994 Budget, the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced two further pilots designed to test the impact of varying the amount and duration of the subsidy. The pilots started in April 1995 and will finish in March 1996.

These figures requested are in the attached table (Annex A).

The number of new job opportunities created, and their cost, under the Workstart pilots will not be available until an evaluation of the more recent pilots is completed in November 1996.

I hope this is helpful.

Workstart scheme starts: July 1993 to November 1994

Shire Counties' Education Expenditure

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the percentage of shire counties' education budget which is spent on (a) schools and (b) for non-school expenditure, together with the amount of money this represents per school pupil in each case. [5308]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table shows for each shire county the percentage of net recurrent expenditure spent in 1993–94, the latest year for which figures are available, on: (a) pre-primary, primary, secondary and special schools; and (b) other education services, including education other than at school, adult education, continuing education, discretionary awards, youth and other community services, service strategy and regulation and education support services. The table also shows the amount of money per pupil which this expenditure represents, though in this case of non-schools expenditure school pupils are not the principal clients.

Teachers' Pension Fund

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which organisations she consulted when making her decision to privatise the teachers' pension fund. [5287]

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has made no such decision. There is no question of privatising the teachers' superannuation scheme, which does not have a real pension fund. Any contract would be solely for the administration of the scheme. We shall let such a contract only if it would deliver better value for money than keeping the administration of the scheme in the public sector.

Pupil Statistics

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children were being educated (a) in schools under local education authority control, (b) in grant-maintained schools and (c) privately at the most recent available date. [5497]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is shown in the table:

Numbers of pupils[1] in schools in England January 1995 (provisional)

	Number
LEA maintained schools[2]	6,787,443
Grant-maintained schools[3]	663,110

[2] Includes nursery, primary, secondary and special schools.

[3] Includes primary, secondary and special schools.

[4] Includes fee-paying schools. Excludes City Technology Colleges.

Nursery Provision

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on progress on provision of nursery education for all four year olds. [4126]

Mr. Robin Squire: Good progress has been made towards the implementation of our proposals to expand pre-school provision for four-year olds.

We have appointed a private contractor—Capita Managed Services Ltd—to administer phase 1 of the nursery education voucher scheme, which will take place in Kensington and Chelsea, Norfolk, Wandsworth and Westminster. The Department, the voucher contractor and the volunteer LEAs are working closely together to finalise details for phase 1.

We have consulted on a number of issues related to the operation of the scheme. We are currently considering the responses and will publish our conclusions early in the new year.

Discretionary Awards

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the total expenditure on discretionary awards provided by each local education authority in the last year for which figures are available. [5004]

Mr. Forth: The information requested for the academic year 1993–94, the latest for which data are available, is shown in the following table:

Access Courses

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make it her policy that older students on access courses will remain entitled to older students allowance if their performance gives them access to the subsequent course they were preparing for. [5652]

Mr. Forth: Students who were enrolled on full-time access courses prior to 1 September 1995 and who transfer immediately to a course designated for mandatory awards purposes, disregarding any intervening vacation, will be eligible for the older student's allowance.

Student Allowances

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what discretion a student's local authority has in paying an older student's allowance when the Secretary of State has agreed that the student is entitled to such an allowance. [5653]

Mr. Forth: Where a student meets the conditions set out in the Education (Mandatory Awards) Regulations, he is eligible for the older student's allowance. The provision of these regulations are statutory; therefore local education authorities have no discretion.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many students were entitled to receive the older students allowance in 1993–94 and 1994–95; and how many are currently receiving them; [5505]

(2) how many of the students currently in receipt of the older students allowance are on courses expected to conclude (a) at the end of the present academic year or earlier and (b) at a date later than September 1996. [5506]

Mr. Forth: The number of students eligible to receive the older students allowance—OSA—in the academic year 1993–94 was 41,000. Information for later years is not yet available. Information on students currently in receipt of the OSA who are on courses expected to conclude at the end of a particular academic year is not collected centrally.

Prince's Trust

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the contacts her Department has with the Prince's trust in respect of training for young people seeking employment; and if she will make a statement. [5685]

Mr. Paice: The Department strongly supports the aims of the Prince's trust and has frequent contact at ministerial and official level. My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State met the chairman of the Prince's trust volunteers, for example, as recently as 15 November. The Department also provides active support for the training of young people through the secondment of officials and client referrals from the Employment Service.

School Attendance

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she is taking to reduce the numbers of children who are taken out of school for long periods by their parents. [3888]

Mr. Robin Squire: Parents must act responsibly. The Department has just published a leaflet to help schools and LEAs remind parents of the importance of regular school attendance.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children are currently being educated in grant-maintained schools. [3885]

Mrs. Gillan: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, gave today to my hon. Friend the Member for Milton Keynes, South-West (Mr. Legg).

EU Employees

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many employees of (a) the European Commission and (b) other European Union bodies there are in (i) Greater London and (ii) other areas of the United Kingdom. [5634]

Mr. David Davis: I have been asked to reply.

DEFENCE

Executive Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) serving officers and (b) retired officers are employed in each of his Department's executive agencies. [5518]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the chief executives of the agencies concerned. I have asked the chief executives to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Rear Admiral N. R. Esssenhigh to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

I am replying, as Chief Executive of the Hydrographic Office, to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the number of serving officers and retired officers employed in the Hydrographic Office. As at 1 December this year, some 7 serving RN officers were employed at the Hydrographic Office together with 1 Petty Officer. In terms of retired officers the total, at the same date was 12.

I hope this has been of assistance.

Letter from Air Vice-Marshall R. H. Kyle to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the number of serving officers and Retired Officers employed in the RAF Maintenance Group Defence Agency.

There are 323 serving officers and 12 Retired Officers serving in the Agency at present.

I hope the information meets your requirements.

Letter from Air Commodore A. A. Nicholson to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the numbers of serving and retiring officers employed in Defence Agencies. The figures for the Royal Air Force Training Group Defence Agency are:

Serving Officers: 1169

1. I am replying to your Questions (PQ9619 and 9620) to the Secretary of State for Defence, about the numbers of military and civilian staff, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Transport and Movements Executive Agency (DTMX).

2. DTMX formed in April this year; the numbers and costs of civilian staff pre-Agency relate, therefore, to the last financial year. This year's numbers and costs are at this stage, only an estimate. The costs for 1994/95 have been uprated to 1995/96 levels, so that both sets of figures are at the same cost base.

3. Details are:

1994/95: 141.5 civilian staff, at a cost of £2,408,721

1995/96: 151.5 civilian staff, at a cost of £2,602,310

Letter from Brigadier M. J. Roycroft to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

I am replying to your questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about staff numbers and costs within this Executive Agency.

The answer to your first question concerning serving and retired officers is that there are currently 19 Military Officers and 8 Civil Servants in the retired Officer Class working in this Agency.

You also asked for details on civilian staff:

(a) At year end prior to Agency establishment we had 502 staff at a total cost of £7.886M.

(b) At year end post Agency establishment we had 502 staff at a total cost of £8.373M.

In addition to the small rise in cost due to pay awards, the apparent additional cost is due to the absorption throughout the period leading up to the formation of the Agency of personnel from other areas.

Letter from Air Commodore P. C. Ayee to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the number of serving and retired officers who are employed in executive agencies since, as the Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Signals Engineering Establishment, this matter falls within my area of responsibility.

Retired Officers—1

If you have any questions about this please do not hesitate to call me.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the number of civilian staff in his Department in the year before the establishment of the first executive agency and for each year since the number (a) in his Department and (b) in each agency, together with the staff costs in each case. [5522]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The first executive agencies were set up in this Department in April 1990. The information required for 1989–90 onwards, for the Department as a whole, is contained in tables 4 and 5 of the 1995 MOD departmental report, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. The chief executives of each agency will be replying separately, giving details of their individual agencies.

Letter from Brigadier J. R. Drew to Mr. Martin Redmond dated 13 December 1995:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State about the number of civilian staff in each agency, together with staff costs, in the year before establishment and in each year since.

The information for the Army Base Repair Organisation, which was launched on 1 April 1993, is as follows:

(a) Civilian staff numbers

1 April 1993: 3,605

1 April 1994: 3,510

1 April 1995: 3,326

1 November 1995: 3,263

(b) Civilian staff costs

1992–93: £58.27 M[1]

1993–94: £56.74M[1]

1994–95: £55.55M[1]

[1] Costs reflect expenditure actually incurred and have not been adjusted for inflation.

Letter from Brigadier K. J. W. Goad to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December, 1995:

I am replying to your Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about the staffing levels within Defence Agencies. This matter falls within my area of responsibility as the Chief Executive of the Army Base Storage and Distribution Agency (ABSDA).

ABSDA was formed on the 4th April 1995 and the current staffing details are as follows:

Number of Serving Military Officers = 82 as at Dec 95

Number of Retired Officers = 18 as at Dec 95

Number of Civilian Staff (Ind & Non Ind) = 5163 as at Dec 95.

The forecast civilian staff costs for the current financial year are £83.4M.

I believe that the other parts of your question are to be answered by other authorities. I hope that the figures I have supplied fully satisfy your requirement. If you have any queries or require clarification please do not hesitate to contact me.

Letter from P. J. Trevelyan to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the number and cost of civilian staff employed in my Agency in the years since my Agency was launched.

You will appreciate the numbers employed fluctuate throughout the year. For ease of comparison I have listed the numbers employed on 1 April each year, starting with 1 April 91 when the Defence Accounts Agency was launched.

1 April 1991: 2,184

1 April 1992: 2,139

1 April 1993: 2,016

1 April 1994: 1,983

1 April 1995: 1,791

1 December 1995: 1,523

Financial year	£ million
1991–92	31.46
1992–93	32.38
1993–94	31.61
1994–95	31.92

I hope this information is helpful.

Letter from Colonel A. H. Roache to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about civilian staff numbers and costs in Defence Agencies. This falls within my area of responsibility.

The number of civilian staff employed at the Defence Animal Centre is:

Year	Number	Cost £000s
1991–92	40	426
1992–93	40	461
1993–94	40	507
1994–95	41	510
1995–96	49	592

Letter from Brigadier M. J. Roycroft to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

I am replying your questions to the Secretary of State for Defence about staff numbers and costs within this Executive Agency.

The answer to your first question concerning serving and retired officers is that there are currently 19 Military Officers and 8 Civil Servants in the retired Officer Class working in this Agency.

You also asked for details on civilian staff:

(a) At year end prior to Agency establishment we had 502 staff at a total cost of £7.886M.

(b) At year end post Agency establishment we had 502 staff at a total cost of £8.373M.

In addition to the small rise in cost due to pay awards, the apparent additional cost is due to the absorption throughout the period leading up to the formation of the Agency of personnel from other areas.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

You asked the Secretary of State for Defence about staff costs and numbers in his Department and in each of his agencies since their establishment. I am replying on behalf of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA).

The Defence Research Agency (DRA) was established in 1991 and was incorporated into the larger Defence Evaluation and Research Agency in April of this year. DRA has published its Annual Report and Accounts, including details of staff costs, with social security and pension costs where appropriate, and average numbers, each year since 1991. Copies of the Reports have been placed in the library of the House. For ease of reference I have listed below the information you require.

	Average staff numbers	Staff costs £ million
1991–92	11,832	252.5
1992–93	11,094	238.1
1993–94	10,121	231.9
1994–95	8,601	222.7

There are as yet no figures for DERA, these will be published in the first Annual Report and Accounts for the enlarged Agency, covering the 1995/95 Financial Year, and will appear in the summer of 1996. A copy of this document will be placed in the library of the House.

I hope this information is helpful to you

Letter from Mr. T. McG. Brown to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the number and costs of civilian staff employed in the Defence Postal and Courier Services Agency in the year before the establishment of the Agency and in each subsequent year.

This Agency was established in July 1992 and for the year ending 31 March 1992 the number of civilians employed were 256 at an annual cost of £3.334m. For each of the subsequent years the average number of civilian employees and associated costs were:

1992–93: 247, £3.907

1993–94: 316, £4,801

1994–95: 293, £4,721

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Brigadier M. G. R. Hodson to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

1. I am replying to your Question (PQ9619 and 9620) to the Secretary of State for Defence, about the numbers of military civilian staff, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Transport and Movements Executive Agency (DTMX).

2. DTMX formed in April this year; the numbers and costs of civilian staff pre-Agency relate, therefore, to the last financial year. This year's numbers and costs are at this stage, only an estimate. The costs for 1994/95 have been uprated to 1995/96 levels, so that both sets of figures are at the same cost base.

3. Details are:

1994/95: 141.5 civilian staff, at a cost of £2,408,721

1995/96: 151.5 civilian staff, at a cost of £2,602,310

4. The number of military and ex-military officers currently employed within my Agency are:

18 (commissioned) serving officers

5 retired officers

Letter from Keith Elleder to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the number of civilian staff employed in the Disposal Sales Agency, and their associated costs, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility.

The information you require is as follows:

	Staff numbers	Staff costs at 1995–96 prices £ thousand
Pre-agency status (1993–94)	98	2,215
Post-agency status (1994–96)	91	2,187
Forecast (1995–96)	75	2,017

Letter from G. H. Wilson to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence concerning the number of civilian staff in this Agency and the staff costs.

The details you requested are:-

Year	Civilian staff	Staff costs £ million
1991–92	97.5	1,968
1992–93	97.5	2.078
1993–94	97	2,235
1994–95	94.5	2.287

Letter from Rear Admiral N. R. Essenhigh to Mr. Martin Redmond dated 13 December 1995:

1. I am replying, as Chief Executive of the Hydrographic Office, to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the number of civilian staff and their associated staff costs employed within the Hydrographic Office since it was first established as a Defence Agency in April 1990.

2. As regards the number of civilian staff in post at 1st April each year, the following is the information you require:

1 April 1990: 885

1 April 1991: 867

1 April 1992: 861

1 April 1993: 821

1 April 1994: 820

1 April 1995: 791

3. In terms of staff costs the following information is provided:

Financial year	Staff cost £
1990–91	14,492,652
1991–92	15,395,149
1992–93	16,047,932
1993–94	16,060,256
1994–95	16,493,049

4. I trust the above information has been of assistance. If you require any further amplification or classification please do not hesitate to get in touch with me or my staff.

Letter from Brigadier A. W. Pollard to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the number of civilian staff in his Department in the year before the establishment of the first executive agency and for each year since the number (a) in his Department and (b) in each agency, together with the staff costs in each case as this matter falls within my area of responsibility. The number of Civil Servants on LISA's strength on the date of its information, 21 Nov 94, was 327 which included 10 casuals. On 21 Nov 95 the number of Civil Servants was 334 of which 27 were casuals. This number would have reduced had two other units not merged with LISA during the year. The pay bill for Civil Service staff in LISA's first year was £6.86 million; this figure includes £200k for casuals and £275k overtime.

If you have any further questions please do not hesitate to contact me.

Letter from J. C. R. Hunt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about staff and pay in MOD agencies as this matter falls within my area of responsibility.

The figures for the Meteorological Office are:

	Average strength	Pay £ million
1989–90	2,447	48.8
1990–91	2,465	55.1
1991–92	2,499	59.9
1992–93	2,508	63.5
1993–94	2,502	64.3
1994–95	2,398	65.3

The value of pay includes the cost of National Insurance and pension provision. About 10% of the pay total represents allowances received by staff for shiftworking.

Letter from Brigadier A. J. Hoon to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about civilian staff numbers and costs, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility in respect of the Military Survey Defence Agency.

The information you require is shown on the attached table, and covers the four full Financial Years since the agency was formed in April 1991.

Military survey defence agency civilian staff numbers and costs

Serial	Financial year	Staff numbers[1]	Staff costs[2]
1	1991–92	906	£14.05m
2	1992–93	886	£14.70m

4	1994–95	850	£18.23m

[1] Average number of civilian staff employed during the Financial Year.

[2] Unadjusted cash costs of Pay and ERNIC in all years. The agency did not assume responsibility for Accruing Superannuation Liability Contributions until FY 93/94. Earlier years therefore exclude this element.

Letter from Captain W. S. Graham to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

1. I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence, about the number of Civilian staff together with costs in the Naval Aircraft Repair Organisation (NARO) in the year before the establishment of the Agency and for each year since, as this falls within my area of responsibility:

(a) Civilian Numbers and Cost pre Agency Status. No figures are currently available as the organisation pre Agency comprised of 3 separate establishments (excluding DGST (N) personnel), whereas NARO now encompasses only 2 establishments and includes DGNBS (was DGST(N) personnel).

(b) Civilian Numbers and Costs Post Agency.

Letter from Air Commodore A. A. Nicholson to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the numbers of civilian staff employed in Defence Agencies and their associated costs. The figures for the Royal Air Force Training Group Defence Agency are:

Financial year	Staff costs £	Established posts (average per financial year)
Before launch of agency
1993–94	37,020,873	2,437
After launch of agency
1994–95	36,087,209	2,358
1995–96	30,907,849	1,960

Notes:

Figures are at 1995–96 prices and do not include trainees.

I am sending a copy of this letter to the Agency's owner, the Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief Personnel and Training Command.

Letter from I. S. Mitchelson to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the number and cost of civilian staff employed by this Agency in the year before it was established and for each year since as this matter falls within my area of responsibility. As a matter of interest the Service Children's Schools Agency was launched on 1 April 1991.

Each year since then I have published an Annual Report and Accounts which is laid before Parliament and held in the Parliamentary Library. This document contains a detailed analysis of staff numbers and costs which should be adequate to answer your question. For the year prior to the formation of this Agency, a total of 2,285 staff were employed at a cost of £37M.

Letter from John R. Prince to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 13 December 1995:

1. I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the number and cost of civilian staff employed in the Army Technical Support Agency as this matter falls in my area of responsibility.

2. The Army Technical Support Agency formed in October 1995 and hence I offer figures only for the current year. ATSA employs 817.5 civilian staff (as at October 1995 - which is the latest date for which I have accurate figures). The staff costs (which include all elements of pay) are anticipated to be £18.584M for the year April 1995 to March 1996 although this period includes the period before the agency was launched.

WE177 Free-fall Bomb

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration led to the decision to withdraw the WE.177 in 1998; what was the original date for withdrawal; and on what date that decision was taken. [5165]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The decision to withdraw WE177 from service by the end of 1998, announced on 4 April 1995, Official Report, column 1097, was reached in the light of the good progress being made in providing Trident with a sub-strategic capability. This capability will be fully robust when Vigilant enters service in 1998 and there is no requirement for us to maintain two systems in the sub-strategic role after that point. We had previously assessed that WE177 had the potential to remain in service until the early years of the next century.

Mr. Gordon Foxley

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement to the House when his Department has finished its investigations into the extent of the Gordon Foxley fraud case. [5654]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I refer the hon. Member to my predecessor's reply to the hon. Member for Rossendale and Darwen (Ms Anderson) of 23 November 1994, Official Report, columns 146–47.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the companies involved with the Gordon Foxley fraud case. [5655]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I refer the hon. Member to the evidence provided by my Department to the Committee of Public Accounts and reproduced at appendix 1 to the Committee's 46th report, which was published on 7 December 1995.

Drug Testing

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in which Army regiments whose personnel have been tested for drug use there have been no failures. [3803]

Mr. Soames: The units with negative results from the drug testing programme are as follows:

Anti-tank Mines

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Carshalton of 29 November, Official Report, column 768, if the scatterable anti-tank mines will contain mechanisms that will cause (a) their location to be identified by the launching forces and (b) to cause them to self destruct when their battlefield use is over. [5526]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The vehicle launched scatterable anti-tank mine system will be able to record the location of minefields it lays, and the number of mines placed into those minefields. The mines will have a short timed life which will be programmed at launch and at the end of which they will self destruct.

Illegal Nuclear Material

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what communications he has had with his South African counterpart concerning the allegations made in the recent book, details of which have been sent to him, in respect of the illegal acquisition of weapons useable nuclear materials. [5650]

Mr. Arbuthnot: None. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has received no information on this matter from the hon. Member.

Low Flying

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low-flying sorties were booked in the United Kingdom low flying system in 1994 by non-United Kingdom based aircraft from each foreign air force. [5182]

Mr. Soames: The numbers of sorties booked in the United Kingdom low flying system in 1994 by non United Kingdom-based foreign aircraft were as follows:

	Number
Australia	2
Belgium	31
Canada	126
Denmark	172

	Number
France	192
Germany	125
Greece	14
Holland	279
Italy	292
New Zealand	1
Norway	10
Portugal	8
Spain	68
USA	96
Total	1,416

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many sorties in the United Kingdom low flying system by (a) Hercules aircraft and (b) helicopters were authorised in 1994; and how many of the Hercules sorties were flown by foreign air forces. [5180]

Mr. Soames: A total of 2,240 sorties by Hercules aircraft and 44,989 sorties by helicopters were authorised in the United Kingdom low flying system during 1994. 10 of the Hercules sorties were flown by non-United Kingdom-based foreign aircraft.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low-flying sorties were booked in the United Kingdom low flying system by United Kingdom-based US Air Force aircraft during 1994. [5181]

Mr. Soames: United Kingdom-based US Air Force aircraft were booked to fly 3,684 sorties in the United Kingdom low flying system during 1994.

Apache Helicopters

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the requirement for air weapons ranges as a result of the purchase of Apache helicopters for the Army. [5237]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The qualification of the weapons for Apache will be the responsibility of the prime contractor and the necessary trials will be carried out on US ranges. The need for the use of ranges for training purposes is still being addressed. At this time, it is likely that such range training will be mainly for the cannon and the CRV7 rocket system with much of the training for the main anti-armour weapon, the Hellfire missile, being done through simulation. The policy for proof testing of weapon stocks is currently being addressed with other Apache users to minimise the need for live missile firings.

Redundancies

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many serving men and women in each of the armed forces have volunteered for redundancy during 1995; and what proportion of the total strength of each of the armed forces each of these numbers represents. [5038]

Mr. Soames: Applicants from Royal Navy and Royal Marines personnel have totalled some 3,800 and from RAF personnel some 11,540 during 1995, representing respectively 7.7 per cent. and 16.7 per cent. of total strength at 1 October 1995. The number of applicants has exceeded the requirement by about 1,400 and 2,940 respectively.

Information on the total number of Army applicants is not available. Of the total applicants, the number selected is 234, which is 0.2 per cent. of the Army's strength at 1 October 1995. The Army does not now envisage making more than about 280 redundancies, compared with the 500 previously announced.

In each service some selection of non-applicants has been or will be necessary in order to preserve balance within particular ranks and specialisations.

Army Workshops

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Army workshops. [5547]

Mr. Soames: The Army base repair organisation—ABRO—currently operates nine workshops. Two of these, at Old Dalby, Leicestershire and Ashford, Kent, are to close in 1996 in order to match capacity to lower levels of demand following the "Options for Change" review. The major workshop facility at Bovington, Dorset, operates under the terms of a five year service level agreement, following a successful in-house bid in the pilot ABRO market test. The future of the five workshops in the ABRO land command support group depends upon the outcome of the current market test of the service that the group delivers to Army land command throughout the United Kingdom except Northern Ireland.

The facility at Donnington, Shropshire, will be subject to scrutiny during 1996–97 to determine the most appropriate strategy to deliver the "Competing for Quality" objectives.

Burundi and Rwanda

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what recent consideration he has given to using British military aircraft to provide support for UN operations in (a) Rwanda and (b) Burundi; [5687]

(2) what recent consideration he has given to providing further British military equipment for UN operations in Rwanda; [5688]

(3) what recent consideration he has given to providing British logistical support for UN operations in (a) Rwanda and (b) Burundi; [5689]

(4) what recent consideration he has given to providing British military assistance to the OAU military observer mission in Burundi. [5690]

Mr. Soames: In 1994, the United Kingdom deployed a contingent of some 600 specialist troops to support the United Nations assistance mission for Rwanda—UNAMIR—for three months until United Nations logistics contractors were installed. Seven staff officers were also provided for UNAMIR headquarters. A request from the United Nations centre for human rights for advice to Rwanda in the field of military law, discipline and human rights is under consideration. No other requests for military equipment, support or assistance in Rwanda or Burundi have been received from the United Nations or the Organisation for African Unity.

Properties, Yeovil

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 30 November, Official Report, column 809, if the construction of properties in Yeovil by his Department involve the private finance initiative. [5691]

Mr. Soames: External consultants were employed to examine the interest in a private finance initiative approach for the construction of new family quarters at RNAS Yeovilton. Their opinion was that there was little or no commercial interest in a PFI approach.

However, separately, the MOD private finance unit has approached a number of banks, investment houses, property companies and housing partnerships. Their responses are awaited.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many mobile telephones used by Ministers in his Department have been cloned during (a) the last six months, (b) the last 12 months and (c) the last 18 months; and if he will indicate which Ministers within his Department have had their mobile telephones cloned. [4275]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 7 December 1995]: Between November 1994 and March 1995 the mobile telephones installed in the MOD official cars used by Ministers were cloned. Two hand-held mobile telephones, used by the personal staff of Minister (AF) and Minister (DP) were also cloned in this period. These mobile telephones were immediately changed to digital GSM models and no further incident of cloning has occurred.

ENVIRONMENT

British Coal Pumping Stations (Durham)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on environmental problems caused by the closure of British Coal pumping stations in the City of Durham constituency. [5131]

Mr. Clappison: I understand that the mine pumping stations in the Durham area continue to be maintained by the Coal Authority.

Metropolitan Wards

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is the proposed average electorate of each ward in the review of metropolitan ward boundaries; [5629]

(2) if he will make a statement on proposals in respect of ward boundaries in metropolitan areas; [5628]

(3) what plans he has to reduce the number of councillors on metropolitan councils; [5631]

(4) what assessment he has made of the effects of parliamentary constituency boundary proposals for changes to ward boundaries in metropolitan areas. [5627]

Sir Paul Beresford: The timetable and procedure for periodic electoral reviews, including in metropolitan areas, are a matter for the Local Government Commission, within the time constraints set down in the Local Government Act 1992. The commission consulted earlier in the year about the general principles which it will follow during those reviews.

Dioxins (Cheshire)

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all sites in Cheshire notified to his Department as contaminated with dioxin. [5437]

Mr. Clappison: No sites have been notified to my Department as contaminated with dioxins.

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will make a statement on the threat to public health caused by dioxin-contaminated sites in Cheshire, and what action will be taken to clean up these sites; [5438]

(2) what steps will be taken to protect public health in respect of sites in Cheshire that are contaminated with dioxin. [5439]

Mr. Clappison: I know of no sites in Cheshire which pose a risk to public health from dioxins.

Coal Mines (Accidents)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) fatal and (b) non-fatal industrial accidents there have been at each coal mine in England in 1995. [5519]

Sir Paul Beresford: Information for individual mines is not produced. Statistics for the industry are published as an aggregate figure in the Health and Safety Commission's annual report. Those for the first quarter of 1995 are included in the 1994–95 statistics, which were published in the commission's annual report last month. Copies have been placed in the House Library.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been (a) the number of fatal coal mine accidents and (b) the accident rate per 1,000 employees, in each year since 1979. [5520]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information is not available in the format requested for all years since 1979. Since 1984, the number of accidents have been recorded on a financial year basis. Information from April 1995 is not yet available. The table shows the number of fatal injuries and fatal accident rate per 1,000 employees from 1979.

Year	Fatal injuries	Accident rate per 1,000 employees
1979	46	0.19
1980	42	0.17
1981	35	0.15
1982	38	0.17
1983	30	0.15
1984–85	22	0.13
1985–86	29	0.18
1986–87	18	0.14
1987–88	12	0.11
1988–89	20	0.23
1989–90	19	0.27
1990–91	12	0.19
1991–92	12	0.23
1992–93	6	0.12
1993–94	7	0.27
1994–95	2	0.16

Non-native Animals

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all non-native species of birds, animals, fish and crustacean which (a) have established and (b) are suspected of having established a breeding population in the United Kingdom since 1945. [5552]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 13 December 1995]: The following species of bird, mammal, reptile and amphibian, and crustacea are thought to have been introduced since 1945 and are suspected of having established breeding populations. Introductions of all non-native freshwater fish species appear to have occurred before 1945. The Government's statutory scientific adviser, the Joint Nature Conservation Committee, indicates that other species are likely to have briefly established populations since 1945 but have now become extinct. Due to recording techniques and only the fleeting presence of some of these species, data are not readily available.

Birds	Animals (note some do not have common names)	Reptiles and amphibians	Crustacea (note some do not have common names)
Ruddy duck	American mink	Alpine newt	North American signal crayfish
Ring-necked parakeet	Pere Davids deer	African clawed toad	Turkish crayfish
Bar-headed goose	Sea anenonies and corals:	Fire-bellied toad	Noble crayfish
Muscovy duck[1]	Rhizogeton nudum		Red swamp crayfish
Snow goose	Clavopsella navis		Metatrichoniscoides leydigi (a woodlouse)
Swan goose	Anguillicola crassus (nematode worm)		Asellus communis (a freshwater woodlouse)
Barnacle goose[1]	Bristle worms:		Gammarus tigrinus (a shrimp)
Red-crested pochard	Goniadella gracilis		Arcitalitrus dorrieni
White-fronted goose[1]	Hydroides ezoensis
Lesser white-fronted goose[1]	Hydroides dianthus
Night heron[1]	Janua brasiliensis
	Pileolaria berkeleyana
	Marenzelleria viridis
	Ammothea hilgendorfi (Sea spider)
	Molluscs:
	Rapana venosa
	Crassostrea gigas
	Tiostrea lutaria
	Aulacomya ater
	Ensis americanus
	Styela clava (sea-squirt)

---

[1] These species occur naturally in the United Kingdom as vagrants or regular winter visitors, but their breeding populations are thought to be due largely to escapes or releases from captivity i.e. they are not native breeding species.

Opencast Mines

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all the planning applications for opencast coal mining sites he has received; which companies made the applications; and what his decision has been in each case since 1990. [5884]

Sir Paul Beresford: This information is not held centrally. It is for mineral planning authorities in the first instance to decide whether planning permission should be granted for opencast coal mining. Statistics are published annually for the County Planning Officers Society by Durham county council.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of bills to his Department were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. [5705]

Sir Paul Beresford: Ninety-two per cent.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimates he has made of the additional costs to be incurred by energy conservation authorities in producing reports required under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995; and from which departmental budget heading the required expenditure will be met. [6116]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: A total of £3 million has been transferred to the provision for rate support grant in 1996–97 and 1997–98 in respect of the new duty to produce energy conservation reports under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995 in accordance with the new burdens procedure agreed with the local authority associations. The transfer has been made from this Department's energy efficiency expenditure programme.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how he plans to stage the implementation of local government reorganisation to take account of the resources available. [6099]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson) on 8 December, Official Report, columns 407–08.

Local Government Pension Scheme

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to consult interested parties in England and Wales on proposed changes to the local government pension scheme; and if he will make a statement. [6557]

Sir Paul Beresford: A consultation paper is today being issued to local authorities in England and Wales, and to a wide range of other interested parties involved with local authority pensions, which takes forward our intentions to reduce central Government's involvement in the local government pension scheme and, at the same time, to increase the part played by local government in managing its pension responsibilities.

Our proposals would mean that the LGPS remains a public service pension scheme and that local government pensions will continue to be provided within a statutory framework. The benefits provided by the scheme both now and in the future will continue to have full statutory security. At the same time, local authority employers would have more discretion within that framework to develop more flexible pension arrangements and to adopt new pension structures to meet local circumstances.

Proposals are also put forward in the paper to reduce significantly the regulatory content of the current scheme regulations. Consultees are expressly invited to contribute to the Department's efforts to streamline the provision governing the LGPS, to weed out unnecessary and redundant requirements and to make the scheme's provisions more user friendly. Overall, this should mean less regulation and ultimately a reduced level of involvement by the Department in the operation of the scheme.

Representations on the proposals are requested by March 1996. Draft scheme regulations will be circulated for formal consultation in late 1996 and come into force in early 1997.

Housing Capital Funding

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to make an announcement about the distribution of housing capital funding for 1996–97. [6790]

Mr. Curry: I am today announcing decisions about the distribution of capital funding for housing in 1996–97.

Councils will receive housing investment programme allocations totalling over £1.2 billion for 1996–97. Under the competitive HIP process, we have again been able to direct funding to those councils that are best able to make use of them.

Within the HIP programme, £943 million is for general purpose allocations, the housing "annual capital guidelines". As last year, these have been allocated 40 per cent. on the basis of a statistical assessment of local housing needs and 60 per cent. on a competitive basis related to performance.

As part of the assessment of its programme, each local authority is required to submit a housing strategy statement, setting out a comprehensive framework for housing programmes for at least the next three years, covering not only the plans of the local authority but the contribution to be made by the private housing sector. The strategy is prepared in consultation with all those interested in the local housing scene, including the Housing Corporation, housing associations, tenants' groups and the private sector. Once again, there is a continuing improvement in the performance of the great majority of local authorities, with most of them now producing good quality housing strategies.

In addition to these annual capital guidelines, £270 million has been allocated for private sector renewal and housing defects in the form of "specified capital grant". Once again, 40 per cent. of funding has been distributed on a statistical assessment of local needs, and 60 per cent. on a competitive basis.

Since the competitive system was introduced in 1991, the performance of local housing authorities has improved considerably. As described in the housing White Paper published in June, local authorities have an important role as strategic enablers and the Government wish to encourage all authorities to produce good strategies and fulfil their functions effectively and efficiently. Therefore, I propose to change the system of annual capital guideline and specified capital grant allocations for 1997–98 to a fully competitive basis, under which 100 per cent. of the allocations locally will be decided competitively. The Department will be consulting representatives of the local authority associations on this proposal early next year.

I am depositing tables in the Library of the House showing each authority's annual capital guideline and specified capital grant allocation for 1996–97. Together, these comprise the HIP allocations. In addition, I am depositing a list of the authorities whose performance is assessed as being well above the average for their region.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the United Kingdom's progress towards meeting its commitment under the climate change convention to take measures aimed at returning carbon dioxide emissions to 1990 levels by the year 2000. [6791]

Mr. Gummer: I have today published an update of the carbon dioxide chapter of the United Kingdom climate change programme. The document, entitled "Progress Report on Carbon Dioxide Emissions", sets out details of policy developments and progress since January 1994 on each of the measures in the programme aimed at reducing carbon dioxide emissions.

The revised chapter reflects energy projections, published by the Department of Trade and Industry earlier this year, which indicate that carbon dioxide emissions will be 4 to 8 per cent. below 1990 levels by 2000. In the light of the latest evidence of man-made climate change and its effects, this is most welcome progress.

This rate of progress puts us at the forefront of international efforts to combat climate change and demonstrates once again the United Kingdom's determination not to promise more that it can deliver on its environmental commitments, but to do better if at all possible.

We shall continue to put pressure on others to achieve real cuts, and to agree new commitments for reducing greenhouse gas emissions for the period beyond 2000.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many civil servants are currently employed in those areas of his Department for which tenders have been sought under the private finance initiative, and how many he expects to be employed after the completion of this process. [5047]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: No tenders have yet been sought for any PFI project. It is likely that about 25 IT staff out of the current total of 91 will be affected by any eventual local office county count system—LOCCS—contract. The LOCCS computer system is expected to save staff time equivalent to 600 posts; however, it does not follow that there will be a reduction in staff numbers of the same magnitude. Initiatives such as Lord Woolf's proposals for the civil courts will almost certainly require the redeployment of skilled staff to new tasks. It is also possible that about another 11 posts will be affected by plans to establish a probate record centre to take over routine records storage functions from the Court Service.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the effects on job security of existing employees of his Department of the private finance initiative. [5046]

Mr. Evans: It is likely that the LOCCS project will affect about 25 IT staff. The Court Service has said that it will consult its trade union side on how any transfer of these staff to the successful bidder might be achieved, and on what terms, and whether there are alternatives to permanent transfer. Any permanent transfer would be on broadly equivalent terms, and conditions of service. It is also possible that the proposed probate records centre project will affect about 11 staff. The trade union side will also be consulted on these proposals.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to extend the private finance initiative to the administration of the magistrates courts. [4865]

Mr. Evans: There are no plans to include the administrative functions of the magistrates courts in PFI schemes for the provision of accommodation. Nor are there plans to apply PFI to the provision of existing computer systems there. The Department intends to explore whether PFI might make a helpful contribution in the replacement of those systems by the new standard system which is currently under development.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department for what routine administration elements of Crown and county court work tenders have been invited under the private finance initiative; and if this includes aspects of the work of court ushers, clerks and bailiffs. [5049]

Mr. Evans: Administrative functions currently performed in the Crown court and the county courts would not be covered by the LOCCS contract.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to respond to the concerns about the private finance initiative project, contained in Lord Woolf's interim report on the future of the civil justice system, with special reference to the role of the private sector in running the information technology infrastructure of the system and his Department's ability to retain control of issues of policy. [4868]

Mr. Evans: Any contractor will have to satisfy the Lord Chancellor's Department that confidentiality will be protected. The Department will retain full control of its policies and strategies.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will provide a breakdown of administration costs incurred to date and forecast for the future on PFI work. [5747]

Mr. Evans: Administrative costs incurred to date on the LOCCS procurement project amount to about £250,000. Expenditure of a further £300,000 is anticipated. As the scope of other PFI projects is still being defined and none has yet gone to procurement, it is too early to make meaningful estimates of the administrative costs to be incurred on them.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will provide revenue forecasts for the current year and the next five financial years of expenditure on schemes provided under the PFI. [5748]

Mr. Evans: Tentative initial forecasts of revenue expenditure under the LOCCS procurement project are: 1995–96 nil; 1996–97—£6 million; 1997–98—£8 million; 1988–99—£9 million; 1999–2000—£10 million; 2001–01—£10 million. As the scope of other PFI projects is still being defined and none has yet gone to procurement, it is too early to make meaningful estimates of the revenue expenditure to be incurred on them.

Contracting Out

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when his Department will consult (a) the Lord Chief Justice, (b) the Vice-Chancellor, (c) the Master of the Rolls, (d) the president of the family division, and (e) other members of the senior judiciary under schedule 16 to the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 on his proposals to contract out court functions, and what considerations underlay his decision not to consult them before tenders were invited. [5048]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Neither the local office county court system project nor the probate records centre project is at the stage where it becomes possible to have formal consultation under the terms of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994.

Court Listing

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment his Department has made of the constitutional implications of transferring the management of court listing to the private sector. [4866]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: There are no plans to transfer the management of court listing to the private sector.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of bills to his Department were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. [5701]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Department's general conditions of contract contain a clause informing suppliers that we shall make payment within agreed terms, or within 30 days of receipt of an invoice, where no such terms exist. The conditions also give advice on how to complain if the Department fails to make payment on time. Annual surveys of invoice payments are carried out, the latest of which showed that 93.8 per cent. of invoices were paid on time. The survey results, together with details of the Department's payment policies, are published in the annual report.

Mental Incapacity Report

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the Government's response to the Law Commission's report on mental incapacity will be published. [6115]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Government set up an interdepartmental working group, chaired by the Lord Chancellor's Department, to consider the Law Commission's report on mental incapacity. The group was asked to produce an initial report for consideration by Ministers by 1 September 1995 and has met this timetable. Ministers are now considering the report of the working group, together with that of the Law Commission. The Government will make an announcement of their initial view on the Law Commission's report once Ministers have had the opportunity to consider the implications of the proposals.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Departmental Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of bills to his Department were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. [5702]

Mr. Howard: The latest available figure is 92 per cent. as published in the Home Office annual report 1995.

Ministerial Meetings (Immigration)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many meetings the hon. Member for Leeds, North-East (Mr. Kirkhope) has had, to date, with right hon. and hon. Members since he was appointed a Minister in the Home Office to discuss immigration, asylum and nationality matters; how many requests for such meetings he has refused; and how many such meetings are pending. [6036]

Mr. Kirkhope: Since my appointment on 17 October 1995, I have had 13 meetings with right hon. and hon. Members on immigration, asylum and nationality cases. Two are pending. In addition, I have had numerous other discussions with hon. Members on individual cases. Information on the number of requests for meetings that I have refused is not readily available.

Charities (Police and Probation Services)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what reimbursement measures exist for charitable organisations in return for the work they carry out on behalf of statutory bodies with special reference to the police and probation services. [6042]

Mr. Sackville: It is for each police authority and the chief officer of police to determine whether, and how to, reimburse organisations which carry out work for the force. Under rule 41(a) of the Probation (Amendment) Rules 1994, probation services may make payments to voluntary organisations for the provision of a range of services. It is for chief probation officers to decide which organisations should be aided, having regard to local needs and priorities.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the arrangements for notifying the Benefits Agency if a country has undergone, or is undergoing, events likely to give rise to a well-founded form of persecution among its nationals are now in operation. [5938]

Miss Widdecombe: The arrangements will come into operation when the regulations about which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security is consulting have come into force. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department envisages that he will notify the Benefits Agency if a country undergoes a fundamental change of circumstances such that people are not normally being returned to that country for the time being.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is currently the average time a remand prisoner spends in custody while awaiting trial (a) in Durham and (b) in the United Kingdom. [5127]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter for England and Wales has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given. Information for Scotland and Northern Ireland are the responsibilities of the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Northern Ireland respectively.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Gerry Steinberg, dated 14 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking, what is the average time a prisoner spends in custody whilst awaiting trial (a) in Durham and (b) in the United Kingdom.

Information on the average time spent in custody for untried prisoners awaiting trial in Durham is not available. The available information on the estimated average time spent in custody for untried prisoners in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales in 1994 was given in a written reply to a Question from Mr. Jim Cunningham MP (Coventry South East) on 5 December (Col.210).

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimate of the additional annual costs incurred as a result of prisoners being held on remand beyond the statutory time limit. [1701]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Janet Anderson, dated 14 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking for the estimate of the additional annual costs incurred as a result of prisoners being held on remand beyond the statutory time limit.

The available information relates to Prison Service costs for additional time served by prisoners awaiting Crown Court trial beyond the statutory time limit. About seventy five per cent of such prisoners receive a custodial sentence so that no net additional period in prison occurs. Overall, the additional annual cost incurred by the Prison Service is approximately £5 million in the current year.

A reliable estimate of the cost of holding prisoners on magistrates' court remand in excess of the custody time limit is not available.

Visitors

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 28 November, Official Report, column 667, if he will make it his policy to record the dates on which visitors to the United Kingdom leave the country. [3791]

Mr. Kirkhope: No. A comprehensive system which matches arrival and embarkation records would not be a cost-effective way to operate immigration control. A more targeted approach in co-operation with the police and other agencies has proved to be a more successful way to detect and deal with people here unlawfully.

Asylum and Immigration Bill

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with (a) employers' organisations, (b) the civil service, (c) local government and (d) the health service on the costs of the implementation of the Asylum and Immigration Bill and the Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Amendment Regulations; and if he will make a statement. [6011]

Miss Widdecombe: The proposals in the Bill for preventing illegal employment were discussed with other Government Departments. A consultation document, including a compliance cost assessment, has been sent to employers' organisations, local government bodies, the National Association of Health Authorities and Trusts and other interested organisations. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security has consulted widely about the proposed benefit changes through the Social Security Advisory Committee and with the local authorities' associations. My hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration has had discussions with the Association of London Government.

Mr. Derek Lewis

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what formula was used in calculating the performance-related bonus paid to Mr. Derek Lewis during his employment as Director General of the Prison Service; [5632]

(2) if the terms and conditions of employment of the post of Director General of the Prison Service will include a performance-related element; [5630]

(3) how much was paid to Mr. Derek Lewis as a performance-related bonus during his employment as Director General of the Prison Service; and what percentage this figure was in relation to the salary he received. [5633]

Miss Widdecombe: Under the terms of his appointment, Mr. Lewis was entitled to a performance bonus of up to 35 per cent., of his salary, assessed on the basis of qualitative and quantitative measures reflecting performance against the Prison Service's key targets as set out in the agency's corporate and business plans. Such measures included reductions in escapes and assaults and an increase in purposeful activity for prisoners. For the period from his appointment on 6 January 1993 to 31 March 1993, a bonus of £8,280 was paid solely on the basis of his personal contribution to the Prison Service. For the 1993–94 financial year, when the Prison Service met or exceeded all of its key targets except one, Mr. Lewis received a bonus of £35,000 which represented 28 per cent. of his salary of £125,000. The precise formula used to assess Mr. Lewis's performance was personal to him and I have no plans to publish it. Mr. Lewis waived the bonus for 1994–95, despite meeting his targets, because of the escape from Whitemoor. The question of a bonus for the current year forms part of Mr. Lewis's legal action which is pending before the courts. My right hon. and learned Friend will make an announcement about the appointment of the director general when a substantive appointment is made.

Doncaster Prison

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the maximum inmate population of Doncaster prison; and how many (a) sentenced and (b) remand prisoners under 18 years of age were held there in each month of 1995. [5517]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 14 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about what was the maximum inmate population of Doncaster prison; and how many (a) sentenced and (b) remand prisoners under 18 years of age were held there in each month of 1995.

The maximum inmate population (operational capacity) of Doncaster prison is currently 850 prisoners.

The other information requested is given in the attached table. Records are only available from April 1995.

Sentenced and remand prisoners under the age of eighteen held at Doncaster since April 1995

Second Passports

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on the use of second passports purchased commercially in the United Kingdom. [5448]

Mr. Kirkhope: The national forgery section of the immigration service holds extensive information gathered over many years on "second passports". Its records include details of various companies offering such documents for sale and examples of some of those on offer. This information has been widely circulated within the immigration service to ensure that any attempted circumvention of the immigration control by use of these documents is quickly identified.

When arriving in the United Kingdom, or when seeking entry through the channel tunnel, a person must produce, on request by the immigration officer, a valid national passport or other document satisfactorily establishing his identity and nationality. A person holding a document purchased commercially would not fulfil this requirement.

Internet

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with his international counterparts about the possibility of joint action being taken to regulate the content of material disseminated via the Internet. [5470]

Mr. Sackville: None. The regulation of the Internet and other computer networks is a matter for my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

However, the interdepartmental group on obscenity is currently considering the issue of pornographic material disseminated via the Internet, and it has arranged a conference with Internet service providers in the United Kingdom to discuss the possible measures which can be taken to control access to such material.

National Lottery Charities Board

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the names of regional advisory panel members for the National Lottery Charities Board, identifying those who are elected councillors and their political affiliation. [5445]

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for the National Lottery Charities Board. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

TREASURY

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list all Departments for which forecasts of capital spending under the private finance initiative are available for (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–2001. [5756]

Mr. Jack: Table 6.5 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" gives the estimated figures for the survey period.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the policy with regard to the disclosure of information on schemes under the private finance initiative and the extent to which issues of commercial confidentiality affect such disclosure. [5758]

Mr. Jack: The duty of Departments to account to Parliament for their spending is not changed by the private finance initiative. Disclosure while negotiations are still proceeding would usually weaken the Government's negotiating position. Nevertheless, the National Audit Office has access to documents relating to private finance initiative contracts, as it does for other contracts. In line with reporting arrangements for other contracts, information on private finance initiative schemes can be disclosed after a contract has been settled, except where there is a specific undertaking of commercial confidentiality on a particular matter.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if his Department receives from other Departments information on all private finance initiative schemes. [5757]

Mr. Jack: The PFI is a decentralised initiative. Individual Secretaries of State have the responsibility for driving forward the initiative in their areas. As such, not every project will require direct Treasury approval and as a consequence we will not receive information centrally on every PFI project.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide for schemes so far agreed under the PFI the level of financing costs above the current cost of Government borrowing for the scheme with (a) the highest financing costs and (b) the lowest costs. [5727]

Mr. Jack: The information is not available in the form requested because it is a fundamental principle when considering schemes under the private finance initiative that what is assessed is the overall best value for money in providing a specified service, taking into account all aspects of design, building, finance and operation as a unified whole.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total annual cost to public funds of schemes to be funded by the private finance initiative at current prices for each of the next 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [5464]

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide revenue forecasts for the current year and the next five years of expenditure on schemes provided under the PFI. [5726]

Mr. Jack: It is for individual Departments to estimate the revenue costs of the PFI projects in their sphere of the responsibility, and to take these costs into account in their expenditure plans. However, on the basis of assessments of four major Departments, total service payments in the current year and the next three years are expected to be, very broadly:

1995–96: [ ]
1996–97: 130
1997–98: 295
1998–99: 460

However, these are only indicative numbers. The precise size and timing of revenue payments depend on agreement to projects, many of which are currently under negotiation, and on the subsequent delivery and levels of use of specific services to specified standards. Central information is not available for the full 10 years requested.

Departmental Fraud

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the Treasury report on departmental fraud in all Government Departments for 1995–96; and if he will make a statement. [6033]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Copies of the latest "Dear Accounting Officer" letter and accompanying analysis, which contain information on frauds reported by Departments for the financial year 194–95, were placed in the Library of the Houses on 11 December 1995. The documents are also available to the public.

Draft EC Budget

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the organisations receiving subsidies for advancing the idea of Europe cited in budget item A–304 in the EC 1996 draft budget indicating the amounts they receive and the specific purpose behind the provision of funds. [5901]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The criteria for the types of project which will be eligible for funding from this budget line next year are set out in the commentary appended to line A–304 of the draft general budget of the European Communities, a copy of which is in the Library. Precisely how these funds are spent is a matter for the European Commission, to which questions about the detail of expenditure in 1996 and previous years should be addressed.

European Community Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the statement of the Secretary of State for the Environment of 21 November, Official Report, column 454, if he will make it his policy to review past legislation in respect of additional burdens imposed by regulation implementing European directives. [5074]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 11 December 1995]: It is the policy in the Departments of the Chancellor of the Exchequer to ensure that we do not "gold-plate" European directives by the addition of unnecessary burdens when implementing them in the United Kingdom. We will take every opportunity to look at existing legislation in the light of this policy.

Inland Revenue (Referred Cases)

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions in each year since 1965, High Court judges have referred details of a case to the Inland Revenue. [5549]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 13 December 1995]: The Inland Revenue does not maintain such records.

Air Quality Monitoring

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the additional resources to be made available to local authorities to implement air quality monitoring commitments made in the Environment Act 1995 following his 1995 Budget statement. [4943]

Mr. Clappison: I have been asked to reply.

Phased implementations of local authorities' new duties in respect of air quality under the Environment Act 1995 will begin next year. The first phase will involve a representative number of local authorities in England, Scotland and Wales. Criteria for selecting the authorities are being prepared by the local authority air quality management working group of central and local government officials set up by the Department of the Environment to assist with implementation of part IV of the Act. We will shortly announce the first phase authorities and will make funds available to cover necessary increased expenditure.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to publish the recent efficiency scrutiny on the TEC contract and management fee; and if she will make a statement. [6727]

Mr. Paice: A copy of the report of the scrutiny team has been place in the Library.

Although it is too early to comment on the detail of the report, I am very eager to reduce administrative burdens on TECs where these are shown to be unnecessary and the Department will be looking at its recommendations very carefully.

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress Aztec and Solotec are making in meeting the criteria for the award of a three-year licence. [6726]

Mr. Paice: I am pleased to announce the award of three-year licences to Aztec and the South London training and enterprise council, which have now completed the process of meeting the rigorous standards we set.

International Labour Conference

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has for publishing the White Paper on the instruments adopted at the 81st session of the international labour conference 1994. [6652]

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have today published the White Paper entitled "International Labour Conference."

Access to Work

Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have been assisted under the access to work programme; and if she will make a statement. [6932]

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In 1994–95, the first year of operation, over 10,300 people were assisted under the access to work programme. In 1995–96, it is estimated that some 10,000 people have already received support.

On present trends, planned provision for the programme in 1995–96—£13.4 million—will be exceeded to a significant extent. While I have been able to allocate additional funds to meet the demands made so far on the programme this year, it is necessary to implement the priority within the programme for unemployed people in order to keep expenditure within the resources available.

I am therefore announcing that, with effect from 18 December, funding will be targeted on meeting existing commitments; to applications to renew arrangements which fully satisfy the programme's present rules and criteria and which would otherwise lapse; and to people with disabilities who have been unemployed for at least four weeks. The Government believe that this is the most equitable way of allocating the limited resources available.

The Government recognise the importance of the programme to people with disabilities and to employers. The planned provision for the programme next year has therefore been maintained. Before reaching decisions on 1996–97, the Govnerment will publish the research they have commissioned on the first year, and enter into discussions with the organisations principally concerned on the operation of the programme next year.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of bills to her Department were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. [5706]

Mr. Robin Squire: A total of 6,419 invoices were sampled in four separate prompt payment exercises during 1994–95. The results showed that 6,387 of these invoices were paid within 30 days—95 per cent of the sample.

Schools (Self-government)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many responses she has received to the consultation paper on self-government for voluntary-aided schools from (a) voluntary-aided schools, (b) grant-aided maintained former voluntary-aided schools, (c) local authority associations, (d) local education authorities and (e) Church bodies. [5777]

Mrs. Gillan: The information requested is set out in the following table:

Body	Number of responses
(a) Voluntary aided schools	1,629
(b) Former voluntary grant-maintained schools[1]	16
(c) Local authority associations[2]	4
(d) Local education authorities	74
(e) Church Bodies[3]	68

[1] Includes former voluntary-controlled, as well as former voluntary-aided, GM schools.

[2] Includes national and local associations.

[3] Includes national religious bodies and Church of England and Roman Catholic diocesan boards.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many responses she has received in respect of the consultation paper on self-government for voluntary-aided schools; how many of them were in favour of each of the options listed in the paper; and how many of them were in favour of the proposals. [5780]

Mrs. Gillan: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received almost 2,000 responses to the Department's consultation paper on self-government for voluntary-aided schools. We are currently completing the analysis of these responses. A summary will be made available in due course, and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many grant-maintained schools were formerly (a) voluntary-aided schools (b) voluntary-aided Church schools; and in each case what proportion of the total number of voluntary-aided schools this represents. [5781]

Mrs. Gillan: Some 231 grant-maintained schools were formerly voluntary aided, and 204 of these were voluntary-aided Church schools. This means that some 6 per cent. of all existing and former voluntary-aided schools and 5 per cent. of existing and former voluntary-aided Church schools have transferred to the grant maintained sector.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress has been made by her Department in taking forward proposals for the expansion of the assisted places scheme; and how much her Department estimates this will cost in the future financial years for which figures are available when this has been achieved. [5822]

Mrs. Gillan: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to the hon. Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway) on 29 November, Official Report, columns 711–12 about arrangements for the expansion of the assisted places scheme. As to the cost of the expansion in future years, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett) on 4 December, Official Report, column 117.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which independent sector schools charged (a) the highest and (b) the lowest level of fees to pupils covered by the assisted places scheme in the academic year 1994–95; and what charges were levied. [5826]

Mrs. Gillan: The school which charged the highest fee in academic year 1994–95 was Charterhouse, at £9,459 in respect of its sixth form assisted pupils. Salesian college, Farnborough charged the lowest fee at £2,604.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much her Department has spent on the operation of the assisted places scheme in each year since 1981; how many (a) pupils and (b) institutions were covered by the scheme; and what was the overspend on the budget allocated to the scheme. [5791]

Mrs. Gillan: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett), on 24 October, Official Report, column 623, for the information about expenditure and the numbers of pupils covered by the scheme. The number of independent schools participating in the scheme for each academic year since 1981 is given in the following table:

Assisted places scheme

Academic year	Number of participating schools
1981–82	220
1982–83	220
1983–84	223
1984–85	226
1985–86	226
1986–87	226
1987–88	226
1988–89	226
1989–90	278
1990–91	295
1991–92	295
1992–93	295
1993–94	295
1994–95	294

The figures relate to England only.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools covered by the assisted places scheme received (a) more than £1 million, (b) over £750,000 (c) over £500,000 and (d) over £250,000 under the assisted places scheme for each academic year since 1981. [5819]

Mrs. Gillan: The information requested for each academic year since 1981 is not available and could be derived only at disproportionate cost. Information is available in respect of the academic year 1994–95; the number of participating schools in each category is (a) four, (b) 19, (c) 76 and (d) 176.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many independent sector schools have had (a) more than 25 per cent., (b) more than 50 per cent. and (c) less than 5 per cent. of their rolls made up of pupils covered by the assisted places scheme. [5829]

Mrs. Gillan: The information requested is available in respect of the academic year 1994–95; the number of schools in each category is (a) 44, (b) 1 and (c) 47.

Discretionary Awards

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what evaluation has been made of the effect of the 1995–96 budget settlement on (a) discretionary awards and (b) the youth service;

(2) what evaluation of the likely effect on (a) discretionary awards and (b) the youth service was made in calculating education standard spending assessments for 1996–97. [5831]

Mr. Forth: Spending on discretionary awards and the youth service in 1995–96 and in 1996–97 will depend on the decisions of individual local education authorities.

Training (Social Fund Claims)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to reduce the amounts due to be paid to training providers in respect of training provided in 1994 and financed by the European social fund as a result of exchange rate fluctuations; what is the total amount to be held back; how many training providers will be affected; and if she will make a statement. [6147]

Mr. Paice: Because of fluctuations in the exchange rate, the Government have not yet received sufficient funds from the European Commission to pay 1994 European social fund final claims in full. Applicants will therefore receive 95 per cent. of the total eligible costs of their projects. No money is being held back. The final claims presented to the European Commission for 1994 have been paid in full in ecu; the shortfall for applicants results from the translation of ecu into sterling.

Additional information is now being sought from applicants to enable the claim to be recalculated in a way which should provide more sterling to enable further payments to be made in due course. There were 1,512 applicant organisations in 1994.

Employee Fraud

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the number and value of fraud cases excluded from the figures contained in his answer of 24 October, Official Report, column 612, because no perpetrators were found. [6088]

Mr. Forth: The number of cases excluded from the answer of the 24 October are as follows:

	Number of cases	Amount involved	Amount recovered
1993–94
DfEE	4	£13,244	£ nil
1994–95
DfEE	5	£42,063	£10,800

1. Not all of the above cases were reported on the Treasury returns.
2. The perpetrators of the above cases were not necessarily members of the Department or its agencies.
3. There were no recorded cases involving the Employment Service or other agencies.

School Admissions (Appeals)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many appeals were made by parents on the grounds of non-admission of their child to the school of their choice in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; how many of these appeals went before a statutory committee; and of these how many were (i) rejected and (ii) found in parents' favour. [6150]

Mrs. Gillan: The available information is shown in the following table:

Appeals by parents against non-admission of their children to maintained (including grant maintained) primary and secondary schools in England

Academic year 1993–94

Total appeals lodged[1]	Appeals heard by a statutory committee[2]	Appeals rejected	Appeals found in parents' favour
45,876	32,188	18,891	13,255

[1] Includes appeals which were withdrawn by parents or settled to mutual satisfaction before reaching a statutory committee.

[2] Includes appeals heard by a statutory committee for which a decision was still to be made at the end of the academic year.

Nursery Education

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many three and four-year-olds in each local education authority attended (a) nursery schools, (b) nursery classes and (c) reception classes in primary school. [6189]

Mr. Robin Squire: The available information on pupils aged three and four in maintained nursery and primary schools for each local education authority in England is shown in the following table:

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the total cost (a) nationally and (b) to each local education authority of teachers' pay increases in (i) 1994–95 and (ii) 1996–97. [5792]

Mr. Robin Squire: The total estimated cost in England and Wales of the teachers' pay increase in 1994–95 was £309 million. The following table illustrates the cost of the award by updating the 1993–94 expenditure recorded by local education authorities in England and Wales for teaching staff salaries in nursery and primary, secondary and special schools by the 1994–95 teachers' pay award of 2.9 per cent. The 1993–94 expenditure figures are the latest available for LEA-maintained schools in England and Wales. The figures in the table take no account of changes in teacher numbers or other factors that affect the teachers' pay bill.

The School Teachers Review Body has not yet recommended a pay award for 1996–97.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the national cost of a 2.5 per cent. increase in teachers' pay in 1996–97. [5793]

Mr. Squire: The Department is still working on its best estimate of the teachers' pay bill for 1996–97 for the School Teachers Review Body. On the basis of the estimated pay bill for 1995–96, the cost of a 2.5 per cent. increase in teachers' pay in 1996–97 in England and Wales would be approximately £280 million.

Local Education Authority Expenditure

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the average amount of money spent by her Department on a pupil in a public sector school at (a) primary and (b) secondary level for each academic year since 1981. [5795]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table shows in both cash and 1993–94 prices, the net institutional expenditure per pupil in local education authority-maintained (a) pre-primary and primary and (b) secondary schools, in each financial year between 1981–82 and 1993–94, the latest year for which outturn figures are available. These figures are available only in financial years.

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many independent schools excluding city technology colleges are operating in the current academic year in England. [5825]

Mrs. Gillan: There are currently 2,272 independent schools registered by the Department, excluding city technology colleges.

Conductive Education

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans there are to make conductive education available for children whose parents choose it. [5834]

Mrs. Gillan: Responsibility for providing for children with special educational needs rests with local education authorities. For those children whose needs cannot be met within the ordinary resources of a mainstream school, LEAs will maintain statements of SEN, drawn up in consultation with parents. Where a child's statement specifies conductive education, the LEA has a duty to secure its provision.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment has been made of the value and achievements of conductive education. [5816]

Mrs. Gillan: The results of a Department-funded five-year research project undertaken by the university of Birmingham were published in 1993. These indicated that conductive education did not generally produce better results than other methods for teaching children with cerebral palsy.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many institutions provide conductive education for children with special educational needs; and how many children are currently receiving conductive therapy in each institution. [5811]

Mrs. Gillan: The Department does not collect this information.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Civil Service Year Book

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when the civil service year book for 1996 will be published. [6728]

Mr. Willetts: The civil service year book 1996 will be published by HMSO on Monday 18 December. This is the first time it has been available for the beginning of the calendar year. This publication updates and extends the range of information available about ministerial appointments, Government Departments and agencies. A CD-ROM version will also be published simultaneously, providing additional key statistics. Copies of both will be placed in the House Libraries.

Public Bodies

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many non-departmental public bodies are currently in existence; what percentages of appointments to these bodies are held by women and by members of ethnic minorities; and when the annual list of such bodies will be published. [6649]

Mr. Willetts: On 1 April 1995, there were 1,227 non-departmental public bodies—a fall of 118 or 8.8 per cent. since 1994, and of 940 or 43 per cent. since 1979. As of 1 September 1995, 30 per cent. of appointments to these bodies were held by women and 2.9 per cent. by members of the ethnic minorities: this compares with 23 per cent. and 2.0 per cent. respectively four years ago, when the Prime Minister announced the Government's determination to increase the representation of women and ethnic minorities in this area. Details can be found in "Public Bodies 1995" published today. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

Civil Service Recruitment

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will publish the reports of the independent studies on marketing the civil service's fast stream recruitment scheme and the audit of the fast stream selection process which were announced earlier this year. [6878]

Mr. Willetts: The Government announced in January their intention to commission an external, expert review of the marketing of the fast stream recruitment scheme and an independent audit of the selection process. Copies of the reports of both studies have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

The independent audit has investigated very thoroughly the current system of selection to the fast stream. Its general conclusions are that this is a well-administered and highly professional process and that all reasonable measures have been taken to develop a system which is fair and balanced. The report makes a number of recommendations which "represent suggestions for 'fine tuning' rather than radical change".

Most of these have been accepted and action is in hand to implement them.

The marketing study has identified a number of key actions needed if the attractiveness of the fast stream to potential recruits is to be strengthened and broadened. A programme of action has therefore been agreed, for introduction in the 1996 recruitment competition. The name of the revised scheme, will be the "fast stream development programme", retaining the "fast stream" brand identified by the marketing study as a valuable asset, but making clearer that entry is to a development programme of limited duration.

The Government announced on 23 November their intention to transfer recruitment and assessment services to the private sector as a single viable business and in a way which will ensure that it retains its reputation for the provision of high quality recruitment services. The sale of RAS will include a contract for the fast stream recruitment process for future civil servants, specifying the services required, including any necessary changes stemming from the independent audit and marketing study.

Fuller information about the revised scheme will be contained in the annual report on fast stream recruitment, due to be published in May 1996.

Deregulation

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list those European capitals he has (a) visited and (b) plans to visit to discuss deregulation and give the total estimated cost to public funds of these visits. [5877]

Mr. Freeman: I have discussed deregulation with Ministers, EU Commissioners and business leaders in Paris, Bonn, Madrid, The Hague, Copenhagen, Stockolm, Helsinki and Brussels. I intend to have further discussions with Ministers of the remaining European Union countries. The travel costs associated with the visits already undertaken is estimated to be £9,790. Arrangements for further visits are yet to be made.

Computers

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister in what way the Government are responding to the problem of non-recognition by computers of the year 2000 in respect of those computers used by (a) their own Departments and (b) large and small businesses; and if he will make a statement. [5530]

The Deputy Prime Minister: CCTA, the Government centre for information systems, has been discussing this matter with other Government organisations and the IT industry, and will be assessing existing guidance, and what action or advice may be required on the part of Government, during the first quarter of 1996.

Advice and help to large and small businesses are available through specialist publications, from the Computing Services and Software Association and from a number of private sector suppliers.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will provide revenue forecasts for the current year and the next five years of expenditure on schemes provided under the PFI. [5715]

Mr. Freeman: The Government's Metropolitan Telecommunications Service is already largely provided by the private sector, which owns much of the infrastructure. The Office of Public Service hopes to involve private finance further in the provision of software used by Government Departments. This could involve capital expenditure of some £1.5 million in 1996–97, but it is not yet clear what revenue expenditure would replace the capital expenditure programme.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what percentage of bills to his Department were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. [5707]

Mr. Willetts: The Cabinet Office's performance in respect of the payment of invoices from its suppliers is published in the annual departmental report, Cm 2820. That report gave information in respect of 1994. The next report, due to be published in March 1996, will provide information relating to the payment of invoices during 1995.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much his Department has spent on official hospitality in the financial year to date; and what is the 1995–96 projected budget for official hospitality. [5585]

Mr. Willetts: Expenditure on official hospitality by the Cabinet Office, including the Office of Public Service, and its executive agencies, excluding HMSO—for the period 1 April 1995 to the end of November is £30,100. Expenditure by HMSO, which has a different accounting year, is £33,900, for the period 1 January to the end of November.

The projected budget for official hospitality in the full financial year 1995–96 is £41,200. This excludes HMSO and COI. The latter does not separately identify hospitality within its budgeting system, as it is included as part of its overall budget for marketing and client relations. HMSO's projected budget for its financial year 1995 is £37,000.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

British Goods and Services

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) proportion and (b) value in pounds sterling of the overseas aid budget has been tied to the purchase of British goods or services in each year since 1979–80. [5120]

Mr. Hanley: The information is as follows:

Year	Bilateral tied aid (£ million)	Percentage of total bilateral aid
1979	525	77
1980	489	70
1981	563	67
1982	471	70
1983	460	66
1984	477	61
1985	523	63
1986	598	71
1987	529	69
1988	692	69
1989	787	71
1990	740	71
1991	933	73
1992	650	67
1993	703	65
1994	557	54

1. Tying status data is only available for the United Kingdom's bilateral aid programme. No reliable data are available for the tying status of technical cooperation so all of this aid is reported to the Development Assistance Committee (DAC) of the OECD as being tied and is included in the above figures.

2. The DAC definition of tied aid means that procurement is restricted to a specified number of countries. Data on aid specifically tied to the procurement of British goods and services are unavailable.

3. In addition, aid is given to multilateral agencies who also procure British goods and services.

Natural Resources Institute

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress there has been in deciding the future ownership of the Natural Resources Institute. [6789]

Mr. Hanley: We have carefully considered indicative offers for the ownership of the Natural Resources Institute received by the closing date of 16 October. The Government's objective is a transfer of ownership which will continue to provide a centre of multidisciplinary expertise on the sustainable management of renewable natural resources for ODA and other customers, gives staff a fair future, and represents value for money for the taxpayer. My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development has decided to invite final offers by the end of January 1996 from:

Cranfield university;

A consortium of the university of Edinburgh, university of Greenwich, Imperial College of Science Technology and Medicine and Wye College, university of London;

Serco International Ltd. in association with the university of Wales.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Public Opinion Surveys

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list all qualitative and quantitative research projects and surveys carried out for his Department into aspects of public attitudes and opinions (a) in general and (b) in relation to specific policy proposals in each of the past three years to December 1995, indicating for each project or survey (i) the date on which the research was commissioned, (ii) the amount which his Department spent, (iii) who carried out the research, (iv) the number of people surveyed or taking part, (v) the location and time scale and (vi) the number of people surveyed or taking part, (vi) which individuals and organisations have been given access to the findings. [5972]

Mr. Newton: No such surveys have been carried out for the Privy Council Office in the last three years.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Debates (Bilateral Agreements)

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Lord President of the Council in what circumstances it is his policy to accede to a request for a debate by an hon. Member on certain bilateral agreements or international treaties. [5410]

Mr. Newton: It is not possible to specify, in advance, the circumstances in which a request for a debate will be acceded to.

PRIME MINISTER

Official Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 14 December. [4475]

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 14 December. [4476]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister is in Paris signing the Dayton agreement on Bosnia.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will discuss with Chancellor Kohl the aspects of the Lockerbie issue pertaining to events at the Rhein-Main airport at Frankfurt in December 1988, and the desirability of a trial of two Libyan suspects at The Hague, under a Scottish judge, under Scottish rules of evidence. [4162]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has no plans to do so.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Television Licence Fees

Mr. Coe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will announce the television licence fees which will take effect from 1 April 1996. [3911]

Mr. Sproat [pursuant to his reply, 30 November 1995, Official Report, c. 818]: After further detailed scrutiny, an administrative error has come to light regarding the rounding of the figure for the new colour television licence fee payable from 1 April 1996. As a result of this additional review, licence fee payers will now have to pay only £89.50 for a colour television licence rather than the £90 initially announced.

This change will not affect the BBC's ability to provide its wide range of television and radio services. The BBC's own financial planning should already have anticipated the level of funding that it could expect in the financial year 1996–97.

This announcement does not affect the new black and white television licence fee, which will be £30 from 1 April 1996. The necessary regulations will be laid before the House in due course.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Morocco

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action Her Majesty's Government are taking to encourage the Government of Morocco to release Jamaa Ait Bakrim. [5660]

Mr. Hanley: Our embassy in Rabat have been in contact with the Moroccan Ministry of Human Rights about this case. We understand that Mr. Bakrim is accused of proselytising and that his case has gone to appeal.

Gibraltar

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's position on the future of Gibraltar. [6250]

Mr. David Davis: The then Minister of State, my right hon. Friend the Member for Watford (Mr. Garel-Jones) made clear the Government's position in the House on 6 December 1990, Official Report, columns 188-89. It has not changed.

First, and most important, Britain stands by its commitment to the people of Gibraltar, enshrined in the 1969 constitution. The Government will not enter into arrangements under which the people of Gibraltar would pass under the sovereignty of another state against their freely and democratically expressed wishes.

Secondly, we continue to recognise the validity of the treaty of Utrecht, which established British title to Gibraltar. Article X of that treaty gave Spain the right of "first refusal" if Gibraltar ceased to be British. Any constitutional change would have to be compatible with the treaty of Utrecht and sustainable in practice. Independence would be an option for Gibraltar only if Spain agreed.

Thirdly, Spain is Gibraltar's immediate neighbour. The Government recognise the importance of negotiations with Spain, including through the Brussels process, to overcome the existing differences over Gibraltar. Our ultimate goal is to achieve a lasting solution which is acceptable to all parties and mutually beneficial.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of bills to his Department were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. [5704]

Mr. Hanley: Both wings of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office are committed to the Confederation of British Industry prompt payment code, which requires all invoices to be paid within the agreed credit period or within 30 days of receipt where no credit period has been agreed. The following table shows the percentage of invoices paid on time by the diplomatic wing, the Overseas Development Administration and the executive agencies Wilton Park and the Natural Resources Institute.

	DW	ODA	WP	NRI
1994–95	92	87	95	96
1995–96[1]	92	91	100	93

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will provide revenue forecasts for the current year and the next five years of expenditure on schemes provided under the PFI. [5754]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave him on 7 November 1995, Official Report, column 694.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will provide a breakdown of administration costs incurred to date and forecast for the future on PFI work. [5743]

Mr. Hanley: The FCO—diplomatic wing and the Overseas Development Administration—has incurred £38,870 identifiable staff costs and £20,257 consultancy costs in administering the PFI to date. The resources required to administer the PFI are kept under review.

Public Opinion Surveys

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all qualitative and quantitative research projects and surveys carried out for his Department into aspects of public attitudes and opinions (a) in general and (b) in relation to specific policy proposals in each of the past three years to December 1995, indicating for each project or survey (i) the date on which the research was commissioned,

(ii) the amount which his Department spent, (iii) who carried out the research, (iv) the number of people surveyed or taking part, (v) the location and time scale and (vi) which individuals and organisations have been given access to the findings. [5986]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answers given by the then Minister of State, my right hon. Friend the Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad) on 27 October 1994, Official Report, columns 760–61, and by the then Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Banbury (Mr. Baldry) on 20 March 1995, Official Report, columns 48–49. The opinion survey in question has been published in the House of Commons Library.

As part of a survey on the effectiveness of its external communications survey, the Overseas Development Administration commissioned National Opinion Poll to conduct a public opinion survey which looked generally at the way the public viewed the aid programme. This cost £3,705 plus VAT and was carried out in mid-November 1995.

EC Consular Service

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the Government have to promote a European consular service to represent European Union citizens in third countries at the next intergovernmental conference. [5903]

Mr. David Davis: None. However, under article 8c of the EC treaty as revised at Maastricht, every citizen of the Union is entitled to protection by the diplomatic or consular authorities of any member state on the same conditions as the nationals of that state. This right has been implemented by decisions of the Council agreed in principle on 20 November 1995.

TRANSPORT

Public Opinion Surveys

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all qualitative and quantitative research projects and surveys carried out for his Department into aspects of public attitudes and opinions (a) in general and (b) in relation to specific policy proposals in each of the past three years to December 1995, indicating for each project or survey (i) the date on which the research was commissioned, (ii) the amount which his Department spent, (iii) who carried out the research, (iv) the number of people surveyed or taking part, (v) the location and time scale and (vi) which individuals and organisations have been given access to the findings. [5978]

Mr. Norris: The information is not available in the form requested.

Fishing Vessels (Registration)

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he is taking to change the regulation for registration of fishing vessels from other EC countries at British ports. [4153]

Mr. Norris: The regulations were amended to take account of our treaty obligations by the Merchant Shipping (Registration of Ships) Regulations 1993.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of bills to his Department were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. [5695]

Mr. Watts: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Dover (Mr. Shaw) on 18 July, Official Report, columns 1211–12.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will provide a breakdown of administration costs incurred to date and forecast for the future on PFI work. [5728]

Mr. Watts: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Nottingham, South (Mr. Simpson) by the Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Epping Forest (Mr. Norris), on 9 May, Official Report, column 349.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will provide revenue forecasts for the current year and the next five years of expenditure on schemes provided under the PFI; [5729]

(2) if he will provide for schemes so far agreed under the PFI the level of financing costs above the current cost of Government borrowing for the scheme with (a) the highest financing costs and (b) the lowest costs. [5730]

Mr. Watts: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him on 6 December, Official Report column 277.

Departmental Fraud

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the total number and cost of all forms of fraud affecting his Department and its agencies and non-departmental public bodies, as set out in the returns to Her Majesty's Treasury for departmental fraud for each year since 1990–91; and if he will make a statement. [6137]

Mr. Norris: The information is as follows:

Year	Number	Amount £
1990–91	3	17,378
1991–92	7	36,771
1992–93	10	3,822
1993–94	15	10,410
1994–95	9	[1]176,896

[1] This includes the sum of £174,440 which reflects the losses suffered as a result of two overnight raids on departmental premises by thieves.

Humber Bridge

Mr. Jessel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was (a) the total cost to public funds of constructing the Humber bridge (i) in capital costs and (ii) in accumulated revenue losses, (b) the amount of revenue loss in each of the last five years, (c) the charge for each vehicle crossing in each year since construction and (d) the number of vehicles of different types of vehicle crossing in each year; who pays the losses in respect of the bridge currently; what powers exist to control who pays the losses and what options are available under present legislation; and what changes he plans. [6161]

Mr. Watts: The cost of constructing the Humber bridge was met out of loans from the Department of Transport and the Public Works Loan Board: this initial cost to public funds was £151 million. By September 1991 that opening debt had risen by £288 million to £439 million through the capitalisation of interest charges that could not be met out of toll revenue. From February 1992, grants under the Appropriation Acts have been paid to meet a capital repayment to the PWLB and unmet interest charges on the Department's loans. By March 1996 these will have totalled £168 million. Capitalised interest and grant payments therefore represent a total extra cost of £456 million. In the last five years the revenue shortfall that has resulted in a capitalisation of debt or grant payments has been approximately £39 million per annum.

The charges for each class of vehicle since the bridge opened are as follows:

Class	June 1981 to 31 December 1985 £	1 January 1986 to 31 December 1987 £	1 January 1988 to 6 August 1989 £	7 August 1989 to present £
1) Motorcycles	0.50	0.60	0.70	0.70
2) Private cars and light vans	1.00	1.20	1.50	1.60
3) Cars and light vans with trailers	2.00	2.40	2.90	2.90
4) Heavy commercial vehicles class A–2 axles	4.50	5.20	5.20	6.50
5) Class B–3 axles	6.00	6.60	6.60	8.70
6) Class C–4 or more axles	7.50	8.00	8.00	10.90
7) Light commercial vehicles and minibuses	2.00	2.40	2.90	Merged with class three
8) Buses and coaches	4.50	5.20	5.20	Merged with class four

The number of vehicles using the crossing in each of those classes is:

Description	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
Motor-cycles	44,070	44,554	46,073	47,514
Cars and light vans	4,493,922	4,740,806	4,958,937	5,081,583
Cars and light vans with trailers (includes mini buses and light comm.)	169,393	179,654	182,789	186,959
Heavy comm.-2 axles (includes service buses and coaches)	139,427	141,291	144,120	143,305
Heavy comm. 3 axles	27,296	27,922	28,941	30,538
Heavy comm. 4+ axles	229,108	228,732	253,623	257,799
Heavy comm. sub total	395,831	397,945	426,684	431,642
Exempt vehicles	118,023	127,563	141,134	161,272
Total	5,221,239	5,490,522	5,755,617	5,908,970

Under the present legislation, any deficits may be met by a precept upon three of the local authorities of Humberside. The Humber Bridge (Debts) Bill currently before Parliament will enable the Secretary of State to write off and suspend parts of that debt and so lift the risk of a substantial burden falling upon local council tax payers.

Trans-European Networks

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies and other initiatives have been or are planned to be undertaken as a result of receiving funding from the trans-European networks; and what is their start and finish date and estimated costs. [6035]

Mr. Watts: As I explained in my reply to the previous question by the hon. Member for North Cornwall on 27 November, Official Report, column 267, only the 1995 funds for TENs have so far been allocated, and 75 per cent. of these have been allocated to the priority projects identified by the Essen European Council.

TENs funds are allocated against total eligible expenditure incurred in the year for which the funds are granted, but are not subsequently broken down as between the individual elements of eligible expenditure. A project begun in 1994, but not completed until 1995 or later, may therefore receive 1995 funds for the expenditure incurred on it in 1995 and thereafter.

For the United Kingdom projects on the Essen list, the details are as follows:

1. Channel Tunnel Rail Link

(part of the Paris-Brussels-Koln-Amsterdam-London High Speed Train link project)

Continuation of feasibility study work begun in 1989

Study work expected to be completed 1997

Total eligible expenditure relating to 1995 funding: £25.6 million

2. West Coast Main Line upgrading

Completion of feasibility studies: studies to confirm cost estimates and for specialised design

Feasibility studies start date April 1994; design studies start date January 1995

Feasibility studies completed April 1995; design studies to be completed post 1999

Total eligible expenditure relating to 1995 funding: £12 million

3. Ireland-UK-Benelux road link

Studies of possible ways to increase M6 and M11 capacity, and of possible upgrading of junctions on Newry-Dundalk section of A1 Northern Ireland

Studies start date: 1995

Studies completion date: Early 1996

Total eligible study costs: £6 million

In addition, a number of smaller, mostly traffic management schemes were allocated funds in respect of study work carried out in 1995. The details for the one UK scheme concerned are as follows:

Scheme title: ERTICO (European Co-ordination of Radio Data Systems-Traffic Message Control)

Feasibility study of elements needed to establish a sustainable national service.

Study work started September 1995; expected completion December 1997

Total eligible expenditure relating to 1995 funding: £900,000

Spanish and Dutch-owned Vessels

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many Spanish and Dutch-owned vessels are registered in British ports, by port. [6026]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Marine Safety Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Austin Mitchell, dated 14 December 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Question about Spanish and Dutch owned vessels registered in British ports.

I regret the information you have requested is not available.

Roads (Cancelled Contracts)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many contracts for future road building have been cancelled consequent on the Budget review of the roads programme; and what has been the cost to his Department of paying compensation for cancelled contracts. [5663]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 14 December 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State for Transport, how many contracts for future road building have been cancelled consequent on the Budget review of the roads programme; and what has been the cost to his Department of paying compensation for cancelled contracts.

No construction contracts have been cancelled as a result of the review. Commissions with design agents on 138 schemes are now being terminated, but no compensation has been paid to date.

M25

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) at what time on 5 or 6 December a decision was made not to allow any more traffic to join the M25; [5875]

(2) what public information announcements were made, and at what time, about conditions on the Surrey sections of the M25 on 5 and 6 December; [5876]

(3) at what time gritting lorries from (a) Kent county council and (b) Surrey county council began gritting their sections of the M25 on 5 December. [5874]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Nicholas Ainger, dated 14 December 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about conditions on the M25 during the 5 and 6 December.

Following salting overnight on 4/5 December, Kent County Council undertook gritting on their section of the M25 at 2pm, 5pm and throughout the evening on 5 December. Surrey County Council began their early salting programme at 4am on 5 December, carried out some random gritting at 4.15pm to deal with specific problem areas and took the decision at 6pm to start their main gritting programme for their section of the M25 at 7pm. Unfortunately, by that time, the motorway had become too congested and inaccessible for the gritting to be undertaken.

At 3.45pm on the 5 December, Variable Message Signs were activated on the M25 to show speed limits and messages such as "ice on carriageways" and "slow ice skid risk". Signs showing "long delays M25 east" were turned on from Junction 11. At the same time, AA Roadwatch were notified so that they could advise local radio. They were updated at regular intervals. On 6 December, "long delay" signs were activated as far back as Junctions 13 and 14 from approximately 7am. Once again the AA Roadwatch continuously updated their advice to local radio.

The decision to close the Kent bound carriageway of the M25 between Junctions 6 and 5 was taken by the police at approximately 7.50am on the 6 December. The closure lasted for two and a half hours until about 10.30 am. This was necessary to remove abandoned vehicles and to allow gritters onto the motorway.

M1

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) when phase 1 of the M1, junctions 25 to 28 will be completed; [5661]

(2) when phase 2 of the M1, junctions 25 to 28 will be completed. [5662]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 14 December 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking the Secretary of State for Transport, when Phases 1 and 2 of M1 Junctions 25 to 28 will be completed.

Following the recent review of the roads programme, we will be concentrating on enhancing the junctions on this length of the M1 to make good use of the existing motorway. In taking any junction improvements forward, we shall take into account the responses to the public consultation into the widening proposals in September 1994. It is not possible to say yet when this work will be completed. The second phase of the scheme, which is the proposed widening to dual 4 lanes, is now in the longer term programme and the consultancy for this work is being terminated. Work on all longer term schemes will be taken forward as the main programme is completed.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Attorney General if he will provide a breakdown of administration costs incurred to date and forecast for the future of PFI work. [5719]

The Attorney-General: As indicated in my answer of 7 November Official Report, columns 668, the Law Officers' Departments have not used the PFI for any project to date, and costs so far incurred have been minimal. It is not possible to predict what schemes might be approved under the PFI in future or, therefore, to forecast future administration costs.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Attorney-General if he will provide revenue forecasts for the current year and the next five years of expenditure on schemes provided under the PFI. [5720]

The Solicitor-General: No schemes have so far been approved by the Law Officers'Departments under the PFI and it is not possible to predict what schemes might be approved in future or, therefore, to forecast future revenue expenditure.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Attorney-General what percentage of bills to his Department were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. [5709]

The Solicitor-General: The Departments for which the Attorney-General is responsible make every effort to settle invoices promptly. In 1994–95, the Serious Fraud Office paid 74 per cent. of invoices in accordance with contract terms or, where there were no such terms, within 30 days. The Crown Prosecution Service paid 81.4 per cent. of witness expense claims within 10 days.

Public Opinion Surveys

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list all qualitative and quantitative research projects and surveys carried out for his Department into aspects of public attitudes and opinions (a) in general and (b) in relation to specific policy proposals in each of the past three years to December 1995, indicating for each project or survey (i) the date on which the research was commissioned, (ii) the amount which his Department spent, (iii) who carried out the research, (iv) the number of people surveyed or taking part, (v) the location and time scale and (vi) which individuals and organisations have been given access to the findings. [5983]

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service has carried out one survey of public opinion in the three years to December 1995. This was designed to examine public awareness of, and attitudes towards, the CPS. The details requested are as follows:

(i) date commissioned: March 1993

(ii) cost: £2,200

(iii) researcher: Office of Population Censuses and Surveys

(iv) number of people surveyed: about 1800 adults

(v) location and time scale: throughout England and Wales: one month

(vi) individuals/organisations given access: the Director of Public Prosecutions and her Management Board, CPS Press and Publicity, Policy Group.

DEFENCE

Stores Losses

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what was the value of goods and equipment reported lost, stolen or missing by each Army command in each year since 1990; and what was the value of any such goods and equipment subsequently recovered as a result of investigations. [5328]

Mr. Soames: Total stores losses written off in Army budget areas were as follows:

	Value £ thousand
1992–93
Adjutant General	11.5
Quarter Master General	922.1
Assistant Chief of the General Staff	331.3
HQBAOR	1,506.4
CINC UK Land Forces	1,386.6
1993–94
Adjutant General	4.9
Quarter Master General	1,037.0
UK Support Command (Germany)	1,431.7
CINC UK Land Forces	1,724.1
GOC Northern Ireland	316.4
1994–95[1]
Adjutant General	3.0
Quarter Master General	1,199.0
Land Command	1,877.3
GOC Northern Ireland	562.8

[1] These figures do not include Germany for which returns are not yet available.

Figures for earlier years or for recoveries could not be broken down in this way without disproportionate cost. Where, however, recovery is made in the same year as the loss is recorded, the figures are net of recovery.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide for schemes so far agreed under the PFI the level of financing costs above the current cost of Government borrowing for the scheme with (a) the highest financing costs and (b) the lowest costs. [5718]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to him on 7 November 1995, Official Report, column 666.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide a breakdown of administration costs incurred to date and forecast for the future on PFI work. [5716]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Warley, West (Mr. Spellar) on 22 November 1995, Official Report, column 175.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide revenue forecasts for the current year and the next five years of expenditure on schemes provided under the PFI. [5717]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave him on 22 November 1995, Official Report, column 666, and 7 December 1995, Official Report, column 343.

Porton Down

Mr. Nick Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what methods, other than experimentation on animals, have been used at Porton Down and elsewhere to test antidotes to chemical weapons. [5872]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive, DERA, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Nick Ainger, dated 14 December 1995:

Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what methods other than experimentation on animals have been used at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment (CBDE), Porton Down to test antidotes to chemical weapons has been passed to me to reply as the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) which now includes CBDE as one of its divisions.

CBDE continues to develop and use a range of in-vitro test systems for the identification and evaluation of medical countermeasures against chemical warfare agents. These systems include cell and tissue cultures, synthetic membranes and in-vitro diffusion systems.

The military acceptability of proposed medical counter measures is assessed in service volunteers.

I hope this information is helpful.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the chemical defence establishment at Porton Down filmed its LSD experiments on service volunteers during (a) Operation Recount, (b) Operation Small Change and (c) tests in the establishment's medical facilities. [5934]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive, DERA, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Dr. David Clark, dated 14 December 1995:

The Chemical Defence Establishment has undergone a number of changes since the 1960s and is now known as the Chemical & Biological Defence Establishment (CBDE) which is a division of DERA.

Information held at CBDE suggests that some of these trials which, as you know were conducted about thirty years ago at Porton Down, were filmed. Unfortunately, in the time allowed to answer your question it has not been possible to recover the films and confirm this. I will write to you as soon as it has been possible to do so.

I am sorry I cannot be more positive on this occasion.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many animals were used in experiments to test antidotes to chemical weapons in each of the last five years at (a) the Porton Down establishment and (b) elsewhere. [5873]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive, DERA, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Nick Ainger, dated 14 December 1995:

The number of animals used at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down in research programmes with the aim of evaluating medical countermeasures against chemical warfare agents for the last five years is detailed below:

1990: 8,106

1991: 4,964

1992: 2,822

1993: 2,498

1994: 1,597

No work is done elsewhere in the MoD using animals to test antidotes to chemical weapons.

I hope this information is helpful.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of bills to his Department were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. [5708]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Most of my Department's bills are paid by the Defence Accounts Agency. The Defence Evaluation and Research Agency pays its own. I have asked the chief executives to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Clive Betts, dated 14 December 1995:

You asked the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of bills to his Department are paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or within 30 days of receiving goods or services or presentation of a valid invoice. I am replying on behalf of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA).

DERA contracts do not generally specify payment dates. It is, however, DERA policy to pay within 30 days of receipt of a valid invoice. In fact, assuming that the 30 day period is measured from the point at which a validated invoice is received by our bill paying section, then virtually all bills are settled within 9 days.

I hope this information is helpful to you.

Letter from P. J. Trevelyan to Mr. Clive Betts, dated 14 December 1995:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the percentage of bills to his Department which were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. This matter falls within my area of responsibility.

Ministry of Defence contracts do not generally stipulate a payment date. Payment performance is calculated from the date of receipt of a valid bill in our Liverpool payment office, which pays the vast majority of MOD's contract bills.

The last year for which figures are available ran from October 1994 to October 1995. During this time 99.99% of bills were paid within 30 days of receipt of a valid bill. The Liverpool payment office also measures its performance against the higher departmental standard of payment within 11 days; 97% of bills were paid within this period.

Departmental Fraud

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total number and monetary amount of all cases of (a) employee and (b) non-employee fraud and corruption within the Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies; for each year from 1990–91 to 1994–95 and for 1995–96 to date; what was the total sum subsequently recovered for each year; and if he will make a statement on the breakdown of fraud and corruption between (i) employees and (i) contractors and other staff. [6014]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The levels and value of reported non-procurement fraud and theft involving employees within the Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies since 1992–93 are as follows:

Year	Number of cases	Value £ thousand	Value recovered £ thousand
1992–93	53	200.0	37.8
1993–94	107	521.0	74.7
1994–95	199	1,057.7	128.7
1995–96[1]	74	330.6	26.5

[1] To date.

The levels and value of reported non-procurement fraud and theft since 1992–93 involving non-employees are as follows:

Year	Number of cases	Value £ thousand	Value recovered £ thousand
1992–93	1	4.9	0.0
1993–94	1	49.9	0.0
1994–95	8	37.9	0.0
1995–96[1]	5	8.7	1.7

[1] To date.

This breakdown is not available before 1992–93. The combined totals were:

Year	Number of cases	Value £000s	Value recovered £000s
1990–91	53	984.0	101.2
1991–92	45	63.0	22.5

With regard to procurement fraud perpetrated by contractors—including corruption and collusion involving MOD employees—the figures are as follows:

Year	Number of cases	Value £ thousand	Value recovered £ thousand
1990–91	23	10.0	No cash loss to MOD
1991–92	18	150.0	No cash loss to MOD
1992–93	27	20.0	No cash loss to MOD
1993–94	7	1,511.5	Recovery in hand
1994–95	10	No cases yet concluded
1995–96[1]	20	No cases yet concluded

[1] To date.

Service Leave

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the normal arrangements for leave and home service between tours; and in how many cases in each year since 1992 those arrangements have been reduced, waived or suspended. [5480]

Mr. Soames: Annual leave entitlement varies between the services from 30 days to 42 days depending on rank, with the flexibility to carry forward up to 14 days from one year to the next. Additionally, there is provision under service regulations for periods of embarkation and disembarkation leave of between seven and 21 days depending upon marital status and overseas location. This is to enable personnel either to settle their affairs in the United Kingdom before proceeding on a tour of duty overseas or to settle themselves and their families after returning to United Kingdom.

Personnel who are permitted or required to serve on a second consecutive and complete tour of duty overseas may be granted leave in the UK on completion of the first tour.

Regular overseas tours outside north-west Europe are still commonplace in the Army. However, when a normal overseas tour has been completed, every effort will be made to post individuals for a further tour of at least 18 months in UK or north-west Europe before the next overseas posting on a normal tour.

Posting and leave policy were subjects covered in the independent review carried out by Sir Michael Bett. My Department is evaluating his proposals.

The information on the number of cases in each year since 1992 where these arrangements have been reduced, waived or suspended is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Accommodation (Scotland)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the locations of all (a) Army barracks, (b) Royal Marine accommodation and (c) Royal Air Force accommodation in Scotland (i) currently operational, (ii) in the process of being refurbished and (iii) scheduled for closure within the next two years. [4982]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 8 December 1995]: Army barracks in Scotland are located as follows:

Redford Infantry Barracks, Edinburgh

Dreghorn Barracks, Edinburgh

Fort George, Inverness

Barry Buddon Training Camp, Dundee

Refurbishment of single living accommodation is not currently being undertaken at any of these sites, nor are any of them currently scheduled for closure in the next two years.

Royal Marines single living accommodation in Scotland is located at:

RM Condor, Arbroath

Clyde Submarine Base, Faslane

RN Armaments Depot, Coulport

Refurbishment of single living accommodation is currently being undertaken at Condor. None of these sites is currently scheduled for closure in the next two years.

RAF single living accommodation in Scotland is located at:

RAF Buchan, Grampian

RAF Kinloss, Grampian

RAF Leuchars, Fife

RAF Lossiemouth, Grampian

RAF Macrihanish, Strathclyde

RAF Saxa Vord, Shetland

RAF Stornaway, Western Isles

RAF Turnhouse, Lothian

RAF Edzell, Grampian

Refurbishment of single living accommodation is being undertaken at RAF Leuchars, RAF Turnhouse is scheduled for closure in 1997. The United States navy is to withdraw from Edzell by 30 September 1997, but alternative defence uses have not yet been ruled out.

RAF Finningley

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) buildings, (b) fuel tanks and (c) major fixed plants and equipment (i) have been demolished or removed at RAF Finningley 1) in the last three months and (2) in 1995 and (ii) are planned to be removed or demolished in 1996. [5221]

Mr. Soames: The following buildings at RAF Finningley:

(a) have been demolished or removed in the last three months:

Hut

4 x Portakabin

Hawk de-tuner

(b) have been demolished or removed in 1995:

as above plus:

5 x Portakabin

4 x Store

Miscellaneous shed

Office Block

Latrine Blocks

Rest Room

(c) will be demolished or removed in 1996:

2 x Dispersal hut

5 x Portakabin

The following fuel tanks:

(a) have been demolished in the last three months:

1 x Oil storage tank

4 x Bulk Fuel Installation

(b) have been demolished in 1995:

As above.

(c) will be demolished in 1996:

1 x Bulk Fuel Installation

The following major items of fixed plant and equipment:

(a) have been removed in the last three months:

Catering Equipment—Junior Ranks Mess and Sergeants Mess

(b) have been removed in 1995:

As above.

(c) will be removed in 1995:

2 x Flight simulators

3 x Synthetic trainers

Catering Equipment—Officers Mess

Vehicle wash

Fixed Machine Tools

Certain landing and navigational aids will be redeployed from RAF Finningley in 1996, to support RAF operations elsewhere. Further airfield equipment may be removed once future use of the site has been determined.

Low Flying

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the total amounts paid by his Department in compensation for incidents involving low flying in each financial year since 1989–90; and if he will provide a breakdown of the figures into amounts paid for (a) property damage, (b) aircraft crash damage, (c) personal injury, (d) livestock and (e) other. [5183]

Mr. Soames: The amounts paid are as follows:

Year		Amounts £
1989–90	414,000	(a) 174,000 (b) 42,000 (c) 31,000 (d) 167,000 (e) Nil
1990–91	427,000	(a) 86,000 (b) 5,000 (c) 66,000 (d) 270,000 (e) Nil
1991–92	440,000	(a) 54,000 (b) 33,000 (c) 33,000 (d) 320,000 (e) Nil
1992–93	506,000	(a) 45,000 (b) 216,000 (c) 63,000 (d) 182,000 (e) Nil
1993–94	558,000	(a) 81,000 (b) 44,000 (c) 51,000 (d) 379,000 (e) 3,000

Year		Amounts £
1994–95	703,000	(a) 86,000 (b) 148,000 (c) 121,000 (d) 327,000 (e) 21,000

The figures above for aircraft crashes do not include payments made by Defence Land Agents under delegated powers.

The figures above include compensation paid in respect of both UK and visiting forces military low flying.

Apache Helicopters

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence where he plans to base the Army Air Corps' Apache helicopters. [5170]

Mr. Arbuthnot: No decision has yet been taken.

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in his Department in each of the last three years. [5566]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information requested for each of the last three financial years for Ministers' own offices is as follows:

1992–93: £5,594.31

1993–94: £7,663.20

1994–95: £ 390.60

There has been no expenditure during the current financial year.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary for Defence how much his Department spent on official hospitality in 1994–95 and the financial year to date; and what is the 1995–96 projected budget for official hospitality. [5583]

Mr. Soames: During the financial year 1994–95, my Department spent £4.867 million on official hospitality, and, as at 1 November 1995, £3.099 million has been spent during the current financial year. Present forecasts indicate that approximately £4.843 million will be spent on official hospitality during financial year 1995–96. These figures include expenditure incurred by the Ministry of Defence itself, by formations and establishments of the armed forces at home and abroad, and by individual officers occupying command and international appointments for which entertainment allowances are payable.

Nerve Agent Pretreatment Set Tablets

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what advice was issued to women in the armed forces serving in the Gulf between 1990 and 1991 as to pregnancy and childbirth in relation to NAPS tablets; and what medical considerations underlay this. [5475]

Mr. Soames: No official advice was issued during the Gulf war concerning the taking of nerve agent pretreatment set tablets in relation to pregnancy and childbirth. Pyridostigmine bromide, the main ingredient of NAPS tablets, has no known contra-indications for pregnancy.

Redundancies

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the number of redundancies in the armed forces in each year since 1992 and in 1995 to date; what has been the cost of redundancy payments and other related benefits and enhancements in each year; and which arms and sections of the defence forces were the source of such redundancies. [5479]

Mr. Soames: In the financial year 1992–93, there were 3,957 redundancies with payment of redundancy and other related benefits and enhancements of £232 million. There were 9,041 redundancies in 1993–94 and 11,095 in 1994–95 with total payments of £509 million and £453 million respectively. From April to November 1995, there have been 352 redundancies with payment totalling £24 million.

These payments include special capital payments, and early payment of terminal grants, commuted pension payments and the first year's payment of immediate pensions.

The Royal Navy, the Army and the Royal Air Force have all been subject to redundancy during this period. Redundancies were selected from all ranks, covering a wide range of categories and groups of personnel.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his oral answer of 28 November, Official Report, columns 1043–44, what assessment his Department has made of the analysis conducted by Professor Garth Nicholson of the university of Texas on the relationship between mycoplasmas and the group of medical complaints collectively referred to as Gulf war syndrome. [5675]

Mr. Soames: As part of my Department's routine monitoring of research material relating to the alleged Gulf war syndrome, consideration has been given to Dr. Nicholson's paper titled "Summary of Persian Gulf War illness pilot study on mycoplasmic infections". It has been concluded, however, that Dr. Nicholson's study does not provide any substantial or conclusive evidence of a connection between illnesses among veterans, mycoplasma infections and service in the Gulf. We will continue to monitor all information bearing on this issue in conjunction with medical experts nominated by the Royal College of Physicians.

Royal Irish Regiment

Mr. McNarmara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current strength of the Royal Irish Regiment; how many are (a) part of the regular Army and (b) recruited in Northern Ireland for (i) full-time service in Northern Ireland and (ii) part-time service in Northern Ireland; and what were the corresponding figures for the last five years from 3 November. [5039]

Mr. Soames: All members of the Royal Irish Regiment are formally part of the regular Army. However, the Royal Irish Regiment—Home Service—contains a large part-time element and is not liable for service outside Northern Ireland. Soldiers to serve in either the Royal Irish Regiment (General Service) or the Royal Irish Regiment (Home Service) may be recruited in Northern Ireland or elsewhere. The current strength of the regiment, and previous strengths at 1 April in the years since its formation in July 1992, is as follows:

	1993	1994	1995	Current
General service (Full time)	839	905	900	940
Home service (Full time)	2,917	2,905	3,056	3,010
Home service (Part time)	2,696	2,485	2,257	2,140

Thefts

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military personnel have been convicted of theft of military property in each year since 1990. [5329]

Mr. Soames: Service personnel charged and convicted of the theft of Ministry of Defence property were as follows:

	Charged	Guilty
1990–91	10	10
1991–92	3	3
1992–93	1	1
1993–94	11	5
1994–95	9	7

Absence without Leave

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many members of (a) the Army, (b) the Royal Navy and (c) the Royal Air Force are currently absent without leave; how many members of each of the services have been absent without leave at 1 April in each of the last five years; how many members of each of the services have been absent without leave in each of the last 12 months; what was the average length of absence for each service; and if he will make a statement on his policies for locating absent personnel and returning them to service; [5330]

(2) how many personnel in each of the armed services who were first reported as absent without leave in each year since 1990, remain absent without leave. [5331]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member.

Ministry of Defence Police

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are his estimates of the planned and actual number of employees of his Department's police for each year from 1990–91 to 1998–99; and if he will make a statement. [6015]

Mr. Soames: The actual number of staff employed by the MOD police for the years in question, as at 1 August each year, was:

1990: 4,766

1991: 4,962

1992: 5,163

1993: 5,026

1994: 4,908

1995: 4,714.

The overall manpower requirements of the Ministry of Defence are kept under constant review, and we have recently issued for consultation proposals on our future defence police and guarding requirements.

Mr. David Hart

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what circumstances Mr. David Hart is permitted to visit British defence manufacturers (a) as part of his duties as an independent adviser and (b) in an individual capacity; if he will list those firms which have been visited by Mr. Hart in the last 12 months; on which occasions his Department made the arrangements for these visits; who paid for the visits; and on what occasions the firms involved were given advance notice of the visit. [5933]

Mr. Portillo: During the last 12 months, Mr. David Hart visited British Aerospace and Loral in his capacity as the independent adviser to the Secretary of State for Defence. The visits were arranged by my officials; Mr. Hart paid for his own travel arrangements.

Air Marshal Sir John Walker

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what relationship Air Marshal Sir John Walker currently has with his Department; and if he will make a statement. [5992]

Mr. Soames: Air Marshal Sir John Walker retired from the RAF on 5 January 1995. Since that time, he has had no formal relationship with my Department.

Airspace Routes

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the criteria used to assess whether an advisory route class F airspace should be upgraded to an airway class A airspace; and if he will list all such advisory routes which have been so upgraded in the last five years. [5166]

Mr. Norris: I have been asked to reply.

The Civil Aviation Authority is responsible for airspace planning. I understand that the CAA would consider upgrading an advisory route, class F airspace, to an airway, class A airspace, if there were more than 10,000 air transport movements a year on that route. During the last five years, there have been no advisory routes upgraded to an airway.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Connected Lender Liability

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the report on connected lender liability issued by the Director General of Fair Trading in May this year; and if he will make a statement. [6880]

Mr. John M. Taylor: We have given careful consideration to the arguments and recommendations in the report but are not at present persuaded by them. We will establish more fully the factual evidence bearing on the questions at issue, in particular on the associated costs and benefits for consumers, creditors and other industries. Therefore, my Department will shortly issue a consultation document and we shall consider responses to it before reaching final decisions.

Oil and Gas Licensing

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those areas in Wales for which companies have expressed an interest in the seventh onshore oil and gas licensing round. [6163]

Mr. Page: We are unable at the present time to release details of the areas applied for in the seventh round as this information could give a competitive advantage to an applicant when deciding on a work programme. Details of the areas applied for will be made available once the work programmes are agreed. However, I can say that applications have been received for five blocks in Wales. None of the applications is for acreage within the watery areas around Wales.

Special Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many special advisers are employed by his Department; and what is the total annual salary bill for these posts. [5290]

Mr. Lang: I have one special adviser. Salaries for special advisers are negotiated individually in relation to their previous earnings, and are confidential. They are, however, normally paid on a special advisers' salary spine of 34 points ranging from £19,503 to £67,609. Appointments are non-pensionable, and the salary spine reflects this.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of bills to his Department were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. [5696]

Mr. John M. Taylor: A survey of the DTI's payment performance from December 1994 to October 1995 has just been completed. This has shown that, over the period, 93 per cent. of our bills were paid within 30 days or within the agreed credit period.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will provide forecasts for the current year and next five years of expenditure on schemes provided under the PFI. [5732]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Although my Department has a number of PFI projects under consideration, none has been finally agreed and no revenue forecasts have been made.

Mr. Betts: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will provide a breakdown of administration costs incurred to date and forecast for the future on PFI work. [5731]

Mr. Taylor: The private finance initiative within the DTI is one of the responsibilities of the MINIS—management information system for Ministers—unit within the finance and resource management division of my Department. This unit is expected to cost £249,000 in 1995–96 and broadly similar amounts for future years.

Swan Hunter (Redundancy Payments)

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the total amounts paid to date by the redundancy payments section to former employees of the Swan Hunter shipyard, Tyneside in respect of (a) compensation for insolvent employers' failure to give proper statutory notice, (b) redundancy payments from the national insurance fund, (c) payments received through protective awards made by industrial tribunals and (d) refunds of notional tax deducted in the calculation of routine payments. [6143]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The information is as follows:

	Amount £
(a) Compensation for the employer's failure to give proper statutory notice	2,759,178
(b) Statutory redundancy payments	7,236,025
(c) Protective award payments	1,968,607
(d) Refunds of notional tax deductions	75,692

The identity of the 20 largest purchasers of postmark advertising is commercially confidential. "The Health of the Nation" strategy is to encourage people to make healthy choices. It does not seek to discourage consumption of individual food products.

Postmark Advertising

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much net and gross income was derived from sales of postmark advertising in the last three years; if he will list the 20 largest purchases of postmark advertising over the last year; and if he will make it his policy that the Post Office should ban the advertising of products whose consumption is discouraged in "The Health of the Nation" targets. [4953]

Mr. Oppenheim: I understand from the Post Office that income from postmark advertising in the last three years has been as follows:

Year	£
1993–94	200,450
1994–95	138,680
1995–96[1]	171,360

[1] To date.

Protective Clothing (Toxic Gas)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which headings of the export control order and the standard industrial trade classification cover (a) protective clothing for use against toxic chemical gas whether in an industrial or military setting and (b) equipment for the detection of toxic gas, and decontamination equipment for toxic gas; and in which years these products become licensable exports. [5476]

Mr. Oppenheim: Protective clothing for defence against chemical warfare agents and equipment for the detection of them are controlled in entry ML7 of the Export of Goods (Control) Order (EG(C)0) 1994. This entry has been in force since at least 1978, but to go back further would incur disproportionate cost. Industrial equipment for detecting toxic gas is covered in entry 2B351, which came into force on 31 December 1992 under the EG(C)0 1992. Since 1 July 1995, the control exists through the Dual Use and Related Goods (Export Control) Regulations 1995. In addition, the "End Use" control applies to otherwise unlicensable goods where chemical weapons use is known or suspected. Under the standard industrial trade classification the categorisation system is too broad to positively identify the type of equipment in this enquiry.

Miracle Products

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what resolutions were passed at recent meetings of the Council of Consumer Ministers relating to "miracle products"; if he will set out the terms of all resolutions; if he will make a statement on the definition of the term "miracle product"; and if he will make a statement. [6121]

Mr. John M. Taylor: At its meeting on 9 November 1995, the EU Consumer Council of Ministers adopted a resolution on products presented as being beneficial to health, commonly referred to as "miracle products".

The resolution asks the Commission, in close co-operation with the member states, to describe the current situation regarding:

> the practice in the trade of miracle products in the member states
> the functioning, at Community and national level, of existing mechanisms regarding the protection of consumers against these practices > and to submit its findings to the Council by 1 November 1996 at the latest.

"Miracle products" are those products, other than officially registered medicinal products, presented as having properties which prevent, diagnose, treat, alleviate or cure diseases or complaints or adjust bodily functions or mental state, but where there is generally no scientific evidence to substantiate such claims or properties.

We hope that the Commission's study will clarify for those member states which experience problems in this area the range of existing powers available to them for dealing with the advertising and promotion of miracle products.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to make cloning of mobile telephones a criminal offence. [4484]

Mr. Ian Taylor: On 24 October, Official Report, column 549, I announced the recommendations of the industry and Government study group on mobile telephone fraud. One of the main recommendations was that the Government should consider extending the range of offences under section 42 of the Telecommunications Act 1984 so that it would cover the possession or supply of equipment capable of use in the course of, or in connection with, the current section 42 offence of dishonestly obtaining telecommunication services with intent to avoid payment. I am considering this recommendation carefully.

Exports

Mr. Salmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what was the value of exports from (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland to the far east in each of the past five years; and if he will provide a breakdown by sector; [5110]

(2) what was the (a) volume and (b) value of manufacturing exports per capita in each of the past five years for (i) England, (ii) Wales, (iii) Scotland and (iv) Northern Ireland; and if he will provide a breakdown by sector; [5111]

(3) what percentage of Scottish exports consisted of (a) computers/electronics, (b) food and drink, (c) textiles and (d) all other exports, in the past five years. [5105]

Mr. Oppenheim: Geographic analyses of United Kingdom exports are not available since information on the location of exporters is not comprehensive.

Fur Imports

Mr. Morley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action he is taking to oppose the delay of the implementation of a ban on the import of furs caught by leghold traps into the European Union; and if he will make a statement. [3179]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Government have made clear the United Kingdom's firm support for a ban on leghold traps, and have been in the forefront in pressing for this worldwide. The Commission will be submitting proposals to the Council of Ministers and the European Parliament seeking postponement of the ban on imports of furs caught by this method. We shall be considering the details of these proposals when we see them.

Post Office Profits

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to implement the proposal to allow the Post Office to keep 50 per cent. of its post-tax profits; and if he will make a statement. [5643]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 12 December 1995]: We will continue to set external financing limits for the Post Office which reflect an appropriate balance between the needs of the business and its ability to contribute to public finances.

WALES

Measles and Rubella Immunisation

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to the oral answer of 4 December, Official Report, column 11, if he will list the sources of the advice his Department has accepted on the safety of the measles and rubella immunisation programme; and if he will make a statement on representations his Department has received from parents dissatisfied with the effects of the MMR immunisation programme on their children. [5044]

Mr. Richards: On the safety of the measles and rubella immunisation programme I refer the hon. Member to the answers provided by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Health on 6 November and 8 November.

The Welsh Office has not received any representations from parents dissatisfied with the effects of the MMR immunisation programme on their children.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his Department spent on official hospitality in 1994–95 and the financial year to date; and what is the 1995–96 projected budget for official hospitality. [5589]

Mr. Hague: In 1994, the cost of hospitality, which is included in the running cost budget for my Department, was £28,784. The figure for 1995–96, up to 30 November 1995, was £12,598. The projected budget for 1995–96 is £28,000.

Inward Investment

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Gravesham (Mr. Arnold), Official Report, 4 December, column 5, if he will publish a disaggregated breakdown for each year since 1980 of the inward investment to Wales by (a) region and (b) company involved. [5646]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: For reasons of commercial confidentiality for a number of recorded cases, I cannot provide details of the companies involved. However, I will write to the hon. Member separately with details of the origin of recorded inward investment since 1983, together with the destination of that inward investment. A copy of that correspondence will be placed in the Library of the House.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of bills to his Department were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. [5693]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Mrs. Roache) on 1 November 1995, Official Report, column 296.

Waiting Times

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales for what reasons a patient waiting for consultation or treatment in the NHS can be disqualified from being considered covered by the total waiting time guarantee or its component parts; and what steps he has taken to ensure commonality of definition of the reasons for disqualification by Welsh health authorities, GP fundholders and trusts. [6151]

Mr. Hague: The operational guidance for total waiting times, issued to NHS Wales in March 1995, describes the circumstances under which patients waiting longer than the limits will not be judged as being in breech of the patient's charter guarantees. Health authorities, GP fundholders and hospitals are expected to work within the framework of the guidance. The Welsh Office will review the process when the relevant monitoring returns are received.

A copy of the guidance has been placed in the Library of the House.

Training for Work Programmes

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 11 December, Official Report, column 553, what steps he proposes to relate outcome-related payments to training and enterprise councils under training for work programmes for the long-term unemployed to the duration of the job obtained. [6149]

Mr. Hague: With effect from 27 March 1995, outcome-related payments for training for work trainees obtaining jobs became payable to training and enterprise councils in Wales, in two stages. Two-thirds of an agreed rate is payable after seven days continuous employment has been completed, within 13 weeks of a trainee leaving the programme. The remaining one-third becomes payable if the trainee is in employment eight weeks later.

My officials are currently reviewing the effectiveness of this two-stage job outcome payment procedure.

Welsh Grand Committee

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he intends to publish a list of dates and venues of Welsh Grand Committee meetings in 1996. [5906]

Mr. Hague: In due course. The proposed changes to Standing Orders have yet to be debated by the House.

Consultant and GP Cover

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, what consultations he has had with the chairmen of local medical committees in Wales concerning the availability of (a) consultant and (b) general practitioner medical cover for elderly mentally ill patients and bed provision transferred from the NHS hospitals to private nursing homes; what provision he has made for specialist mid-career training in geriatric and psycho-geriatric medicine for GPs required to cover private nursing homes receiving such transferred bed capacity; and if he will make a statement. [6164]

Mr. Hague: Within the last 12 months there have been no such discussions, nor have any specific arrangements for mid-career training been made.

Diabetics (Chiropody)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has had from organisations representing diabetics in relation to waiting times and lists for chiropody and on the clinical priority to be given to such treatment. [6139]

Mr. Hague: I am not aware of any representations. It is for health authorities to assess the health needs of their populations, and to decide on priorities for expenditure within their overall resources.

Independent Schools

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many independent schools are operating in the current academic year. [5824]

Mr. Richards: There were 63 in Wales in September 1995.

Consultant Cover

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairmen of Welsh health authorities concerning the transfer of appropriate geriatric and psycho-geriatric consultant cover corresponding to transfers of beds for the elderly mentally ill from NHS hospitals to private nursing homes. [6162]

Mr. Hague: None.

NHS Treatment

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what statistics he has on the number of patients waiting for in-patient treatment and out-patient diagnosis longer than the patients charter maximum for reasons relating to (a) exercising choice of consultants, (b) failure to attend for first out-patient consultation and (c) other reasons; and if he will make a statement. [6165]

Mr. Hague: All patients who have been on the in-patient or out-patient waiting lists for longer than the patients charter targets are reported to the Welsh Office and the numbers are published in "NHS Wales: Quarterly Statistics" available in the Library. No separate analysis is made of those patients who exercise a choice of consultants: to do so would impose an unacceptable administrative burden on hospitals. If patients who fail to attend for out-patient appointments are referred back to their GPs, they would normally be removed from the waiting list.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library a copy of the Newport business school report compiling a league table of Welsh NHS trusts' commercial viability in relation to four key financial ratios. [6140]

Mr. Hague: Yes. I have made arrangements with the Newport business school for copies to be made available in the Library of the House as soon as possible.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the administrative cost of collecting prescription charges; and what this figure is as a percentage of the total revenue received from prescription charges. [6152]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Llwyd) on 22 June 1995, Official Report, column 417, total revenue received from prescription charges and prepayment certificates between April 1994 and March 1995 was £17.8 million. On this basis, the administrative costs shown represent about 18 per cent. of prescription charge revenue.

School Visits

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions over the past three years he, his predecessor or Ministers in his Department, have visited schools in West Glamorgan; and if he will list the schools concerned. [6127]

Mr. Richards: Schools visited in West Glamorgan over the past three years were as follows:

Mr. David Hunt:

April 1993—Bishopston Comprehensive School, Swansea

Mr. John Redwood:

April 1994—Dynevor Comprehensive School, Swansea

Mr. Rod Richards:

July 1995—Bishop Gore Comprehensive School, Swansea

November 1995—Bishops Vaughan Grant-Maintained Comprehensive School, Swansea.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide revenue forecasts for current year and the next five years of expenditure on schemes provided under the PFI. [5724]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 7 November 1995, Official Report, column 808.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide a breakdown of administration costs incurred to date and forecast for the future on PFI work. [5723]

Mr. Hague: It is not practicable to isolate the costs of running the private finance initiative in all the many areas of my Department's work which it affects. The costs of the private finance unit, which co-ordinates this activity, are about £52,000 a year.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for the academic year 1994–95 in descending order the independent schools by the proportion of their school rolls made up of pupils covered by the assisted places scheme, and the total number of pupils on the school roll; what proportion of the roll at each school was covered by the scheme; how many pupils were covered by the scheme at each school; how many pupils were on the roll of each school; what level of fees was charged for pupils under the scheme at each school; and what sums were received by each school under the scheme. [5902]

Mr. Richards: The information requested is as follows:

1994–95 Academic Year

School	Roll	APS pupils	Percentage APS pupils on roll	Average fees[1] £	Total[2] received by schools £
Howell's Denbigh	286	73	26	5,688	368,215

Monmouth Girls	631	74	12	3,879	203,552

[1] Some schools charge different fees according to different stages in school.

[2] Accounts for 1994–95 not yet finalised.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his Department has spent on the operation of the assisted places scheme in each academic year since 1981; how many (a) pupils and (b) institutions were covered by the scheme; and what was the overspend on the budget allocated to the scheme. [5790]

Mr. Richards: Details on costs of the assisted places scheme by financial year are as follows. Costs by academic year are not available.

Year	Cost £	Pupils	Schools	Overspend £
1981–82	160,783	114	9	—
1982–83	274,777	220	8	—

1994–95	2,771,504	720	8	—

Mr. Donohue: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which independent sector schools charged (a) the highest and (b) the lowest level of fees to pupils covered by the assisted places scheme in the academic year 1994–95; and what charges were levied. [5827]

Mr. Richards: The highest tuition fees of assisted places scheme participating schools in Wales in the academic year 1994–95 were Rydal school—senior pupils—and Colwyn Bay at £6,528, the lowest were £3,441 set by Howell's school, Cardiff.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many independent sector schools have had (a) more than 25 per cent. (b) more than 50 per cent. and (c) less than 5 per cent. of their school rolls made up of pupils covered by the assisted places scheme for each academic year since 1981. [5807]

Mr. Richards: The information requested is as follows:

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress has been made by his Department in taking forward proposals for the expansion of the assisted places scheme; and how much his Department estimates this will cost in future financial years for which figures are available when this has been achieved. [5821]

Mr. Richards: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend's reply to the right hon. Member for Conway (Sir W. Roberts) on 29 November, Official Report, columns 757–58. The estimated cost of the scheme for the financial year 1996–97 is £3.781 million.

Local Education Authority Expenditure

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the average amount of money spent by his Department on a pupil in a public sector school at (a) primary and (b) secondary level for each academic year since 1981. [5796]

Mr. Richards: Figures of net institutional expenditure per pupil, based on local education authorities' expenditure, for 1980–81 to 1992–93, are contained in the Welsh Office's education finance bulletin, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Figures for 1993–94 are currently being calculated and as soon as they become available, they will be incorporated in a new issue of the bulletin.

NHS Trusts

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list each NHS trust in Wales together with an assessment of whether it reaches the Government's requirements to (a) achieve the 6 per cent. rate of return on average net assets, (b) break even, taking one year with another and (c) remain within the external financing limit. [5904]

Mr. Richards: Information on the financial performance of NHS trusts in Wales is contained in the annual reports they are required to produce. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will assess the financial performance of the NHS trusts in Wales in utilising appropriate financial ratios. [5905]

Mr. Richards: No. The financial performance of NHS trusts in Wales will continue to be assessed against the statutory duties, established by the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990, to break even, taking one year with another; manage their external financing limits and record a required rate of return.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits (Disabled People)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will review the recent changes in allowances for people with disabilities. [3853]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths) on 12 December, Official Report, column 621.

Housing Benefit

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated number and percentage of single people aged under 25 years who are in employment and claiming housing benefit; and what assessment he has made of the impact that restricting housing benefit to the average cost of local shared accommodation for single people aged under 25 years will have on (a) labour mobility and (b) work incentives. [4553]

Mr. Roger Evans: The estimated number of single childless people under 25 in employment and claiming housing benefit is 29,000. This is 3 per cent. of the total number of single childless people under 25 who live away from the parental home.

Housing benefit will continue to meet in full rents up to the general level of non self-contained accommodation in the locality. It will not prevent those affected from moving in search of employment. It is likely to increase work incentives by improving the position of those in work and above benefit levels, compared with those dependent wholly on benefits.

Carpal Tunnel Syndrome

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if carpal tunnel syndrome caused by the use of a word processor is listed as a industrial injury which is open to compensation and if he will make a statement. [4512]

Mr. Roger Evans: Carpal tunnel syndrome is eligible for benefit under the industrial injuries scheme only in relation to hand-held vibrating tools. Compensation from a negligent employer may be sought at common law through the civil courts for any work-related injury.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what mechanisms exist for liaison between his Department and the Departments of Health and of the Environment in respect of (a) cold weather credits and (b) the Christmas bonus; and if he will make a statement on recent discussions in this area. [4541]

Mr. Roger Evans: All three Departments continue to liaise effectively on the issues raised by the campaign for cold weather credits, although there have been no recent discussions on any specific proposals.

The Christmas bonus is paid under the relevant social security legislation. Liaison with the Departments of Health and of the Environment is not appropriate.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which national climatological message stations cover post codes BB8, BB9 and BB12 in respect of the cold weather payments regulations. [4952]

Mr. Evans: Post codes BB8, BB9 and BB12 are served by the Meteorological Office weather station at Wilsden, west Yorkshire. All weather stations and the area they cover are listed in the schedules to the social fund cold weather payments regulations, a copy of which is in the Library.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Bettts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of bills to his Department were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. [5697]

Mr. Burt: Since 1992, this Department has conducted an annual exercise to establish what proportion of bills for goods and services have been paid timeously—that is within any special terms agreed, or if none exist within 30 days of receipt of a valid invoice, whichever is the later. Details of the percentage of payments made timeously from 1992–93 are in the table.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions he has had with local government representatives on the financial effects of the Asylum and Immigration Bill and the Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Amendment Regulations; and if he will make a statement. [6012]

Mr. Roger Evans: Local authorities have been consulted on these proposals through their associations, and many of them also made representations to the Social Security Advisory Committee. We shall publish our response shortly.

Departmental Fraud

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the total number and cost of all forms of fraud affecting his Department and its agencies and non-departmental public bodies, as set out in the returns to Her Majesty's Treasury for departmental fraud for each year since 1990–91; and if he will make a statement. [6138]

Mr. Heald: The Department's annual returns to Her Majesty's Treasury for years 1990–91 to 1993–94 are set out in Table 1. Since the number of full-time fraud investigators dealing with departmental fraud was increased in 1993, the number of successful investigations has increased. The return for 1994–95 is set out in the table 2.

Research Projects

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list all qualitative and quantitative research projects and surveys carried out for his Department into aspects of public attitudes and opinions (a) in general and (b) in relation to specific policy proposals in each of the past three years to December 1995, indicating for each project or survey (i) the date on which the research was commissioned, (ii) the amount which his Department spent, (iii) who carried out the research, (iv) the number of people surveyed or taking part, (v) the location and time scale and (vi) which individuals and organisations have been given access to the findings. [5974]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is given. Information on the time scale of individual research projects and surveys could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Department's Research Programme is announced each year. Details and overall costs of all projects are set out in the Department's Research Yearbook, published annually by HMSO, copies of which are available in the Library. Previous editions cover projects from 1989 onwards; the Yearbook for 1994–95, to be published today (14th December) will contain details of current projects.

Mental Illness

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimates he has made of days lost at work because of mental ill health in each of the last five years. [6108]

Mr. Heald: Information is not available in the format requested.

The available information in the table relates to the number of days of certified incapacity recorded in connection with claims to sickness benefit and/or invalidity benefit, and claims to severe disablement allowance from 6 April 1992. The data cannot be taken as a total of the days lost at work because no account can be taken of those who have entitlement to Statutory sick pay from their employer, for which no figures are available. Figures also include claimants unemployed, and people who have never worked, prior to the time of their claim to benefit.

Number of days certified incapacity of claimants for State incapacity benefits due to mental disorder

Period	Number of days
3 April 1989 to 31 March 1990[1]	79,670,000
2 April 1990 to 30 March 1991[1]	91,479,000
1 April 1991 to 4 April 1992[1]	105,849,000
6 April 1992 to 3 April 1993[2]	159,994,000
5 April 1993 to 2 April 1994[2]	172,251,000

Notes:

[1] Sickness Benefit and Invalidity Benefit claims only.

[2] Sickness Benefit, Invalidity Benefit and Severe Disablement Allowance claims.

1. Based on a 1 per cent. sample of claimants within Great Britain, rounded to the nearest thousand.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many claims there have been for the new incapacity benefit within the Merthyr benefit district; and how many of these were claimants with mental health problems; [4102]

(2) how many claims for incapacity benefit have been made since April in the Merthyr benefit area; how many of these have been from (a) men and (b) women; and how many have been successful. [4100]

Mr. Burt: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Ted Rowlands, dated 13 December 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about how many claims there have been for the new Incapacity Benefit within the Merthyr benefit district; how many of these were claimants with mental health problems; how many of the new claims have been from (a) men and (b) women; and how many have been successful.

Information is not available in the format requested. Statistics on the number of new claims are collated at District level. There have been 6,230 new claims for Incapacity Benefit, during the period 13 April to 1 December, in the Eastern Valleys District. This District comprises of the Merthyr Tydfil, Aberdare, Bargoed and Caerphilly offices.

Information about how many customers within the Merthyr Tydfil office who have claimed Incapacity Benefit and who are suffering with mental health problems could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Statistics are not kept on the number of men or women who have claimed Incapacity Benefit.

Figures for the number of successful claims to Incapacity Benefit are not available. Statistics are only available for the number of claims disallowed. In the Merthyr Tydfil office, 310 claims to Incapacity Benefit were disallowed during the period 13 April 1995 to 1 December 1995. This figure may include claims made before 13 April 1995.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

War Pensions

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average waiting period between an application for a war pension appeal and an appeal hearing. [5005]

Mr. Heald: This is a matter for Mr. John Sheppard, the acting chief executive of the War Pensions Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Sheppard to Mr. David Hinchliffe, dated 13 December 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about War Pensions appeals.

There are two different types of War Pension appeal. An entitlement appeal can be made against the decision that there is no entitlement to a War Disablement Pension. An assessment appeal may be made where the pensioner awarded a War Disablement Pension disagrees with the assessment of his disability.

The War Pensions Agency (WPA) is responsible for preparing the appeal papers for the independent Pension Appeal Tribunals (PAT), who come under the jurisdiction of the Lord Chancellor's Department. The PAT consider all War Pension appeals and are responsible for arranging appeal hearings.

Once an appeal has been lodged the WPA looks at all the evidence afresh and is then required to produce a Statement of Case. This is a complex document detailing all the relevant evidence which is sent to the appellant for comment before being submitted to the PAT. The average time taken by WPA to complete this action in 1995/96, is 263 working days for an assessment appeal and 326 days for an entitlement appeal. These average times are longer than would normally be the case and are a reflection of the considerable increase in appeals that occurred in 1994. The WPA has also been phasing in a new computer system and a major restructuring of the organisation this year, but now that these changes are complete, there should be a gradual and sustained improvement in the clearance of appeals.

Once the Statement of Case is with the PAT they make the arrangements for the appeal to be heard. They too have been affected by the increase in appeals over the last couple of years. The average time taken since April for the PAT to schedule a hearing following receipt of the Statement of Case from WPA is 42.35 weeks.

The PAT has also addressed the problem by increasing the number of courts held each day. These have increased from 4–5 at the end of 1994, to 7–8 now, and the intention is to further increase the number to 10 next April. In addition there has been an increase in the number of cases heard each day by each court.

I hope you find my reply helpful.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total number of war pension appeals outstanding; what was the number of such appeals originally in each year of original claim; and how many were outstanding at (a) 31 December 1994 and (b) 31 December 1993. [5489]

Mr. Heald: These are matters for Mr. John Sheppard, the acting chief executive of the War Pensions Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Sheppard to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 13 December 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the number of outstanding War Pension appeals.

There are two different types of appeal. An entitlement appeal may be lodged where the Agency has been unable to accept that a particular medical condition has been caused by service in the Forces; an assessment appeal can be made where the appellant disagrees with the assessment of disablement arising from an accepted condition.

The table below shows the number of appeals outstanding within the Agency on the dates you refer to.

	31 December 1993	31 December 1994	30 November 1995
Entitlement	8,857	7,102	6,085
Assessment	6,949	8,263	6,617
Total	15,806	15,365	12,702

I am unable to break down these figures to show the years of the original claims because there are no time limits for making entitlement appeals and different time limits depending on the type of assessment appeal. It does not follow, therefore that the appeals received in any period are related to decision made in any specific earlier period. Indeed, some entitlement appeals are made up to 20 or 30 years after the original decision on the claim.

I hope you find this information useful.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Drownings (Bangor)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his Department's responsibility for the river flowing from Clandeboye estate into the Kilcooley estate in Bangor where two children drowned on the night of 15 November. [2508]

Mr. Moss: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and I am advised by the chief executive that the section of the watercourse in question forms the boundary between the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and a private housing development. The Housing Executive, as the riparian owner of that part of the stream adjacent to the estate, has joint responsibility for its maintenance to ensure a free flow of water, and carries out maintenance on a monthly basis.

Royal Family (Pictures)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his policy with respect to the display by civil servants in their offices of pictures of members of the royal family. [3219]

Sir John Wheeler: There are circumstances in which the display of a portrait of Her Majesty the Queen or other members of the royal family is officially approved. The display of any pictures by individual civil servants in their offices is, of course, subject to civil service policy on promoting a good and harmonious working environment for all its employees.

Central Services Agency

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what stage has been reached in the market testing of the legal services of the central services agency for the health and public social services. [5018]

Mr. Moss: On 25 September 1995, the chief executive of the management executive established a project board to take forward this market test. The project board is finalising the form of the tender documents, and a public notice inviting interested parties to tender is imminent.

Legal Services

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in what way the current proposals for market testing of legal services avoid offending public probity as expressed by the chief executive of the management executive in a letter to the general manager of the Northern health and social services board dated 2 February. [5019]

Mr. Moss: The present proposal to market test legal services will use a process and deliver a product which will comply with the full rigour of public probity. It will observe generally accepted principles of full and open competition and aim to produce a framework from which health and personal social services clients will be able to obtain value for money legal services.

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how the arrangements for the market testing of the legal services directorate differ from those applied to other public sector services in the United Kingdom and Northern Ireland. [5021]

Mr. Moss: The legal services directorate of the Central Services Agency provides legal services to a range of clients operating within the health and personal social services. These clients are acting together through a project board to market test legal services. In this respect, the approach may be perceived as different from that adopted in the majority of market tests, where there is usually a single customer. In addition, the market test involves the creation of a list of firms with the requisite competency to undertake the work. This approach will give users a choice of legal representatives.

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland who was responsible for producing the draft arrangements for the provision of legal services to HPSS clients. [5020]

Mr. Moss: The "Protocol for the Management of Legal Cases in the Health and Personal Social Services" was produced by the Central Services Agency in consultation with the chief executive of the management executive.

Local Enterprise Development Unit

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland was expenditure has been incurred by LEDU in respect of promoting equality of economic opportunity throughout Northern Ireland. [4778]

Mr. Ancram: LEDU is fully committed to supporting the elimination of all forms of unlawful discrimination in employment and to using its services to help to secure the objectives of the fair employment, sex discrimination and disabled persons legislation, and seeks to ensure equality of opportunity and fair treatment for all in the implementation of all its programmes.

In addition, LEDU is fully committed to the Government policy of targeting social need and has committed funding of £3,658,349 so far in 1995–96 to client companies and individuals operating in disadvantaged areas.

Larne Lough

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the environmental impact of shellfish cultivation in Larne lough; and what action he has taken to ensure that the objectives set out in the draft conservation plan for Larne lough special protection area. [4798]

Mr. Moss: Before issuing licences for shellfish farming, the Department of Agriculture consults the Department of the Environment to establish whether the proposals would have a detrimental environmental effect. The Department of the Environment considers the proposals in the context of the information that it holds on the flora and fauna of the littoral and sub-tidal habitats and any other plans or proposals for the area. Both Departments also consider any risk arising from the introduction of non-native species. In addition to the steps outlined above, the Department of the Environment will monitor bird populations and marine and coastal habitats, to assess whether changes of conservation significance are taking place in the lough.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many licences for shellfish cultivation in Larne lough (a) have been granted and (b) are currently under consideration. [4797]

Mr. Ancram: Two fish culture licences have been granted in respect of shellfish cultivation in Larne lough and two applications for licenses for shellfish farming in the lough are currently under consideration.

Shellfish Order (Northern Ireland) 1930

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has to (a) amend or (b) repeal the Shellfish Order (Northern Ireland) 1930. [4783]

Mr. Moss: Records indicate that no such order exists.

Belfast Lough

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the high and low tide marks are indicated on the foreshore around Belfast lough. [4784]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland under its chief executive, Mr Michael Brand. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from J. F. Codd to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 7 December 1995:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked the Chief Executive to reply to your Question about high and low tide marks on the foreshore around Belfast Lough. In the absence of the Chief Executive I am replying on his behalf.

There is no indication of tide marks on the foreshore. Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland large-scale maps show natural features including the coast, which is depicted by two lines; the High Water Mark Mean Tides (HWMMT) and the Low Water Mark Mean Tides (LWMMT) which are predicted levels.

"The Nemesis File"

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of Stae for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the statement of a Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers NCO contained in the "The Nemesis File." [4864]

Sir John Wheeler: I have not read this book, but I am aware the Ministry of Defence issued a statement at the time of the book's publication expressing serious doubts about the author's claim to have been a member of the SAS. In view of the nature of the allegations, however, the RUC serious crime squad will investigate the claims made in the book.

Punishment Beatings

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the frequency of punishment beatings in the period (a) before, (b) during and (c) after President Clinton's visit to Northern Ireland; and what assessment he has made of this estimate. [5553]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is as follows:

Casualties as a result of "punishment" attacks (shootings and assaults)

Month	Loyalist	Republican	Total
June 1995	4	13	17
July 1995	11	18	29
August 1995	5	12	17
September 1995	4	12	16
October 1995	4	21	25
November 1995	11	11	22
December 1st–11th	1	2	3
Total	40	89	129

These statistics have been provided by the RUC and are subject to amendment.

Between 22 November and 4 December no such attacks were carried out by either loyalists or republican groups. It is clear the groups perpetrating these savage and cowardly acts are acting under control. As President Clinton said while in Northern Ireland, they should cease now.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of bills to his Department were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. [5699]

Sir John Wheeler: Departments are required to provide details of their performance in their departmental reports.

In 1994–1995, the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments paid 94.7 per cent. of their bills in accordance with agreed contractual conditions, or within 30 days of receiving goods and services, or on presentation of a valid invoice.

Mr. Patrick Finucane

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the recommendations of (a) the International Commission of Jurists, (b) the United Kingdom nominee on the UN Sub-Commission on Rights, (c) the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights and (d) the Lawyers Committee for Human Rights in respect of a judicial inquiry into the circumstances leading up to and surrounding the death of Mr. Patrick Finucane. [5810]

Sir John Wheeler: There has been an RUC investigation into the murder of Mr. Finucane. The circumstances relating to the murder were also investigated by members of the enquiry team headed by Mr. John Stevens. A full investigation report was submitted by Mr. Stevens to the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland, who directed that there should be no prosecutions. I have no plans to establish a judicial inquiry.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he will take to establish a judicial inquiry into the circumstances leading up to and surrounding the death of Mr. Patrick Finucane. [5809]

Sir John Wheeler: I have no plans to establish a judicial inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the murder of Mr. Finucane. These were investigated by Mr. John Stevens and a summary of the report was published.

Conductive Education

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment has been made of the value and achievements of conductive education. [5814]

Mr. Ancram: No formal assessment of the value and achievements of conductive education has been undertaken in Northern Ireland. In 1993, the Government sponsored a research project into the relative merits of conductive education and conventional approaches for particular categories of children at the Birmingham institute for conductive education.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans there are to make conductive education available for children where parents wish it. [5832]

Mr. Ancram: Under the 1991 international agreement with Hungary, the United Kingdom is guaranteed access to a number of places for children and for trainee conductors at the Peto institute in Budapest. In Northern Ireland, the making of provision for children with special educational needs is a matter for education and library boards in the first instance. I am aware that one board has been considering how conductive education techniques might be integrated into its special education provision, but no specific plans have yet evolved.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many institutions provide conductive education for children with special educational needs; and how many children are currently receiving conductive therapy in each institution. [5813]

Mr. Ancram: Conductive education is provided at an independent school, the Buddy Bear trust school in Dungannon. There are three children enrolled.

Emergency Legislation

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps to implement the recommendation of the Human Rights Committee of the UN in respect of repealing laws infringing civil liberties which were designed for periods of emergency. [5808]

Sir John Wheeler: My right hon. and learned Friend announced on 12 June, before the Human Rights Committee made its recommendations, that there is to be an independent review of emergency legislation.

Autistic Children

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what facilities and services are available to identify and provide for the (a) educational, (b) medical, and (c) other needs of children with autism. [5835]

Mr. Ancram: It is the responsibility of the education and library boards to assess and provide for the special educational needs of all children in Northern Ireland with special educational needs, including autistic children. Placements may be made in special schools, in special units attached to mainstream schools or in mainstream schools themselves. One board operates an advisory and support service for autistic children and their families, and another has recently appointed a seconded teacher to assist and support special schools. As far as the health and personal social services are concerned, the assessed needs of children with autism are met within the learning disability programme of care.

Military Complaints Procedures Assessor

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to reappoint Mr. David Hewitt as independent assessor of military complaints procedures in Northern Ireland. [6792]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I have today reappointed David Hewitt as independent assessor of military complaints procedures in Northern Ireland until 31 March 1997.

The Army's presence on the streets of Northern Ireland in support of the RUC has, of course, diminished greatly since the cessation of military operations announced by the IRA and the loyalist paramilitaries, but the Government believe that there remains a useful role for the independent assessor although the need for the post will be kept under review.

HEALTH

NHS Contracts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 24 November, Official Report, column 336, if he will provide a breakdown of NHS contracts by (a) type and (b) region. [3330]

Mr. Malone: This information is available in the review of contracting, copies of which are available in the Library.

Hospital Medical Registrars

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioner and registrar appointments have been filled by British citizens and how many from each country outside the United Kingdom over the latest convenient period; and what estimate his Department has made of the number who (a) complete their appointment and return home and (b) remain in the United Kingdom. [5352]

Mr. Malone: The information on general practitioners is not available. The available information for hospital medical registrars is given in the "Hospital Medical Staff England Tables", copies of which are available in the Library.

Paracetamol

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to consult consultants in toxicology at

London teaching hospitals regarding the safety of the current formulation of paracetamol. [5498]

Mr. Malone: We have no plans to consult toxicologists at the London teaching hospitals regarding the safety of the current formulation of paracetamol.

Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority

Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has approved the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority's revised code of practice. [6788]

Mr. Horam: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has today laid before the House copies of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority's revised code of practice. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Ritalin

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what system is in place to monitor the scale of treatment of children with controlled drugs such as Ritalin and similar products; [5153]

(2) how many children in the United Kingdom are being or have been treated with Ritalin-methylphenidate in the last 10 years for which figures are available; [5154]

(3) how many children under six years of age in the United Kingdom are currently being treated with Ritalin; [5155]

(4) how much Ritalin has been manufactured in the United Kingdom in the last 10 years for which figures are available. [5156]

Mr. Horam: Information about the number of children treated with Ritalin is not available centrally. Ritalin is not manufactured in the United Kingdom.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide a breakdown of administration costs incurred to date and forecast for the future on PFI work. [5740]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply the then Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville), gave the right hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) on 2 May, Official Report, columns 175–76.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide for schemes so far agreed under the PFI the level of financing costs above the current cost of Government borrowing for the scheme with (a) the highest financing costs and (b) the lowest costs. [5742]

Mr. Horam: Comparing private finance initiative projects with publicly funded alternatives is not a question of comparing interest rates. PFI projects are given approval only if the PFI approach brings improvements in cost-effectiveness for the national health service. The specific information requested is not available.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide revenue forecasts for the current year and the next five years of expenditure on schemes provided under the PFI. [5741]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 6 December, Official Report, column 224.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of bills to his Department were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. [5703]

Mr. Horam: In 1994–95, the latest year for which figures are available, 91.9 per cent. of the Department's invoices were paid within the agreed credit period or within 30 days where no credit period had been set. For the period April to September 1995, this figure has increased to 95 per cent.

Suicides

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he collates in respect of the suicide rates among patients recently discharged from hospital. [6113]

Mr. Horam: None.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on suicides that have taken place in each of the last five years among (a) men and (b) women, indicating the method of suicide; [6112]

(2) how many suicides have taken place among men aged 15 to 24 years in each of the last 10 years. [6111]

Mr. Horam: Data on deaths from suicide—ICD[1] E950–E959; E980–E989—are published in table 2 of the publication, "Mortality statistics; Cause; England and Wales; series DH2", copies of which are available in the Library.

The latest data available[2] are for the years 1983–1992.

[2] The coding of causes of death in England and Wales was changed in 1993 to an automated system. Though the results from this are generally satisfactory, Office of Population/Censuses and Surveys have identified significant problems in the coding of external causes of death. Certifications of deaths in 1993 and 1994 which could have been due to external causes are all being examined and re-coded as necessary. More reliable data, comparable to that for previous years, will be available in the firth quarter of 1996.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many suicides have taken place in each of the last five years as a proportion of all annual deaths. [6110]

Mr. Horam: The numbers of suicides[1] which have taken place in each of the last five years as a proportion of all annual deaths are shown in the table.

	1990	1991	1992	1993[1]	1994[1]

The figures for 1993 and 1994 suicide deaths are Office of Population/Censuses and Surveys' current best estimates. The coding of causes of death in England and Wales was changed in 1993 to an automated system. Though the results from this are generally satisfactory, OPCS have identified significant problems in the coding of external causes of death. Certifications of deaths in 1993 and 1994 which could have been due to external causes are all being examined and re-coded as necessary. More reliable data, comparable to that for previous years, will be available in the first quarter of 1996.

Post-Operative Complications

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many in-patients have suffered post-operative complications in each of the last 10 years. [6105]

Mr. Horam: It is not possible to identify all post-operative complications from the data available centrally. Some information is published in volume 1 of "Hospital Episode Statistics: England", for the years 1988–89 to 1993–94, copies of which are available in the Library. This shows the number of finished consultant episodes where the primary diagnosis is linked to complications of surgical or medical care which cannot be classified elsewhere in the system.

Post-Operative Infections

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many patients in NHS hospitals have been diagnosed as suffering from post-operative infections in each of the last 10 years; [6103]

(2) what information his Department maintains on post-operative infection rates in NHS hospitals. [6104]

Mr. Horam: This information is not collected centrally.

Medicinal Herbs

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make it his policy to oppose any further regulations from the European Union which would restrict United Kingdom consumers' access to herbal medicines and remedies of their choice; and if he will make a statement. [6120]

(2) what is his policy in respect of availability of herbal remedies; and if he will make a statement. [6119]

Mr. Malone: The Government support the availability of herbal remedies within a framework of statutory controls to protect public health. We consider that existing legislation provides an appropriate measure of protection.

We are unaware of proposals from the European Union for the regulation of herbal remedies. We would consider any such proposals in the light of our overall policy to protect public health, but to do so with the minimum necessary regulation.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what consultation he undertook with (a) manufacturers, (b) consumers and (c) practitioners using medicinal herbs prior to deciding whether to support recent resolutions at the Council of Health Ministers relating to the status, marketing and availability of medicinal herbs; and if he will identify separately his consultation with the Society for the Promotion of Nutritional Therapy; [6118]

(2) what resolutions were passed at recent meetings of the Council of Health Ministers relating to medicinal herbs; if he will set out the terms of all resolutions; and if he will make a statement. [6117]

Mr. Malone: A resolution on medicinal plant preparations was adopted at the European Commission Council of Health Ministers meeting on 30 November. It invites the Commission to study public health safeguards relating to such preparations. It makes no policy proposals or statements. A copy of the resolution has been placed in the Library.

Scanning Equipment

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines his Department issues to district authorities in respect of the provision of scanning equipment for 24-hour emergency use. [6097]

Mr. Horam: It is for individual authorities, after discussions with provider units, to determine the level of provision of scanning equipment necessary for 24-hour emergency use.

Residential Care Homes

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 5 December, Official Report, column 200, how many (a) independent and (b) local authority residential care homes there were, by area, in each region in each of the last five years. [6141]

Mr. Horam: Information on numbers of homes for elderly and physically disabled people for the years 1989 to 1994 has been published in "Residential Accommodation for elderly people and people with physical and/or sensory disabilities: all residents in local authority, voluntary and private homes, year ending 31 March 1989 to year ending 31 March 1994, England". Information on the total number of homes for all client groups for the years ending 31 March 1994 and 1995 has been published in Department of Health statistical bulletins on residential accommodation for each of these years. Copies of all these publications are available in the Library.

Children Act 1989

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with local government representatives on the financial effects of the Asylum and Immigration Bill and the Social Security (Persons From Abroad) Regulations in respect of expenditure under the Children Act 1989; and if he will make a statement. [6013]

Mr. Horam: We have received representations from local government and officials are considering them.

Paediatric Intensive Care

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will undertake an inquiry into the circumstances relating to the death of Nicholas Geldard at Leeds infirmary on 8 December; and if he will make a statement on the case; [6095]

(2) if he will make a statement on the availability of intensive care facilities for children in the Greater Manchester area on 8 December. [6096]

Mr. Horam: The North West regional health authority is looking into the circumstances of this case as a matter of urgency. Its review will include an examination of the local availability of intensive care facilities for children on the day in question.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 4 December, Official Report, column 35, which trusts have been given permission by him to borrow from commercial sources. [6145]

Mr. Horam: All national health service trusts are permitted to borrow from commercial sources. Trusts must satisfy themselves that any such borrowing represents value for money.

Supervision Registers

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have been placed on supervision registers since NHS executive HSG(94)(5) in each (a) district and (b) region. [6114]

Mr. Bowis: Information is not available in the form requested.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals have been closed in each of the last five years; and how many are planned for closure in the next five years. [6106]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 7 November, Official Report, column 683.

NHS Staff

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what staff shortages his Department has identified across all grades in the NHS; and what steps are being taken to address them. [6102]

Mr. Malone: It is for local employers to determine what, if any, non-medical staff shortages exist. It is their responsibility to take appropriate action to retain and recruit existing qualified staff and ensure that adequate provision has been made to train the number of newly qualified staff they require.

National health service trusts now have greater freedoms than ever before to develop local pay and working arrangements to underpin their retention and recruitment strategies.

In the case of medical staff, the NHS executive and the Welsh Office receive advice from the specialist work force advisory group about the number of trainees needed to ensure an adequate supply of properly trained doctors and dentists in each specialty, although it is not always possible to recruit to training posts that are available. The specialist work force advisory group has given priority to considering specialties where there are identified shortages.

Medicines Control Agency

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the quality assurance procedures currently in place within the Medicines Control Agency. [5948]

Mr. Malone: The agency's performance is measured against a number of high level targets, set to protect public health in the field of medicinal products, which include targets related to standards of safety and quality. These are published in the agency's annual business plan and its accomplishments against them in its annual report, copies of which are available in the Library. The agency has in place a large number of standard operating procedures applicable to its many functions in order to meet its quality objectives. For example, the medicines inspectorate operates in compliance with the international quality system ISO 9002 and has achieved formal certification against this standard.

All agency procedures are subject to audit by the National Audit Office and internal Department of Health auditors.

Mental Health Services

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library responses from the chairman of health authorities and trusts to the Minister of State's letter of 24 August about mental health services. [6107]

Mr. Bowis: An announcement will be made in due course.

Influenza

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 7 December, Official Report, column 382, at what stage his Department will issue an alert about an influenza epidemic; and what further steps his Department proposes to take to protect those at risk from influenza. [6146]

Mr. Horam: The Departments of Health and the Environment issued guidance for health and local authorities on the management of communicable disease in HSG(93)56, copies of which are available in the Library. The guidance states that health authorities and local authorities should have up-to-date joint plans covering the structures and procedures for managing communicable disease control—specific diseases are not singled out—in their areas, both on a day-to-day basis and if an outbreak occurs; and that these plans should be reviewed annually. The leaflet "What should I do about flu?", produced by the Department this year, also contains advice to those at risk of serious illness should they develop influenza on how they should protect themselves. Over 6 million does of influenza vaccine have been distributed so far this influenza season.

Hypothermia

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths from hypothermia took place among (a) men aged 65 years and over and (b) women aged 60 years and over in 1994 by region. [6142]

Mr. Horam: The information is shown in the table.

Numbers of deaths which occurred in 1994 with a mention of hypothermia (ICD 991.6[1]) on the death certificate by regional health authority of usual residence (including Wales), for: males aged 65 years and over, and females aged 60 and over

Committee on Safety of Medicines

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is (a) the normal period of appointment and (b) the maximum cumulative period of appointment for members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines: and in what circumstances the maximum cumulative period of membership may be exceeded. [5926]

Mr. Malone: Members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines are normally appointed by the United Kingdom Health Ministers for three-year periods with the maximum cumulative period of appointment being six years, as set out in paragraph 4 of the 1970 regulations. Members can be, and are, reappointed for further terms of office. A new three-year period of appointment announced on 11 December, takes effect on 1 January 1996.

Medicines Act 1968

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many times regulations under schedule 1 to the Medicines Act 1968 have been made; and what was (a) the title, (b) the date of making and (c) the date of coming into effect of each such regulation. [5924]

Mr. Malone: Once. The Medicines Commission and Committees Regulations 1970 No. 746 was made on 11 May 1970 and came into operation on 26 May 1970.

Mental Illness

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many recorded deaths have been accounted for by mental illness in each of the last five years. [6109]

Mr. Horam: Information relating to 1990 to 1992 is available in Office of Population Censuses and Surveys DH2 series, copies of which are available in the Library. Information for 1993–94 are shown in the table.

Deaths from mental disorders (ICD[1] 290–319) in England and Wales, by sex, 1993–94

[1] International Classification of Disease, 9th Revision.

[2] Provisional.

If, as a result of a mental disorder, a person commits suicide or dies in an accident, the death is not coded to mental disorders and not therefore included in the above figures.

Deaths for 1992 and earlier years represent the number of deaths registered in each year, while deaths from 1993 are those which occurred in each year. In addition, new procedures for coding cause of death from 1993 and the absence of medical inquiries mean that figures for 1993 onwards may not be exactly comparable with earlier years.

Chronic conditions such as senile dementia decreased sharply as a result of these changes.

Public Information Lines

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the public information lines under the jurisdiction of his Department; what bodies have carried out these assessments; and what has been the cost of these to his Department. [4231]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 6 December 1995]: Examination of the effectiveness of public information lines under the jurisdiction of the Department is not conducted routinely by outside bodies as an assessment is usually made from the result of responses. However, two reviews have been conducted in recent years on individual helplines.

In 1993, Price Waterhouse undertook a fundamental review of the national HIV/AIDS helpline, at a cost of nearly £40,000, and examined the need for related drugs and sexually transmitted diseases services. Their report concluded

> "telephone helpline services for HIV/AIDS, other STDs and drugs can be justified at a cost effective component of prevention services".

Following the report's recommendations, a tendering exercise was carried out to establish operationally integrated national helplines for HIV/AIDS and drugs.

In 1994, the NHS executive commissioned Insight Management Consultants to undertake an evaluation of the regional health information services, at a cost of £20,000. It reported back to the NHS executive in November 1994.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many public information lines his Department operates; how many calls have been made to those lines; what has been the cost of them; and what audit procedures are in place to monitor these costs. [4239]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 6 December 1995]: There are eight main information lines falling under the Department's jurisdiction for which a total of 1,863,463 calls have been received at a cost to the Department of £10,299.124. Where applicable, the Central Office of Information carries out the following procedures to monitor the costs:

(i) COI auditors regularly inspect suppliers' books, working practices and cost charging procedures.

(ii) At the start of any new campaign, COI goes out to tender to a number of already approved suppliers to ensure the selection of the most cost-effective company to handle responses.

(iii) Due to its extensive use of British Telecom facilities, COI has achieved volume discounts of approximately 46 per cent. (value £108,717) on its BT charges since April 1995.

(iv) In addition, COI obtains negotiated discounts from its telephone marketing suppliers.

Community Care Services

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 4 December, Official Report, column 43, what has been the level of community health programme expenditure by providers in each (a) district and (b) region in each of the last four years. [6144]

Mr. Horam: The tables represent an aggregate summary by regional health authority and as such are only broadly indicative of the spending position. Information for district health authorities could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

SCOTLAND

District Nurses and Health Visitors

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the numbers of district nurses in training and the number of health visitors in training in Scotland for each of the years between 1988 and 1995, inclusive, broken down by (a) real frequency and (b) whole-time equivalents. [3446]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Actual numbers in training as at the end of March each year are set out in the table and have been supplied by the National Board for Nursing Midwifery and Health Visiting for Scotland.

	District nurses	Health visitors
1988	149	120
1989	134	111
1990	117	111

1992	68	68
1993	62	45
1994	63	61
1995	96	100

Note:

Whole-time equivalent student numbers are not available but up until 1992–93 the vast majority of students were full-time. In 1993–94 and 1994–95 just over half the students in each specialty were part-time and the remainder full-time.

Health Expenditure

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the expenditure on administration (a) for each health board in 1991–92 and (b) for each health board and NHS trust within its area in 1994–95. [4955]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is shown in the table. For 1994–95, expenditure for all NHS trusts within each health board area are included. Figures have been taken from the annual accounts of health boards and NHS trusts. The expenditure shown for administration includes senior nurses and clinicians who have transferred to the general/senior managers pay scales.

A75

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the programmes to upgrade the A75 route; what contracts are presently under construction; what contracts are to be awarded in 1996; and what support the European Union is giving to the A75 route. [5355]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Preparations for major improvements at the Glen are in an advanced stage and we hope to determine in the near future a planned start date for construction. In addition, a number of works are being implemented through the on-going accident investigation and prevention system, either at specific sites where accidents have been recorded or through mini-route accident reduction plan studies of sections of the road where the accident rate is the highest. Minor junction improvements are also planned.

The A75 is included in the trans-European transport network—TENs. It forms part of the only road-related TENs priority project in the United Kingdom, the Ireland UK-Benelux road link. Support from the EU's TENs funds may be available, at a rate of 10 per cent. capital costs or 50 per cent. of feasibility studies. While road programmes are eligible under the current European structural fund objective 5b programme in Dumfries and Galloway, they must compete for the limited funds available in the programme.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the standards of service set for emergency call response times for the Scottish ambulance service; and how often they are met within the Greater Glasgow health board area. [5086]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The target response times that apply within the Greater Glasgow health board area and information on how the Scottish ambulance service NHS trust performed against the targets are as follows:

Emergency calls—Greater Glasgow

Population Density	Target—95 per cent. of calls responded to within	Performance
		1994–95 percentage	1995–[1]96 percentage
High (>3 people per acre)	14 minutes	89	89
Medium (0.5–3 people per acre)	18 minutes	93	94

[1] Based on 1 April to 30 November 1995.

Water and Sewerage Services

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the outstanding capital debt on water and sewerage services for each regional and islands council in the most recent year; and what arrangements he has made for this debt to be transferred to the three new water and sewerage authorities on 1 April 1996. [5288]

Mr. Kynoch: The latest year for which figures are available is 1994–95. The information as at 31 March 1995 as contained in capital outstanding returns from local authorities is set out in the following table:

	£000s
Borders regional council	31,581
Central regional council	75,798
Dumfries and Galloway regional council	55,292
Fife regional council	103,743
Grampian regional council	210,308
Highland regional council	73,837
Lothian regional council	268,769
Orkney Isles islands council	8,939
Shetland Isles islands council	1,594
Strathclyde regional council	565,047
Tayside regional council	131,000
Western Isles islands council	15,835
Total	1,541,743

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the external consultants, employed to date to assist with the transfer of water and sewerage services to the new water authorities in Scotland, and what fees they have received. [5528]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 12 December 1995]: The Babtie group has been commissioned to assist with the transfer of water and sewerage assets to the new water authorities. Payments have totalled £407,724.77 to date, under two contracts.

Relevant debt outstanding at 31 March 1996 will be transferred to the new water authorities by virtue of section 91 of the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Act 1994. The mechanism of transfer is currently under consideration.

Sheep

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he will take to arrest the decline in sheep numbers in the hills and uplands of Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [4807]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 11 December 1995]: Following the Government's autumn review of farm incomes in the hills and uplands we decided to hold rates of hill livestock compensatory allowances—HLCA—at current levels. This, at a time when net farm incomes were forecast to rise on average by some nine per cent. and by 15.5 per cent. for specialist sheep units, was a significant achievement after what had been a particularly severe public expenditure round. In addition, the number of animals on which subsidy has been paid in the less-favoured area is relatively stable. The maintenance of HLCA rates clearly demonstrates the Government's continuing commitment to sheep production in Scotland's less-favoured areas.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department spent on official hospitality in 1994–95 and the financial year to date; and what is the 1995–96 projected budget for official hospitality. [5587]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In 1994–95 the cost of hospitality, which is included in the running cost budget for my Department, was £53,806. Expenditure for the financial year to date is £28,668. The projected budget for 1995–96 is £59,000.

Munitions Disposal

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has concerning the dumping of explosives and related materials at a point south-west of Arran since 1965; and if he will make a statement. [4832]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 12 December 1995]: Beaufort's dyke is the only charted munitions disposal site to the south-west of Arran. Details of disposals there are contained in the Ministry of Defence report placed in the House of Commons Library on 15 November.

There have also been commercial explosives disposals to the east of Arran at Birch point. The report of a marine laboratory survey of that area was placed in the House of Commons Library on 25 July 1990.

Beaufort's Dyke

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to receive the report of the survey by the marine laboratory of the north channel around Beaufort's dyke; what arrangements he proposes to make for the publication of the report; and if he will make a statement. [5460]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 12 December 1995]: The initial results of the survey will be in the new year. The report setting out the results will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Political Advisers

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many political advisers worked for the Secretary of State for Scotland in (a) 1978, (b) 1987, (c) 1992 and (d) 1995; and what was the annual cost of these posts in each year. [6082]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The number of special advisers employed by my Department in each of the years referred to is as follows:

1978: None

1987: 1

1992: 2

1995: 2

Salaries for special advisers are negotiated individually in relation to previous earnings, and are confidential. They are, however, normally paid on a special advisers salary spine of 34 points ranging from £19,503 to £67,609. Appointments are non-pensionable, and the salary spine reflects this.

Gourock Ropeworks

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has had with the Inverclyde district council, Historic Scotland, Renfrewshire Enterprise and other interested parties about the proposed demolition of Gourock Ropeworks in Port Glasgow; and if he will make a statement. [5494]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has had no recent discussions on the matter of demolition. However, as the question relates to matters undertaken by Historic Scotland, I have asked the agency's director and chief executive, Mr. Graeme Munro, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter to Dr. Norman Godman from Graeme N. Munro, dated 14 December 1995:

You tabled a Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Scotland for written question on 12 December asking what recent discussions he has had about the demolition of the Gourock Ropeworks building. The question relates to operational matters undertaken by Historic Scotland and I have been asked to reply. The terms of this letter will be reproduced in the Official Report and a copy of it will also be deposited in the Library of the House.

I would refer you to the letter I wrote to you dated 5 April of this year which was published in the Official Report of the House (Vol.257, 86 part 2 Cols 1167–68) of the same date. In the letter I explained the position on demolition. In order to demolish a listed building such as the Gourock Ropeworks building, listed building consent is required. In relation to a demolition the Secretary of State has to be consulted on any application for consent. To date no application for listed building consent has been received by Historic Scotland for the Secretary of State's consideration.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of bills to his Department were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. [5698]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Details of the Scottish Office payment performance are as follows:

Year	Percentage of payments paid early or on time
1991–92	82
1992–93	85

Year	Percentage of payments paid early or on time
1993–94	89
1994–95	96

DNA Technology

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what discussions his Department has had with the chief constables of Scottish police forces concerning the provision of a database allowing for the collation and use of DNA samples taken under the Criminal Justice (Scotland) Act 1995; [5782]

(2) if he will make available funding for a pilot project to provide a DNA database in Scotland on a comparable basis with the Forensic Science Service study commissioned by the Home Office; [5783]

(3) what assessment his Department has made of the need for a database in Scotland for the collation and use of DNA samples taken in accordance with the Criminal Justice (Scotland) Act 1995. [5784]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made clear in his statement on 11 December, we have made funds available for the Scottish police to make full use of the new DNA technology. We have just received a report from the Association of Chief Police Officers in Scotland; and the Scottish Office Home Department is having detailed discussions as to the best way of using the powers under the Criminal Justice (Scotland) Act 1995, after they come into effect on 1 April.

We do not see any need for a pilot project: we expect that the Scottish police will be able to proceed as soon as possible to make full use of DNA technology.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many schools covered by the assisted places scheme received (a) more than £1 million, (b) over £750,00, (c) over £500,000 and (d) over £250,000 under the assisted places scheme for each academic year since 1981. [5818]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Under the assisted places scheme, grant is paid to parents of assisted pupils. Schools administer the allocation of grant to parents. The amounts distributed to schools for this purpose are set out in the table.

Academic year	Over £1 million	£750,001 to £1,000,000	£500,001 to £750,000	£250,001 to £500,000

Until school session 1988–89, Edinburgh Merchant schools—EMC—administered Stewart's Melville college, Mary Erskine school for girls and George Watson's college and one grant total was allocated to EMC to fund assisted places in each of these schools. From session 1989–90, grant was paid separately to George Watson's college.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for the academic year 1994–95 in descending order the independent schools by the proportion of their school rolls made up of pupils covered by the assisted places scheme and the total number of pupils on the school roll; what proportion of the school roll at each school was covered by the scheme; how many pupils were covered by the scheme at each school; how many pupils were on the roll of each school; what level of fees was charged for pupils under the scheme at each school; and what sums were received by each school under the scheme. [5870]

Mr. Robertson: The information requested for the 1994–95 school session is set out in the table:

[1] Provisional figures. Final audited claims for 1994–95 schools session yet to be submitted.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many independent sector schools have had (a) more than 25 per cent., (b) more than 50 per cent. and (c) less than 5 per cent. of their school rolls made up of pupils covered by the assisted places scheme for each academic year since 1981. [5794]

Mr. Robertson: The information requested was not collected centrally for school sessions 1981–82 to 1992–93. Information for school sessions 1993–94 and 1994–95 is set out in the table.

School session	Assisted pupils over 25 per cent. but not more than 50 per cent. of school roll	Assisted pupils more than 50 per cent. of school roll	Assisted pupils less than 5 per cent. of school roll
1993–94	2	Nil	11

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made by his Department in taking forward proposals for the expansion of the assisted places scheme; and how much his Department estimates this will cost in the future financial years for which figures are available when this has been achieved. [5820]

Mr. Robertson: Consultation on ways of expanding the assisted places scheme are currently underway with the Scottish Council of Independent Schools and a statement will be made in due course. The estimated cost of the scheme in the current financial year will be around £11 million. An additional £9 million in total is being made available for expansion of the scheme over the next three years.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which independent sector schools charged (a) and highest and (b) the lowest level of fees to pupils covered by the assisted places scheme in the academic year 1994–95; and what charges were levied. [5828]

Mr. Robertson: The highest tuition fee charged to pupils covered by the assisted places scheme in academic year 1994–95 was at Glenalmond college at £7,575 per annum. The lowest fees were charged at Hamilton college—£2,273 per annum for pupils aged 12 to 18 years.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department has spent on the operation of the assisted places scheme in each year since 1981; how many (a) pupils and (b) institutions were covered by the scheme; and what was the overspend on the budget allocated to the scheme. [5789]

Mr. Robertson: The information requested is set out in the table. Expenditure on the assisted places scheme is cash limited each year and there have been no overspends on the budget allocated in any year since the scheme commenced.

Conductive Education

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many institutions provide conductive education for children with special educational needs; and how many children are currently receiving conductive therapy in each institution. [5812]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Various institutions in Scotland, including a number of local authority and grant-aided special schools, provide education that is inspired by the principles of conductive education. However, detailed information on precise numbers is not held centrally.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment has been made of the value and achievements of conductive education. [5815]

Mr. Robertson: The Scottish Office has not made an assessment of the value and achievements of conductive education specifically.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans there are to make conductive education available for children whose parents choose it. [5833]

Mr. Robertson: Educational provision using the principles of conductive education is already available in Scotland.

Independent Schools

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many independent schools are operating in the current academic year. [5823]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: There are currently 117 independent schools in Scotland registered with the Registrar of Independent Schools.

Woodlands

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidelines currently apply for the protection of public access to woodlands being sold by the Forestry Commission; when those guidelines were circulated to Forestry Commission staff; when they became operational; and if he will publish them. [6090]

Mr. Kynoch: The current access guidelines for continued public access to Forestry Commission woodlands after sale were introduced in October 1991, after being circulated to Forestry Commission staff. A copy is available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what criteria have been adopted in assessing whether a woodland is important for public access when it is being considered for disposal by the Forestry Commission; and how the decision on whether it is important is made; [6089]

(2) what is the minimum number of walkers in a woodland identified for disposal by the Forestry Commission required for that woodland to be classified as important for public access; [6091]

(3) how many Forestry Commission woods have been classified as (a) important for public access and (b) unimportant for public access; and if he will list all such woods classified as either, indicating the location of each and the reasons they were deemed to be (a) or (b) [6094]

Mr. Kynoch: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 28 November 1995, Official Report, column 590.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number and total area of Forestry Commission woods sold in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales since access agreements were introduced in 1991 to protect public access, indicating for each country the number and area with and without access agreements. [6093]

Mr. Kynoch: The information is as follows:

Forestry Commission Woods sold between 1 October 1991 and 30 September 1995

	With access agreement Number	Area[1]	Without access agreement Number	Area[1]	Total Number	Area[1]
England	6	136	189	5,006	195	5,142
Scotland	4	325	216	24,110	220	24,435
Wales	18	382	211	4,146	229	4,528

[1] Areas are given in hectares.

Education Expenditure

Mr. Donohoe: To ask Secretary of State for Scotland what was the average amount of money spent by his Department on a pupil in a public sector school at (a) primary and (b) secondary level for each academic year since 1981. [5797]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Direct expenditure by the Scottish Office on the education of school pupils in public sector schools is limited to grants made available to Jordanhill school, a grant-aided school; and Dornoch academy and St. Mary's Episcopal primary school, which are both self-governing schools. Comprehensive information on the division of resources between the primary and secondary departments at Jordanhill school is not available. The annual recurrent grant to Dornoch academy in the financial year 1994–95, following the school's incorporation as a self-governing school in April 1994, was £387,000. On the basis of the school roll at September 1994, expenditure per pupil was therefore £6,672. St. Mary's Episcopal primary school was incorporated in October 1995.

Expenditure per pupil in education authority schools is the responsibility of each education authority. Local authority expenditure is supported by central Government, for example, through the annual local government financial settlement. Such financial support is not specific to particular local authority services an it is for each authority to determine the allocation of all the resources at its disposal.

Scottish Homes

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what approaches Irvine Housing Association Ltd. has made to Scottish Homes seeking additional funding for its activities since the association's establishment; how much Irvine housing association has received in support from Scottish Homes up until this point; what form this support has taken; and what outstanding requests for support are being considered by Scottish Homes. [5801]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The information requested is a matter for Scottish Homes. I have asked its chairman, Sir James Mellon, to write to the hon. Member.

New Towns

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what adjustment will be made in the Scottish Office's budget to reflect the revenue raised by his Department through the disposal of the housing and industrial assets of Scotland's new towns. [5803]

Mr. Kynoch: Income from the disposal of Scottish new town housing and industrial assets was fully reflected in my right hon. Friends's statement of 11 December on public expenditure.

Class Sizes

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the average number of pupils in classes in (a) secondary and (b) primary schools adjusted for the time during which teachers are non-class-committed under existing staffing agreements for each education authority in Scotland and for each education division within Strathclyde for each academic year since 1979. [5805]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 27 March 1995, Official Report, column 586-87. The information provided took into account teacher time on non-class-committed duties.

Inward Investment

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide a breakdown, by source, of the inward investment attracted to Scotland in each of the last five years, and if he will provide details of each inward investment project attracted to Scotland since April 1994. [6462]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is as follows:

The figures relate only to projects handled by Locate in Scotland or the Scottish Office Education and Industry Department. They are based on information provided by the companies themselves at the time of the investment decision and take no account of subsequent developments. A few projects may not have proceeded and others may have been reduced in scale as a result of changes in the commercial environment. Equally, however, some projects may have led to more investment and more jobs than originally anticipated; and the figures take no account of the substantial number of new jobs created indirectly in supplier companies. Experience over a number of years indicates that, on average, around two-thirds of planned direct jobs are created.

All our dealings with inward investors are undertaken on a commercially confidential basis and it would not therefore be appropriate to publish details of individual projects except in cases where details of the project have been announced by the company itself. The following table contains details of the inward investment projects attracted to Scotland which have been the subject of public announcements since April 1994.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Milk

2. Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much money the United Kingdom will receive from the EU to help pay for milk in secondary schools and milk in school catering in 1995–96. [4128]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We estimate that EU expenditure on the discretionary elements of the school milk scheme will amount to approximately £6.1 million in the United Kingdom in 1995–96. Doing away with the discretionary element will result in public expenditure savings of about £4 million.

17. Mr. Khabra: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what will be the cost to the EU of the common agricultural policy milk and milk products regime in 1995. [4145]

Mr. Baldry: The provisional outturn for the cost of the EU diary regime in the 1995 FEOGA year is 4 billion ecu.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make publicly available the submission by the United Kingdom to the European Commission requesting a derogation allowing the United Kingdom to continue to use EU aid for milk used in the preparation of school meals; and if he will place a copy of the submission in the Library. [3382]

Mr. Hogg [holding answer 30 November 1995]: I am arranging for a copy of the document to be placed in the Library of the House.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

15. Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of the dairy industry to discuss BSE. [4143]

Mrs. Browning: The Minister last met representatives of the dairy industry to discuss BSE-related issues on 6 December.

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received concerning the number of cases of BSE in the United Kingdom. [4141]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) this afternoon.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to ban from human food all specified offals from calves under the age of six months. [4849]

Mrs. Browning: The controls on the specified bovine offals are designed to ensure that all tissues that potentially harbour BSE infectivity are removed from cattle at slaughter and are destroyed. These tissues should not, therefore, enter the human or animal food chain. The current controls are based on scientific evidence and are endorsed by the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee. The six-month cut-off was originally based on the distribution of scrapie agent in infected sheep. Experimental studies show that BSE infectivity cannot be detected in either the brain or spinal cord up to and including 18 months after cattle were fed a large dose of infected brain. Indeed, infectivity has been found in no tissue other than the small intestine in these experiments so far. The small intestine from cattle of any age is banned from entering the food chain. The six-month cut-off for brain and spinal cord therefore represents a very wide margin of safety in relation to the experimental results and there is no reason to revise them.

Hill Farming

16. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy for encouraging the younger generation to enter hill farming. [4144]

Mr. Boswell: I refer the reply given earlier by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to the hon. Member for Bridgend (Mr. Griffiths).

In addition, farmers in the less-favoured areas benefit from the substantial public funding in the form of livestock subsidies. These are expected to amount to £610 million in 1995, rising to £655 million in 1996.

Common Agricultural Policy

18. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food by what amount the planned expenditure of the EU on the CAP in 1996 differs from actual expenditure last year. [4146]

Mr. Baldry: The 1996 draft budget for the CAP exceeds expenditure in 1994 by about 7.9 billion ecu, or £6.7 billion at current rates of exchange.

Fruit and Vegetables

19. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his plans to reduce the trade deficit in fruit and vegetables. [4147]

24. Mr. Simpson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom trade balances in fruit and vegetables; and what action the Government are taking to improve it. [4152]

Mr. Boswell: The trade deficit in horticultural products, currently standing at some £3 billion, reflects a range of factors, including imports of non-indigenous and out-of-season produce. Our strategy—which includes the appointment of a horticultural export promoter to the Department's market task force—is to encourage the industry to play to its strengths and match the excellence of its product with high-class marketing.

Farm Animals (Slaughter)

20. Dr. Spink: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he has taken to promote the slaughter of farm animals before transport. [4148]

Mrs. Browning: We have an excellent record on meat products, which are well up on last year, when they exceeded live exports in value terms by a factor of nearly 7:1. We are working with the industry and the Meat and Livestock Commission to convert even more of the trade in live animals to a trade in meat.

Fish Diseases Laboratories

21. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many people are employed in (a) his Department and (b) the new fish diseases laboratories in Weymouth; and what was the investment in the laboratories. [4149]

Mr. Boswell: At 1 October, the total number of staff employed in the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, inclusive of the agencies, was 11,195. Of this number, 54 were employed at the fish diseases laboratories at Weymouth. The anticipated outturn cost for the provision of the laboratories at Weymouth is approximately £13 million.

Farmers (Early Retirement)

22. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce a scheme of voluntary early retirement for farmers. [4150]

Mr. Boswell: No. Council regulation 2079/92 permits member states to provide early retirement pensions to farmers aged between 55 and normal retirement age who release their land for amalgamation with other holdings or for non-agricultural use. This option has not been taken up in the UK because we take the view that its terms are not appropriate to the conditions of agriculture here.

Rural White Paper

23. Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received on the rural policy White Paper. [4151]

Mr. Boswell: During the preparation of the White Paper "Rural England—A Nation Committed to a Living Countryside" about 380 organisations and individuals responded to the invitation to give their views. Regional seminars involving key representatives from various interest groups in all regions were also held. Since the White Paper was published there have been a number of occasions attended by Ministers which have provided the opportunity for further representations to be made. In that period we have also received five letters to Ministers on the White Paper.

Pesticides

25. Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to monitor the use of pesticides. [4154]

Mrs. Browning: The Government undertake a comprehensive monitoring programme which covers pesticide usage, residue levels and wildlife incidents. This information is reported to the Advisory Committee on Pesticides and is used by the regulatory Departments to inform their policies relating to approval and control of pesticides. All monitoring results are made publicly available.

Dairy Crest

26. Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the sell-off of Dairy Crest. [4155]

Mr. Baldry: It is the responsibility of the Residuary Milk Marketing Board to decide, in the light of commercial and market conditions, when and how the disposal of Diary Crest is to be effected.

Farmers (Lichfield)

27. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will meet farmers from the Lichfield area to discuss EU documentation; and if he will make a statement. [4156]

Mr. Boswell: I have no plans to meet farmers from the Lichfield area at the moment. However, as I announced on 9 November, we have set up an efficiency scrutiny which aims to reduce the burden of paperwork, including EU documentation, on farmers in England and Wales.

Organic Turkeys

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to encourage the production and consumption of turkeys reared to organic standards and by welfare-friendly methods. [4142]

Mrs. Browning: The welfare of all livestock on agricultural land is protected by the Agriculture (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1968, which makes it an offence to cause unnecessary pain or unnecessary distress to livestock, and subordinate legislation. The welfare of turkeys is further protected by a welfare code which sets out more detailed requirements.

We are encouraging the production of all types of organic food. We support the work of the independent UK register of organic food standards which control production standards for all sectors, including poultry.

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much has been spent on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in his Department in each of the last three years. [5567]

Mr. Boswell: Expenditure on furnishings and decorating ministerial offices in each of the last three years is included in the running cost expenditure of the Department, which is published in the annual report.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will provide revenue forecasts for the current year and the next five years of expenditure on schemes provided under the PFI. [5722]

Mr. Boswell: While several projects are currently being assessed for their potential, no schemes have so far been agreed under the private finance initiative, and no revenue forecasts have been made.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of bills to his Department were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. [5710]

Mr. Boswell: From 1991 to 1994, prompt payment performance was measured by a manual sampling process. For 1993–94, this sampling established MAFF's overall payment performance including payments to farm businesses as 85 per cent.

During 1994, MAFF was in the process of installing a computerised payments system and, as a result, consistent, statistically valid data on prompt payment performance could not be collected. Data emerging from the new system indicate 85.41 per cent. of all payments made by MAFF in the first quarter of 1995–96 were made by the due date.

Public Opinion Surveys

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all qualitative and quantitative research projects and surveys carried out for his Department into aspects of public attitudes and opinions (a) in general and (b) in relation to specific policy proposals in each of the past three years to December 1995, indicating for each project or survey (i) the date on which the research was commissioned, (ii) the amount which his Department spent, (iii) who carried out the research, (iv) the number of people surveyed or taking part, (v) the location and time scale and (vi) which individuals and organisations have been given access to the findings. [5988]

Mr. Boswell: A total of 15 projects and surveys, looking into aspects of public attitudes and opinions, have been commissioned by MAFF in the past three years to December 1995. Details of these surveys are shown. It is not possible for commercial reasons to give the cost of each survey individually; however, in total these surveys cost £359,000.

Of the 15 projects and surveys commissioned, four were in relation to specific policy proposals and 11 of a general nature. For completed projects and surveys, the findings are available on request, subject to any commercial constraints.

Drift Net Fishing

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 7 December, Official Report, column 372, if he will list the individuals and organisations to whom he has circulated the interim report on drift net fishing from the sea mammals research unit; and when he will place a copy in the Library. [5869]

Mr. Baldry: The Ministry has not yet circulated the interim report to other individuals or organisations and will not do so until after it has been placed in the Library. This will be done before the recess once the Ministry has prepared its analysis of the report.

Dietary Supplements

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, (1) if he will make it his policy to oppose any further regulations from the European Union which would restrict United Kingdom consumers' access to vitamin, mineral and other dietary supplements; and if he will make a statement; [6205]

(2) what is his policy in respect of ensuring the availability of vitamin, mineral and other dietary supplements; and if he will make a statement. [6122]

Mrs. Browning: The Government's policy is to ensure that consumers have as much choice as possible in their access to vitamin, mineral and other dietary supplements, provided that the public health is not compromised. There are no formal proposals from the European Union at present to change the rules on the sale of dietary supplements. If any such proposals were made, the United Kingdom position would reflect this policy. We would be opposed to any unnecessary regulation.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 18 December 1995

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

EC Funding

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which organisations in the United Kingdom have received subsidies from the EC for the purpose of advancing the idea of Europe; and if he will make a statement on the process by which such organisations are nominated and chosen, indicating the role of Her Majesty's Government in these deliberations. [5898]

Mr. David Davis: Many organisations in the United Kingdom are funded by the EC for particular purposes, such as student exchanges, infrastructure projects, research, and to stimulate debate on issues affecting Europe. The involvement of Her Majesty's Government differs in each project.

Kashmir

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which British Government Ministers have visited Indian-administered Kashmir in each of the last five years. [6461]

Mr. Hanley: I am not aware of any official visits by British Government Ministers to Indian-administered Kashmir in the last five years.

Advertising

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the expenditure of his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title for each year since 1990–91; and what estimate he has made for 1995–96 based on expenditure to date and existing plans. [6569]

Mr. Hanley: Details of advertising expenditure incurred by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office—both diplomatic and aid wings—were given in response to a question asked by the hon. Member for Gordon on 13 February, Official Report column 487. Information on the proportion which was spent on newspaper advertising could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost. The projected spend on all advertising and promotional material for 1995–96 is £2,719,000.

EU (English Language Use)

Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what research his Department has (a) evaluated and (b) commissioned into the increase in the use of the English language in the EU; and if he will place copies of all such research in the Library. [6331]

Mr. Hanley: The answers are as follows:

(a) None;

(b) None.

However, the British Council-led English 2000 project has initiated research into the use of, and attitudes towards, the teaching and learning of English in the EU and in other parts of the world. The project will carry out in due course more in-depth studies of this issue. The British Council's report "English in the World" will be placed in the Library.

European Commission (Information Policy)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he was consulted by the European Commission about the booklet "Do You Still Believe All You Read in the Newspapers". [6532]

Mr. David Davis: The European Commission is responsible for its information budget and how it is spent. Questions on the European Commission's information policy should be addressed to the Commission.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total cost of the booklet "Do You Still Believe All You Read in the Newspapers?" published by the European Commission; and what was the British Government's share of that cost. [6533]

Mr. Davis: We understand that the production cost for the booklet was £21,500, with a print run of 50,000 copies, at a cost of 43p for each copy.

The United Kingdom made no direct contribution to the cost of producing the booklet. The Commission budget is funded from the general budget of the European Communities, to which the UK contributes.

Khalifa Bazelya

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the circumstances of the expulsion of Khalifa Bazelya. [6650]

Mr. Hanley: The head of the Libyan interests section was declared persona non grata on 11 December for activities not compatible with his diplomatic status. This action was taken solely on security grounds.

China

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have been held with the Government of the Peoples Republic of China concerning the employment of child and prison labour in (a) economic zones and (b) export industries; what visits have been made to such enterprises by embassy staff; and if he will make a statement. [6022]

Mr. Hanley: We continue to be deeply concerned about reports of the exploitation of child and prison labour in China. We take every suitable opportunity to raise our concerns about all forms of human rights abuse in China, with the Chinese authorities. Most recently, the Foreign Secretary did so with the Chinese Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister, in London on 3 October.

Madrid Heads of Government Meeting

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals to increase democracy and to reduce poverty he will be submitting to the European Council Heads of Government review meeting in Madrid. [6275]

Mr. David Davis: At the Madrid European Council decisions were taken on the launch of the 1996 intergovernmental conference, at which we will continue to work to improve the democratic legitimacy of the European Union including a voting system which better reflects population and an enhanced role for national parliaments. There was also discussion at Madrid of employment, competitiveness and deregulation, all of which are important factors in reducing poverty.

International Bodies (Budgets)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the impact on the United Kingdom contribution to the budgets of (a) the United Nations, (b) the World Bank and (c) the European Union of the Budget statement of 28 November. [6333]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman shortly.

Treaties

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many treaties have been agreed with other countries in the calendar year to date. [6743]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Treaty records contain details of 81 bilateral treaties concluded and 28 multilateral treaties signed during the calendar year. Arrangements are being made for a list to be deposited in the Library of the House shortly.

East Timor

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what investigations he has made into reports about Hawk aircraft flying over East Timor. [6689]

Mr. Hanley: We have looked carefully into the reports about Hawk aircraft flying over East Timor, but have found no evidence to substantiate them.

European Commission (London Office)

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what restrictions on political activity apply to the head of the London Office of the European Commission. [6946]

Mr. David Davis: Officials activities are governed by staff regulations, which have been agreed with the Council. Officials are required to carry out their duties and conduct themselves solely with the interests of the Communities in mind. They must seek permission to engage in any outside activity, whether gainful or not. Permission shall be refused if the activity is such as to impair the official's independence. Further information is available from the European Commission at:

No. 8 Storey's Gate
London
SW1P 3AT.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the running costs of the European Commission's London offices; and from what European Union budget these costs are paid. [6669]

Mr. Davis: This information is available from the European Commission Office at:

No. 8 Storey's Gate
London
SW1P 3AT.

British Embassies (Commercial Services)

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the services which are available from British embassies abroad to British companies seeking assistance with business information, for which a charge is made on the companies concerned; and if he will list the level of charges and when they were introduced. [6680]

Mr. Hanley: The commercial services offered by British embassies which attract a charge are in the following list.

Charging for the existing range of export services was introduced on 1 April 1989; the list reflects the current prices which came into effect on 1 October 1995.

The Department of Trade and Industry and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office provide, through overseas trade services, a wide range of assistance to British companies. The services which attract a charge and are delivered by overseas posts are listed in the following table.

Charging for the existing range of export services was introduced on 1st April, 1989; the list reflects the current prices which came into effect on 1st October 1995.

Democratic People's Republic of Korea

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's current diplomatic relations with the Democratic People's Republic of Korea. [6814]

Mr. Hanley: We have no diplomatic relations with the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent visit of the delegation from the Democratic People's Republic of Korea. [6815]

Mr. Hanley: We have no diplomatic relations with the Democratic People's Republic of Korea. Any visits to the United Kingdom from that country are on a private basis.

TRANSPORT

Railtrack

Mr. Legg: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects Railtrack plc to publish the first annual statement about future network capacity required under the terms of its network licence; and if he will make a statement. [7346]

Sir George Young: Railtrack plc published its first network management statement today. I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library of the House.

I welcome the news that Railtrack expects to spend over £1 billion a year on maintenance and renewal of its assets over the next ten years.

Railtrack's statement shows the professional approach which it is adopting to the management of its assets and a long-term commitment to a safe and efficient railway. I believe it also provides evidence of the benefits that privatisation is expected to bring for passengers. This scale of investment and the plans that Railtrack has outlined today should lead to a better quality service and a better-managed infrastructure for the railways of the future.

Search and Rescue Helicopter Cover

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the individuals and organisations represented in his working party on the review of the search and rescue helicopter cover around the United Kingdom coast. [6745]

Mr. Norris: The search and rescue helicopter review group is made up of representatives of the Department of Transport, including the chief coastguard, the Ministry of Defence, the Home Office, Her Majesty's Treasury, the Department of Health, the Health and Safety Executive, the Scottish Office, the Welsh Office, the Northern Ireland Office, the Association of Chief Police Officers and ACPO (Scotland).

Departmental Staff (Members' Letters)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many officials he employed (a) full-time and (b) part-time in his Department in each of the last three years to answer letters sent to him from hon. Members; and what was the estimated overall cost of replying to them in each of the last three years. [5610]

Sir George Young: No staff in my Department are employed exclusively in answering letters from hon. Members. It is difficult to estimate the overall cost of replying to them but in 1994 Transport Ministers received over 15,000 letters from hon. Members.

Vehicle Excise Duty (Exemptions)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many motor vehicles over 25 years old are currently listed in the SP1, SP2, SP3, SP4 and SP5 postcode areas; and how many of them will qualify for exemption from vehicle excise duty as a result of the recent Budget. [6810]

Mr. Norris: An estimated 3,750 vehicles over 25 years of age are currently licensed in the SP1, SP2, SP3, SP4 and SP5 postcode areas. Of these, 2,500 are in private and light goods, motorcycle or tricycle taxation classes and will qualify for exemption from vehicle excise duty as a result of the vehicle taxation changes announced in the Budget on 28 November 1995.

European Night Sleeper Trains

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what date it is expected that the European night sleeper trains will receive their operating certificate following completion of construction. [6034]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 14 December 1995]: As the operators have not yet put in an application for an operating certificate, it is not possible to state when it will be granted.

National Transport Concession Scheme

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will consider proposals to introduce a national transport concession scheme for people over retirement age. [6455]

Mr. Norris: No.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive the European Court judgment on the Atkins case on the equalisation of transport concession schemes at the age of 60 years. [6453]

Mr. Norris: The European Court of Justice has not advised the Department of the date on which it expects to make its judgment on this case.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what transport concessions are available to people over retirement age in other EU member states. [6451]

Mr. Norris: The Department does not hold detailed information on concessionary travel schemes for people over retirement age which are available in other EU member states.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions have been held in the European Transport Ministers Council on a European-wide transport concession scheme for people above retirement age. [6450]

Mr. Norris: None, to the best of the Department's knowledge.

Transport Passes, Greater London

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had on the future of the free transport pass for Greater London pensioners. [6454]

Mr. Norris: None. This is a matter for the London local authorities which fund the scheme.

Crash Testing Programmes

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to increase crash testing programmes in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [6556]

Mr. Norris: There are no plans at present to increase the Department's crash testing programme for motor vehicles. The current programme includes research to evaluate the feasibility of a new car assessment programme which could provide crash-worthiness data as consumer information. The size of future programmes will be decided in the light of this research.

Rail Services (Wales)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all passenger service requirements affecting rail services to and from Wales which have (a) been proposed and (b) been accepted. [5956]

Mr. Watts: The passenger service requirement for the Great Western franchise was finalised on 16 May by the franchising director following consultation with local authorities and rail users-consultative committees, and was included in invitations to tender for the franchise. The franchising director will develop and consult on further passenger service requirements for franchises that serve Wales during 1996.

Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 6 December, Official Report, column 264, relating to the recommendation of the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution, what is the time scale for the conclusion of the national debate on transport policy. [6125]

Mr. Norris: Views on "Transport: The Way Ahead" were invited by the end of September, where possible. Many groups asked for more time in which to respond. When Ministers have considered the responses, a further report will be published drawing together the threads of the debate.

Consultants

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those (a) consultants, (b) outside organisations, and (c) individuals employed by his Department in each year since 1990, indicating the purpose of their employment and the total payments made to them. [3958]

Mr. Norris: I will write to the hon. Member with details and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

PRIME MINISTER

Civil Servants (Briefings)

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 4 December, Official Report, column 17, on how many occasions in each of the last three years civil servants have provided factual briefing to former Prime Ministers. [6123]

The Prime Minister: The information is not held centrally.

Procurator Fiscal System

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Prime Minister what further consultations he intends to have before finalising decisions about changes to the procurator fiscal system in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [6043]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 14 December 1995]: A Crown Office steering group has been carrying out a senior management review of the Crown Office and procurator fiscal service. The extent and nature of any consultation will depend on the outcome of the review.

Advertising

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister what has been the expenditure of his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title for each year since 1990–91; and what estimate he has made for 1995–96 based on expenditure to date and existing plans. [6572]

The Prime Minister: None.

Civil Servants (Contact with Opposition)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister what preliminary contacts he has had with the Leader of the Opposition regarding official contact between Members of Her Majesty's Opposition and civil servants from 1 January 1996 onwards. [6554]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to the reply that my right hon. Friend, the First Secretary of State and Deputy Prime Minister, gave to the hon. Member for Cardiff, West (Mr. Morgan) on 30 November, Official Report, column 835.

Departmental Staff (Members' Letters)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Prime Minister how many officials he employed (a) full-time and (b) part-time in his Department in each of the last three years to answer letters sent to him from hon. Members; and what was the estimated overall cost of replying to them in each of the last three years. [5624]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office is part of the Cabinet Office, Office of Public Service. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given today by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Committee and Conference Rooms

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee when he expects the Committee to conclude its review of the use of Committee and Conference Rooms; and if he will make a statement. [6651]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I am pleased to announce that at its meeting on 28 November, after having consulted Madam Speaker about our proposals, the Administration Committee concluded its review of the use of Committee and Conference Rooms.

The Committee endorsed the ruling that the rooms should be booked by Members only for "private meetings or conferences in connection with a Parliamentary subject".

The Committee believed that it would be helpful for the House to have a clearer definition of a "parliamentary subject", and agreed that it should mean a matter of current or possible future concern to the House, which falls into one or more of the following categories:

(i) Matters intended to increase the awareness of, interest in, or promote discussion of Parliament, its history, institutions and procedures, or the constitution of the United Kingdom;

(ii) Matters relating to the effect, or possible effect, of extant or proposed legislation (including Private Bills and Private Members' Bills);

(iii) Subjects under investigation by a Select Committee of the House;

(iv) Local issues, especially those involving more than one constituency, or which could not more easily or readily be dealt with in a Member's regular advice surgery;

(v) Meetings with recognised charities, when the sponsoring Member is a trustee, governor, parliamentary advisor or other officer of that charity

(vi) Matters to raise interest in, or to encourage or facilitate movement towards, the establishment of parliamentary democracies in other countries;

(vii) Matters which are affecting, or could affect, the safety, well-being or interests of UK citizens or organisations at home or abroad, or those of EU, commonwealth or foreign nationals resident, or organisations operating, in the UK;

(viii) Matters in which the UK is, or may become, involved on a political, economic or military level, and relationships between the UK and any other country or countries;

(ix) Meetings with representatives (elected or otherwise) from EU, commonwealth or foreign Parliaments or Governments, or from the European Parliament, the European Commission, or international organisations, eg UN or NATO;

(x) Meetings with representatives of the Secretaries' and Assistants' Council, the Whitley Committee Trade Union Side, recognised Trade Unions or staff associations;

(xi) Any other meeting approved by the Speaker.

The Committee believed that the main criterion for approving use of Committee or Conference Rooms is that meetings should be connected in some way with the parliamentary duties of the Member who books the room. Rooms should not be used for purposes unrelated to the House, such as entertainment or the launch of any commercial or financial product.

We endorsed the current practice for Rooms to be booked for the purposes of launching pamphlets or reports of a political, or party political, kind.

We believed that it would be appropriate also for Rooms to be used to launch any book written by an hon. Member, or by a former hon. Member who is now a Member of the House of Lords, and that the sale of books at such a launch should be permitted.

We also agreed that hon. Members may book Rooms to launch books written by Strangers, provided that it falls within headings (i) or (vi) above or any of the categories below:

(a) Histories of the Palace of Westminster, the House of Commons or any of its Departments;

(b) Anthologies of Members' speeches and extracts from their diaries;

(c) Biographies of former Members of either House;

(d) Biographies of former servants of the House (eg Erskine May, Hansard or Bellamy);

We do not, however, believe that it would be appropriate to permit the sale of books written by Strangers at launches held on House premises.

We also agreed that Sub-Committees of official party groups, that is, the 1922 Committee, the parliamentary Labour party and the parliamentary Liberal Democratic party, should be accorded precedence in booking the rooms over all-party groups, parliamentary groups and individual Members.

These new regulations will come into effect upon the return of the House from the Christmas recess.

Following a recent incident, I would like to remind hon. Members that whenever they have booked a Room for a meeting with constituents or other guests, it is the hon. Member's responsibility to remain in the Room at all times. If an hon. Member does have to leave the meeting for a Division in the House or in a Standing Committee, he or she should return to the Room immediately their vote has been recorded. It is also incumbent on hon. Members to ensure that their meetings finish on time, so as not to inconvenience any other hon. Member who may have booked the Room for a succeeding meeting, and that once the meeting has concluded, all guests are escorted off the premises or left in the charge of another hon. Member or the relevant House authority, for example, in the Strangers' Gallery.

United Nations 50th Anniversary

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he has considered an application for an exhibition relating to the United Nations 50th anniversary to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall. [6983]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Administration Committee, arrangements have been made for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 5 February to Friday 9 February 1996.

Average Hourly cost

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chairman of the Finance and Services Committee what estimate he has made of the average hourly cost of the House of Commons on a sitting day. [5435]

Mr. Paul Channon: It is not practical to allocate the majority of House costs as between sitting and non-sitting days. The outturn for the financial year ended 31 March 1995 for the Works and the Administration votes, that is, excluding Members' pay and allowances, was £102,256,000. There were 158 sitting days in that year. Further information is given in the Commission's annual report.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

BBC Transmission Facilities

6. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she proposes to privatise the BBC's transmission facilities. [4640]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The BBC is handling the arrangements for the sale of its transmission services. It expects to complete the sale in about a year.

National Lottery

13. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations she has received regarding disparity of regional distribution of national lottery funds. [4647]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The lottery distributors are looking to ensure that there is a fair regional distribution of funds. They have been making awards for only nine months. I shall consider the regional spread of awards after one full year of distribution and consider if any changes are necessary to ensure balance.

The House will be interested to hear that today's 128 awards are being made in Wales and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations have been received concerning a review of aspects of the national lottery. [4649]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I have received a number of representations about reviewing the national lottery.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to change the National Lottery Act 1993; and if she will make a statement. [4636]

Mr. Sproat: The number of people playing and the money being raised for the good causes has exceeded everybody's expectations. I have no plans to change the National Lottery Act. The national lottery is working well.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when (a) officials and (b) Ministers were first informed of the use of GTec's private jet by the director general of the national lottery; what guidance was given to the director, and when, on acceptable levels of hospitality; and if she will make a statement. [6334]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My Department became aware of the actual flights taken in the week before the Public Accounts Committee hearing on Monday 11 December. In August 1994, in discussing the director general's proposed US trip, officials of my Department advised that the director general would need to ensure that all due propriety was observed and that the cost of flights and accommodation should be borne by the Office of the National Lottery and not their hosts. Oflot is a non-ministerial Department and therefore responsible for implementing its own hospitality and travel arrangements taking into account the principles and rules set out in the civil service management code. Oflot is under no obligation to clear with, or inform my Department about its detailed arrangements.

Piers

14. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the total amount of lottery proceeds contributed to the maintenance and development of seaside piers. [4648]

Mr. Sproat: The national heritage memorial fund has awarded £475,042 to the Clevedon pier trust in Avon for the restoration and conservation of this listed pier.

17. Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to celebrate the Year of the Pier in 1996. [4652]

Mr. Sproat: Piers at seaside resorts are an important part of Britain's built and cultural heritage. They are also a unique element of our distinctive national tourism product. I can assure my hon. Friend that I will seek opportunities to celebrate and publicise the Year of the Pier in 1996.

Sports Broadcasting

18. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what proposals she has to ensure that the broadcasting of major national sporting events remain on terrestrial channels. [4653]

Mr. Sproat: The Government have no plans to alter current arrangements. Listed sporting events cannot be shown on a pay-per-view basis, and sports rights holders are free to dispose of their rights to broadcast in the interest of their sport.

Listed Buildings

19. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the listing of post-war commercial and industrial buildings. [4654]

Mr. Sproat: My right hon. Friend announced on 24 November that she had that day added 21 post-war buildings—comprising 13 commercial, three industrial and five railway buildings—to the statutory list of buildings of special architectural or historic interest. Details are in the Library. Her decisions were in respect of 40 recommendations she had received from English Heritage, and followed a consultation exercise in which owners and the general public were, for the first time, invited to give their comments on the proposed listings.

Concessionary Television Licences

22. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations she has received concerning concessionary television licences for retired people; and if she will make a statement. [4657]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government receive regular representations on the subject of concessionary television licences for retired people. However, the Government have no plans for any changes to the existing concessionary scheme, nor to introduce reduced fee television licences for all pensioners. Any increase in concessions available would reduce the BBC's income and impact upon its home broadcasting services.

Children's Play Services

23. Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on Government financial support for children's play services. [4658]

Mr. Sproat: On November 21, Official Report, column 67, my right hon. Friend announced that, subject to the successful completion of post tender negotiations, the National Playing Fields Association will carry out work in the areas of information dissemination, playwork education and training and play safety for the Department of National Heritage. Funding will be set at £400,000 per annum, which is broadly consistent with the Sports Council's spend on play since 1993.

Film Making

24. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what measures her Department is taking to encourage film making in Britain. [4659]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The British Film Industry is presently in a buoyant state and the Government will continue to provide significant public funds of over £23 million next year in support. That includes support for the British Film Institute, British Screen Finance, the European Co-Production Fund, the British Film Commission and the National Film and Television School. In addition, up to £100 million of lottery money is available to be spent on film production and other film projects over the next five years. I have also established a high level advisory committee, under the chairmanship of Sir Peter Middleton, to look at obstacles to the industry's growth.

Library Inspectorate

26. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to create a new library inspectorate. [4661]

Mr. Sproat: I have no plans to create a library inspectorate. However, I take my statutory responsibilities towards public libraries seriously, and will continue to monitor the quality of the service through the professional library advisers in my Department, and to draw on the expertise and experience of the Advisory Council on Libraries.

Public Lending Right Scheme

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she will lay before Parliament her report on the operation of the public lending right scheme 1994–95; and what will be the rate per loan payable to authors under the scheme in February 1996 in respect of loans of their books to public libraries from July 1994 to June 1995. [7148]

Mr. Sproat: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has today laid before Parliament her report on the operation of the public lending right scheme in 1994–95. The Registrar of Public Lending Right has proposed to my right hon. Friend, on the basis of the size of the public lending right fund this year and information about loans of books by local library authorities, that the rate per loan for payments which will be made under the Scheme next February should remain at 2p. In the light of consultation with interested organisations, my right hon. Friend has agreed to the registrar's proposal.

Public Library Review

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the public library review following the publication of the ASLIB report and the subsequent consultation exercise. [7149]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The provision of the public library service is a statutory responsibility of local authorities, in England and Wales under the Public Libraries and Museums Act 1964. The legislation provides a broad framework, requiring local authorities to provide a "comprehensive and efficient" library service but leaving the details of how the service is to be provided to local decision making; we do not intend to change these arrangements. My responsibility, under the same Act, is to superintend and promote the improvement of the service and to secure the proper discharge by local authorities of their functions in relation to libraries. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales has an equivalent responsibility in Wales.

Libraries are of great value in our national life. They introduce children to the world of books and reading, and foster their interest through adulthood. They offer lifelong support for learning and education. They are important sources of reference material and public information. They give individuals and businesses access to an information base of commercial and economic importance.

This is a time of major change for the direction and management of the public library service, especially given the continuing revolution in information technology. To address these new demands, the Government have launched a number of major initiatives in the library and information sector.

Potentially the most far-reaching of these is the public library review. This demonstrated the importance attached to libraries by the public and examined a number of fundamental issues:

- the nature of the public library service in England and Wales, and how it should respond to changing demands;
- how each library authority can provide a clear specification of what it sets out to achieve;
- how performance can be effectively monitored and the results published;
- how to involve the private sector, to diversify sources of funding and to take maximum advantage for the community of the national resource which public libraries represent;
- the use of information technology in public libraries; and
- future arrangements for co-operation between library authorities, including the role of the regions in England.

The responses to these issues, and others posed by documents such as report on library services for children and young people "Investing in Children", deserve serious and detailed consideration. My Advisory Council on Libraries and the Library and Information Commission, among others, will have an important contribution to make. The Library and Information Services Council (Wales) will similarly be providing advice to my right hon. Friend. I intend to report on the issues further in a policy paper to be published next year.

I am pleased to take this opportunity to announce a successor scheme to the public library development incentive scheme, to run from April 1996, which will match central Government funding to local resources. It will focus on practical proposals for library development in the context of the issues outlined above, and will give priority to projects with the widest potential application and relevance.

Like all public services, libraries must justify the level of financial support they receive and express clearly their role, in terms which can be easily understood. Under section 7 of the Public Libraries and Museums Act 1964, a library authority has a duty to provide a comprehensive and efficient library service. In fulfilling this duty, a library authority is required to have regard to the desirability of a number of factors: encouraging people to make full use of the library service; providing advice on its use; and having facilities available for people to borrow or refer to books and other materials which are sufficient in number, range and quality to meet both the general and special requirements of adults and children. In Wales, public library services are provided in both English and Welsh as appropriate, having regard to the linguistic character of the area served. It is not the Government's intention to move away from this definition, but to illustrate it in support of our statutory role to "superintend and promote" public libraries in England and Wales.

The consultants' report on the public library review, the publication of which my predecessor announced in his answer of 16 May, Official Report, columns 150–51, covered a range of subjects in considerable detail. However, I believe that in dealing with the core functions of public libraries, it attempted to be all-inclusive and it confused the different functions and objectives of public libraries.

In the Government's view, the most important functions of the public library service are:

(i) providing reading for pleasure

(ii) enlightening children and developing lifelong reading skills and habits in adults

(iii) encouraging lifelong learning and study

(iv) providing reference material including public information about local and national Government and EU publications, current affairs, and business information

(v) providing materials for the study of local history and the local environment

To carry out these functions, libraries must by statute provide books and other printed material, such as periodicals, as well as "other materials". Many libraries now provide a wide range of non-book materials such as cassette and video tapes, multi-media and open learning packages, talking books, compact discs, CD-ROMs and other new media. Libraries are also expected to provide suitable places and facilities, and assist users in directing them to the appropriate material. To encourage access and use by the widest range of the local population, public libraries frequently serve a variety of cultural needs and provide special materials such as large print books and sub-titled videos. They also provide services for the housebound, as well as providing disabled access to, and within, library buildings.

My right hon. Friend and I should like to make it clear once again that the Government have no plans to privatise the public library service. However, as with all public services, the Government are concerned that it should be run as efficiently as possible. The public library service has already developed, and continues to develop, creative partnerships with the private sector, including the voluntary tendering of certain areas of support services. Following the publication of the consultant's report into contracting out, which I announced to Parliament on 19 July, Official Report, columns 1457–58, the Government are continuing to consider steps that might be taken to encourage more effective management of public libraries and to involve the private sector more in providing library services. There are a number of options, and I shall make a further statement to the House on these matters next year.

The public library service is a great British success story. Its quality and professionalism is admired worldwide. The local public library is freely available to everyone and is used regularly by a wide cross-section of society. For many people, the public library is their cultural centre and their university—a means of access to the world of information, knowledge and works of creative imagination. For children, the public library is often where they begin to read and to learn. For many older people, the public library also provides their meeting place and their community centre, and reading is at the heart of their quality of life.

The Government recognise the importance of the public library service, and are committed to its development and improvement as we face the challenges of the future.

British Academy of Sport

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what are her proposals for a British academy of sport. [4646]

Mr. Sproat: As I announced on 5 December, Official Report, column 153, the Sports Council has issued a consultation document on what the structure and content of the British Academy of Sport might be and has asked for responses by 31 January 1996. This follows the announcement in the Government's sports policy statement "Sport: Raising the Game" that the Government wish to see established a British Academic of Sport, together with a national network of facilities.

BBC Funding

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the future funding of the BBC. [4660]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: As set out in the White Paper, "The Future of the BBC", the Government are committed to the continuation of the licence fee for at least the first five years of the new charter.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to extend the private finance initiative to (a) the BBC, (b) BBC Worldwide and (c) BBC World Service. [5396]

Mr. Sproat: We have encouraged the BBC to use to the full the opportunities available under the private finance initiative to meet its needs for capital investment.

In relation to the home services, the BBC is examining a number of private finance options and it is for the corporation to determine where the PFI offers the most benefit in relation to individual projects which would otherwise be funded from the licence fee. The BBC World Service is funded by grant in aid from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and is therefore expected to explore the scope for private finance in relation to all capital investment decisions. The rest of BBC Worldwide embraces the BBC's commercial activities, which are not publicly funded; it operates to maximise the benefits of the BBC brand and is structured according to the principles of the PFI.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to impose conditions on the BBC as to the way it can use the money accruing from the privatisation of the transmitter facilities. [5387]

Mr. Sproat: The basis of the sale, which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 27 November, Official Report, column 439, has been agreed by us and the BBC. This provides that the BBC retains the proceeds of the sale related to licence fee funded transmission facilities; the BBC has said that it will invest the proceeds of the sale within the BBC on digital production technology. We have no plans at present to impose any conditions on the BBC in respect of the proceeds it will receive from the privatisation of its transmission services.

Crown Jewels

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) of 27 November, Official Report, column 449, on the crown of Queen Adelaide, if the imperial crown of George I and the coronation crown of George IV are classified as regalia. [5324]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 12 December 1995]: Following an objection by my Department's expert adviser to the issue of export licences, the applications to export the frames of the imperial crown of George I and the coronation of George IV were referred, in the normal way, to the Reviewing Committee on the Export of Works of Art. The reviewing committee consulted my Department, the Treasury Solicitor's Department and the Lord Chamberlain's Office on whether the crown frames constituted regalia. The reviewing committee was advised that the discarded crown frames could not be regarded as part of the regalia.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the history of ownership of the Imperial State Crown of George I and the Coronation Crown of George IV since 1965. [5239]

Mr. Sproat: The crown frames were lent by the Amherst family to the Museum of London from 1933 to 1985. We have no information about the ownership of the crown frames between the withdrawal of the loan to the museum of London and the purchase of the frames by Asprey (Bond Street) Ltd. in 1987. I understand that they have now been acquired by Prince Jefri Bolkiah of Brunei and that the prince has most generously decided to present them to the nation.

Chauffeur-driven Cars

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what the cost of chauffeur-driven cars used by her Department was in each of the past five years. [5847]

Mr. Sproat: The Department of National Heritage was established in 1992 and figures are not therefore available before the 1992–93 financial year. The total cost of departmental use of the Government car service in the years for which information is available is as follows:

	£000
1992–93	167.2
1993–94	243.6
1994–95	242.8

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much has been spent on furnishing and the decorating ministerial offices in her Department in each of the last three years. [5559]

Mr. Sproat: Expenditure on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in each of the last three years is included in the running cost expenditure of my Department, which is published in the annual report, a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much her Department spent on official hospitality in 1994–95 and the financial year to date; and what is the 1995–96 projected budget for official hospitality. [5576]

Mr. Sproat: In 1994–95 the cost of hospitality for my Department, including the Historic Royal Palaces agency and the Royal Parks agency, which is included in the running cost budget for my Department, was £55,142. Figures for the financial year to date are £63,087. The projected budget for 1995–96 is £93,600.

The difference between the cost of hospitality in 19954–95 and the projected budget for 1995–96 reflects a significant underspend in 1994–95 and an increase in 1995–96 to include provision for the launch of a major new exhibition in the Mantegna gallery at Hampton Court palace.

European Community Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to the statement of the Secretary of State for the Environment of 21 November, Official Report, column 454, if she will make it her policy to review past legislation in respect of additional burdens imposed by regulations implementing European directives. [5073]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 11 December 1995]: It is the policy of my Department to ensure that we do not add any unnecessary burdens when implementing European directives in the UK. We will take every opportunity to look at existing legislation in the light of this policy.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what percentage of bills to her Department were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. [5700]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 14 December 1995]: My Department is committed to the payment of invoices within agreed contractual provisions or within 30 days of the presentation of a valid invoice or delivery, if later. Although the information requested is not available, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost, on the basis of a sample of invoices received by the Department of National Heritage during 1994–95, 90.6 per cent. were paid on time.

Public Opinion Surveys

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list all qualitative and quantitative research projects and surveys carried out for her Department into aspects of public attitudes and opinions (a) in general and (b) in relation to specific policy proposals in each of the past three years to December 1995, indicating for each project or survey (i) the date on which the research was commissioned, (ii) the amount which her Department spent, (iii) who carried out the research, (iv) the number of people surveyed or taking part, (v) the location and time scale and (vi) which individuals and organisations have been given access to the findings. [5982]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 14 December 1995]: Details of the public opinion surveys commissioned by my Department and its two agencies are set out.

Of the two surveys commissioned directly by the Department, the first was a follow-up to the 1992 Green Paper on the future of the BBC. The second was part of the work carried out to develop the tourism strategy outlined in "Tourism: Competing with the Best", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

The surveys carried out by both agencies are general market research surveys carried out to assess the public's views and opinions regarding the attractions for which they are responsible.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Redundant Churches

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, as representing the Church Commissioners, how the implementation of the Wilding proposals will be affected by the reform proposed in the Turnbull Commission. [5648]

Mr. Alison: The proposals of the Wilding report of 1990 on the care of redundant churches, which included giving the commissioners a more pivotal role, have now been largely implemented. The Turnbull Commission proposals include the transfer of the commissioners' functions in this field to a National Council for the Church of England. The commissioners and their partners in this work are anxious that such a change should not diminish the continued successful implementation of the Wilding proposals which have assisted the preservation of and the finding of suitable alternative uses for important listed churches.

There are a number of aspects of the Turnbull Commission proposals which require sufficient time for detailed consideration and successful resolution. These include:

(1) Arrangements for providing the Church's share (30 per cent.) of the cost of running the Churches Conservation Trust. At present these are a charge on the commissioners' investment income and a comparable degree of security needs to attach to any new arrangements.

(2) Proposals for a Church Heritage Board to act in a co-ordinating role. The Church/state position of some of the bodies proposed to be co-ordinated needs to be fully considered.

(3) Accountability of Parliament. It is not yet clear whether the Second Church Estates Commissioner would still be able to answer questions on redundant churches in this House.

(4) A proposed strategic approach to church redundancies. If this were to precipitate a considerably greater number of church closures and more frequent non-statutory inquiries the present financial and administrative arrangements between the Church and state could come under greater strain.

General Synod

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, as representing the Church Commissioners what powers exist for the Standing Committee of the General Synod to overturn a chancellor's decision on the need for a re-run contest for a General Synod election on the ground that the elected member is a Church Commissioner. [5649]

Mr. Alison: This is not a matter for the Church Commissioners. The hon. Member should write to the Secretary-General of the General Synod.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Advertising

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the expenditure of his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title for each year since 1990–91; and what estimate he has made for 1995–96 based on expenditure to date and existing plans. [6568]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Information on past years is not held centrally in the form and detail requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Expenditure figures for centrally purchased DTI advertising in 1995–96 are not yet available, but expenditure in 1994–95 was £0.56 million.

Natural Environment Research Council

Dr. Spink: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the forthcoming prior options reviews for the Natural Environment Research Council. [7150]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Government announced on 29 September 1995 that all public sector research establishments would be subject to prior options reviews.

Prior options reviews of the Natural Environment Research Council's—NERC—Centre for Coastal and Marine Sciences—CCMS—the British Geological Survey and the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology—CEH—will be carried out in the first half of 1996.

CCMS with its headquarters at Plymouth has the following component laboratories: the Dunstaffnage marine laboratory; the Plymouth marine laboratory; the Proudman oceanographic laboratory. CEH with its headquarters at Wallingford has the following component institutes: the Institute of Freshwater Ecology; the Institute of Hydrology; the Institute of Terrestrial Ecology and the Institute of Virology and Environmental Microbiology.

The reviews will build on any relevant recent studies.

I should welcome comments from interested parties. Comments relating to CCMS should be sent by the end of January 1996; and those relating to BGS and CEH by the end of February 1996. They should be sent to:

Dr. David Lynn, Policy and Communications Division,
Natural Environment Research Council, Polaris house, North
Star avenue, Swindon, SN2 1EU.

Cable and Wireless plc

Dr. Spink: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he has given his consent as holder of the special share in Cable and Wireless plc to any change in the company's articles of association. [7151]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Following a request from Cable and Wireless plc, I have given my consent, as holder of that company's special share, to a minor amendment to its articles of association. The amendment would require the company's chairman or its chief executive to be British. The present articles place a similar requirement on any executive chairman of the company, or on any chief executive if there is no executive chairman. I understand that Cable and Wireless will now be seeking the agreement of its shareholders to this amendment.

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has had from the European Commission concerning ERDF grants given to state owned bodies that are subsequently privatised. [5889]

Mr. Eggar: The Secretary General of the Commission wrote to all member states earlier this year requesting details of European regional development fund grants to companies which were subsequently privatised. A list of such grants in the United Kingdom was sent in reply. The Commission subsequently asked for further information. We have asked for clarification of this request.

National Grid

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how electricity consumers with pre-payment meters will receive their part of the rebate associated with the flotation of the national grid. [5890]

Mr. Eggar: The arrangements for distributing the national grid discount to its domestic customers have been determined by the regional electricity companies themselves. However I understand that they intend to make the discount to customers registered with them on 31 December 1995, including those using prepayment meters, as soon as practical during the first quarter of 1996. The precise manner in which the discount will be made will depend on the prepayment method used and the individual company making the discount.

Generally speaking, customers using card, token or key meters will receive a voucher which may be redeemed against the purchase of new cards or tokens or against the recharging of their keys. Those using smart cards will receive a direct credit to their cards. Those using coin meters will either receive a cheque or cash. Where cheques are given, these will be sent as soon as possible. Where cash is used, the customer will receive cash when the meter is next emptied.

Energy Statistics

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for each year since 1985 the total quantity and the average price of (a) coal (b) gas and (c) oil purchased by major electricity generating companies. [5885]

Mr. Page: The information requested is given in the following table:

Fuel used in generation by major power producers[1] in the United Kingdom

	Coal		Natural gas		Oil[2]
Year	Quantity (Million tonnes)	Price (£ per tonne)	Quantity (GWh)	Price (pence per KWh)	Quantity (Million tonnes)	Price (£ per tonne)

1994	60.6	36.35	105,668	0.667	3.9	67.90

Notes:

[1] Major power producers are defined as all companies whose prime purpose is the generation of electricity. Companies who produce electricity as part of their manufacturing or other commercial activities but whose main purpose is not electricity generation are excluded.

[2] Includes Orimulsion, oil used in gas turbines and diesel plant, and oil used for lighting up coal fired boilers.

[3] Not available on a comparable basis.

[4] Since privatisation of the electricity industry price data that relate to fewer than 3 companies are treated as confidential.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Bayley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much money the Medical Research Council has spent in each of the last 10 years and how much it estimates it will spend in the current year and each of the next three years on research (a) into the risk of transmission of the BSE agent from cattle to (i) humans and (ii) other primates, (b) into an early diagnostic test for Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease and (c) effective treatment for Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease. [6187]

Mr. Ian Taylor: In 1994–95 the total spend by the MRC on research directly or indirectly related to transmissible spongiform encephalopathies, including BSE, was £0.75 million. This included CJD related transmission studies to address the possible relationship between CJD and BSE in individuals who might potentially have been exposed to high levels of BSE because of their occupation. The corresponding figure for 1985–86 was £235,000. Data for the intervening years are not available. The major part of the MRC programme is funded in partnership with the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council at the neuropathogenesis unit in Edinburgh.

Although the MRC does not currently fund applied research into diagnostic tests or treatment of Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease, some of the fundamental research into transmissible spongiform encephalopathies aims to improve the understanding of the pathogenesis of these disorders in man and, thus, indirectly diagnosis and treatment. The Council has funded research into transmission of spongiform encephalopathies in primates in the past but is not doing so at present.

The Council's expenditure in future years is partly dependent upon applications received, assessed and awarded in the annual competitions, and it is not possible to predict the level of spend. The council does place strategic importance on ensuring that there is high quality research in these areas.

Fuel Prices

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for each year since 1985 (a) the average beach price of gas, (b) the average pithead price of coal and (c) the average imported price of coal in unit prices. [5886]

Mr. Page: The information requested is given in the table.

	Average beach gas price[1] pence/kWh	Average pithead coal price[2] £/GJ	Average imported coal price[2] £/GJ
1985–86	0.586	1.86	1.27

1994	0.618	—	—
1994–95	—	1.40	0.99

[1] Average price of gas purchased by British Gas. Excluding the levy on indigenous supplies. Data ceased to be available on a financial year basis in 1991.

[2] The figures cover coal production and imports in the United Kingdom. The average price for imported coal is recorded at the port.

Regional Offices

Mr. Caborn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in what ways the regional directors of the integrated regional offices are accountable to Parliament. [6693]

Mr. Eggar: The regional directors of the Government offices for the regions are civil servants reporting jointly to the Secretaries of State for the Environment, for Education and Employment, and for Transport, and to the President of the Board of Trade, each of whom is accountable to Parliament for the work of his or her Department.

Mr. Caborn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what performance measures the Government are using to assess the effectiveness of the integrated regional offices. [6692]

Mr. Eggar: Each Government office is being set performance targets in the areas of competitiveness, regeneration and sustainable development, the development of partnerships, the internal management of the office and the administration of departmental programmes. These targets are being developed as part of the Government offices MINIS exercise, and will be published in the new financial year.

Mr. Caborn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the programme expenditure for each of the integrated regional offices. [6694]

Mr. Eggar: The information requested is as follows:

Department for Trade and Industry: 1995–96

	Expected expenditure outturn (£m)
European Regional Development Fund Payment to third parties	47.6
Regional Selective Assistance	103.5
Inward Investments	12.4
Locally delivered Business Services[1]	135.8
Export Promotion Schemes and Services	55.7
Small Firms' Merit Award for Research and Technology (SMART)	11.9
Support for Programmes under Research (SPUR)	7.9

Notes:

The table identifies the main DTI programmes in whose administration and delivery the Government Offices are involved. The Government Offices are not directly involved in administering or delivering the whole amount of the programme expenditure identified in the table. Regional breakdowns for DTI programmes are not available.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Caborn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the average regional selective assistance expenditure per head of working population in the assisted areas for the period 1993 to 1995. [6696]

Mr. Eggar: During the period 1 April 1993 to 31 March 1995, average expenditure per head of working population in the assisted areas of England was £31.

Mr. Caborn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the allocation of regional selective assistance between foreign-owned and United Kingdom-owned firms for the period 1994–95. [6697]

Mr. Eggar: The value of offers accepted in England was:

UK owned £ million: 101.2

Foreign owned £ million: 59.3.

Regional Industrial Policy

Mr. Caborn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the total cost of regional industrial policy including (a) regional selective assistance and (b) other direct assistance to firms for the period 1990 to 1995. [6699]

Mr. Eggar: The information is available in the "Annual Report on the Industrial Development Act 1982".

Patent Office

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what methodology is in place to produce a benchmark in the Patent Office in respect of the contracting-out procedure; if the guidelines laid down by the National Audit Office will be adhered to; and if he will make a statement. [5840]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Benchmarking of in-house services will follow guidance issued by HM Treasury, the office of Public Service, and the Department of Trade and Industry. The calculation of any benchmark will be open to National Audit Office scrutiny and must follow any guidelines laid down by that office.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the dates over the last two years when he and other Ministers in his Department have met with elected trade union representatives at the Patent Office. [5842]

Mr. Ian Taylor: There have been no meetings between Ministers of the Department of Trade and Industry and Trade Union representatives in the last two years.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make arrangements for elected trade union representatives to be included in staff/management meetings in connection with the contractorisation of the facilities' management services section at the Patent Office. [5837]

Mr. Ian Taylor: In any contracting out exercise, the Patent Office management will follow the terms of the 1989 DTI agreement on consultation on proposals for contracting out.

Business Links

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many business links have been established; what services they deliver; and if he will list the total costs of delivering these services and the total number of Department of Trade and Industry staff located in business links. [5841]

Mr. Page: A total of 171 business link outlets were operational on 15 December 1995. Seventy-three DTI staff are currently located in business links. A number of core services lie at the heart of business links. These include:

an enquiry and information service;

personal business advisers;

diagnostic services;

and help for start ups and micro businesses.

Business links also provide direct access to 11 categories of specialist advice and support including; marketing, finance, exports, management, training, technology and design. A copy of the "Business Link Service Guide" can be found in the Library of the House.

The cost of delivering services is different for each business link and is met from a number of sources including DTI funding, fee income from assisted businesses and contributions from business link partner organisations. The total cost of all business link services could therefore be obtained only at disproportionate cost. DTI's budget for 1995–96 is £38.5 million for pump-priming funding and £57.4 million for services.

Dr. Hampson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the business links that have been established in the Yorkshire and Humberside region and the scheduled opening dates for others. [6206]

Mr. Page: The following is the information:

Retirement and Severance Schemes

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many voluntary schemes and early retirement schemes are currently operating in his Department and its agencies; and if he will list the United Kingdom offices which are currently running such schemes. [5838]

Mr. John M. Taylor: A voluntary early retirement and severance scheme is currently operating in all parts of the Department which fall within gross running cost control. This includes the Insolvency Service, the office of manpower economics, the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service and DTI staff in Government offices.

A retirement and severance scheme following the Department's senior management review is currently nearing completion.

Schemes are also running in the Patent Office, Companies House and Radiocommunications Agency covering selected grades to help restructure these agencies.

Redundancy Payments

Mr. Davidson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many companies have failed to provide redundancy payments for their employees (a) due to company closure and (b) as a result of the employer failing to meet statutory obligations under the terms of current employment legislation for each from 1979 to 1995. [6270]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many cases involving the recovery of employees' redundancy payments have been taken to industrial tribunals for each year from 1979 to 1995. [6253]

Mr. Taylor: Information is not available in the precise form or for the full period requested. The number of applications relating to redundancy payments disposed of by industrial tribunals in Great Britain since 1986–87 is as follows:

1986–87: 5,389

1987–88: 3,403

1988–89: 3,223

1989–90: 3,837

1990–91: 5,022

1991–92: 5,234

1992–93: 7,084

1993–94: 8,567

1994–95: 7,478.

These figures include cases withdrawn or settled without recourse to a hearing.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the total cost to the national insurance fund as a result of companies failing to meet their obligations to their work forces in respect of the non-payment of statutory redundancy payments for each year from 1979 to 1995. [6252]

Mr. Taylor: The information is given in the table.

The total cost to the national insurance fund was as follows:

Year	£ million
1979–80	19.3
1980–81	42.0
1981–82	53.0
1982–83	72.2
1983–84	69.0
1984–85	57.1
1985–86	54.6
1986–87	50.2
1987–88	34.9
1988–89	32.4
1989–90	25.7
1990–91	67.6
1991–92	131.8
1992–93	161.9
1993–94	130.6
1994–95	89.5
1995–96	[1] 50.7

Contracting Out

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what areas of his Department are being considered for contracting out; and which offices and staff are involved; [5669]

(2) what agencies under the jurisdiction of his Department are being considered for contracting out; which offices and staff are involved; and if he will make a statement. [5670]

Mr. Lang: The activities within my Department and its agencies which are either being considered for contracting out or where work is underway to contract out under the "Competing for Quality" programme are as follows. Where work is underway contracting out will be dependent on the Department or agency receiving bids which offer value for money compared with keeping the activity in-house.

(i) In the Department:

Principal Civil Service Pension Schemes (PCSPS) Administration

Financial administration functions of Overseas Promotions Support.

(ii) In Agencies:

Companies House:

London Office and English satellite offices

Edinburgh Office

Cardiff Office:

Customer Enquiry Unit

Postal Search & Search Account Service

Remittance processing

Office Services.

Patent Office:

Facilities Management Services (Newport)

Marketing & Information Directorate (Newport)

Information Technology Services (Newport)

London Front Office.

The Insolvency Service:

Case administration functions of Official Receivers in all Official Receivers' Offices.

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many nominations were submitted in each region by the Trades Union Congress and Confederation of British Industry for lay membership of industrial tribunals during the past five years; and how many in each case he has rejected. [6474]

Mr. John M. Taylor: During the period nominations were submitted in 1992 and 1995. The information requested is set out in the tables.

This was to meet the need for additional lay members for a new Office of Industrial Tribunals in the London north region.

This was to meet the need for additional lay members for a new Office of Industrial Tribunals in the London north region.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many lay members of the industrial tribunals in each region have not been reappointed in the last (a) 15, (b) 10 and (c) five years, giving the nominating organisation in each case. [6475]

Mr. Taylor: Information on the number of non-reappointments to the lay membership of the industrial tribunals in 1989, 1992 and 1995 is given in the following tables. Details for 1983 and 1986 are no longer available.

Note:

The nominating bodies referred to in the above tables are: Association of British Chambers of Commerce (ABCC); British Retail Consortium (BRC); Confederation of British Industry (CBI); Council of Managerial and Professional Staffs (COMPS); Federation of Small Businesses (FSB); Institute of Directors (IOD); Local Government Management Board (LGMB); Trades Union Congress (TUC).

In addition, in a special exercise to supply additional lay members to the London (north) regional office of industrial tribunals in advance of the main 1995 recruitment, 85 lay members who satisfied the basic criteria but were not selected for appointment in 1992 were appointed for 11 months in November 1994. These appointments were made on the basis that they would be reconsidered with new applications received in 1995. Sixty of the one year appointees were not reappointed.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade who has access to information contained within personal files held on lay members of industrial tribunals. [6473]

Mr. Taylor: Information provided by lay members which is needed for allocating lay members to hearings and for monitoring purposes—for example, ethnic origin—is prepared and held on computer records centrally and made available to regional secretaries and listing officers in regional and other offices of industrial tribunals. Any other information relevant to the appointment or reappointment of lay members is held centrally within my Department and is accessed by seven members of staff involved in the process of appointments to industrial tribunals. The views of the judiciary may be sought on reappointments and where views are submitted copies may be held by the following people and their personal secretaries: the secretary to the industrial tribunals in Scotland, the regional chairmen in England and Wales and the two presidents of industrial tribunals.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish details of the procedures used by his Department in determining the appointments and re-appointments of lay members of the industrial tribunals in England and Wales. [6472]

Mr. Taylor: The procedures for appointing lay members to industrial tribunals were publicised in a press notice issued by the former Employment Department on 30 December 1994. A copy of which is available from the Library of the House. Lay members are normally reappointed at the end of a three-yearly term of office unless their performance or attendance has been unsatisfactory. Decisions on reappointments are taken by the Secretary of State after consulting the industrial tribunal judiciary.

Gas and Oil

Mr. David Porter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the prospects for the gas and oil industry on and offshore in Suffolk and Norfolk, in 1996 and beyond. [6200]

Mr. Page: The offshore area to the north and north-east of Norfolk contains the main gas basin of the United Kingdom continental shelf—the southern basin. The interest shown in this area in recent rounds of offshore oil and gas licensing demonstrate that the area's prospectivity is still considered to be good by the oil and gas industry. Sixteen blocks were licensed in the southern basin in the 15th round and eight blocks were licensed on the margins of the southern basin in the 16th round. Exploration activity in relation to these licences will continue into 1996. It is too early to forecast prospects for the oil and gas industry as a result of this activity.

There have, however, been a number of discoveries in the basin as a whole which are likely to be developed over the next 20 years. I have also offered for licence five blocks offshore to the east of Norfolk and Suffolk in the recently announced 17th round. Applications for this round are due on 27 November 1996.

There are currently no onshore oil and gas licences in Suffolk and Norfolk, nor were any applications received for this area in the recent 7th round of onshore licensing.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate his Department has made of the quantities of (a) oil and (b) natural gas likely to be extracted from the sea area adjacent to the north Wales coast, indicating the likely value of such products for each of the next 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [5431]

Mr. Eggar: Exploration of the sea area immediately adjacent to the north Wales coast has not progressed sufficiently to allow future hydrocarbon recovery to be estimated.

The operator's estimates of overall recovery from the nearby Hamilton, Hamilton N, Lennox and Douglas fields are published each spring in the "Energy Report" and stand at some 32 billion cubic metres of gas and 19 million tonnes of oil. For reasons of commercial confidentiality my Department does not publish forecasts of oil and gas production for individual fields.

Regional Challenge

Mr. David Porter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the eligibility criteria for regional challenge funding and objective 5b funding at the beginning of 1995; how the criteria had been changed before the announcements of the results; and if he will make a statement. [6195]

Mr. Eggar: The eligibility criteria for objective 5b grants, and the additional criteria for objective 5b regional challenge grants, are contained in the single programming documents for each of the areas where the competition was held and in the regional challenge bidding guidance. The criteria were not changed before the announcement I made on 11 December 1995, Official Report, columns 463–65.

Small Firms

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the outcome of his Department's review of measures taken to facilitate small firms' access to appropriate areas of Government procurement in the light of best practice. [6670]

Mr. Page: I refer the hon. Member to my previous answer on 27 November 1995, Official Report, columns 432–33, which summarises the key actions taken as a result of the review. Progress has been made to implement all the recommendations relevant to the Department of Trade and Industry.

Departmental Staff (Members' Letters)

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many officials he employed (a) full-time and (b) part-time in his Department in each of the last three years to answer letters sent to him from hon. Members; and what was the estimated overall cost of replying to them in each of the last three years. [5618]

Mr. John M. Taylor: No officials are employed either full time or part time in the Department solely to answer letters from Members of Parliament. Supplying the information required to reply to such correspondence is part of the normal duties of many of the staff of the Department.

Within the Department's top level organisation which includes all Ministers' private offices approximately 10 years of staff effort are expected to be spent on processing all ministerial correspondence in 1995–96, including correspondence with Members of Parliament. However this is only part of the total staff effort spent on ministerial correspondence across the Department, a detailed estimate of which could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Greyhounds

Mr. Hardy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the cost to the European Community of the support given to the breeding of greyhounds in Ireland; what has been the cost per puppy bred; and what assessment he has made of the number of greyhounds being purchased. [2965]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 30 November 1995]: Inquiries are continuing and I will write to the hon. Member in due course.

TREASURY

Departmental Staff (Members' Letters)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many officials he employed (a) full-time and (b) part-time in his Department in each of the last three years to answer letters sent to him from hon. Members; and what was the estimated overall cost of replying to them in each of the last three years. [5621]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: This information is not available without expensive research.

EU Expenditure

Mr. Shore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the total British contribution, in ECU and pounds sterling, to the additional Community expenditure programmes authorised at the Edinburgh summit and subsequently to implement the Commission's White Paper, "Growth, Competitiveness, Employment: The Challenges and Ways Forward into the Twenty First Century"; and what expenditures from these funds have been allocated to projects inside the United Kingdom; [5759]

(2) over what time scale the additional Community expenditure, authorised at the Edinburgh summit and subsequently to implement the Commissions White Paper, "Growth, Competitiveness, Employment: The Challenges and Ways Forward into the Twenty First Century", is to be spent; [5760]

(3) what additional expenditure by the European Community, in billions of ecu and pounds sterling, were authorised at the Edinburgh summit and subsequently to implement the Commissions White Paper, "Growth, Competitiveness, Employment: The Challenges and Ways Forward into the Twenty First Century"; and how much of this total sum is to be spent through (a) the European Investment bank, (b) the European Investment Fund and (c) other Community expenditure programmes. [5761]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The objectives set out in the European Commission's White Paper, "Growth, Competitiveness and Employment: The Challenges and Ways Forward into the Twenty First Century" are reflected wholly or in part in a range of European Community expenditure programmes and other actions. It is not possible, however, to break down this expenditure into that which funds implementation of the White Paper and that which does not.

Own Resources Decision

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which countries have not yet ratified the Edinburgh own resources decision; when their ratification is expected; and what concessions are expected to be made to secure such ratification. [6534]

Mr. Heathcoat Amory: The Netherlands has yet to ratify the own resources decision. The timing and handling of ratification is a matter for individual member states.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

Ms Church: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the public sector borrowing requirement in each year from 1990 to 1995. [6976]

Mr. Waldegrave: The table gives the information requested. The budget forecast for the PSBR in 1995–96 was £29.0 billion.

Public sector borrowing requirement

1989–90: –£7.9 billion
1990–91: –£0.6 billion
1991–92: £13.8 billion
1992–93: £36.3 billion
1993–94: £45.4 billion
1994–95: £35.9 billion.

Steam-powered Vehicles

Sir John Cope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many steam-powered road vehicles over 25 years old he estimates will require licences in 1996–97; and what he estimates their average mileage on the roads per vehicle will be. [6005]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Around 600 vehicles, with very small annual mileage.

Sir John Cope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what he estimates will be the revenue, net of costs of collection and enforcement, received from licences for steam-powered road vehicles over 25 years old in 1996–97. [6007]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Around £20,000.

Sir John Cope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what considerations led him to exclude steam-powered road vehicles from the proposed exemption for licences for other vehicles over 25 years old. [6006]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Budget introduced a concessionary rate of £35 vehicle excise duty for all steam-powered road vehicles whatever their age. Prior to this harmonising measure only steam-powered agricultural vehicles were liable to £35 duty and steam-powered road rollers had to pay £150

EU Publicity

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much money is spent by (a) the European Commission and (b) the European Parliament in publicising their activities in the United Kingdom. [5952]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: These are matters for the European Commission and the European Parliament respectively.

Unemployment Figures

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate her Department has made of the number of individuals out of work for more than six months who do not feature in the unemployment figures. [6078]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Like many other countries, the United Kingdom publishes two official measures of unemployment. Each measure defines unemployment in a different and unique way and is equally valid. There will be some people who appear in one measure but not in the other. However, neither measure excludes those who have been unemployed for more than six months according to the particular definition being used.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many statutory instruments his Department sponsored in the last session of Parliament; and how many of these (a) constituted a new rule or regulation, (b) were introduced to implement European Community directives and (c) amplify the minimum standards set out in an original European Community directive. [2466]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 November 1995]: The information requested is in the table.

[1] Comprising i. The Excise Goods (Drawback) Regulations 1995. These regulations implement Council Directive 92/12/EEC, and set out in more detail the UK requirements and procedures for reimbursement of excise duty; and ii. The Travellers' Reliefs (Fuel and Lubricants) Order 1995. This restricts duty free movement of fuel in standard tanks of commercial vehicles to fuel on which the fuel was acquired, at a rate that is appropriate to the use to which the fuel was acquired, at a rate that is appropriate to the use to which the fuel is being, or is intended to be, put. This Order implemented Directive 94/74/EEC which did not make it clear that the relief of duty should only apply to fuel released for consumption at the rate appropriate to its use or intended use. Customs had to seek formal clarification of this point before the Order could be laid. It should be noted that whilst these two Statutory Instruments amplify the provisions of the European directives which they implement, they do so in order to clarify, and provide greater certainty, as to their meaning. Neither has the effect of "gold plating", or adding additional burdens, to those required by the directives.

Tax Statistics

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for the last available year the amount of tax (a) collected and (b) uncollected for (i) PAYE, (ii) capital gains tax, (iii) corporation tax, (iv) schedule D and (v) VAT; and what were the corresponding figures for Wales, expressed also as a percentage of the overall United Kingdom tax take. [2858]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 6 December 1995]: The amounts of PAYE, capital gains tax, corporation tax, income tax—other than PAYE—(a) collected and (b) uncollected and consequently written off as irrecoverable for the year ended 28 October 1994, the last year available, are as follows:

Tax	Collected £ million	Remitted/written off £ million
PAYE	56,959	270
CGT	718	43
Corporation tax	12,506	262
Income tax (other than PAYE)	12,112	583

Separate figures for Wales in respect of these taxes are not available.

The amount of VAT collected in financial year 1994–95 was £41,817 million of which about £1,970 million or 4.7 per cent. is estimated as attributable to Wales.

The amount of VAT written off or remitted in calendar year 1994 was £550 million. In this question, "uncollected" has been defined to mean "uncollected and subsequently written off or remitted". Seventy per cent. of remissions and write-offs are attributable to the insolvency of the taxpayer; the balance represents amounts which it is not practicable or conscionable to collect.

Post Office

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the post-tax profits made by the Post Office his Department expects to receive in each of the next three years following the proposals published in the Budget; and if he will make a statement. [5557]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 12 December 1995]: The proportion of post-tax profits represented by the Post Office's external financing limits over the survey period will be determined by how the Post Office now chooses to meet the financial targets set it.

Venture Capital

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what publicly available literature has been produced to explain the venture capital trust proposals contained in the 1994 Budget. [5544]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 12 December 1995]: A booklet was published in January this year containing detailed notes on the legislation proposed together with the legislation itself and explanatory press releases. This was preceded by a consultative document published in March 1993 and was followed by further press releases on 28 March, 29 June and 14 September 1995 about changes made on Report to the Finance Bill, the regulations and various statements of practice arising from the legislation respectively. A leaflet is being now market tested and finalised for issue early in the new year summarising the details of the scheme. Other literature has also been published by venture capitalists including the prospectuses of the venture capital trusts which have been launched.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a breakdown of administration costs incurred to date and forecast for the future on private finance initiative work. [5725]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 14 December 1995]: As the administration costs of the private finance initiative are both public and private it is not possible to provide the breakdown requested.

Employment Statistics

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the changes in the number of people of working age in employment (a) in those aged under 25 years and (b) those 25 years and over in the last 12 months. [6148]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The information is contained in the following table.

Employment in Great Britain: at summer (not seasonally adjusted)

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Departmental Staff (Members' Letters)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many officials he employed (a) full time and (b) part time in his Department in each of the last three years to answer letters sent to him from hon. Members; and what was the estimated overall cost of replying to them in each of the last three years. [5607]

Mr. Willetts: This answer covers the offices of the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, the Deputy Prime Minister and the Prime Minister.

No officials are employed solely to answer letters from hon. Members. Advice is provided to Ministers by the appropriate divisions. Costs are subsumed in the overall costs of the divisions.

Advisory Committee on Advertising

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are the current terms of reference for the Advisory Committee on Advertising. [6579]

Mr. Willetts: The terms of reference for the Advisory Committee on Advertising are:

1. To consider the relevance to Government publicity campaigns of developments in communications media and methods; and in accountability and planning techniques.
2. To act as a forum for discussion of related topics which might have a bearing upon the cost-effectiveness of Government paid-publicity activity.
3. To make recommendations, via the Central Office of Information, on which private sector suppliers should be appointed, or invited to compete for appointment, to handle:
   a) Advertising campaigns initiated by central Government Departments, executive agencies and other bodies.
   b) Central negotiation or buying of advertising space or airtime for COI in connection with the above campaigns.

   The criteria for such recommendations should be those of maximum effectiveness and cost efficiency while maintaining a competitive environment.
4. To require from COI and other Government bodies annual assessments of each of the appointed suppliers, as a basis for considering whether their contracts should be renewed.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what consideration he has given to the future of the Advisory Committee on Advertising following the changed arrangements concerning the Central Office of Information's role in Government advertising. [6592]

Dr. Willetts: The Advisory Committee on Advertising continues to have an important role. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster will be meeting the chairman of the Advisory Committee on Advertising early in January.

Government Offices for the Regions

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what was the status and outcome of the recent seminar he attended with the regional directors of the integrated regional offices. [6700]

The Deputy Prime Minister: On 22 November 1995, together with Ministers from other Departments, I met the directors of the Government offices for the English regions to discuss how they are taking forward the competitiveness agenda in their regions. The purpose of the meeting was to exchange ideas.

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Deputy Minister if he will list his responsibilities in respect of the integrated regional offices. [6701]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I chair the Cabinet Committee which discusses the work of the Government offices for the regions. They report to the Secretaries of State for Education and Employment, for the Environment, for Trade and Industry, and for Transport.

Small Firms

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what has been the outcome of his Department's review of measures taken to facilitate small firms' access to appropriate areas of Government procurement in the light of best practice. [6673]

Mr. Willetts: Guidance, including the implications of dealing with, and the needs of, small and medium-sized enterprises, is to be issued shortly to purchasing staff in my Department.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Divorce Law

31. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what recent representations he has received about proposed changes in divorce law and their implications for traditional families. [4667]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I have received a number of representations relating to the proposed changes in divorce law.

Unlawful Goods

32. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will issue guidelines to the courts on the procedures to be adopted in considering cases where unlawful goods are sold on the basis that they are to be consumed or used in other parts of the European Union. [4668]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: No; guidance is not necessary. The courts follow the relevant legislation when cases are brought before them.

Land Registry

33. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will introduce measures requiring the Land Registry not to record cross-deeds in its records; and if he will make a statement. [4669]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: A joint working party of the Law Commission, Her Majesty's Land Registry and the Lord Chancellor's Department is currently considering possible reform of the Land Registration Act 1925 and will look in particular at the treatment of easements and overriding interests in the land registration system—this will encompass the situation to which the hon. Gentleman refers. The joint working party hopes to report by the summer of next year.

Pensions Act 1995

34. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he is taking in respect of court consideration of divorce petitions which have been lodged prior to the implementation date he has set for the Pensions Act 1995 in order for one of the parties to gain a financial advantage; and if he will make a statement. [4670]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Courts currently have a duty to give full consideration to all of a divorcing couple's assets and income on divorce, including pension rights. They also have a wide discretion to ensure that an equitable solution is reached between the parties. This will continue to be the case.

Law Centres

36. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proposals he has for a national network of law centres. [4672]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Lord Chancellor recognises the importance and great value of the work which is done by law centres and other advice agencies. In his Green Paper on legal aid, he has proposed that such agencies should be able to bid for legal aid contracts to provide advice and assistance in their areas of expertise. The Lord Chancellor intends to make an announcement on the future of the Green Paper proposals next year.

Work on the regulations which will bring into force section 166 of the Pensions Act 1995 has highlighted certain complex issues requiring further thought. To ensure that these issues are fully considered and that consultees have sufficient time to comment on the proposals, the Government are now aiming to bring into force section 166 on 1 July 1996.

Legal Aid

37. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what representations he has received about the size of the legal aid budget. [4673]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Lord Chancellor and I have received many representations about the legal aid scheme, some of which touch on the size of the legal aid budget.

39. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what new proposals he has to improve the legal aid system. [4675]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Lord Chancellor published a Green Paper on the future of legal aid in May. Over 180 responses have been received. These are being analysed. Discussions are being held with some of the major respondents to allow them to expand on their views. The Lord Chancellor intends to make an announcement on the outcome of the consultation process next year.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the extension of legal aid. [4671]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Government's plans for reform of the legal aid scheme were outlined in the Green Paper "Legal Aid—Targeting Need". The responses to that paper are being considered.

Fraud Investigation

38. Mr. Ainger: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many investigations the fraud investigation department has carried out in the last five years. [4674]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The number of investigations carried out by the fraud investigation section of the Legal Aid Board in the last five years to March 1995 is 4,600.

In addition, the Benefits Agency, which deals with means assessment for civil legal aid, carried out 29,108 investigations in the last five years between November 1990 and March 1995.

Bailiff Service, Cumbria

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the operation of the bailiff service in the county of Cumbria. [4662]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Court Service is responsible only for county court bailiffs and monitors their performance through a series of targets and objectives. All are currently met by bailiffs in Cumbria.

Departmental Staff (Members' Letters)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many officials he employed (a) full time and (b) part time in his Department in each of the last three years to answer letters sent to him from hon. Members; and what was the estimated overall cost of replying to them in each of the last three years. [5622]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Lord Chancellor's Department comprises two next steps agencies—the Court Service, established as an agency in April 1995, and the Public Trust Office, established in July 1994—the departmental headquarters and associated offices. Hon. Members' letters about the operation of the agencies are referred to the respective chief executives for reply and I have accordingly asked them to write direct setting out their arrangements for dealing with this correspondence. In LCD headquarters and associated offices, and throughout the Department before the establishment of the agencies, Members' correspondence is allocated to individual divisions according to subject matter. Detailed breakdowns of the amount of time spent by officials on this work and its cost are not available and the information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Letter for Julia C. Lomas to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 18 December 1995:

The Parliamentary Secretary has asked me to respond to you as part of the Lord Chancellor's Department's response to your Parliamentary Question, listed on 8 December 1995, regarding the number of officials employed to answer letters sent from Honourable Members and the estimated overall cost of replying to them over the last three years.

The Public Trust Office does not employ any officials to specifically deal with ministerial cases, however, all officials will spend a proportion of their time dealing with them. The estimated cost of replying to letters sent from Honourable Members could only be supplied at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Mr. Michael Huebner to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 18 December 1995:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of staff employed in the Court Service to deal with letters from Members.

The Customer Service Unit of the Court Service, established in April 1995, currently contains 12 full-time members of staff who are involved in the preparation of replies to letters sent from Members of Parliament. This figure can be broken down as follows:

1 x Grade 7

2 x HEO

9 x EO.

Approximately 50 per cent. of their time is devoted to the preparation of these replies. This has an estimated cost, for the period 1 April 1995 to 1 December 1995, of £140,035.

Immigration Appellate Authorities

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the cost of the administration of the immigration appellate authorities in the past year; how many cases were considered; what were the equivalent figures in real terms in the year to May 1979; and if he will make a statement. [4664]

Mr. Johnathan Evans: Excluding accommodation, the cost of the administration of the immigration appellate authorities was £5,632,624 in the financial year 1994–95. The equivalent figure in real terms for 1978–79 was £2,255,569.

The appellate authorities determined 25,446 cases in 1994–95 and 9,527 in 1979.

Asylum Appeals

Mr. Alton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he as to issue new procedure rules in respect of appeals under section 8 of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993; and when he expects they will be published. [6166]

Mr. Johnathan Evans: Following the recommendations in the report by the consultants, KPMG Peat Marwick, a copy of which was placed in the Library in February this year, changes are being considered to the Asylum Appeals (Procedure) Rules 1993. The Lord Chancellor expects to consult interested organisations about his proposals early in the new year.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he expects that procedure rules governing appeals under clause 3 of the Asylum and Immigration Bill will be published. [6167]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Any changes to the Asylum Appeals (Procedure) Rules 1993 arising from the Asylum and Immigration Bill will be considered once the Bill has been enacted.

Small Firms

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what has been the outcome of his Department's review of measures taken to facilitate small firms' access to appropriate areas of Government procurement in the light of best practice. [6656]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The review is not yet complete. The report is expected by the end of January 1996.

SOCIAL SECURITY

War Pension Awards (Immunisation)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total number of war pension awards made as a result of conditions arising out of immunisation since 1990; and, in each case, what was the immunisation procedure concerned. [5477]

Mr. Heald: Records show that, since 1990, in one case a war pension award has been made for a condition related to immunisation. The condition involved a possible general anaphylactic reaction to vaccine, which is not vaccine specific.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the average lapse in time between a war pension being (a) applied for and (b) refused and the subsequent appeal being dealt with by a tribunal; [5079]

(2) what proportion of war pension applications which have been refused are (a) the subject of appeals to tribunals and (b) are subsequently granted following appeals to tribunals. [5080]

Mr. Heald: These are matters for Mr. John Sheppard, the acting chief executive of the War Pensions Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mr. John Sheppard to Mr. Brian Wilson, dated 18 December 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about War Pension appeals.

I should first explain that there are two different types of appeal. An entitlement appeal may be lodged where the Agency has been unable to accept that a particular medical condition has been caused by service in the Forces; an assessment appeal can be made where the appellant disagrees with the assessment of disablement arising from an accepted condition. As you have asked about claims that are refused, I will limit my reply to entitlement appeals.

You have asked about the average time lapse between a War Pension claim being made and a subsequent appeal being dealt with by a Tribunal. I am unable to give you that information in the way you requested because there are no time limits for lodging entitlement appeals. It does not follow, therefore, that the appeals received in any period are related to the decisions made in any specific earlier period. Indeed, some entitlement appeals are lodged 20 or 30 years after the original claim. No information is available which measures the average time between notification of a rejected claim and an appeal being lodged.

I can, however, tell you that the average time taken to clear a first claim to War Pension so far in 1995–96 is 157.12 working days (31.42 weeks). If rejection of a claim leads to an appeal, the War Pension Agency (WPA) is responsible for preparing the Statement of Case for the independent Pensions Appeal Tribunal (PAT), who consider all War Pension appeals and are responsible for arranging appeal hearings. The average time taken by WPA to review the evidence and prepare an entitlement appeal Statement of Case, including any comments from the appellant, is 326 working days (65.2 weeks).

The average times taken to deal with appeals are longer than would normally be the case and are a reflection of the considerable increase in appeals that occurred in 1994. As I explained in my letter to you on 7 November, the introduction of our new computer system and the re-structuring of the Agency has also had an effect on our achievements so far this year.

As I have said, the arrangement of appeal hearings is a matter for the PAT who come under the jurisdiction of the Lord Chancellor's Department. They have told me that the average time taken since April this year for the PAT to schedule a hearing following receipt of the Statement of Case from WPA is 42.35 weeks.

I am aware that the PAT have addressed the problem of large numbers of appeals awaiting hearing by increasing the number of courts held each day. These have increased from 4–5 at the end of 1994 to 7–8 now and the intention is to further increase the number to 10 next April. In addition there has been an increase in the number of cases heard each day by each court.

You have also asked the proportion of rejected claims that go to appeal and are subsequently granted. Again, I am unable to provide that exact information you have asked for because of the time limits I explained earlier. I can, however, give you the following information on the number of rejected first claims and entitlement appeals, as well as those allowed by the PAT during the last three financial years. Not all appeals proceed to the Tribunal because we are sometimes able to review the decision and allow the claim, or the appellant withdraws the appeal after it has been lodged. I must stress that because of the time lapse, there is no direct correlation between the figures shown.

Year	Rejections	Ent. appeals lodged	Ent. appeals sent to PAT	Ent. appeals allowed at PAT
1992–93	14,850	8,451	2,209	555
1993–94	19,889	10,001	4,754	994
1994–95	14,156	[1]5,158	5,074	1,242

[1] From 5 April 1994 an appeal is classed as lodged from the date that appeal forms are returned to the War Pensions Agency. Previously, an intention to appeal was classed as a lodged appeal.

I hope you find my reply helpful.

Benefits Smart Card

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what will be the cost of introducing a benefits smart card system. [4729]

Mr. Heald: The feasibility studies estimated set up costs for a magnetic stripe card system and supporting technology to be £135 million. The same studies estimate that when fully implemented the system would save approximately £140 billion a year in benefits fraud. Competitive proposals are being considered now, under the private finance initiative, from the three short-listed potential service providers. The cost will not be known until the procurement process has been completed.

Housing Benefit

Mr. George Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what were the numbers and amounts of housing benefit backdated payments under regulation 72(15); and what percentage this was of each local authority's housing benefit expenditure in each year since 1991–92. [5053]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information has been placed in the Library.

Uprating

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list (a) for each benefit and each capital or income limit which is not to be increased in April 1996, the reasons for not going so and (b) the current value of each such benefit or limit and the value which would have resulted from increasing it in line with prices and average earnings since it was last increased or since it was introduced. [4084]

Mr. Burt: The figures requested for the existing social security benefits and capital or income limits which will not be uprated in April 1996 are in the table. In deciding whether or not to increase those benefits and limits which are not required to be uprated by statute, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State takes into account many factors, including the national economic situation and whether increasing these items is in accordance with his general policy.

Notes:

[1] No difference between Earnings/Rossi calculations due to effect of rounding to nearest 5p.

The uprating of each benefit in column 5 has been carried out using price indices in the same way as for actual upratings since 1971. "RPI" in column 6 indicates that the Retail Price Index (all items) has been used throughout. "Rossi" refers to the RPI less all housing costs up to the 1991 uprating; the RPI less rent, mortgage payments and 80 per cent. of community charge for the 1992 uprating; and the RPI less rent, mortgage payments and council tax thereafter. It is assumed that benefits would have been uprated before 1971 in line with the RPI at the dates of uprating of Retirement Pension.

The uprating of benefits by earnings in column 4 is based on the average earnings of full-time adult male manual employees before 1963, the old series index of earnings from 1963 to 1976 and the average earnings index (whole economy) unadjusted since 1976. The same uprating dates have been used as for the calculations at column 5. The index for September 1995, used for the 1996 calculation, is provisional and subject to change.

All calculations are rounded to the nearest 5p at each uprating date. Where the current value of a benefit was set at a date between upratings the calculation has started from the previous uprating date.

Abbreviations:

IS = Income Support; FC = Family Credit: HB = Housing Benefit; UB = Unemployment Benefit; CTB = Council Tax Benefit; DWA = Disability Working Allowance; SF = Social Fund; RP = Retirement Pension; ICA = Invalid Care Allowance.

Availability For Work

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State Social Security if he will make it his policy to exempt Territorial Army reserve duties from eligibility for availability for work rules in consideration of unemployment benefit. [5248]

Mr. Roger Evans: Benefit rules already give specific help to members of the reserve forces. We have no plans to relax the current requirement to be available for work.

Motability

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) when his Department ceased to audit the accounts of Motability Finance Limited; and if he will make a statement about the subsequent arrangements to ensure full public accountability for the use of public funds; [5141]

(2) what assessment he has made of the level of profits made by Motability Finance Limited. [5093]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) on 19 July 1995, Official Report column 1489.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what examination his Department has made of the level of contingency reserves in the Motability car hire and leasing schemes; and if he will make a statement. [5143]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) on 19 June 1995, Official Report, column 99.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what assessment he has made of possible conflicts of interests amongst the boards of the Motability group of companies and partnerships; [5139]

(2) when he was informed about the letter sent by the deputy chairman of Motability Finance Limited to the director of Motability, on 23 June 1993, setting out his concerns about the relationship between Motability, the charity and Motability Finance Limited; [5097]

(3) what assessment he has made of the Bircham report on Motability. [5140]

Mr. Burt: I am aware of the correspondence to which the hon. Gentleman refers. The governance of Motability is the responsibility of its governors. They must ensure there are no harmful conflicts of interest and that Motability acts in accordance with charity law and the article of its own association.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what requirements his Department has imposed for windfall profits in the Motability programme to be returned to those whose disability living allowance benefits were paying for the lease or hire purchase agreements. [5126]

Mr. Burt: None. Motability regularly reviews the level of contingency reserves held by Motability Finance Limited to ensure that they are set at the appropriate level. Those reserves held in excess of the scheme's requirements are transferred by way of gift aid into the Motability Tenth Anniversary trust. Payments from the tenth anniversary trust are transferred into Motability's charitable funds.

The Department receives reports from Motability on how these charitable funds are used.

National Insurance

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received with regard to reducing employers' national insurance contributions to stimulate employment; and if he will make a statement. [5108]

Mr. Heald: We occasionally receive representations from business about the level of national insurance contributions. To improve employment prospects, the Government have substantially reduced employers' contribution rates in recent years, particularly in respect of lower paid employees. The lowest rate for employers is now 3 per cent. compared with 13.5 per cent., including the national insurance surcharge, in 1979. We have already announced our intention to further reduce the main rate of employers' contributions by 0.2 per cent., some £500 million, from April 1997.

Britain's non-wage labour costs are amongst the lowest in Europe.

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much has been spent on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in his Department in each of the last three years. [5563]

Mr. Burt: The Department's Ministers are housed in Richmond house where all facilities are provided by the Department of Health. Expenditure on furnishing and decorating DSS Ministers offices in each of the last three years is therefore included in the running cost expenditure of the Department of Health which is published in its annual report, a copy of which is in the Library.

Departmental Staff (Members' Letters)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many officials he employed (a) full-time and (b) part-time in his Department in each of the last three years to answer letters sent to him from hon. Members; and what was the estimated overall cost of replying to them in each of the last three years. [5616]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested.

Departmental Ministers receive, on average, over 20,000 letters a year from hon. Members. Depending upon the subject matter, the responsibility for preparing the reply is spread across the Department and its agencies.

Persons From Abroad

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions have been held with the Department of the Environment on the local government cost implications of the Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Miscellaneous Amendments Regulations; and if he will make a statement. [6477]

Mr. Roger Evans: Regular discussions about the proposed Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Miscellaneous Amendments Regulations have occurred between the Departments of Social Security and the Environment at both ministerial and official level in the normal course of business.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many recipients of housing benefit, were aged under 25 years, by region, in the latest available year. [6535]

Mr. Roger Evans: The figures are set out in the table.

Housing benefit recipients by region May 1994

000s

Region	Claimant aged less than 25 years	Total all cases
North	30	318
Yorks and Humberside	44	429
East Midlands	32	281
East Anglia	14	136
Greater London	75	754
Rest of South East	68	638
South West	36	311
West Midlands	40	420
North West	61	579
Wales	26	233
Scotland	41	549
Great Britain	467	4,650

Although the figures are for 1994 analysis of the trends indicates that the claims figures for the current year will be at a similar level.

Housing Benefit Fraud

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what resources have been allocated to each district, metropolitan and London borough authority for the detection and prevention of housing benefit fraud; what information his Department has on the number of fraud officers employed by each local authority responsible for housing benefit; and if he will list each local authority responsible for housing benefit according to the number of housing benefit fraud officers employed. [5843]

Mr. Heald: Information is not held centrally in the format requested.

Local authorities are responsible for the efficient payment of the benefits that they administer. It is for each of them to decide what resources to apply to the detection and prevention of housing benefit fraud, whether from the administration subsidy paid by this Department or from other sources. Local authorities can, however, earn additional subsidy for successful detection of fraud.

Information on the number of designated fraud officers employed by local authorities is currently being processed and should be available in January 1996 in the form of an estimate for total numbers for Great Britain as a whole. I will write to the hon. Member when the information becomes available.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Keith Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide information for all other tribunals in Britain along the lines referred to in his answer of 8 November, Official Report, column 1018, on the number of appeals against the disallowance of income support under the habitual residence test which were heard in the most recent period of a month or more for which information can be obtained; and how many succeeded, failed, were adjourned or were withdrawn. [7017]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information requested is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many Child Support Agency cases have been referred to the independent tribunal service since April 1993; and if he will list for each month (a) the number of appeals against assessments by absent parents, (b) the number of appeals against assessments by persons with care and (c) the number of appeals against reduced benefit directives. [4171]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 14 December 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about appeals against assessments.

Between April 1993 and September 1995, 11,862 appeals have been received by the Independent Tribunal Service (ITS). ITS do not collect the more detailed information you requested. However, we estimate that of the appeals ITS subsequently sent to the Agency for completion of a submission to the Tribunal, around 70 per cent were made by absent parents and 30 per cent by parents with care. Of those made by parents with care 9 per cent were made against reduced benefit directions.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update the monthly breakdown of requirement to co-operate decisions as set out in his answers of 22 November, Official Report, column 232, and 26 October, Official Report, column 805 for each month since April 1995 for each Child Support Agency centre. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 14 December 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency requirement to co-operate decisions.

You asked for an update of the monthly breakdown of requirement to co-operate decisions, as set out in Answers of 22 November, Official Report 232, and 26 October, Official Report, column 805 for each Child Support Agency Centre for 1995–96. This information is shown in the tables attached..

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in how many cases a deduction from earnings order has been made when at the time of its making (a) a review under section 18 of the Child Support Act 1991 had been requested and not determined and (b) an appeal to a child support appeal tribunal was pending. [4687]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Supoort Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 14 December 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about deduction from earning orders.

The Agency does not keep information on the number of deductions from earnings orders (DEOs) issued before a section 18 (second tier) review (STR) request has been determined, or an appeal heard by a tribunal. There is no business requirement for the Agency to collect information on the number of cases affected.

Funeral Expenses

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average cost to public funds of the funeral expenses of a person without means and relatives. [6061]

Mr. Horam: I have been asked to reply.

This information is not available centrally.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Public Bodies

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list annual income from (a) fees, (b) charges and (c) fines; what was the total number of staff employed (i) part-time and (ii) full-time; and what contribution his Department has made towards the annual running costs in each of the past three years in respect of (1) the agricultural wages board, (2) the Driving and Vehicle Licensing Northern Ireland Agency, (3) the Northern Ireland tourist board, (4) the Poisons board, (5) the Regional Medics Physics agency, (6) the Animals (Scientific Procedures) inspectorate, (7) the Agriculture Health and Safety inspectorate, (8) the Fertilisers and Feedstuffs inspectorate, (9) the Pharmaceutical inspectorate, (10) the Plant Health inspectorate, (11) the Potato inspectorate, (12) the Seeds inspectorate, (13) the Trading Standards inspectorate, (14) the Milk and Milk Products quality assurance division, (15) the Health and Safety inspectorate, (16) the Fisheries inspectorate, (17) the Veterinary Service, (18) the Companies Registry, (19) the Transport Licensing and Enforcement division, (20) the Health and Social Services Board inspectorate of registered nursing homes, (21) the Horticultural inspectorate, (22) the Egg Marketing inspectorate and (23) the Drugs inspectorate. [2746]

Sir John Wheeler [holding reply 28 November 1995]: The information is as follows:

1. Agriculture wages board

The following individual inspectorates form part of the AGRI-FOOD DEVELOPMENT SERVICE of the Department of Agriculture:

7. Agriculture Health and Safety Inspectorate
8. Fertilisers and Feedstuff inspectorate
10. Plant Health inspectorate
11. Potato inspectorate
12. Seeds inspectorate
21. Horticultural inspectorate
22. Egg Marketing inspectorate.

As such, the information relating to them cannot be disaggregated into the format requested. However, the aggregate information is as follows.

Agri-food development service

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
Annual income from fees, charges and fines (£000s)	253	137	208

Public Expenditure

Mr Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the per capita cost of public expenditure in Northern Ireland in each of the past five years; what the Great Britain figure is; and if he will make a statement. [3229]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 7 December 1995]: The latest figures for identifiable general Government expenditure per head for Northern Ireland and Great Britain are as follows:

	£ per head
	Northern Ireland	Great Britain
1989–90	3,760	2,440
1990–91	3,870	2,680
1991–92	4,220	3,050
1992–93	4,510	3,350
1993–94	4,780	3,550

Note:
Figures are rounded to the nearest £10.

The higher per capita spending in Northern Ireland reflects the Province's relatively higher needs.

Homes (Mains Electricity)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many homes there are in Northern Ireland; how many have no mains electricity supply; how many existing homes were connected to the mains electricity in each of the past five years; and what plans there are to connect mains electricity to the remaining homes which have no electricity. [5354]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is as follows:

The 1991 census recorded a total of 530,000 households in Northern Ireland.

Figures from the 1994–95 continuous household survey suggest that 99.7 per cent. of households in Northern Ireland are connected to an electricity supply.

The information requested on the number of existing homes connected to the mains electricity in each of the last five years is not available;

NIE has a duty under the Electricity (Northern Ireland) Order 1992 to give supply on request and a right to recover any expenses reasonably incurred in providing supply.

School Milk

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pupils (a) get milk, (b) get free milk, (c) get subsidised milk and (d) pay the full cost of milk at school; and what assessment he has made of the effects of the Budget proposals for school milk in Northern Ireland. [5124]

Mr. Ancram: A total of 74,401 pupils get milk; 4,514 get free milk and 69,887 get subsidised milk. Figures are not available in respect of full cost sales of milk at schools. It is estimated that the removal of the discretionary elements of the EC school milk scheme will reduce expenditure on the scheme in Northern Ireland by £175,000 or 28 per cent.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what quantity of milk is consumed in schools; and what assessment he has made of the effects on the milk industry in Northern Ireland of the budget proposals in respect of the reduction in the availability of subsidised milk in secondary schools. [5122]

Sir John Wheeler: A total of 12,950 litres of milk is consumed daily in schools in Northern Ireland. As 72 per cent. is consumed in primary schools, which are not affected by this announcement, there will be minimal effect on the Northern Ireland milk industry.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pupils attend secondary schools; and what percentage of these pupils presently benefit from school milk. [5123]

Sir John Wheeler: There are 150,036 pupils attending secondary schools in Northern Ireland. Information is not available on the percentage of secondary school pupils who presently benefit from school milk.

Road Bank, Newtownards

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will arrange to remove the bank created by his Department at 114 Crawfordsburn road, Newtownards in order to rectify the sight lines. [5098]

Mr. Moss: The Department does not own the bank in question and has no proposals to remove it.

Security (Discussions)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with the Government of the Irish Republic in respect of formulating joint security measures to deal with a breakdown in the ceasefire. [5100]

Sir John Wheeler: The Government regularly discuss security matters with the Government of the Republic of Ireland, but it would be inappropriate to reveal the nature and scope of such discussions. However, I can assure the hon. Member that the security forces on both sides of the border have maintained excellent co-operation and will continue to do so.

Orders in Council

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those Orders in Council that he has brought or proposes to bring before the House in the current Session; and if he will make a statement on those orders which will be subject to public consultation this Session. [5102]

Sir John Wheeler: Two Orders in Council have been brought before the House in the current term; the Street Works (NI) Order and the Education (NI) Order.

Orders to be brought forward in the 1995–96 Session are as detailed in the Secretary of State's letter to the hon. Member of 27 November, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

All draft orders will be subject to public consultation, unless there are compelling reasons of urgency.

Electoral Registers

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland at which (a) post offices and (b) other locations in the centre of Armagh city the electoral registers are made available for public inspection, and if he will make a statement about changes in the arrangements for public display of electoral registers. [5125]

Mr. Ancram: Arrangements for the public display of electoral registers are a matter for the Chief Electoral Officer for Northern Ireland. On publication of the electoral register, the chief electoral officer forwards a copy of each of the registers for the Armagh city wards of Downs, Callan Bridge, Abbey Park, Observatory, the Mall and Demesne, which comprise respectively wards 17 to 22 of the 22 wards in Armagh local government district, to the Armagh Library, Markethill road, for public inspection. Additionally, a copy of the register for ward 17 is forwarded to Ogle Street sub post office and a copy of each of the registers for wards 21 and 22 is sent to Barrack Street post office.

Occupational Health Workers

Mr. Roger Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many medical and nursing staff worked in occupational health within the NHS in Northern Ireland for the last three years for which figures are available; and what were the grades of these employees. [5389]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is contained in the following tables. Figures are quoted for both actual numbers of staff and whole time equivalents for both nursing and medical staff, working within occupational Health Departments of the Northern Ireland health and personal social services, as at 30 June of each year.

Child Minders

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his Department's policy in respect of family credit regulations and child minders who are family members; and if he will make it his policy to treat unregistered family member child minders as registered child minders for family credit purposes. [5099]

Mr. Moss: When calculating family credit entitlement, charges paid by a claimant to a partner or by a partner to a claimant for any child for whom either of them is responsible are not allowed. Charges paid to other members of a family may be allowed providing the care is given on premises registered under the Children and Young Persons Act (Northern Ireland) 1968 (c.34 (NI)). There are no plans at present to change this policy.

Orlit Dwellings

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to amend the Housing Defects (Northern Ireland) Order 1986 to provide adequate compensation for the owners of Orlit built dwellings houses; and if owners of such houses are presently being treated in equal legislative and procedural terms to those in Scotland, England and Wales. [5101]

Mr. Moss: I have no plans to amend the Housing Defects (Northern Ireland) Order 1986.

The housing defects scheme introduced under the order provides compensation for the owners of Orlit dwellings who purchased in good faith from public sector landlords before the defects became generally known. The compensation arrangements for such owners in Northern Ireland is essentially the same as those applying in the rest of the United Kingdom save in two minor respects. First, due to lower house values in Northern Ireland it was decided that repurchase provided better value for money than the reinstatement grant offered to eligible Orlit owners in Great Britain. Secondly, the scheme of assistance for Orlits ended in Great Britain on 30 November 1994 whereas the scheme in Northern Ireland continues until September 1996.

Devolution

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will specify those powers and functions the Government have proposed to devolve to local councils in Scotland which his Department has assessed could be appropriately devolved in Northern Ireland; and what plans he has to act on these. [5103]

Mr. Ancram: Our aim is to strengthen local democracy by establishing institutions which enable all Northern Ireland political representatives to have proper local responsibility and accountability. Agreement is the key and any question of increasing or adjusting the responsibilities of district councils in a way which is acceptable right across the community in Northern Ireland is one for discussion within the context of the political talks process.

Plastic Bullets

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many plastic bullets have been fired in Northern Ireland during each month since August 1993, to date; how many people have been injured by plastic bullets over the same period; and if he will make a statement. [4619]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 11 December 1995]: The number of plastic baton rounds fired in Northern Ireland during each month from August 1993 to 30 November 1995 and the number of people injured over this period are as follows:

Badger Setts, Carnmoney Hill

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what measures he intends to adopt to preserve the badger setts affected by the development proposals for Carnmoney hill, Newtownabbey, County Antrim; [5451]

(2) if he will call in the development proposals for Carnmoney hill, Newtownabbey, County Antrim; and if he will make a statement. [5450]

Mr. Moss: There are no "call in" powers in Northern Ireland planning law. Outline planning permission for a new golf club at Carnmoney hill, Newtownabbey was granted on 21 November 1995. The developer's agent has been advised of the requirements of the Wildlife (Northern Ireland) Order 1985 with regard to the protection of badger setts and a detailed badger survey, commissioned by the developer, has been received by the Department of the Environment.

Teachers

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what review has been undertaken by the Fair Employment Commission or its predecessor of the exception contained in section 37(1)(c) of the Fair Employment Act 1976 relating to the employment of teachers in schools, as required in that Act. [5433]

Sir John Wheeler: The exception relating to the employment of teachers in schools was reviewed by the Fair Employment Agency in 1981 and 1987. No changes to the exception were recommended.

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will ask the Fair Employment Commission to report to him upon the exercise of its functions under section 38 of the Fair Employment Act 1976 with recommendations on action which might be taken to further equality of opportunity in the employment of teachers or on removing the exception of teachers in schools from the fair employment laws. [5454]

Mr. Ancram: It is not my right hon. and learned Friend's intention, at the present time, to ask the Fair Employment Commission to undertake such an exercise.

Colin Glen Trust

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what public moneys have been made available each year to the Colin Glen trust since 1 January 1990; and how many cases alleging religious discrimination have been brought to the attention of the Fair Employment Commission in relation to the trust. [6455]

Sir John Wheeler: The following public funding has been given to the Colin Glen trust:

1990 (January to March): £38,714

1990–91: £285,071

1991–92: £453,981

1992–93: £544,749

1993–94: £393,949

1994–95: £408,378

1995–96 (to end October): £281,684.

A total of four cases alleging religious discrimination have been brought to the attention of the Fair Employment Commission in relation to the Colin Glen trust.

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been spent on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in his Department in each of the last three years. [5569]

Sir John Wheeler: Expenditure on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in 1993–94 and 1994–95 are included in the running cost expenditure of the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland departments, which are published in departmental reports. Figures prior to 1993–94 are not available.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much his Department spent on official hospitality in 1994–95 and the financial year to date; and what is the 1995–96 projected budget for official hospitality. [5586]

Sir John Wheeler: The information in respect of the Northern Ireland Office, Northern Ireland departments and agencies is as follows:

1994–95: £479,834

1995–96 (estimated): £560,000

1995–96 (actual to 30 November 1995): £342,939.

Rathgael Road, Bangor

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to enhance the rural nature of the Rathgael road in Bangor with particular reference to its complement of trees; and what plans he has for new traffic arrangements to diminish the number of heavy goods vehicles entering the road. [5456]

Mr. Moss: Rathgael road, which is within the development limits of Bangor, is identified in the North Down and Ards area plan 1984–1995 as a relief to the existing ring road, and there are no plans to enhance the rural nature of this road or to diminish the number of heavy goods vehicles using it.

Graduates

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of school children subsequently graduate; what proportion of jobs filled in the last three years in the Northern Ireland civil service required a degree; and how many graduates were recruited to jobs for which a degree was not required. [5458]

Sir John Wheeler: The percentage of school children who subsequently graduate and the number of graduates recruited by the Northern Ireland civil service in the last three years is as follows:

It is estimated that 25 per cent. of school children in Northern Ireland graduate by the age of 25.

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
Proportion of NI Civil Service jobs filled which required a degree[1]	8.5 per cent. (132 out of 1554)	5.7 per cent. (36 out of 633)	7.4 per cent. (40 out of 540)
Number of graduates recruited where a degree was not required[2]	145	66	59

Note:

[1] Non-industrial permanent recruits.

[2] Non-industrial permanent recruits including recruits who obtained a degree since appointment. The figures for the years 1992–93 and 1994–95 correct those I gave in response to a question from the hon. Gentleman on 3 November, Official Report column 500–2.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of bills to his Department were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. [5699]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 14 December 1995]: Departments are required to provide details of their performance in their departmental reports.

In 1994–95, the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland departments paid 94.7 per cent. of their bills in accordance with agreed contractual conditions, or within 30 days of receiving goods and services, or on presentation of a valid invoice.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide a breakdown of administration costs incurred to date and forecast for the future on PFI work. [5749]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The Department of Finance currently employs an adviser to promote the private finance initiative across all Northern Ireland departments and the Northern Ireland Office at a cost of some £60,000 per annum. The Department of the Environment also incurs some £120,000 per annum on units dedicated to work on the initiative.

The administration costs incurred in relation to other work on the PFI are part of the normal work of Departments and are not separately identified.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide revenue forecasts for the current year and the next five years of expenditure on schemes provided under the PFI. [5750]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 14 December 1995]: No schemes under the private finance initiative, announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in November 1992, have been approved to date. A range of projects across all Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office are under consideration. It is too early, however, to estimate what the revenue costs are likely to be.

Departmental Staff (Member's Letters)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many officials he employed (a) full-time and (b) part-time in his Department in each of the last three years to answer letters sent to him from hon. Members; and what was the estimated overall cost of replying to them in each of the last three years. [5615]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Small Firms

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the outcome of his Department's review of measures taken to facilitate small firms' access to appropriate areas of Government procurement in the light of best practice. [6661]

Sir John Wheeler: As part of the Department of Finance and Personnel, the Government purchasing service has oversight of £800 million worth of procurement in NI each years. As I am sure the hon. Member appreciates, the majority of Northern Ireland firms are small and medium-sized enterprises and as such we have a fundamental objective to help these businesses prosper. In fact a key objective of the Government purchasing service is to ensure that small and medium-sized enterprises are given maximum effective encouragement and opportunity to compete for public sector contracts in Northern Ireland. To this end, the Department, in conjunction with the CBI has promoted several "Meet the Buyer" events in Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland at which public sector buyers and representatives of small and medium-sized enterprises have been facilitated to do business together and to forge long term relationships.

The suppliers charter published late last year by the Government purchasing service is a declaration of its commitment to the principles of the citizens charter which aims to improve the quality of all public services make services more responsive to the needs of users ensure value for money.

It also emphasises the commitment to provide all small and medium-sized enterprises with the opportunity to compete for the provision of goods and services in fair, open and equal competition.

ENVIRONMENT

Fur Imports

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he is taking to oppose the delay of the implementation of a ban on the import of furs caught by leghold traps into the European Union; and if he will make a statement. [3180]

Mr. Clappison: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, my hon. Friend the Member for Amber Valley (Mr Oppenheim), on Thursday 14 December, Official Report, column 778.

Social Lettings

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many new social lettings (a) were made by housing associations in the last year and (b) are expected to be made next year, and what is his Department's lowest estimate for housing need on Merseyside; [5382]

(2) how many new homes will be built by housing associations on Merseyside during the next 12 months; and what estimate his Department made of the number to be built in that period (a) at the start of 1995–96 and (b) currently. [5360]

Mr. Clappison: Housing associations provided around 70,700 new social lettings in 1994–95 through Housing Corporation and local authority funding together with the private finance attracted. In 1996–97 it is estimated that the equivalent figure will be around 53,400 with a further 7,200 new social lettings being provided from other sources. In addition, some 250,000 housing association and local authority dwellings become available for reletting each year.

The Department's estimates of newly arising need for social lettings are made at national level and are not disaggregated regionally.

The Housing Corporation will be publishing details of its capital funding allocations in each local authority area in the new year after it has assessed housing associations' bids for 1996–97 projects and finalised the approved development programme. Earlier years' estimates of 1996–97 output were national and not disaggregated regionally.

London Governance

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many conference lectures and seminars he has attended on the subject of the governance of London since he assumed responsibility for the capital city. [5449]

Mr. Gummer: I have attended many conferences and seminars in London since I became Minister with responsibility for London. When I am invited, with reasonable notice, to suitable occasions of this kind, I try to attend. When the governance of London is mentioned, it is widely acknowledged that our decision to abolish the Greater London council was right.

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much has been spent on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in his Department in each of the last three years. [5573]

Sir Paul Beresford: Expenditure on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in each of the last three years is included in the running cost expenditure of my Department, which is published in the annual report.

Local Authority Trading

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what review the Government have carried out on the issues of cross-boundary tendering and municipal trading by local authorities; and when he plans to circulate guidance on this matter. [5594]

Sir Paul Beresford: We have considered the powers of local authorities to trade under the Local Authorities (Goods and Services) Act 1970. My officials wrote to the local authority associations last week informing them that we remain of the view that the limited powers of the 1970 Act are the right basis for local authority trading activities, but accepting that these powers do not restrict these activities simply to the deployment by an authority of temporarily surplus capacity in its work force.

Water Companies (Profits)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the Office of Water Services in respect of changes to the regulatory regime to take account of recent profit and dividend announcements by the water companies; and if he will make a statement. [5679]

Mr. Clappison: The functioning of the regulatory regime frequently arises in day-to-day contacts between officials and the Director General of Water Services and his staff. The present system of price cap regulation provides powerful incentives for companies to reduce their costs and improve their performance, and enables the Director General of Water Services to take account of company profitability at the next price review. The director general has said that the benefits of improved efficiency should be shared between customers and shareholders.

Visual Display Units

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research his Department has undertaken to establish whether there is a link between eye disease and visual display screens; and if he will make a statement. [5674]

Sir Paul Beresford: Extensive research has found no evidence that work with visual display units either causes any permanent damage to eyes or eyesight or makes existing defects worse. The scientific and medical consensus is such that further research would not be justified.

Some people using visual display units experience temporary visual fatigue, leading to symptoms like sore eyes or headaches. Under the Health and Safety (Display Screen Equipment) Regulations 1992, employees who habitually use a display screen as a significant part of their normal work can ask their employer to provide them with eye and eyesight tests, and special spectacles if required. Employers can also help minimise eyestrain by providing satisfactory lighting and taking steps to avoid reflections and glare on the screen. The Health and Safety Executive has explained these points in its guidance publications.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many visual display unit operators undertook a subsidised eye test as provided by European Union regulations in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [5673]

Sir Paul Beresford: Information on provision of eye tests under the Health and Safety (Display Screen Equipment) Regulations 1992 is not yet available. There is no requirement for employers to report the number of tests they have provided. However, the Health and Safety Executive has started work to evaluate the regulations by means of surveys of employers and employees. The evaluation is due for completion in 1996 and should produce estimates of the extent of awareness of the regulations and what actions employers have taken to comply, including information on the extent of provision of eye tests.

Municipal Waste Incinerators

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the municipal waste incinerators currently operating in the United Kingdom separately identifying those burning (a) more and (b) less than six tonnes per hour; which of them meet the relevant dust and dioxin emission standards; and which are the subject of enforcement action by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution. [5683]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 13 December 1995]: I have listed all the municipal waste incinerators currently operating in the UK. All except the incinerator at Chinglebraes in Orkney have capacities in excess of six tonnes per hour.

Under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution authorises these plants in England and Wales and Her Majesty's industrial pollution inspectorate authorises those in Scotland. These incinerators must be operated in accordance with all the conditions set in their authorisation including those for dust and dioxins; failure to comply with these standards can lead to enforcement action.

HMIPI has issued an enforcement notice with regard to meeting these standards for the Orkney incinerator.

HMIP has not undertaken any enforcement action at municipal waste incinerators this year.

Chauffeur-driven Cars

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what the cost of chauffeur-driven cars used by his Department was in each of the past five years. [5858]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information is provided in respect of all Department of the Environment Ministers.

1990–91: £270,000

1991–92: £265,000

1992–93: £254,000

1993–94: £258,000

1994–95: £258,000.

All figures are exclusive of VAT.

No Department of the Environment Ministers use their own vehicles for official purposes.

Water Companies (Prosecutions)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many times and on which dates each of the privatised water companies have been (a) prosecuted and (b) convicted for water pollution offences in (i) the current year and (ii) each of the last five years. [5961]

Mr. Clappison: The information requested is set out in the tables. The details attributed to 1995 are for the period since April. This information supersedes that given in my answer of 7 November 1995, Official Report, columns 738–39.

Building Research Establishment

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money the Building Research Establishment has received in each of the last five years from public funds; and what budget it is likely to receive for research next year. [5965]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The Building Research Establishment receives income from public funds through undertaking research and other commissions for various Government customers. In addition, it has annual allocation of capital funds for investment in buildings and facilities. The table provides details of both.

Local Authorities (Political Propaganda)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the restrictions currently placed on local authorities to prevent expenditure on political propaganda; and what tests are applied in determining if a particular item is beyond or within the rules. [5953]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Local Government Act 1986 prohibits local authorities from publishing, or assisting others to publish, material which, in whole or in part, appears to be designed to affect public support for a political party. The code of recommended practice on local authority publicity, issued by my Department under that Act, states that any publicity used to comment on the proposals or policies of central or local government must be accurate and objective and not appear to be prejudiced, unreasoning or a political attack on any of the policies or proposals in question.

Housing (Mundic Problem)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research he has commissioned or evaluated into the Mundic problem with special reference to houses in Cornwall. [5964]

Mr. Clappison: The Department funds a continuing research programme at the Building Research Establishment, with industry support, into these problems.

This work has led directly to the publication of revised guidance from the Mundic committee of the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors. The application of which has resulted in an estimated 70 per cent of previously blighted properties now being classified as suitable for lending purposes.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide, for the schemes so far agreed under the PFI, the level of financing costs above the current cost of Government borrowing for the scheme with (a) the highest financing costs and (b) the lowest costs. [5692]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The capital and financing costs of a PFI project are a matter for the private sector. The Department's responsibility is to ensure that it, and its sponsored bodies, get value for money for any payments they make. Value for money appraisals are not required to include a notional public sector comparator for projects where no public funding is available.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide revenue forecasts for the current year and the next five years of expenditure on schemes provided under the PFI. [5755]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The Department of the Environment and its sponsored bodies attracted around £4 billion in private investment in support of its programmes in 1994–95 and expects to increase that figure in 1995–96. This will assist the delivery of a very large number of projects, most notably ones relating to housing, inner cities and regeneration. Secondary legislation to encourage and facilitate private finance initiative schemes in the local authority sector came into effect from 1 April 1995 and the Government aim to implement further measures, announced on 31 October Official Report, columns 181–83, by 1 April 1996. It is not practicable for the Department to collect detailed information on each project being advanced under private financing arrangements.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide a breakdown of administration costs incurred to date and forecast for the future of PFI work. [5744]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The Department of the Environment and its sponsored bodies seek to attract maximum private finance in support of departmental programmes. The administrative costs of this activity are not separately identified.

Public Opinion Surveys

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all qualitative and quantitative research projects and surveys carried out for his Department into aspects of public attitudes and opinions (a) in general and (b) in relation to specific policy proposals in each of the past three years to December 1995, indicating for each project or survey (i) the date on which the research was commissioned, (ii) the amount which his Department spent, (iii) who carried out the research, (iv) the number of people surveyed or taking part, (v) the location and times scale and (vi) which individuals and organisations have been given access to the findings. [5987]

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The information available about surveys carried out by my Department in the past three years, which include questions to individuals about their opinions, is given.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what bids for resources he has received from authorities that (a) have been and (b) are to be reorganised on 1 April 1995, 1996, 1997 or 1998 for estimated reorganisation costs in (i) 1995–96 and (ii) 1996–97; and to what extent these bids have been successful. [6098]

Sir Paul Bereford [holding answer 14 December 1995]: For authorities for which structural change orders have been made, the bids received and allocations made to date under the local government reorganisation costs schemes for 1995–96 and 1996–97 are as follows:

Authorities reorganised on	1 April 1995 £	1 April 1996 £	1 April 1997 £
1995–96 Scheme
Bid	1,910,000	113,913,000	10,706,500
Allocation	1,750,000	47,760,000	0
1996–97 Scheme
Bid	1,029,000	120,921,000	98,480,700

Authorities initial bids under the 1996–97 reorganisation costs scheme were requested by 1 December. Initial allocations will be made shortly. No orders have been made which provide for reorganisation in 1998.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what resources will be available to cover the transitional costs of local government re-organisation in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1998–99. [6100]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 14 December 1995]: Resources of £100 million in the form of supplementary credit approvals are available to cover the transitional costs of local government re-organisation in 1996–97. The provision for 1997–98 and 1998–99 will be decided during the public expenditure survey for those years.

Council House Rents

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidelines he has issued in respect of council house rent increases; and what subsidies he will be providing in respect of rebates. [6271]

Mr. Clappison: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Fulham (Mr. Carrington) on 21 November, Official Report, columns 96–97. We are currently considering the responses received during consultation on our proposals and hope to be in a position to make an announcement shortly.

Departmental Staff (Members' Letters)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many officials he employed (a) full time and (b) part time in his Department in each of the last three years to answer letters sent to him from hon. Members; and what was the estimated overall cost of replying to them in each of the last three years. [5617]

Sir Paul Beresford: Officials in my Department provide Ministers with draft replies to departmental correspondence as part of their normal duties. No information is available on what proportion of officials' time is spent on this work.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce regulations to require the controlled safe disposal of all containers used to store toxic materials and harmful chemicals. [5429]

Mr. Clappison: Containers classified as controlled waste must be managed and disposed of in accordance with sections 33 and 34 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. In some circumstances, the containers may be "Special Waste" and subject to the additional controls in the 1980 Control of Pollution (Special Waste) Regulations. These regulations are being revised following public consultation earlier in the year.

New Housing

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what provision is currently made for the delivery of social and economic infrastructure facilities when applications are made for new housing development. [6576]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The provision of infrastructure is important in all major new developments. It has always been an important purpose of the planning system to co-ordinate new development with the infrastructure it demands.

The fact that development plans look forward over a number of years means that those responsible for infrastructure provision influence the pattern of new development so that it takes account of likely infrastructure limitations. When it comes to an individual planning application, the adequacy of infrastructure can be a material consideration in deciding whether permission should be granted.

In certain circumstances, it may be appropriate for a local planning authority to impose a condition or seek to enter into a planning obligation with a developer to help towards the provision of social and economic infrastructure facilities where this is necessary for the granting of planning permission.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many new houses are to be built by (a) 2005 and (b) 2011 to fulfil projected household needs forecast by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys in (i) Devon, (ii) Somerset, (iii) Birmingham, (iv) Kent, (v) Sussex and (vi) Hampshire. [6588]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The Department of the Environment published "Projections of Households in England to 2016" in March 1995. These projections suggest the likely number and type of households that would materialise by county, metropolitan district and London borough by 2016, if current social and demographic trends continue.

New figures, for which these 1992-based projections will be an input, will be produced for each region and county for the next review of the relevant regional planning guidance. The next step, therefore, is for the regional conference of local authorities for each region to consider these projections and a wide range of other supply and demand factors before advising the Secretary of State on revised figures for additional housing requirements for their region and for each county, metropolitan district or London borough. The process of assessing the implications of the latest household projections is just starting.

The current figures for the authorities requested were produced with input from the 1989-based household projections, published in 1992. The current annual average number of additional dwellings proposed in current regional planning guidance for the authorities requested are:

Devon: 4,950 (1991–2011) RPG for the South West (July 1994)

Somerset: 2,500 (1991–2011) RPG for the South West (July 1994)

Birmingham: 2,050 (1991–2011) Draft RPG for West Midlands (September 1995)

Kent: 5,800 (1991–2006) RPG for the South East (March 1994)

East Sussex: 2,333 (1991–2006) RPG for the South East (March 1994)

West Sussex: 2,933 (1991–2006) RPG for the South East (March 1994)

Surrey: 2,400 (1991–2006) RPG for the South East (March 1994)

Hampshire: 6,133 (1991—2006) RPG for the South East (March 1994).

These figures are being "tested" in the preparation of the structure plan or unitary development plan for the relevant area.

Industrial Sites

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate his Department has made of the future requirement for new industrial sites in (a) the south-west and (b) South Hams and the number of jobs these will generate. [6589]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department has not made any estimate of the future requirement for industrial sites in the region, but the regional planning guidance for the south-west advises that development plans should make adequate provision for land employment-related development.

The third alteration to the Devon structure plan, as approved in March 1994, provides for about 774 hectares of employment land in the county between 1989 and 2001, of which 115 hectares are allocated to South Hams district. The structure plan does not make any estimate of the number of jobs this will generate.

Homelessness

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what date his officials discussed the local government implications of the Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Miscellaneous Amendments Regulations with the Department of Social Security; what evidence was offered; and what information has been sought from local authorities. [6480]

Mr. Clappison: My officials have had regular discussions with their counterparts in the Department of Social Security about the implications for the housing of homeless persons of the proposed Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Miscellaneous Amendments Regulations. Those discussions have taken account of information about homelessness supplied to the Department by local authorities. We have also discussed the matter with the Association of London Government.

Local Partnerships

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will specify the role and remit of local partnerships. [6578]

Mr. Curry: Local partnerships play a key role in promoting economic, environmental and social regeneration. A range of Government policies and programmes is specifically directed to support local partnerships. These programmes include the single regeneration budget challenge fund. Over 370 schemes involving local partnerships have been approved under rounds 1 and 2 of the challenge fund. These schemes stand to attract some £2 billion in challenge fund support and £5 billion in private investment over their lifetime of up to seven years. Rounds 3 and 4 of the challenge fund, for schemes starting in 1997 and 1998 respectively, were announced in the Budget statement. Apart from the challenge fund, the partnership approach is central to, for example, initiatives supported by training and enterprise councils, English Partnerships and European structural funds.

Population Statistics

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider establishing a statistical user group made up of representatives from the Central Statistical Office, local authorities and bodies such as the Council for the Protection of Rural England in order to improve the accuracy of population statistics and need for homes in the south west of England. [6577]

Mr. Robert B Jones: Arrangements are already in place for consulting local authorities and other interested parties during the production of population projections.

Population estimates and subnational population projections are the responsibility of the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. One of the key assumptions that has to be made in preparing the subnational population projections concerns the pattern of migration within England. This is decided following extensive consultation with the relevant local authorities, a task which is undertaken by the Department of the Environment. This consultation relates to past and present trends and the projections assume a continuation of these trends.

In addition, OPCS chairs a separate liaison group for representatives from both central and local government for consideration of the methodology and timing of population statistics.

My Department produced household projections from the subnational population projections. Both of these are trend-based projections, based on the best evidence available at the time. They are not forecasts of what we expect to happen, nor do they represent DOE's expectation of the number of houses needed in any particular area. Rather, they are one item of information taken into account in setting guidance for housing provision, along with other information such as housing stock and vacant dwellings. The weight to be given to these and other factors is considered by a working group in each region comprising representatives from local authorities, statisticians and planners from my Department and interested parties such as the House Builders Federation and the Council for the Protection of Rural England. The Secretary of State's figures for housing provision in regional planning guidance is a result of these considerations.

Regional Regeneration Strategies

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which of the integrated regional offices published regional regeneration strategies; and which local partners have been consulted in the process. [6695]

Mr. Curry: None. The Government offices for the regions do, however, all take an active role in developing effective co-operation with and between a wide range of local partners to ensure that Government programmes, including the single regeneration budget, provide a coherent and effective contribution to regional and local regeneration.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fishing Industry

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has to give compensation to British-owned fishing vessels prevented from fishing by lack of getting similar compensation to that claimed by Spanish-owned British-registered vessels for stopping fishing under the Merchant Shipping Act 1988. [4326]

Mr. Baldry: British-owned fishing vessels were not affected by the nationality provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act 1988. The question of compensation does not, therefore, arise.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has for requiring all British registered fishing vessels to land a specified proportion of the catch into the United Kingdom. [6008]

Mr. Baldry: British fishing vessels are already required to land into the UK at least 50 per cent. by weight of total landings of all stocks subject to EC quota. If they fail to do this they must visit a United Kingdom port at least four times in every six month period. The visits must each be of at least eight hours duration and there must be an interval of at least 10 days between them. Notice must be given at least 24 hours in advance of a visit.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many applications were received for funding under the EC grant schemes prior to 28 November for (a) fisheries processing and marketing, (b) port facilities and (c) aquaculture production for each country of the United Kingdom. [5991]

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The number of applications and provisional applications for financial instrument for fisheries guidance (FIFG) funding under the Structures Regulation—EC Reg. 3699/93—prior to 28 November 1995 for fisheries marketing and processing, port facilities and aquaculture for each country of the United Kingdom is as follows:

Country	Fisheries processing and marketing	Port facilities	Aquaculture
England[1]	35	2	4
Northern Ireland[2]	0	0	0
Scotland	93	20	35
Wales[1]	2	0	2
Total	130	22	41

[1] As schemes were not open in England and Wales it was not possible for formal applications to be made. Provisional applications were acknowledged on a "without prejudice" basis.

[2] No formal applications have been received in Northern Ireland but provisional approval to start work has been given to 11 processing and marketing and 4 aquaculture projects without guarantee of grant.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to ban the sale of beef offal until such time as his Department has evaluated scientific proof that there is no link between bovine spongiform encephalopathy and Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease. [5129]

Mrs. Browning: The Government have based all their measures to protect public health from any remote possible risk from BSE on scientific evidence and advice from the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee and its predecessors. The controls on bovine offals contained in the Specified Bovine Offal Order 1995 are designed to ensure that tissues potentially harbouring BSE infectivity are removed from all cattle at slaughter and do not enter any food chain. Other offals, not covered by these regulations, have been tested and shown not to harbour BSE infectivity, even when taken from clinically affected cattle. The controls in force therefore provide a safeguard against the possibility, for which there is no scientific evidence, that CJD is caused by BSE. Further details of the scientific experiments underpinning these controls were given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in reply to a parliamentary question from my hon. Friend the Member for Scarborough (Mr. Sykes) on 22 November, Official Report, columns 192-93.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much his Department spent on official hospitality in 1994–95 and the financial year to date: and what is the 1995–96 projected budget for official hospitality. [5584]

Mr. Boswell: In 1994–95 the cost of hospitality, which is included in the running cost budget of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, excluding its agencies, was £64,092.62. The figure for the financial year to date (30 November 1995) is £37,077.65.

The projected budget for 1995–96 is £57,000.

EU Grants

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many applications were received for funding under the EC processing and marketing grants schemes in each year in which the schemes have been in operation in the United Kingdom, for each country of the United Kingdom. [5990]

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The following information, for the years 1990 to 1995, is available. Applications for grants under both the agriculture and fisheries schemes are included. Information for earlier years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

EC processing and marketing grant applications in the United Kingdom 1990–95

Year	England	Scotland	Wales	Northern Ireland
1990	10	72	4	30
1991	153	66	8	45
1992	232	102	11	39

1994	195	65	13	0
1995 to date	225	91	13	17

Orange Juice

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, what EU regulations have affected the price of orange juice in the last six months. [6536]

Mr. Baldry: Several EU regulations may have affected the recent price of orange juice. Commission regulation (EC) No. 3223/94 introduced entry price arrangements for oranges; Council regulation (EC) No. 3290/94 applied reductions in tariffs and levies for imported orange juice; Commission regulation (EC) No. 1921/95 introduced less onerous import licence arrangements for orange juice; and Commission regulation (EC No. 2803/95 provided aid to Community processors of oranges.

Deregulation

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress his Department is making with the deregulation of food law, and if he will make a statement. [7117]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have today laid before Parliament the last of a set of regulations due to come into force on 1 January 1996, which will do much to simplify food law and remove outdated restrictions.

Eighteen food composition regulations, dating back to 1944, have been revoked and replaced by greatly simplified regulations, in just three areas, covering bread and flour, spreadable fats and cheese and cream

Fourteen food additive regulations, dating back to 1967, have been revoked and replaced by three sets of regulations, which introduce new EC requirements for colours, sweeteners and other additives. We are also allowing the use of cyclamates as food additives, since they have now been given a clean bill of health by the Government's expert advisors.

We are planning to streamline the food labelling regulations in the same way. Certain changes will be made on 1 January but more extensive revision has had to be deferred until later in 1996, while some issues of detail are resolved.

Our aim is to keep the essential parts of food law which protect the health of the general public and make sure that they have the information they need, but to dispense where we can with the elaborate rules which have built up over the years. Because simpler law is easier to understand and easier to obey, it gives better protection. Removing arbitrary restrictions gives industry greater freedom to develop new products to meet changing consumer tastes.

Arable Area Payments

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will make a statement about progress with making arable area payments in England. [7118]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There were 46,874 applications for arable area aid in 1995. We met the 30 September deadline for advance payment of 98 per cent. of those claims which included an oilseed element. The 2 per cent. which were unpaid were all subject to unresolved queries.

Payments under the main scheme started on 17 October and, as at 13 December, 27,209 claims—58 per cent. of the total—had been paid. Regional service centres are making every effort to clear outstanding cases by the deadline of 31 December. However, the burden of validating claims to the exacting standards required under the Community rules has proved greater than originally estimated and it now seems likely that some claims will not be paid until after the deadline. I regret this delay, but hope nevertheless that all valid claims will have been paid by the end of January.

HEALTH

Residential Care Homes, Coventry

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients from the Coventry health authority and Coventry social services department have been referred (a) to non-profit and (b) to other residential and nursing homes in Coventry for each year since 1985. [4799]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally. My hon. Friend may wish to contact the chairman of the Coventry social services committee for this information.

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in his Department in each of the last three years. [5564]

Mr. Horam: Expenditure on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in each of the last three years is included in the running cost expenditure of my Department, which is published in the annual report.

Worcester District General Hospital

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the completion date of the new Worcester district general hospital; and if he will make a statement. [5482]

Mr. Horam: An advertisement has been placed in the Official Journal of the European Union inviting private sector partnership in the development of a new Worcester district general hospital. I understand that Worcester Royal Infirmary national health service trust is currently having preliminary discussions with a number of interested parties and an intended target date of the year 2000 has been set for completion of the development.

Health Service Staff Costs

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total revenue bill to the NHS of employing (a) medical and (b) nursing and midwifery staff in each region in each year since 1990. [4184]

Mr. Malone: The available information is shown in the tables. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 3 November 1994, Official Report, column 1269, for nursing and midwifery data prior to 1993–94.

Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department spent on official hospitality in 1994–95 and the financial year to date; and what is the 1995–96 projected budget for official hospitality. [5581]

Mr. Horam: For the amount spent on hospitality expenditure for 1994–95, I refer the hon. Member to the reply that the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State gave to him on 1 May 1995, Official Report, column 23. Due to technical changes in the Department's accounting system, the figure given for the Department for 1994–95 covered 13 months' expenditure. In April the procedures for recording hospitality expenditure for the Department were changed so that hospitality expenditure was recorded separately from expenditure on working lunches. The amount of expenditure on hospitality to the end of November this financial years is:

Department	49,779
Agencies	44,097
Total	93,876

It is expected that hospitality expenditure for the Department will continue at the current rate for the remainder of the year. The agencies are projecting total expenditure for the year of the order of £75,000.

Tobacco

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Harlow (Mr. Hayes), Official Report, column 223, what is the total amount permitted to be spent each year by tobacco companies on (i) advertising, (ii) promotion and (iii) sponsorship; what mechanisms are used for establishing how these amounts are distributed amongst the companies; what sanctions exist for companies (1) exceeding these amounts, and (2) breaking the voluntary agreement in other ways; what systems are in place to verify the information provided by the tobacco industry; and if he will make a statement. [5525]

Mr. Horam: Under the new voluntary agreements which came into force on 1 January 1995, the tobacco companies have undertaken to reduce their expenditure on advertising on media other than TV and radio (TV and radio advertising are prohibited by virtue of the Broadcasting Act 1990) to 30 per cent. in aggregate of the level in the year ending 31 March 1980; with due allowance for inflation, not to exceed on sports sponsorship the level of expenditure in their financial year the greater part of which fell in 1985, and not to spend more than 15 per cent. of their total expenditure on sports sponsorship on media advertising and other promotional material directly related to the events.

The tobacco companies produce annual audited accounts relating to this expenditure so that adherence to the agreements may be monitored. Information contained in these accounts is commercial in confidence.

The tobacco companies have undertaken voluntarily to comply with these principles and have a good record of doing so.

Incubators

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what provisions exist to ensure that all babies requiring incubator-based care receive such care within the hospital in which they are being treated. [6031]

(2) what procedures exist to ensure that incubator-based care can be given in (a) a local hospital and (b) any other hospital if all incubators in a given hospital are already occupied. [6032]

(3) what guidelines his Department issues in respect of the priority awarded for the treatment of babies experiencing anaphylactic shock who are deemed to require incubator-based care by their doctors. [6030]

Mr. Horam: The Department expects that sufficient incubators will be available in all units which provide care for new-born babies. It is the responsibility of local purchasers to ensure that the needs of their local population are met and that suitable arrangements are in place to provide support should facilities in any particular location be full.

Babies who are very sick, or are readmitted to hospital after discharge, would normally be expected to be treated in a neonatal or paediatric unit where a full range of services—including specialist cots for very small babies—would be provided.

Decisions on the treatment of children with anaphylactic shock, including the use of incubators—or specialist cots—if required, are clinical judgments.

Health Authority Finance

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to FDL (95) 59 issued by the NHS executive on 30 November 1995, what are (a) the further recurrent adjustments referred to in line D1 of table 1, and how they are calculated, (b) the purposes for which regional specific levies are made for each region referred to in line 01 of table 1 and how they are calculated, (c) the elements weightings and data used to calculate the 1996–97 target for each health authority at 1995–96 prices referred to in column B of table 3, and (d) the elements, weightings and data used to calculate the 1996–97 target for each health authority at 1996–97 prices, referred to in column H of table 3. [6184]

Mr. Horam: All the information requested is contained in the 1996–97 health authority planned initial cash limits interim exposition booklet which, in accordance with normal practice, has been placed in the Library.

Hospital Sites, Sheffield

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money is expected to be raised by the sale or development of Middlewood hospital, Sheffield; and how much of this will be directed to the development of mental health services in Sheffield. [5772]

Mr. Horam: The Community Health Sheffield national health service trust has not yet determined its, property requirements on the site so the amount of proceeds from any forthcoming sale cannot be determined.

The authority has invested significantly more money in mental health services in Sheffield than the sale proceeds expected from Middlewood hospital.

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how long Fulwood hospital, Sheffield has been closed; what progress has been made on selling or redeveloping the site; what its intended future use is; and how much of any money raised will be directed into Sheffield health services. [5774]

Mr. Horam: Although Fulwood hospital was closed to patients in the early 1980s, it has continued to be used for alternative health care provision until January 1995, when the building was declared surplus to national health service requirements.

Agents and planning consultants are appointed to progress the planning potential and the subsequent sale of the site. It is expected that the site will be marketed early in 1996.

Significantly more investment has been directed into health care services than the expected sale proceeds from surplus sites. Future investment will be determined by the competing priorities and the funds available at the time.

St. Christopher's House, Cornwall

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to investigate services for disabled children in Cornwall, with particular reference to St. Christopher's house. [5848]

Mr. Bowis: St. Christopher's house provides respite care services for children with learning disabilities. The responsibilities for providing such services rests with Cornwall county council. The Department of Health has no plans to investigate these services in Cornwall.

Barnet Health Authority

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital patients were treated through Barnet health authority in (a) 1978–79, (b) 1983–84, (c) 1986–87 and (d) each year since 1989–90 and each subsequent year. [6134]

Mr. Horam: The information is shown in the table. The information relates to patients treated by provider units within Barnet district.

In-patients—all specialities

Infusion Devices

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many incidents reported to the Medical Devices Agency or its predecessor involving (a) infusion devices, (b) over-infusion by infusion devices and (c) fatalities with infusion devices have occurred (i) since the start of 1985, (ii) between August 1993 and November 1994 and (iii) since August 1993. [5962]

Mr. Horam: Since January 1988, when the Medical Devices Agency's computerised database started, there have been 705 adverse incident reports involving infusion devices; 236 of these reported possible over-infusion. In the same period, there were 23 reported fatalities involving infusion devices. Between August 1993 and November 1994 there were six reported fatalities involving infusion devices. Since August 1993 there have been 18 reported fatalities involving infusion devices.

Information prior to January 1988 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Paracetamol

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many self-poisoning episodes with paracetamol occurred in each of the last five years; and how many resulted in death. [6229]

Mr. Bowis: It is not possible to identify non-fatal cases of self-poisoning by the toxic substance involved.

The latest year for which deaths from paracetamol are available is 1992.

The data are published separately for each year in table 10 of "Mortality statistics: injury and poisoning, England and Wales", series DH4, copies of which are available in the Library.

GP and Consultant Guidance

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review circular EL (91) 84. [6230]

Mr. Malone: None.

Research Projects, Sunderland

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all Department of Health funded pilots, trials and research studies which have been conducted since 1989 in (a) the city of Sunderland, (b) Wearside district and (c) Sunderland health authority identifying (i) the title, summary and duration of the pilot/trial, (ii) target population and total number of participants and (iii) whether each pilot or research finding was published indicating the date of publication; and if he will give details of all other non-Department of Health research bodies or other organisations involved in each pilot, trial or research scheme. [6307]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. George Bedell, chairman of Sunderland district health authority, for details of any Sunderland district health authority projects.

Mental Health

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the reports that he received by 30 November from regional directors of the NHS executive relating to health authorities' purchasing plans for mental health services. [6747]

Mr. Bowis: An announcement will be made in due course.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the arrangements for making payments out of the mental health challenge fund. [6746]

Mr. Bowis: An announcement will be made in due course.

London Ambulance Service

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the London ambulance service. [7357]

Mr. Dorrell: I have approved the application for national health service trust status from the London ambulance service. It will become operational as an NHS trust from 1 April 1996.

Population Statistics

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current population of (a) South Hams, (b) the South West, (c) Greater London and (d) Bristol. [6591]

Mr. Horam: The latest available resident population estimates relate to mid-1994. The estimated populations of the requested areas are as follows:

	Thousands
Greater London	6,966.8
South-west (standard region)	4,795.7
Bristol (local authority)	399.2
South Hams (local authority)	78.8

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the accuracy of the population figures produced for (a) the South west and (b) the United Kingdom as a whole, produced as part of the last census. [6587]

Mr. Horam: Research into the accuracy of the population figures from the 1991 census in Great Britain were carried out as the results became available. Details are given in the 1991 census validation survey coverage report, copies of which are available in the Library. The published population estimates for 1991 and later years for local and health authorities are based on the 1991 census but include adjustments for estimated coverage error in the census. The 1991 census in Northern Ireland and the population estimates based on it are the responsibility of my hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the population is (a) male and (b) female. [6808]

Mr. Horam: The latest available population estimates relate to mid-1994. The estimated percentage are: male 49 per cent. female 51 per cent.

Census Questions

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which areas he has chosen for the proposed new census forms pilot study; when the pilot study will take place; and if there is to be an Irish category in the ethnic origin question. [4705]

Mr. Horam: A thorough operational trial of various options being considered, for the conduct and content of the census being planned for 2001, will be held in 1997. The areas to be included have not yet been decided.

Prior to that, some small-scale tests of particular aspects are being held in various areas according to the questions being tested.

Questions to be asked in 2001 will not be decided until 1998. The feasibility of a number of suggestions is being considered, including that of an Irish category in an ethnic origin question.

Children's Refuges

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many refuges exist across the country for children who have run away from home or care; and if he will make a statement. [5332]

Mr. Bowis: There are three refuges certified by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health under section 51 of the Children Act 1989 for young people who have run away from home or care.

Departmental Staff (Members' Letters)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many officials he employed (a) full time and (b) part time in his Department in each of the last three years to answer letters sent to him from hon. Members; and what was the estimated overall cost of replying to them in each of the last three years. [5611]

Mr. Horam: Ministers receive a large number of letters from hon. Members each year on a range of health issues. Officials are responsible for contributing to replies relating to areas of their responsibility. Due to the large volume of letters received, and the wide variety of subjects raised, it is not possible to quantify the involvement of officials or the overall cost of replying to letters from hon. Members.

Residential Property

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the annual cost of maintaining the Queen Mary's nurses home, Page street, Westminster. [5878]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Sir William Staveley, chairman of North Thames regional health authority, for details.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many residential properties are owned by (a) the national health service and (b) national health service trusts; and how many are currently vacant; [5881]

(2) what plans he has to publish the NHS estates survey into residential property held by the national health service and national health service trusts. [5946]

Mr. Horam: The national health service residential estate has in its ownership approximately 12,000 houses and flats.

A survey undertaken in December 1992 identified that approximately 1,800 NHS houses and flats were vacant. The survey did not separately identify those properties in ownership of NHS trusts and other NHS authorities.

A further survey is now being undertaken. It is expected that the results will be available early in 1996.

Mixed-sex Wards

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints about mixed-sex wards his Department has received in each of the last five years. [6584]

Mr. Horam: We have no accurate records of the number of complaints received.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recommendations have been made by his Department and the NHS executive to local health authorities and trust hospitals about the temporary use at a time of bed shortage of single-sex wards as mixed-sex wards in NHS hospital, and what information is gathered from health authorities about such temporary arrangements; [6583]

(2) what recommendations have been made by his Department and the NHS executive to local health authorities and trust hospitals about mixed sex wards in NHS hospitals; and what information is gathered from health authorities about mixed sex wards in NHS hospitals. [6582]

Mr. Horam: Under the patients charter hospitals are expected to treat patients with dignity and respect for their cultural and religious beliefs. In addition a new standard in the revised patients charter issued in January states:

> "Except in emergencies, you have a right to be told before you go into hospital whether it is planned to care for you in a ward for men and women. In all cases, you can expect single sex washing and toilet facilities. If you would prefer to be cared for in single sex accommodation (either in a single sex ward or "bay" area within a larger ward which offers equal privacy) your wishes will be respected whenever possible.
> There may be some cases, particularly emergencies, where a hospital cannot provide single sex accommodation. This is most likely to arise if you need to be looked after by a specialist nurse in an intensive care ward or in an observation space unit. It is also possible that single sex accommodation may not be available at the time proposed for your admission. If this is the case, you have the choice of accepting the immediate admission or of waiting for single sex accommodation to become available."

Guidance on the revised patients charter was given in HSG(95)13 issued on 3 March 1995. The Department does not collect information centrally on mixed-sex wards.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from medical professionals and patients' representatives regarding mixed-sex wards in NHS hospital. [6581]

Mr. Horam: We have received a small number of representations from patients' representatives but are not aware of any from health professionals.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if mixed-sex wards are being installed as part of new hospital facilities in the process of design and installation. [6585]

Mr. Horam: No. Modern wards are not designated as mixed-sex wards during design stage.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new mixed-sex wards have been created in NHS hospitals in the last 10 years also expressing the data as a percentage of the total number of (i) new hospital wards and (ii) all hospitals wards. [6586]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

Hospital Ward Survey

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to publish the survey undertaken by the NHS on hospital wards; which parties have been consulted as part of this survey; and if he will make a statement. [6580]

Mr. Horam: The results of the survey will be published when the final report is received. The survey was voluntary and was sent to all health authorities and trusts in two national health service regions, West Midlands region and North and West region.

Food Safety

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to initiate a review of appeals procedures contained in the Food Safety Act 1990 and the 1990 Food Hygiene (Amendment) Regulations, following the Lanark Blue Cheese case. [6590]

Mr. Horam: The Government will consider carefully the implications of this judgment for the procedures for handling such cases in the future and will be taking this into account in the review which has been initiated of the codes of practice, made under section 40 of the Food Safety Act 1990, for enforcement authorities early in 1996.

Spongiform Encephalopathies

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into (i) methods of treatment for spongiform encephalopathy, (ii) human incubation of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease, (iii) the public health risks of bovine spongiform encephalopathy and (iv) the risk of transfer of Creutzfeldt Jakob disease arising from blood transfusion; [6951]

(2) what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the treatment of spongiform encephalopathy. [6958]

(3) if he will evaluate recent scientific research on BSE, copies of which have been sent to him. [6974]

(4) if he will list the scientific research evaluated by the Chief Medical Officer in respect of the safety of British beef. [6968]

(5) what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the infection of humans with asymptomatic bovine spongiform encephalopathy. [6962]

(6) what support his Department proposes to give to the spongiform encephalopathy research compaign to expand its work. [6945]

Mr. Horam: The Government receive independent expert advice on all matters relating to transmissible spongiform encephalopathies, including bovine spongiform encephalopathy and Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease, from the spongiform encephalopathy advisory committee, chaired by Professor John Pattison.

The committee has advised that there is currently no scientific evidence that BSE can be transmitted to humans or that eating beef causes CJD. Equally, the available evidence does not suggest that CJD can be transmitted via blood.

In February, as part of its continuing work to maintain an overview of research into TSEs, the committee produced a report, "A Summary of Present Knowledge and Research". Copies of the report are available in the Library.

SEAC, at its next meeting, will be considering the priorities for additional research into spongiform encephalopathies and the agents which cause them.

The Department has not received a formal approach from the spongiform encephalopathy research campaign, but will consider detailed proposals and any new evidence that are presented.

The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council. The MRC is an independent body which receives its grant-in-aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

In 1994–95 the MRC spent approximately £800,000 on research aimed at unravelling the nature of transmissible spongiform encephalopathies. It is hoped that the research will not only increase understanding of some of the basic biological processes involved in dementing diseases in man, but will also provide pointers to preventative public health measures.

A series of studies also funded by the Department have recently been completed at the Institute for Animal Health, Edinburgh into time-temperature combinations required to inactivate BSE and related agents.

The Department and the Scottish Office jointly fund the national CJD surveillance unit in Edinburgh. The unit monitors and investigates the epidemiology of the disease, paying particular attention to occupation and eating habits, so that any change in the pattern of CJD can be detected. The unit produces annual reports, copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department is conducting strain typing studies on all human cases of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease. [7215]

Mr. Horam: The Department is not currently conducting strain typing studies on all human cases of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the blood of patients inoculated with growth hormone is used in transfusions. [6793]

Mr. Horam: No. Those who have received pituitary derived human growth hormone are excluded from giving blood.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what account was taken of the advisory committee on dangerous pathogens recommendations on the handling of the liver of cattle that may be infected with bovine spongiform encephalopathy in the Chief Medical Officer's advice on eating bovine liver. [6956]

Mr. Horam: The advisory committee on dangerous pathogens guidance relates to the handling of tissue which is known or suspected to be infected with any transmissible spongiform encephalopathy agent in specific experimental or laboratory situations. Any infectivity if present in these circumstances could pose a potential risk and the ACDP advice, based on studies with scrapie, is a sensible precautionary measure.

This is distinct from the issue of liver for human consumption because affected cattle do not enter the food chain. In addition, all evidence supports the view that liver does not transmit the infective agent.

Access Committee for England

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will outline the consultation process that has been carried out in the review of the access committee for England, listing details of organisations and Government Departments that have been or will be formally consulted; [3011]

(2) if he will make a statement about his Department's plans for the continued funding of the access committee for England. [2915]

Mr. Burt: I have been asked to reply on behalf of the Secretary of State for Health.

A working party comprising officials from the Department of Social Security, Department of Health and Department of the Environment is reviewing the committee's future. It is working closely with the committee itself and is also seeking the views of other Government Departments and interested organisations. The working party is expected to report shortly where upon Ministers will decide how to proceed.

Care Programme Approach

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 11 December 1995, Official Report, column 527, how many health authorities and trusts have adopted the care programme approach to date; and how many have not. [6916]

Mr. Bowis: The care programme approach has been adopted in all districts.

GP Prescribing

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of patient compliance on the cost-effectiveness of general practitioner prescribing. [6733]

Mr. Malone: My Department has recently begun to commission studies on prescribing. One of the priority areas is patient adherence or compliance.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a full copy of the protocols on which the Prodigy prescribing trial is based, indicating the medicines listed by Prodigy. [6735]

Mr. Malone: The guidelines used in the trials will be published with the first interim report which is due in mid-year 1996.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the results of the Prodigy evaluation, including changes in health care delivery and health outcomes before any decision is taken on whether to extend it; and if he will list those responsible for evaluating the project, indicating what expert advice will be taken. [6737]

Mr. Malone: Prodigy is a research and development project, which is being independently evaluated by the Sowerby unit for primary care informatics at Newcastle university. Findings and expert references will be published along with the evaluation report. Future decisions on the project will be taken in the light of the research findings.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the GP practices in which the Prodigy prescribing system is being piloted. [6732]

Mr. Malone: It is considered inappropriate, at this stage of the research project, to make public the names of the general practitioners who have volunteered to participate.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the cost of the Prodigy pilot; and if he will estimate the cost of installing such a system for all GPs. [6736]

Mr. Malone: The Department of Health is investing an estimated £1.5 million in the project. In addition, some development costs are being met by the participating information technology software companies. Future implementation costs will depend on the findings of the evaluation and subsequent decisions.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to what extent health outcomes will form part of the evaluation of the Prodigy pilot prescribing system. [6734]

Mr. Malone: The initial phase of Prodigy is designed to test the concept of computer-aided prescribing decision support, the acceptability of such systems to general practitioners, and the impact on their prescribing and patient consultations.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many medicines (a) are listed in the British national formulary, (b) have product licences in the UK and (c) are listed in the choice options in the pilot prescribing system, Prodigy. [6738]

Mr. Malone: Approximately 900 medical substances and 4,000 individual preparations are listed in the British national formulary. There are currently around 17,000 granted marketing authorisations or product licences in the United Kingdom. The Prodigy system currently provides around 600 drug choices, plus an option to access all drugs within GPs' existing computerised systems.

Stillbirths and Deaths in Infancy

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department established the confidential inquiry into stillbirths and deaths in infancy; and how much money was (a) allocated to and (b) spent on the enquiry in each year since it was established, showing separately the sums (i) for central organisation and analysis, (ii) allocated to NHS regions and districts, by region and (iii) allocated for other purposes. [5275]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 11 December 1995]: The confidential inquiry into stillbirths and deaths in infancy was established in 1992. The financial information requested is not available for 1992–93. Information for the following years is as follows:

Amounts allocated to the inquiry, which do not include accommodation, postage and telephones for the central secretariat are:

1993–94 = £1.886 million

1994–95 = £2.107 million

1995–96 = £2.317 million.

Initial allocations to regions for 1993–94 and 1994–95 are not available. Allocations by regions to districts for 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96 are also not available centrally. Initial allocations for 1995–96 are:

	£000

1. Totals may not exactly add due to rounding.

2. Total Expenditure for 1995–96 is not yet available.

Assaults on NHS staff

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many assaults on national health service staff have been reported to his Department in each of the last five years. [6915]

(2) what information his Department collects on assaults against staff. [6917]

Mr. Horam: Only a very small number of assaults on national health service staff are reported to the Department each year, as this is primarily a local management matter.

Government Procurement

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the outcome of his Department's review of measures taken to facilitate small firms' access to appropriate areas of Government procurement in the light of best practice. [6663]

Mr. Horam: It is not the Department's policy to discriminate in favour of large or small companies when letting contracts. The Department's tendering process includes an invitation to all companies, no matter what their size, to bid for departmental contracts. Their bids are subjected to an objective evaluation and the firm offering the best value for money is awarded the contract. A review of these procedures is not, therefore, necessary.

Nurses and Midwives

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list for September 1994 the whole-time equivalent numbers of nurses and midwives in the NHS by each of the former regional health authority areas; [2009]

(2) if he will list the whole-time equivalent numbers of nurses and midwives in the NHS by each of the former regional health authority areas for each year since 1989 to 1993 inclusive. [2008]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 23 November 1995]: The information is shown in the table.

NHS hospital and community health services qualified and unqualified nursing and midwifery staff, excluding agency staff and learners, and general medical service practice nurses, by region

Notes:

[1] Comparisons between 1993 and other years at sub-national level should be treated with caution. Changes over a longer period of time are likely to provide more reliable comparisons.

[2] "SHAs and others" include staff in SHAs, FHSAs and other special authorities.

[3] Learners are nursers on traditional nurse training courses, spending the majority of their time on patient care, and are directly employed by NHS HCHS. Project 2000 training was introduced in 1989 and has gradually replaced traditional pre-registration nurse training. Project 2000 training is predominantly college based, and students are funded by bursaries. Figures for Project 2000 students are headcounts and should not be added to figures which are whole-time equivalents.

1. All HCHS figures are at 30 September of each year, and GMS figures as at 1 October of each year.

All figures are whole-time equivalents, rounded to the nearest 10.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prevention of Terrorism Legislation

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many exclusion orders under the Prevention of Terrorism legislation are still operative; and how many apply to (a) matters concerned with the Irish troubles and (b) other. [5040]

Mr. Howard: Thirty-five exclusion orders under the Prevention of Terrorism Act remain in force. The power to make exclusion orders contained in that Act applies only to terrorism connected with the affairs of Northern Ireland.

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will repeal the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989 following the recent European Court of Justice ruling and the ceasefires. [4808]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 11 December 1995]: No. The recent European Court of Justice ruling was confined to procedural matters and did not question the continued need for the powers in the Prevention of Terrorism Act. We will maintain powers to deal with terrorism—from whatever source—for as long as the threat remains.

Legislative Repeals

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what legislation from his Department passed in the last five years contains provision for statutory repeal or review. [2033]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 27 November 1995]: None.

Missing Children

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give an estimate of the number of children and young people under 18 years who have been reported missing this year and the estimated statistics of missing children for every year over the last 15 years; and if he will make a statement. [5333]

Mr. Maclean: Statistics are not collated centrally of the number of missing children reported to the police, the majority of whom are found within a few days. A National Missing Persons Bureau was established in New Scotland Yard in April 1994 in order to provide a central register and matching facility for vulnerable missing persons, including juveniles, missing for more than 28 days or otherwise of special concern. The following numbers have been referred to the bureau since its opening.

	1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995	1 April 1995 to 30 November 1995
Males under 14	50	24
Males 14 to 17	118	60
Females under 14	48	23
Females 14 to 17	227	137

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what co-operation and co-ordinated action his Department has undertaken with local authorities and the National Missing Persons Bureau to locate missing children; and if he will make a statement. [5334]

Mr. Maclean: The Government established and fund the National Missing Persons Bureau as a clearing house of information on vulnerable missing persons. Tracing missing persons, including children, remains an operational matter for the police service.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current method of categorising missing children; and if he will make a statement. [5335]

Mr. Maclean: Recording missing persons is an operational matter for police forces. A range of information may be kept concerning missing children, including their age, appearance, the circumstances in which they are missing and any particular cause for concern.

Dangerous Substances (Notification)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what regulations govern (a) the holding by fire brigades of lists of premises where significant quantities of pesticides and related chemicals such as sheep dips are stored and (b) procedures for not using large volumes of water in the event of fires at such premises; and if he will make a statement. [5430]

Mr. Sackville: Fire authorities have arrangements, under section 1(1)(d) of the Fire Services Act 1947, for obtaining, by inspection or otherwise, information required for firefighting purposes with respect to the character of premises in their areas. Where premises contain significant quantities of any dangerous substance, the occupier has to inform the local authority under the Notification of Dangerous Substances (Notification and Marking of Sites) Regulations 1990.

The Home Office has issued detailed guidance to the fire service on procedures for using water in the event of fires at such premises.

Departmental Staff (Members' Letters)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officials he employed (a) full time and (b) part time in his Department in each of the last three years to answer letters sent to him from hon. Members; and what was the estimated overall cost of replying to them in each of the last three years. [5620]

Mr. Howard: My Department employs no staff exclusively to answer letters from hon. Members. Answers are prepared by a large number of officials as part of their normal duties. No estimate is readily available of the current overall cost of replies. However, in 1994, Home Office Ministers received more than 21,000 letters from hon. Members.

National Lottery

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the national lottery's effect on leading United Kingdom charities; and if he will make a statement. [4777]

Mr. Sackville: The Government made a commitment during the passage of the National Lottery Act 1993 that they would monitor the income of charitable organisations before and after the introduction of the national lottery. This will have two main elements.

First, the Home Office will be obtaining information from the family expenditure survey to look at trends in individual giving to charity. Early results should be available in spring 1996.

Secondly, the Home Office has announced a research programme which has been developed in consultation with the voluntary sector. It will look in detail at all the main sources of charitable income, and will monitor changes over the three years before the introduction of the national lottery, the year of its introduction and the following two years. Detailed analysis of earlier years and the first full, post-lottery year will be available in spring 1997.

It is still too early to make a definitive assessment of the effect of the national lottery on charitable income, but two things can be said with confidence. First, the national lottery could make available to the National Lottery Charities Board up to £300 million every year to support the charitable, benevolent and philanthropic sector throughout the United Kingdom—in addition to the hundreds of millions of pounds of awards to charitable organisations in the arts, sport and heritage sectors made by the other lottery distributors. Secondly, if people wish to give to charity, the most effective way is to give directly to their favoured cause.

Mr. Abiodum Igbindu

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) who in his Department or the immigration service authorised the disclosure of information concerning the refusal to grant asylum in the United Kingdom to Mr. Abiodum Igbindu; [4851]

(2) what is the policy of his Department in respect of disclosure of information about individual cases, concerning immigration and asylum, to third parties, and what action he is taking in respect of the disclosure of information concerning Mr. Abiodum Igbindu; [4852]

(3) what assessment he has made of the source of the disclosure to third parties of personal details relating to Mr. Abiodum Igbindu. [4856]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 8 December 1995]: Details of individual cases are not disclosed unless applicants—or someone acting on their behalf—have chosen to make public details of their cases and allegations about their consideration. In those circumstances, it is the well-established practice of the Home Office to give information in response to inquiries.

In the case of Mr. Igbindu, the applicant chose to release information to the press. In accordance with normal practice, the Home Office press office responded to media inquiries.

Crime Prevention

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the contacts his Department has with the Prince's Trust in respect of assistance to young people to avoid crime; and if he will make a statement. [5684]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 13 December 1995]: Officials from the Home Office meet representatives from the Prince's Trust from time to time to discuss issues of common interest, including means of preventing young people from involvement in crime.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what practical and financial arrangements he intends to make to facilitate the return to the United Kingdom of asylum seekers whose appeals against removal to a third country are allowed. [6169]

Miss Widdecombe: It is not our practice to provide financial assistance to enable successful appellants from abroad to travel to this country. Other practical issues such as documentation are under consideration.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has for (a) arranging for legal advice and (b) allowing instructions to be given to legal representatives in respect of asylum seekers removed to a third country who are appealing against the decision. [6173]

Miss Widdecombe: Asylum seekers will be advised of their appeal rights before they are removed and how to seek assistance. Arrangements for instructing legal representatives after removal will be a matter for appellants, as is already the case in relation to appeals from abroad under the Immigration Act 1971.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his Department's assessment of the German Government's procedures in respect of a white list of countries in relation to asylum and immigration. [6177]

Miss Widdecombe: Our understanding is that under asylum legislation in Germany selected countries have been designated as "safe states of origin". Designation leads to a presumption that there is in general no risk of persecution and claims by nationals of designated countries may be treated as manifestly unfounded unless the facts presented in individual cases outweigh the presumption. Claims are examined under a shortened procedure with restricted appeal opportunities. Countries which are currently designated as "safe states of origin" are Bulgaria, the Czech Republic, Ghana, Hungary, Poland, Romania, Senegal and the Slovak Republic.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those third countries which his Department regards as safe for the purposes of clause 2 of the Asylum and Immigration Bill; and to what extent the decision on the safety of third countries will be left to immigration officials. [6191]

Miss Widdecombe: We treat each case on its merits in the light of our information about the asylum procedures of the third country concerned. Over 80 per cent. of removals are to France, Germany, Belgium and the Netherlands. Decisions are taken by a unit within the asylum division specialising in safe third country cases.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he has proposed to comply with United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees recommendations of August 1994 on readmission agreements covering refugees sent to third countries. [6193]

Miss Widdecombe: There is no obligation to consult the authorities of a third country before removing someone there on safe third country grounds. The Government support the early implementation of the Dublin convention, which they ratified in 1992, which sets out criteria for determining which European Union member state has responsibility for considering a particular asylum application.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what special procedures will apply in respect of applicants for asylum who have immediate family resident in the United Kingdom. [6170]

Miss Widdecombe: An asylum applicant is not normally returned to a safe third country if his spouse or minor dependent children are already lawfully present here. In such a case, the asylum claim is considered substantively. We have no plans to change this arrangement.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for ensuring that asylum seekers removed to a third country under his certificate will have access to legal advice prior to their removal. [6175]

Miss Widdecombe: Asylum seekers refused leave to enter at a port are advised how to contact the refugee legal centre.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he intends to take in cases where asylum seekers sent to a third country are (a) refused admission by that country and (b) returned by the third country to Britain. [6171]

Miss Widdecombe: In such cases the asylum claim will, as now, normally be considered substantively by my right hon. and learned Friend.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if a person appealing from a third country against a decision by him to send him to that country will be eligible for legal aid for legal advice and for assistance in the preparation and conduct of the appeal. [6174]

Miss Widdecombe: He will be eligible for assistance and representation from the refugee legal centre, which is grant aided by the Home Office, and, subject to a means test, for advice and assistance under the legal aid green form scheme.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he will take to ensure the safety of those asylum seekers who are removed to third countries. [6192]

Miss Widdecombe: We will return asylum seekers to a safe third country only in cases where the proposed requirements in clause 2(1) of the Asylum and Immigration Bill are met. Our practice already complies with those requirements.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what means he expects an asylum seeker removed to a third country to lodge an appeal against the certificate issued by the Home Secretary under clause 2 of the Asylum and Immigration Bill. [6194]

Miss Widdecombe: The same arrangements will apply as apply now for appeals from abroad under the Immigration Act 1971. The asylum applicant will be provided with an appeal form prior to removal. It will be open to him to send the form by post from abroad or to have notice of appeal lodged on his behalf after removal by a person in this country.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which categories of appellants bringing appeals under section 8 of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993 will be affected by changes in respect of giving and calling oral evidence at their appeals; and how. [6168]

Miss Widdecombe: No such proposals have been made, but my right hon. and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor intends to bring forward shortly proposals for amending the Asylum Appeals (Procedure) Rules 1993 in a number of respects.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has in respect of the appeals procedure for asylum seekers removed to third countries in relation to certificates issued by him under the terms of clause 3 of the Asylum and Immigration Bill. [6172]

Miss Widdecombe: We will indicate during the passage of the Bill what adjustments to appeal procedures will be proposed for appeals under clause 3.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what account was taken of the provisions of article 3 of the 1951 United Nations convention on refugees in drawing up measures contained in the Asylum and Immigration Bill. [6176]

Miss Widdecombe: We are satisfied that our proposals are compatible with article 3.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what views were sought from representatives of local government bodies on the implications for them of the Immigration and Asylum Bill. [6478]

Miss Widdecombe: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 14 December, Official Report column 733.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the consultancy report into asylum appeals commissioned by the Home Office last year to which he referred in his oral statement of 20 November, Official Report, column 337. [6332]

Mr. Kirkhope: A copy of the report by KPMG Peat Marwick on the operation of the asylum appeals procedures was placed in the Library on 8 February this year.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applicants seeking political asylum arrived (a) on direct flights from their home countries and (b) on flights that landed beforehand in safe third countries in each of the last three years. [5897]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information requested is not available.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a breakdown of administration costs incurred to date and forecast for the future on PFI work. [5745]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The direct cost of staffing and professional advice for administration of the private finance initiative policy generally is estimated at £230,000 per annum.

Administration costs are also incurred on development of every capital project, whether financed directly or through PFI. These costs are not recorded separately.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide revenue forecasts for the current year and the next five years of expenditure on schemes provided under the PFI. [5746]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 14 December 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 7 December, column 356.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide for schemes so far agreed under the PFI the level of financing costs above the current cost of Government borrowing for the scheme with (a) the highest financing costs and (b) the lowest costs. [5739]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The information is not available in the form requested. It is a fundamental principle when considering schemes under the private finance initiative that what is assessed is the best value for money in providing a specified service, taking into account all aspects of design, building, finance and operation as a unified whole.

Missing Persons

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment the Missing Persons Bureau has made of the benefits of holding data in respect of missing persons before they have been missing for 28 days. [5995]

Mr. Maclean: Details may be notified to the bureau before 28 days where the circumstances in which a person is missing are of particular concern to the notifying police force. It would not be practicable for the bureau to be notified of all such cases, as the majority of missing persons are found within a few days.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for providing the national missing persons helpline with funding for the work it carries out at the request of the police service. [6041]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The Government received an application for funding the helpline when it formed part of the Suzy Lamplugh Trust, and has received a number of other representations suggesting public funding should be provided. There are no plans to provide public funding for the organisation. The helpline may apply to the National Lottery Charities Board and to other sources of funding available to voluntary organisations.

Police Service Strength

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the number of police officers per 1,000 of the population per authority area and the average number of police officers per 1,000 of the population per authority area for each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement; [6244]

(2) what was the number of police officers per 1,000 of the population for each year since 1979 for each police authority area. [6274]

Mr. Maclean: Information on police to population ratios can be found in the appendix to the annual reports of Her Majesty's chief inspector of constabulary. Copies of these are in the Library.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the manpower of each police force in respect of (a) numbers of police officers and (b) numbers of civilian support staff on 1 November for each of the last five years for which figures are available. [6273]

Mr. Maclean: Information on police strength was collected at the end of each month until April this year. Data on police service strength are now provided twice a year. Information for the last five years is contained in the tables:

Police Force (Civilianisation)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his targets for civilianisation of the police force. [6279]

Mr. Maclean: The allocation of staff within a police force is a matter for the chief constable. Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary encourages forces to civilianise posts in appropriate cases, and monitors progress as part of its inspection process.

Fire Safety Regulations

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to introduce new fire safety regulations to comply with the European framework directive and the workplace directive. [6575]

Mr. Sackville: We intend to publish new draft regulations as early as possible next year.

Illegal Immigrants (Employment)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the cost to employers of implementing the proposed sanctions against the employment of illegal immigrants. [6287]

Miss Widdecombe: I refer the hon. Member to the explanatory and financial memorandum to the Asylum and Immigration Bill, published on 29 November.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he plans to introduce to ensure European Community nationals seeking employment in the United Kingdom are not illegally discriminated against as a result of the proposed sanctions in respect of the employment of illegal immigrants. [6289]

Miss Widdecombe: Under the proposals set out in the consultation document which we issued on 20 November, a European economic area passport or identity document would be one of the documents regarded as demonstrating entitlement to live and work in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of illegal immigrants working currently in the United Kingdom. [6288]

Miss Widdecombe: As my right hon. and learned Friend made clear in the House on 11 December, the precise scale of illegal working is unknown. However, the immigration service detected more than 10,000 people working here illegally in 1994.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice he plans to give to employers concerning the proposed sanctions against the employment of illegal immigrants; and what the cost of providing that information will be. [6290]

Miss Widdecombe: As explained in the consultation document issued on 20 November, the Home Office will provide full advice to employers about the new offence and its implications for employers, including leaflets and a helpline number to contact if they have any doubts about documentation presented to them. It is not possible at this stage to provide estimates of the cost involved, but it is unlikely to be substantial.

National DNA Database

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects a national DNA database to be established; which police forces throughout the United Kingdom he would expect to have access to this facility; and when this will include Scottish forces. [5785]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The DNA database currently operated by the Forensic Science Service became operational in April 1995, after enabling amendments to the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 had come into force. All police forces in England and Wales have access to it.

Separate legislation has been enacted to allow the establishment of databases in Scotland and Northern Ireland and will come into force in the first half of next year. We intend that police forces throughout the United Kingdom will in due course have access to all the data.

Public Opinion Surveys

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all qualitative and quantitative research projects and surveys carried out for his Department into aspects of public attitudes and opinions (a) in general and (b) in relation to specific policy proposals in each of the past three years to December 1995, indicating for each project or survey (i) the date on which the research was commissioned, (ii) the amount which his Department spent, (iii) who carried out the research, (iv) the number of people surveyed or taking part, (v) the location and time scale and (vi) which individuals and organisations have been given access to the findings. [5984]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The qualitative and quantitative research projects and surveys into aspects of public attitudes and opinions are in the list, together with the relevant policy area. Most research conducted for the Home Office is published and widely disseminated, and therefore, all interested individuals and organisations have access to the results. The exception to this is research commissioned for internal management purposes. The fee paid to successful contractors is not shown as this is regarded by the Central Statistical Office as a matter of commercial confidentiality.

Knives

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ban the free sale of (a) hunting knives, (b) bayonets, (c) commando knives and (d) other war memorabilia that may be used for illegal purposes; and if he will make a statement. [6010]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 14 December 1995]: My right hon. and learned Friend will consider adding to the list of knives and other weapons, the sale of which is already prohibited, any knife which has no legitimate use and which can be defined in law in a way which satisfactorily distinguishes it from knives which do have a legitimate purpose. So far as war memorabilia are concerned, firearms and ammunition are subject to the normal licensing requirements of the firearms legislation.

Self-confessed Murderers

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many self-confessed murderers remain at large whose precise location are known to his office, the Crown Prosecution Service and the police. [6891]

Mr. Kirkhope: The statistics the hon. Member seeks are not available.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the family of Anthony Robin Fletcher, murdered in London in 1967, about the consequences of their knowing the identity and whereabouts of the murderer. [6886]

Mr. Kirkhope: The Home Office has been in contact a number of times with Mr. Fletcher's son. Officials have discussed the case at length with him and are aware of, and sympathetic to, the family's situation.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met his United States counterpart to discuss the extradition of a self-confessed murderer from the United States of America to stand trial in the United Kingdom. [6892]

Mr. Kirkhope: I will write to the hon. Member.

Commission for Racial Equality

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases have been brought or supported by the Commission for Racial Equality in the last year for which figures are available in cases where bias in favour of (a) white applicants by white employers, (b) black applicants by black employers and (c) Asian applicants by Asian employers was alleged; and if he will make a statement. [6942]

Mr. Kirkhope: This information is not recorded centrally by the Commission for Racial Equality and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will name the members of the Commission for Racial Equality; if he will indicate in each case the date and duration of appointment and the ethnic background; and if he will make a statement on the qualities, experience or other position which made the individual suitable for such appointment. [6940]

Mr. Kirkhope: The posts of commissioner at the Commission for Racial Equality are the personal appointment of my right hon. and learned Friend. They are initially appointed for a two-year period with the possibility of further extensions up to a total of five years.

The current commissioners are:

Name	Appointed	Until
Mr. Herman Ouseley	19 April 1993	18 April 1998
Dr. Raj Chandran	1 January 1993	31 December 1996
Mr. Michael Hastings	1 May 1993	30 April 1997
Mr. Bob Purkiss	1 May 1993	30 April 1997
Dr. Dwain Neil	1 May 1993	30 April 1997
Mrs. Marie Cunnigham	1 May 1993	30 April 1997
Dr. Zaka Khan	1 May 1993	30 April 1997
Mrs. Zahida Manzoor	22 November 1993	31 March 1997
Mr. Moussa Jogee	1 September 1994	31 August 1997
Mrs. Julie Mellor	31 October 1995	30 October 1997
Mr. Hugh Harris	1 January 1995	31 December 1996
Mrs. Jaslien Singh	1 January 1995	31 December 1996

Details of commissioners' backgrounds are set out in the Commission for Racial Equality's annual report, the most recent copy of which was published on 6 June 1995; a copy has been placed in the Library.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 22 November, Official Report, column 215, about the ethnic profile of employees of the Commission for Racial Equality, what assessment he has made of the consistency of that profile with a policy of appointment by merit in the context of statistical likelihood. [6943]

Mr. Kirkhope: I have no reason to think that the current profile is inconsistent with the commission's equal opportunities policy towards the job applications it receives.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases have been brought or supported by the Commission for Racial Equality in the last year for which figures are available against employers on the basis that the ethnic profile of their employees was such as to be inconsistent with the appointments made purely on merit; in how many other cases such a profile was a significant factor in the commission's case; and if he will make a statement. [6941]

Mr. Kirkhope: None of the cases brought or supported by the commission against employers in the last year was on the basis that the ethnic profile of their employees was such as to be inconsistent with appointments made purely on merit.

Information on whether such a profile has been a significant factor in other cases could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter of 9 November, ref 2120/95. [6691]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. David Winnick, dated 18 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about when you will receive a reply to your letter of 9 November.

Your letter was passed to the Director General for reply as he has operational responsibility for the Prison Service. Richard Tilt sent a reply on 11 December.

Choi Chang Hun

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the reasons for refusing the application for entry into the United Kingdom of Choi Chang Hun from the Democratic People's Republic of Korea. [6816]

Mr. Kirkhope: Mr. Choi's visa application was refused on the ground that his exclusion from the United Kingdom was conducive to the public good for reasons of national security.

Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the main responsibilities and duties of inspectors working under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. [6063]

Mr. Sackville: The duties are set out in section 18 of the Act.

Mrs. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many project licences were granted in each severity banding in 1994 under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986; and how the bandings are defined. [6067]

Mr. Sackville: Severity limits are allocated to individual procedures within project licences. Each severity limit is an agreed assessment of the maximum level of pain, suffering, distress or lasting harm likely to be associated with the procedure, taking into account any action planned to mitigate these adverse effects. Limits are selected from a three-band scale of mild, moderate and substantial severity. Procedures in which the animal is unconscious throughout are regarded as unclassified.

The assessment of the overall severity of a project uses the same three-band scale but takes into account the cumulative effect of each procedure; the number of animals to be used in each procedure; the proportion of animals expected to be exposed to the upper limits of severity in each procedure and the length of time that the animals might be exposed to the upper limits of severity.

The overall severity of project licences granted in 1994 was:

substantial: 9
moderate: 513
mild: 395
unclassified: 38

Mrs. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of Stae for the Home Department what plans he has to reduce the current number of inspectors working under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. [6065]

Mr. Sackville: None.

Mrs. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visits by inspectors working under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 were (a) announced and (b) unannounced in each year since 1990. [6064]

Mr. Sackville: The information requested is as follows:

	Total visits to establishments	Visits of inspection to establishments	Visits to departments within establishments (a) announced (b) unannounced
			(a)	(b)
1990	2,829	2,533	1,744	4,703
1991	2,933	2,533	1,809	4,920
1992	3,299	2,784	2,302	4,638
1993	2,984	2,507	2,082	4,157
1994	2,726	2,319	1,535	4,348
1995 (January–October)	2,390	2,063	1,122	3,877

1. The difference between Columns A and B reflects the fact that some visits may be unconnected with inspection per se—for example for the maintenance of scientific or professional skills.

2. The term "departments" at C includes the various units within each establishment visited.

Mrs. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how consistency is ensured throughout the inspectorate when assessing the costs and benefits of animal research procedures. [6066]

Mr. Sackville: The report of the Animal Procedures Committee for 1993 sets out in the appendix II a note by the chief inspector, animals (scientific procedures) inspectorate, indicating how the assessment of benefit and severity is made. A small group chaired by the chief inspector also reviews licences for consistency.

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been spent on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in his Department in each of the last three years. [5572]

Mr. Howard: Expenditure on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in each of the last three years is included in the running cost expenditure of my Department, which is published in the annual report.

Police Recruitment

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions since 1979 he has imposed a freeze on police recruitment; and what was the duration in each case. [5423]

Mr. Maclean: Recruitment of police officers is a local matter for each police authority and the chief officer of police. Police force establishment levels, set by my right hon. and learned Friend, were not increased in the financial years 1993–94 and 1994–95. From 1 April 1995, my right hon. and learned Friend has not set establishment levels, and it is now for each police authority to set the strength of its force.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department spent on official hospitality in 1994–95 and the financial year to date; and what is the 1995–96 projected budget for official hospitality. [5590]

Mr. Howard: In 1994–95, the cost of hospitality in my Department, including its executive agencies, was £27,468. This differs from the provisional figure given in my answer of 1 May, Official Report, column 94. That figure—£48,293—has been revised on the basis of subsequent further analysis which revealed that some expenditure originally, and provisionally, classified as hospitality should have been classified as other administrative costs. Expenditure on hospitality for the financial year to date is £27,558.

The projected budget for 1995–96 is £60,570.

Hong Kong (Key Persons Scheme)

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria are used to determine the granting of right of abode status to Hong Kong citizens under the 50,000 key persons scheme; who determines such applications; and what right of appeal exists against refusal. [5846]

Mr. Kirkhope: Applications under the scheme are assessed in accordance with the criteria set out in the British Nationality (Hong Kong) (Selection Scheme) Order 1990—statutory instrument No. 2292—and Hong Kong (British Nationality) (Amendment) Order 1993—statutory instrument No. 1789. Points are scored for age, experience, education and training, proficiency in the English language, connections with the United Kingdom, public and community service, and special circumstances. Applications are considered by the governor, who makes recommendations to my right hon. and learned Friend. The Secretary of State is obliged to register as British citizens those recommended by the governor unless he has reason to believe that the person concerned is not of good character. There is no right of appeal but the Governor is always willing to consider any representations made about his decisions.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 5 December, Official Report, column 213, how many of the applicants for right of abode status in the United Kingdom under the key persons scheme have been approved. [5867]

Mr. Kirkhope: As at 9 December, 48,119 principal applicants had been registered as British citizens under the scheme.

Operation Charm

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will give details of animal products seized by the Metropolitan police in Operation Charm; and how many people were arrested; [5446]

(2) if he will give details of those premises raided by the Metropolitan police in Operation Charm and the names and nationalities of people arrested. [5452]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that, in the most recent phase of Operation Charm, a property in west London was searched on 30 November and over 1,000 items believed to contain derivatives of species protected under the convention on international trade in endangered species were seized. The species protected under CITES include tiger, bear, rhinoceros, saiga antelope, tortoise, cobra and pangolin. It is not normal practice to identify any individuals concerned at this stage in proceedings.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about the cloning of mobile telephones. [5472]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend has received a number of representations from hon. Members, the telecommunications industry and members of the public about both the cloning of mobile telephones and mobile telephone fraud in general.

In order to help combat the problem of cloning, the industry and government study group on mobile phone fraud, which was set up by my hon. Friend the Minister for Science and Technology in June and reported in October, recommended that the range of offences under section 42 of the Telecommunications Act 1984 should be extended. This recommendation is currently receiving careful consideration.

Identity Cards

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many responses he received in relation to his Green Paper concerning identity cards; if he will provide a statistical breakdown of respondents and views in a similar form to that published by the Data Protection Registrar; when he expects to introduce proposals on the introduction of an identity card; and if he will make a statement. [5344]

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Tottenham (Mr. Grant) on 13 December at columns 659–60.

Criminal Records

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish the White Paper on improving the system of disclosing police criminal records. [5135]

Mr. Maclean: We expect to publish the White Paper within the next few months.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many responses he received in relation to his Green Paper, Cm. 2319; when he expects to introduce proposals to allow the wider disclosure of criminal records; and if he will make a statement. [5343]

Mr. Maclean: Some 180 responses were received to the Green Paper "Disclosure of Criminal Records for Employment Vetting Purposes", Cm. 2319. We expect to publish a White Paper within the next few months, which will set out proposals for new arrangements.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what data are held by his Department in respect of the number of enforced subject access requests to criminal records; what plans he has to introduce legislation to cover the practice of enforced subject access to criminal records; if he will list the risks his Department has assessed in respect of reliance on enforced subject access; what plans he has to notify foreign embassies based in the United Kingdom in respect of these risks; and if he will make a statement. [5347]

Mr. Maclean: Applicants exercising their right under the Data Protection Act 1984 to access to criminal records are not required to give reasons. It is not therefore possible to estimate the number of requests which are "enforced", whether by employers, foreign embassies or others. The Government will be publishing a White Paper within the next few months which will propose new arrangements for access to criminal records.

Fingerprint Computer System

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fingerprint records will eventually be stored in the Lockheed Martin fingerprint computer system based in Florida; what steps he has taken to ensure that the United States authorities cannot use their powers to access the fingerprints of Untied Kingdom citizens stored on the system; by what means he would be informed if such actions took place; and if he will make a statement. [5345]

Mr. Maclean: The computer system in question is controlled by the AFR Consortium of 33 police forces, and it is for the member forces to administer it in accordance with the relevant legal provisions, including the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 and the Data Protection Acts. I understand from the AFR Consortium that there are now about 2.7 million sets of fingerprint images on the system, and that it is expected that about 3 million sets will eventfully be stored on the system, which is located in Tacoma, Washington State, not Florida. It is believed that there are no powers under which the fingerprints stored on the system could be accessed by the United States authorities. If the United States authorities require access to images of fingerprints held by the police service in the United Kingdom, reciprocal arrangements exist under which they may apply to the national identification service for copies.

Knife-related Assaults

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many knife-related assaults were recorded in nightclubs in the last year; and how many of those assaults caused fatal injury. [4779]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Operation Whitewash

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to receive a report by the Hampshire police inquiry Operation Whitewash; and if he will make a statement. [5358]

Mr. Maclean: We have not requested any such report.

Criminal Offences

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of recorded criminal offences in (a) 1979, (b) 1985 and (c) the latest year for which figures are available. [5136]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is published in table 2.2 of "Criminal statistics, England and Wales 1994", Cm 3010. The latest information for the 12 months to June 1995 is published in Home Office statistical bulletin 19/95. Copies of both these publications are available in the Library.

Data Protection

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answers of 7 December, Official Report, column 362, what discussions he plans with the Secretary of State for Health and the Secretary of State for Social Security before the publication of his Department's review of the Office of Data Protection Registrar. [5892]

Mr. Sackville: We have no problems at present for discussions on the review with my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Health and for Social Security. Should such discussions be needed, I shall have them. All Departments will be involved in discussions on the implementation of the European Union data protection directive.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Student Loans

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer on 7 December, Official Report, column 396, if she will provide a breakdown of how the provisional assumptions as to net savings arising from the introduction of subsidised private sector loans have been calculated, indicating (a) the annual number of eligible students taking out subsidised private sector loans and (b) the level of public sector subsidy per annual loan. [5776]

Mr. Forth: As I made clear in my answer of 7 December, the figures for the net savings that would arise from the introduction of subsidised private sector loans to students were provisional. However, they were based on the assumption that by 1998–99 some 25 per cent. of eligible students would be taking out private sector loans.

Colleges (VAT)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much VAT has been paid by (a) sixth form colleges and (b) further education colleges in each year since 1991. [4536]

Mr. Paice: Information on the payment of VAT by colleges in the further education sector is not held centrally.

Chauffeur-driven Cars

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the cost of chauffeur-driven cars used by her Department was in each of the past five years. [5851]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested in respect of the former Department for Education and the former Employment Department is contained in the following table:

Year	Employment Department £	Department for Education £
1990–91	201,910	134,191
1991–92	222,886	241,215
1992–93	261,151	217,197
1993–94	287,476	288,121
1994–95	282,851	274,377

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the total expenditure on (a) buildings, (b) furniture and (c) uniforms by the former Department of Employment since 1979 for each region. [5356]

Mr. Robin Squire: No information is available before the 1991–92 financial year. The following table gives total expenditure on (a) buildings, (b) furniture and (c) uniforms for the former Department of Employment group from 1991–92.

Total expenditure for the financial years from 1991–92 to 1995–96

Special Advisers

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) special advisers and (b) press or public relations officers are employed by her Department; and what is the total annual salary bill for (a) and (b) above. [5291]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department employs two special advisers and 18 press officers. The salaries for special advisers are negotiated individually, in relation to their previous earnings and are confidential. They are, however, normally paid on a special advisers' salary spine of 34 points ranging from £19,503–£67,609. Appointments are non-pensionable and the salary spine reflects this. The annual salary bill for the press officers is some £532,000.

Teachers Redundancies

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has had regarding teacher redundancies for the year 1995. [7010]

Mr. Robin Squire: Several letters on this subject have been received in the Department.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if she will provide revenue forecasts for the current year and the next five years of expenditure on schemes provided under the PFI; [5712]

(2) if she will provide for schemes so far agreed under the PFI the level of financing costs above the current costs of Government borrowing for the scheme with (a) the highest financing costs and (b) the lowest costs. [5713]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 14 December 1995]: Decisions on spending in education are for the institutions of local authorities concerned. That information, therefore, is not held centrally. For PFI in the Employment Service, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 6 December, Official Report, column 311. It is a fundamental principle when considering schemes under the private finance initiative that what is assessed is the overall best value for money over the whole life of the project. It is not possible, therefore to provide information about the financing costs of any scheme in the form requested.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will provide a breakdown of administration costs incurred to date and forecast for the future on PFI work. [5711]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The Department has a dedicated private finance division employing six staff full-time. Costs to date for the division, which was established as a separate unit in June, have amounted to some £106,000 and are budgeted to amount to £223,000 for 1995–96 in total. The budget, both for 1995–96 and for future years, will be kept under review in line with the work load. In addition, staff in the further and higher education and youth training and schools directorates and the Employment Service work on a part-time basis to encourage private finance in their specialist areas. The information directorate also includes the private finance initiative within its portfolio. Costs for such part-time work are not accounted for separately.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for the academic year 1994–95 for each school covered by the assisted places scheme in descending order what sums the school received from the scheme, how many pupils were covered by the scheme at each school, the total numbers of pupils on the school's roll and the proportion of the school's roll made up of pupils covered by the scheme; what level of fees was charged for pupils covered by the scheme at each school; and what sums were received by each school under the scheme. [5871]

Mrs. Gillan [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The information is contained in a number of tables, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Universities (Staff:Student Ratio)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the average staff:student ratio in the United Kingdom university system (a) in the current year, and (b) in each of the past 15 years. [6551]

Mr. Forth: Information on the student:staff ratio in higher education institutions in England for the years 1990–91 to 1993–94 are as follows:

1990–91: 13:4

1991–92: 14:6

1992–93: 15:6

1993–94: 16:5

Information on the same basis for earlier years is not available.

Postgraduate Students

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many postgraduate students in United Kingdom universities are (a) from the United Kingdom, (b) from other European Union countries, and (c) from other countries. [6549]

Mr. Forth: Figures for the academic year 1994–95 show that as at 31 December 1994 there were 290,000 full-time and part-time postgraduate students in UK higher education institutions—including the Open University—of whom 80 per cent. were domiciled in the United Kingdom, 6 per cent. were from other European Union countries and 14 per cent. were from other countries.

Nursery Schools

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many staff work in maintained nursery schools; and how many have qualified teacher status; [6526]

(2) what is the current ratio of staff to children in state nursery schools. [6525]

Mr. Robin Squire: In January 1995, the latest date for which information is available, the pupil: teacher ratio in maintained nursery schools in England was 19.41:1; the pupil:staff ratio was 8.8:1. There were 1,596 full-time equivalent teaching staff, of whom 1,577 were qualified and, in addition, there were 1,901 full-time equivalent nursery assistants.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in what circumstances local education authorities may institute a system of charging for nursery provision in (a) nursery classes in schools (b) and nursery schools; which local education authorities currently do this; and what are the scales of charges. [6432]

Mr. Squire: Education, including nursery provision, offered by any grant-maintained or local education authority maintained school must by law be free of charge if it takes place wholly or mainly during school hours. Independent and privately run nursery schools may set whatever level of charges they consider to be appropriate.

Undergraduate Students

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many United Kingdom undergraduate students there are in United Kingdom universities in the current academic year; and how many she forecasts will be studying at United Kingdom universities in each of the next three years. [6550]

Mr. Forth: We do not yet have comprehensive figures on the number of undergraduate students in the United Kingdom in the current academic year. Our best estimate is based on the November 1995 Budget projection, which took account of latest data available from the universities and colleges admissions services—UCAS—and from local education authorities. This projects 1.119 million full-time equivalent United Kingdom domiciled undergraduate students, both full-time and part-time, in United Kingdom institutions in the current academic year.

The projected numbers for the three subsequent academic years are 1.112 million, 1.116 million and 1.138 million.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many undergraduate students in United Kingdom universities are (a) from the United Kingdom, (b) from other European Union countries, and (c) from other countries. [6548]

Mr. Forth: Figures for the academic year 1994–95 show that as at 31 December 1994 there were 1,213,000 full-time and part-time undergraduate students in UK higher education institutions, including the Open University, of whom 92 per cent. were domiciled in the UK, 4 per cent. were from other European Union countries and 4 per cent. were from other countries.

Nursery Vouchers

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is her policy in respect of the role for Capita Managed Services Ltd. in the inspection of the nursery voucher scheme. [6044]

Mr. Robin Squire: Capita Managed Services Ltd. has a contract to administer the issue and redemption of vouchers in phase one of the nursery education voucher scheme. The company will not exercise any judgment about the quality of provision in institutions which apply to redeem vouchers.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if nursery vouchers will be issued on a termly basis. [6280]

Mr. Squire: Nursery vouchers will be issued termly.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of how children with special needs will be affected by the nursery voucher scheme. [6281]

Mr. Squire: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Nottingham, East (Mr. Heppell) on 13 December, Official Report, columns 978–79.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the cost has been of promoting and explaining the nursery voucher scheme. [6282]

Mr. Squire: The cost to date for publicising and explaining the nursery voucher scheme to parents and providers is some £150,000.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many extra nursery places she expects the nursery voucher scheme to create. [6283]

Mr. Squire: The number of additional places created through the nursery voucher scheme will depend on the response of providers to parental demand. I am confident that providers of all types, either alone or in partnership with each other, will satisfy parental demand over time, given the extra funding which the voucher scheme provides.

Academic Standards

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the academic standard of (a) five GCSE passes at grades a–c and (b) the French Baccalaureat. [6045]

Mr. Paice: Even if such comparisons could reliably be made, there would be little to be gained by trying to compare standards in an examination taken by 16-year-olds in England with an examination taken by 18-year-olds in France.

School Budgets

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to raise the level of the potential schools' budget from 85 per cent. to 100 per cent. for (a) all schools and (b) by category of school. [6124]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Government have no plans at present to raise the proportion of the potential schools budget which must be delegated to schools by local education authorities. This was, however, one of the several options in respect of voluntary aided schools identified in the consultation paper issues on 27 October, the responses to which are still being considered.

Captial Spending

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what amounts have been requested by way of capital spending in 1996–97 (a) by each local education authority and (b) in England as a whole. [6476]

Mrs. Gillan: The following table shows the size of 1996–97 bids for annual capital guidelines by each local education authority in England.

I shall be making an announcement on 1996–97 education ACG totals for each LEA in England shortly.

Nursery Education

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of three and four year-olds currently receive state nursery education; and what are the equivalent figures for France and Germany. [6284]

Mr. Robin Squire: International comparisons of participation in education by young children are difficult to make because of the need to ensure consistent definition across countries. The latest available information on three and four-year-olds participating in public and private education is shown in the following table. Separate participation rates for state nursery education only are not available.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the educational benefit a child receives from nursery education. [6285]

Mr. Squire: There is a widespread acknowledgement, based on evidence from research studies in the United States and this country, that children benefit from good quality nursery education in primary education and beyond.

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the cost to the Employment Service of implementing the proposed sanctions against employing illegal immigrants. [6286]

Mr. Forth: The provisions of the Asylum and Immigration Bill and the related Home Office consultation document on the prevention of illegal working do not propose additional functions or duties for the Employment Service.

Small Firms

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the outcome of her Department's review of measures taken to facilitate small firms' access to appropriate areas of Government procurement in the light of best practice. [6660]

Mr. Paice: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to her by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade today.

Equal Opportunities Commission

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make it her policy to abolish the Equal Opportunities Commission. [6807]

Mrs. Gillan: No.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many members currently serve on the Equal Opportunities Commission; and how many of these are (a) men and (b) women. [6803]

Mrs. Gillan: At present, there are 11 commissioners. Eight are women and three are men.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many and what percentage of the employees of the Equal Opportunities Commission are (a) male and (b) female. [6801]

Mrs. Gillan: A total of 30—17.6 per cent.—of the commission's employees are men and 140—82.4 per cent.—are women.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the total level of public funding for the Equal Opportunities Commission in (a) the current and (b) the next financial year. [6805]

Mrs. Gillan: The Equal Opportunities Commission's grant in aid for 1995–96 is £6,156,000. In 1996–97 grant in aid is £5,820,650.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the individuals who currently serve on the Equal Opportunities Commission, indicating in each case the date and duration of their appointment, together with any other relevant positions which they hold, and the basis of the experience or qualification on which that appointment was made. [6804]

Mrs. Gillan: The information is set out in the following table:

Name	Other relevant positions	Date appointed	Appointment expires
Kamlesh Bahl	Consultant; Lawyer	14 June 1993	13 June 1996
Diane Brittan	Chair, Community Industry; Deputy Chair, Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority	1 January 1988	31 December 1996
Joan Stringer	Assistant Principal, Robert Gordon University, Aberdeen, member of the Higher Education Quality Council	18 April 1995	17 April 1998
Robert Fleeman	Director, Fleeman Cooper and Smaller Businesses Advisory Services Ltd; Industrial Tribunal member	1 December 1994	30 November 1997
Richard Grayson	Retired BP Company Secretary; member CBI Companies Committee	1 December 1994	30 November 1997
Noreen Bray	Director, Good Relations Ltd	1 September 1990	31 August 1996
Cecilia Wells	Consultant in Human Resource Management	1 January 1991	31 December 1996
Anne Gibson	National Officer, Union for Manufacturing, Science and Finance	1 May 1991	30 April 1997
Mary Berg	Industrial Economist	13 June 1994	12 June 1997
Peter Smith	General Secretary, Association of Teachers and Lecturers	13 June 1994	12 June 1997
Elizabeth Symons	General Secretary, Association of First Division Civil Servants; member of the Employment Appeal Tribunal	1 November 1995	31 October 1998

Appointments are made by the Secretary of State on the basis of a candidate's overall fitness to serve a Commissioner.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment to what extent the Equal Opportunities Commission operates an equal opportunities policy; and to what extent the employee gender profile is taken into account in this matter. [6802]

Mrs. Gillan: The Equal Opportunities Commission operates an equal opportunities policy and keeps it under review. An equal opportunity statement is placed in all advertisements for posts. The commission's recruitment practices are designed to ensure that no groups are unfairly excluded from applying for posts and that appointments are made solely on merit.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many cases in the last year for which figures are available were brought or supported by the Equal Opportunities Commission in which discrimination was alleged against (a) women and (b) men. [6806]

Mrs. Gillan: In 1995 the Equal Opportunities Commission brought or supported 94 cases, of which 82 alleged discrimination against women and 12 alleged discrimination against men.

DEFENCE

Boarding School Allowance

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the Service Children's Education Authority to complete its review of whether the Quantock school, Taunton, is suitable to remain on the MOD admissible schools list. [6178]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 11 December 1995, Official Report, column 478–79). It is expected that the review of the pastoral care at Quantock school by the Service Children's Education Authority will be completed by 31 March 1996.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer of 11 December, what plans he has to bring to the attention of parents of children who benefit from the boarding school allowance the observation of the Service Children's Education Authority regarding the pastoral arrangements of Quantock school, Taunton. [6199]

Mr. Soames: SCEA provides on request an advisory service to all service parents on boarding school provision in the United Kingdom. In the case of Quantock school, Taunton, SCEA will continue to provide a similar service. The final choice of school, however, is a matter of parental choice.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much each school on the MOD admissible schools list received from the service boarding school allowance. [6179]

Mr. Soames: The information is not held centrally and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Batus, Canada

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of (a) fatalities and (b) serious injuries which have occurred at Batus, Suffield, Canada, for each year since 1972; and if he will state the cause in each case. [4932]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 11 December 1995]: The information requested is as follows:

Service Housing

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who will be responsible for maintenance, improvements and refurbishments of dwellings privatised by his Department. [5880]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence's answer of 30 November 1995, Official Report, columns 810–11. The specialist housing division within the MOD, the defence housing executive, will retain responsibility for maintenance, improvement, and refurbishment of properties leased back from the purchaser of the married quarters estate in the event that a sale goes ahead. A sale of the married quarters estate to the private sector will, of course, depend on reaching agreement on terms which satisfy the interests of the services and on a price which properly reflects the public interest.

Defence Evaluation and Research Agency

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many copies of the corporate plan for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency were (a) printed, (b) distributed to DERA establishments and (c) distributed for the use of staff at the Defence Evaluation and Test Organisation at Boscombe Down; [6811]

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of the corporate plan for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. [6809]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive, DERA, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Robert Key, dated 18 December 1995:

You asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many copies of the Corporate Plan for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) have been printed and distributed to DERA establishments and how many, specifically, have been distributed for the use of the staff at the Defence Test and Evaluation Organisation (DTEO) site at Boscombe Down. You also asked if a copy the DERA Corporate Plan would be placed in the Library. Your questions have been passed to me, as Chief Executive of DERA, to reply and I am dealing with both in this letter.

We printed 650 copies of the DERA Corporate Plan of which 420 have been distributed to DERA establishments including 72 which were sent to the DTEO site at Boscombe Down. Copies were also sent to MOD customers. DERA management and staff have been briefed on the content of the Corporate Plan and my management team and I have also given a presentation to the Trade Unions

I am afraid that I am unable to place a copy of the Corporate Plan in the Library as it contains information which is commercial-in-confidence. This year, additionally, the document contains classified information. If, however, you would like me to brief you on the main issues contained in the Plan then I should be happy to do so.

Museum of Army Transport

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had over the possibility of relocating the Museum of Army Transport from Beverley to Ministry of Defence land on Driffield airfield. [6009]

Mr. Soames: The Museum of Army Transport and officials within my Department have corresponded on this matter. Driffield airfield is used by the Army as a training area. Although 7.42 hectares of land are to be sold, that property is tenanted and cannot be made available to the museum; no other suitable land has been declared surplus.

Advertising

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the expenditure of his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title for each year since 1990–91; and what estimate he has made for 1995–96 based on expenditure to date and existing plans. [6562]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Records of newspaper advertising are not held centrally nor is the cost separately identified. The information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Trident

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the Trident D5 missiles that have been purchased from the United States (a) have been test fired and (b) remain to be collected from the United States; [6211]

(2) what plans his Department has to purchase further Trident D5 missiles from the United States; [6212]

(3) when he plans to make an announcement on the purchase of further Trident missiles.

Mr. Arbuthnot: Of the Trident II (D5) missiles that have been purchased from the United States, four have been test fired and 12 have yet to be collected. Remaining missile orders are likely to be placed over the next three years as part of a joint US-UK procurement programme and initial funding to that end is being committed. I have no immediate plans to make a further statement regarding future missile orders.

Low Flying

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the changes made to the guidance to aircrew on ship identification and attack manoeuvres following the review of such guidance conducted following the incident off Oban on 29 April 1991.

Mr. Soames [holding answer 12 December 1995]: The guidance issued to aircrew on low-level flight in the vicinity of shipping was reviewed taking into account the findings of the RAF police investigation into the incident on 29 April 1991. No changes were judged to be necessary.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when a qualification in night-time low flying lapses for Tornado GR.1 aircrew; and how many sorties are required to (a) maintain currency and (b) regain a lapsed qualification. [5177]

Mr. Soames: It is not my Department's policy to release information relating to combat ready status of aircrew.

Queen's Flight

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply of 4 December, Official Report, column 1, regarding the use of the Queen's Flight, if he will list in each case the point of departure of the aircraft and the destination, the sum which was reimbursed and the member of the royal family involved. [5249]

Mr. Soames: In accordance with the wishes of Her Majesty the Queen, arrangements agreed by my right hon. and learned Friend the then Secretary of State for Defence were introduced on 1 April 1995 under which the costs of private flights in aircraft of No 32 (The Royal) Squadron by members of the royal family would be reimbursed to the MOD. The requested details of the six flights since that date are as follows:

Departure point	Destination	Charge £	Member of Royal Family
Sandringham Kensington	Kensington Sandringham	2,540	HRH The Duke of Edinburgh
Aberdeen Heathrow	Northolt Aberdeen	1,470	HRH The Prince of Wales
Aberdeen Teeside	Teeside Aberdeen	3,116	Her Majesty The Queen

Home Base (Absence)

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of pilots, navigators and other aircrew and of ground staff employed at squadron level have spent more than a total of four months absence from their home base in each of the last three years. [5041]

Mr. Soames: The percentage of pilots, navigators, other aircrew and ground crew absent from their home station for more than four months during 1995 is 12.6 per cent., 11.5 per cent., 10 per cent. and 12.9 per cent. respectively. Information for previous years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff (Members' Letters)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many officials he employed (a) full-time and (b) part-time in his Department in each of the last three years to answer letters sent to him from hon. Members; and what was the estimated overall cost of replying to them in each of the last three years. [5612]

Mr. Arbuthnot: No member of staff is employed in my Department exclusively to answer letters sent to my right hon. Friend from hon. Members. Staff throughout the Department are involved in answering letters from hon. Members and others to my right hon. Friend. The overall cost of replying to such correspondence is not held centrally and could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate costs.

Departmental Dwellings

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many dwellings his Department currently possesses; and how many are currently occupied. [5947]

Mr. Soames: As at 30 September 1995, the latest date for which figures are available, my Department owned 74,064 dwellings, of which 59,966 were occupied.

Property Refurbishment

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated cost of refurbishing the flats at 49–144 Stillington street, London SW1, owned by his Department; and what plans he has to make these homes available to service families. [5879]

Mr. Soames: Nos 49-144 Stillington street are blocks of flats providing one of the primary housing sites for the families of service personnel based in central London. A total refurbishment of these blocks is currently being undertaken as part of an on-going upgrade programme.

The Stillington street project is in two phases. Phase 1, involving 48 units, was completed in May 1994 at a cost of £3.5 million. Phase 2, involving 96 units, is due for completion in May-June 1996 at an estimated cost of £6.6 million.

The flats, which were completed in May 1994, accommodate families of service personnel posted to Army units in central London. The remainder of the flats, when completed, will house the balance of the families of the Infantry Battalion who are housed at Hounslow.

Our on-going refurbishment and development plans will enable us to surrender property at Caterham, Uckfield and north London with consequential improvements in operational responsiveness and savings both in travelling time and residence to duty costs.

RAF Finningley (Houses)

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the price paid by the Hodge group to acquire the houses sold at RAF Finningley; and what tendering process was involved. [5882]

Mr. Soames: The surplus houses at RAF Finningley were sold by sealed tender and the price achieved is a matter of commercial confidentiality between the Department and the successful purchaser, Hodge and Co.

Gulf Veterans

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many veterans are planned to be examined under the Gulf veterans medical assessment programme in the next six months; and, of these, how many are planned to receive examination for the first time. [5319]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 11 December 1995]: The numbers to be seen over the next six months cannot be forecast as this will depend on factors outside my Department's control, such as the rate of new referrals and the need for second and subsequent examinations. However, appointments will be available for the 28 individuals currently waiting for initial assessment to be seen by the end of January.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many veterans have been examined under the Gulf veterans medical assessment programme in the last six months; and, of these, how many received examination for the first time. [5320]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 11 December 1995]: A total of 152 Gulf veterans have been examined under the medical assessment programme in the last six months. Of those, 81 were examined for the first time.

Married Quarters

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the average level of rent charged for a married quarters housing stock unit in each of the last five years. [6544]

Mr. Soames: The average weekly charges for service families accommodation owned by the Ministry of Defence are as follows, and are based on furnished accommodation in England, Scotland and Wales and of the most commonly occupied type of accommodation.

	1991–92 £	1992–93 £	1993–94 £	1994–95 £	1995–96 £
Officers	37.17	40.67	41.30	43.12	47.04
Other ranks	23.87	26.04	26.46	27.74	29.68

Additionally, all service personnel pay a contribution in lieu of council tax. Some of the quarters are occupied by civilians and these charges are based on market rents which are assessed by local defence lands service offices.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what methods are currently used to collect rent on the married quarters housing stock owned by his Department; and what plans he has to review these methods. [6542]

Mr. Soames: Accommodation charges for service personnel and entitled MOD personnel are deducted directly from pay accounts, and there are no plans to review this method of payment. With regard to other personnel, various payment methods are employed. The defence housing executive is currently reviewing these methods of payment, with a view to recommending that all should be made by standing order or direct debit.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the marketable value of the married quarters housing stock owned by his Department. [6546]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Our assessment of the value of the married quarters estate under the terms of the proposed sale is commercially confidential.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people employed by his Department lived in the married quarters housing stock owned by his Department in each of the last five years; and how many do so currently. [6541]

Mr. Soames: Total occupancy of the married quarters stock owned by my Department on 31 March in each of the last five years and on 30 September, which is the most recent information available, was as follows:

31 March 1991: 63,351

31 March 1992: 62,929

31 March 1993: 62,687

31 March 1994: 61,230

31 March 1995: 59,776

31 September 1995: 59,549

Information on the number of these quarters which were occupied by service and civilian personnel employed by my Department is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The figures include a significant number of people not employed by my Department, for example, irregular occupants, foreign service personnel, and contractors' staff.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the total rent collected by his Department on the married quarters housing stock in each of the last five years. [6545]

Mr. Soames: Information is readily available only for the last four financial years. The total rent collected for married quarters was as follows:

1991–92: £129.33 million

1992–93: £132.54 million

1993–94: £147.08 million

1994–95: £145.64 million

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the criteria used to set rent levels for the married quarters housing stock owned by his Department. [6543]

Mr. Soames: Accommodation charges for service personnel are recommended annually by the Armed Forces Pay Review Body. It traditionally bases its recommendations on local authority rents, with an abatement to reflect the disadvantages of living in service accommodation when compared with local authority housing. The subject of service accommodation charges is currently under review by the AFPRB as part of the 1996 programme of work. In addition, some of the quarters are occupied by civilians employed by MOD, and their charges are based on market rents which are assessed by local Defence lands service offices.

Service Officers (Business Appointments)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 11 December, Official Report, column 475, what were the restrictions imposed on nine of the applications made under the business appointments procedure; and what period of time elapsed in each case between applications and acceptance. [6596]

Mr. Soames: Seven applications were approved subject to waiting periods. The other two applications were approved subject to bans on the involvement of the applicant in particular projects or areas of work. There is no requirement under the business appointment rules for staff to report to the department whether or not appointments are taken up. It is not possible to say, therefore, what time elapsed between application and acceptance.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 11 December, Official Report, column 475, how many of the former serving officers listed by rank as making applications under the business appointments procedure were approved (a) immediately and (b) within two years of making such an application. [6595]

Mr. Soames: The business appointment rules apply for two years after an individual leaves Crown service. All the officers concerned made their applications within that period of time, and they were informed of the Department's decision as soon as it had been reached. In the shortest case this was within one week of the date of application and in the longest 15 weeks.

Surplus Explosives

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what records his Department holds regarding surplus stocks of conventional explosives brought from RAF Great Orton to Royal Ordnance establishments in Wales for disposal between 1946 and 1948; what current environmental monitoring is conducted by his Department on these disposal sites; and if he will list locations of all land and off-shore sites in and around Wales used for such disposal. [6436]

Mr. Soames: Any surviving records on the operation of RAF Great Orton will be held in the Public Records Office. Surplus munition stocks from this unit would have been allocated for sea disposal at Beaufort's dyke or transferred to the Royal Ordnance factory, Pembrey, south Wales for breakdown and reduction to scrap. Land burial was not an authorised final disposal route for surplus munitions or explosives. The only disused sea disposal sites adjacent to the Welsh coast are off Milford Haven. My Department has no plans to monitor disused munition sea dumping grounds.

Kit Suppliers

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which companies provide (a) uniforms and (b) general kit for the armed forces. [5321]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 11 December 1995]: This is a matter for the Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency—DCTA—under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive, DCTA, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Brigadier M. J. Roycroft to Dr. David Clark, dated 18 December 1995:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the companies which provide uniforms and general kit for the armed forces, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility.

I enclose a list of those companies which supply uniforms and associated general clothing and textile items to the Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency (DCTA) on behalf of the services.

If you require any further information please do not hesitate to contact me.

WALES

Community Action Programmes

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the number of community action programmes and their current costs in operation in (a) Wales, (b) Mid Glamorgan and (c) the Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney constituency. [5424]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information in the form requested is not available centrally.

Cardiff International Airport

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress is being made in approving a bid by South Glamorgan county council for funding for the proposed link road between Culverhouse Cross and Cardiff international airport. [5516]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The 1996–97 transport grant settlement was announced on 13 December. My right hon. Friend approved the bid for preparation costs for the airport access road in full.

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much has been spent on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in his Department in each of the last three years. [5571]

Mr. Hague: Expenditure on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in each of the last three years is included in the running cost expenditure of my Department, which is published in the Welsh Office departmental report 1995, Cm 2815.

Chauffeur-driven Cars

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the cost of chauffeur-driven cars used by his Department was in each of the past five years. [5850]

Mr. Hague: The information is as follows:

1990–91: £155,933

1991–92: £169,514

1992–93: £180,281

1993–94: £189,281

1994–95: £204,579

Theatr Clwyd, Mold

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the likely future of (a) ownership, (b) operation and (c) funding of Theatr Clwyd, Mold following local government reorganisation. [6076]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend will receive advice from the residuary body by 31 December 1995 on the future ownership of land and property including Theatr Clwyd. We expect to publish a draft property transfer order by mid-January. This will set out the transfer arrangements for all property owned by the existing councils. If the unitary authorities falling within the Clwyd county council area decide to set up collaborative arrangements to run Theatr Clwyd, that is a matter for them.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to discuss with Clwyd county council and Flintshire county council the future of Theatr Clwyd, Mold. [6075]

Mr. Richards: On 30 November the Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, North (Mr. Jones), met the hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside (Mr. Jones) and representatives of Flintshire county council, when the subject of Theatr Clwyd was discussed.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received about the future of Theatr Clwyd, Mold following local government reorganisation. [6083]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend and I have received a number of representations concerning the future of Theatr Clwyd.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to use his reserve powers in respect of the future organisation and funding of Theatr Clwyd, Mold. [6080]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend will receive advice from the residuary body by 31 December 1995 on the future ownership of land and property, including Theatr Clwyd; we expect to publish a draft property transfer order by mid-January. There are currently no proposals to use reserve powers.

Residential Care

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to apply the provisions of the Registered Homes Act 1984 to old people's homes owned by local councils; and if he will make a statement. [5957]

Mr. Hague: My hon. Friends the Under-Secretaries of State for Wales and for Health launched on 22 September a review of the regulation and inspection of social services in England and Wales. Views are invited by the end of February 1996 on the range of issues raised in the consultation document, "Moving Forward".

Planning Application (Gwernymynydd)

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations have been made to the local planning authority by the highway section of his Department with regard to the proposed development at Swan lane, Gwernymynydd with particular reference to its impact on the A494. [6079]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: A planning application in respect of a development at Minffordd fields, Gwernymynydd near Swan lane was referred to the highways directorate of the Welsh Office in Janaury 1995. Its response in February 1995 directed that the proposed access from the development on the trunk road should be completed in accordance with the details submitted with the application.

Health Survey

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress has been made in establishing a health survey in Wales as undertaken in the departmental report 1995. [5900]

Mr. Richards: The Welsh health survey was carried out during May and June 1995. Questionnaires were sent to 50,000 people living in Wales and over 28,000 were completed and returned, in line with the expected response rate. The results will be published early in 1996.

Breast Cancer

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what targets his Department has set in respect of breast cancer in Wales analogous to those in "The Health of the Nation". [5680]

Mr. Richards: A target to reduce death rates from breast cancer among women aged 50 to 64 by at least 20 per cent. by 2002 was included in the "Protocol for Investment in Health Gain: Cancers", issued by the Welsh Office in 1991.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the specialist breast cancer treatment centres (a) in Welsh hospitals and (b) otherwise currently serving Welsh health authority populations; and what plans he has (i) to increase their number and (ii) to upgrade them. [6538]

Mr. Hague: There are no designated specialist breast cancer treatment centres in Wales. However, Breast Test Wales refers women with screen-detected breast cancer to the following hospitals for treatment:

Llandough Hospital, Cardiff
University Hospital of Wales, Cardiff
Neath General Hospital, West Glamorgan
Prince Philip Hospital, Llanelli
East Glamorgan General Hospital, Church Village
Llandudno General Hospital, Gwynedd

Additionally, general practitioners are free to refer patients screened by Breast Test Wales to other hospitals, should they wish.

An expert group on cancer services has been established to help health authorities implement the report of the chief medical officers of England and Wales, "A Policy Framework for Commissioning Cancer Services". The group will consider the need to increase the number of or upgrade specialist cancer treatment centres.

House Building

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of (i) council houses and (ii) housing association homes to be built in 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [6471]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Housing associations are now the main providers of subsidised rented housing. I refer the hon. Member to the statement which my right hon. Friend made to the House on Wednesday 13 December, Official Report, columns 1002–17, which set out our estimate of housing association activity in 1996–97.

Smoking

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to ban smoking in all public buildings in his control. [6464]

Mr. Hague: My Department has operated a no-smoking rule for a number of years. Smoking is permitted in designated locations, which are kept under review. I have no plans for an absolute smoking ban.

Departmental Staff (Members' Letters)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many officials he employed (a) full time and (b) part time in his Department in each of the last three years to answer letters sent to him from hon. Members; and what was the estimated overall cost of replying to them in each of the last three years. [5625]

Mr. Hague: Most Welsh Office staff handle correspondence as part of their duties; it is not possible to estimate the proportion of time, or the cost, spent in answering letters from hon. Members.

Public Bodies

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all the public authorities in Wales to which he makes appointments, indicating which were established (a) by primary legislation, (b) by secondary legislation, (c) by royal charter or warrant, (d) royal prerogative and (e) by other means. [6046]

Mr. Hague: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Waste Disposal, Newport

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what inquiries he made of the United States authorities about the past activities of Browning Ferris environmental services before becoming mindful to grant it a licence for waste disposal at Newport, Gwent. [5883]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: None.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales under what powers an inspector holding a planning inquiry may refuse to let a member of the public put questions; and if he will make a statement on the inquiry held into the application by Browning Ferris to operate a waste disposal plant in Newport, Gwent. [5945]

Mr. Jones: An inspector's powers when holding a planning inquiry are contained in the Town and Country Planning (Inquiries Procedure) Rules 1992, SI 1992 No. 2038, or the Town and Country Planning Appeals (Determination by Inspectors (Inquiries Procedure) Rules 1992, SI 1992 No. 2039.

Medical School Applications

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was (a) the number of people making application to enter medical schools, (b) the number and percentage of applicants who are successful and (c) the proportion of each category estimated to be Welsh speaking in (i) each Welsh county and (ii) Wales for the latest available year. [6047]

Mr. Hague: This information is not held centrally. Information on the number of applications and the results may be available from the Universities and College Admissions Service.

Vaccinations

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to publish a report analogous to the recent report from the Secretary of State for Health on the measles and rubella immunisation campaign. [6276]

Mr. Richards: The chief medical officer for Wales has recently written to all doctors informing them that the report "Measles Rubella Immunisation Campaign in England 'One Year On'" is available from the Department. Attached to the report is a summary of the measles and rubella campaign undertaken in Wales. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

Emergency Hospital Admissions

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) on how many occasions Welsh district general hospitals have been closed to new medical emergency patients during the past 12 months; and if he will make a statement; [6540]

(2) what plans he has to ensure the adequacy of provision of emergency medical intake beds during winter months. [6539]

Mr. Hague: This information is not held centrally.

I am committed to ensuring that action is identified to ease the pressure on hospitals as a result of unexpected increases in emergency medical admissions.

My officials met senior NHS managers and health professionals on 7 December 1995 to measure the true extent and cause of the problem and to identify a response. The meeting resulted in agreement on a range of practical measures to minimise this risk of hospitals closing to emergency patients over the coming months.

I will be monitoring the position closely over the next few months.

Child Abuse Report

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of Monday 11 December, Official Report, columns 555–56, what arrangements he made with Nicola Davies QC as regards visiting (a) local authority and (b) private homes and (c) other organisations in her inquiry; how many individuals she met and questioned during the course of the visit to a private organisation referred to in paragraph 11(ii) of her conclusions and recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [6594]

Mr. Hague: Miss Davies QC was asked to examine the relevant papers held by the various agencies concerned. The precise arrangements in respect of that examination were a matter for the examining team and the agencies, including the private establishment referred to in paragraph 11(ii). This was an independent investigation and the precise manner in which it was concluded was not a matter in which I or officials of my Department were involved.

Duffryn House

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the South Glamorgan training and enterprise council concerning the taking over of the Duffryn house conference centre and garden in the Vale of Glamorgan. [6537]

Mr. Hague: None. However, my officials are being kept informed of developments which are as yet at a very early stage. Any expenditure on this project by the TEC would require prior approval by my Department.

Youth Training (Accidents)

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) fatal, (b) major and (c) minor accidents took place on youth training schemes in Wales in (i) July to September 1993, (ii) October to December 1993, (iii) January to March 1994, (iv) April to June 1994, (v) July to September 1994, (vi) October to December 1994, (vii) January to March 1995, (viii) April to June 1995 and (ix) July to September 1995; and what were the numbers of accidents on training for work for the same periods. [6482]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is given in the following table.

Accidents in Wales from September 1993 to September 1995

	Fatal	Major	Minor
Youth training
July–September 1993	0	5	45
October–December 1993	0	4	26

1. Welsh Office figures for trainees have been compiled on a similar basis to those prepared by the Health and Safety Executive for employed persons. However, the Department's figures include a number of accidents to trainees in educational establishments and road traffic accidents which would not have been reportable to the Health and Safety Executive had the individual been employed.
2. Major injuries are classified according to the severity criteria laid down in the Reporting of Injuries Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985 (RIDDOR).
3. The accident figures for the period July to September 1995 are not yet available.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those projects being considered for private finance initiative funding; and if he will give the names of the companies in the consortia bidding for or expressing an interest in each project. [6593]

Mr. Hague: Projects being looked at currently, which have been announced, are as follows: M4 relief road; A465 Heads of the Valleys road; eastern bay link of the Cardiff peripheral distributor road; new general hospital at Baglan; staff residential accommodation, district general hospital, Llantrisant; day surgery unit and mental health development, Nevill hall, Abergavenny; cancer treatment centre, Glan Clwyd district general hospital, Rhyl; community hospital, Chepstow; replacement of radiotherapy equipment, Velindre; OSIRIS, office automation system for Welsh Office.

A £6.5 million plan to build a multistorey car park and an eastbound slip road to the A48 at the University hospital of Wales, was approved by my Department last week. Information on schemes costing less than £1 million is not collected. The names of companies bidding for or expressing an interest in such projects are confidential.

Council House Building

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much cash he has earmarked for council house building in the next financial year in each of the unitary authorities in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [6683]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: For some years, housing associations have been the main providers of new subsidised rented housing and local authorities are encouraged to work in partnership with them.

Capital Borrowing Limits

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the total capital borrowing limit for each unitary authority in Wales for 1996–97. [6985]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The amounts of unitary authorities' basic credit approvals for 1996–97, which allow borrowing for any capital purpose, are set out in the following table. In addition, authorities will receive supplementary credit approvals directed to specific programmes. Full details of these have not yet been finalised.

Basic credit approvals 1996–97

Small and Medium Firms

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the outcome of his Department's review of measures taken to facilitate small firms access to appropriate areas of Government procurement in light of best practice. [6659]

Mr. Hague: My Department is revising its standard tender documentation so that small and medium businesses can identify themselves as such when responding, and has forwarded updated information about contact points for the DTI booklet "Tendering for Government contracts". Written guidance to all departmental staff engaged in procurement includes material specific to the implications of buying from small and medium enterprises. In addition, these staff refer to the DTI publication "Think big, buy small", "Tendering for Government Contracts" and "Your guide to help for small firms". The name of a contact is included in all standard tender documentation.

My Department also liaises regularly with organisations responsible for the provision of business support services. It has strategic responsibility for the business connect service, through which a variety of those organisations will deliver their services to small and medium-sized companies. Business connect is due to be launched in the new year.

European Agricultural Guarantee and Guidance Fund

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the total estimated contribution to the European Agricultural Guarantee and Guidance Fund projects in the current and the next two financial years by his Department. [6986]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The total contribution from the Welsh Office to projects receiving assistance from the European Agricultural Guarantee and Guidance Fund under the objective 5b programme for rural Wales will depend on the quality of those projects and the other sources of funding available to them. However, we have set aside £1,000,000 over the next two years to be used as a source of joint financing.

SCOTLAND

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to implement the expansion of the assisted places scheme in Scotland. [7152]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced on 13 October 1995 that the assisted places scheme is to be doubled in size over time. I am today announcing the plans for achieving that expansion in Scotland.

At present, just over 3,000 children in Scotland benefit from the assisted places scheme. The first new places under the expansion will be created in the 1996–97 school session. Thereafter, the pace of expansion will depend largely on the parental demand and the rate at which Scottish independent schools can provide additional places for assisted pupils. This expansion will provide greater choice for parents, greater opportunity for their children, and will be warmly welcomed by parents and schools alike.

In addition to the on-going consultation with the Scottish Council of Independent Schools, my Department is writing to independent schools to seek bids to increase the number of assisted pupils at their schools and the number of aided places at the St. Mary's music school; to invite schools to bid for day places for children below the age of 10 in integral junior departments of independent secondary schools; to invite more independent schools in Scotland to take part in the scheme; and to seek schools' views generally on how the scheme might best be expanded further over time.

I will be looking in particular to receive bids from schools which increase the number of places for children from families with the lowest incomes and children from deprived areas who would not otherwise have the opportunity of education offered in independent schools.

I intend to continue the present broad framework of means-tested parental contributions towards approved fees. Arrangements for means testing and fee setting are reviewed annually for the purpose of the regulations, and I shall consider any representations on these matters for the reviews in 1996 and subsequent years.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what considerations led the Lord Advocate to conclude that jurisdiction in the Lockerbie case does not extend to all countries whose nationals were lost. [5399]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 18 December 1995]: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate has not reached any such conclusion. Criminal jurisdiction is a matter for the domestic laws of particular countries, but Scotland and the United States are the most appropriate jurisdictions for trial of the two accused, as has been recognised by the United Nations Security Council

Highland Health Board

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 29 November, Official Report, columns 704–5, what was the cash equivalents of the proportionate value as at 31 March on the equipment transferred to the Computing Sciences Corporation Ltd. from (a) the Highland health board and (b) all other Scottish health boards; and if he will make a statement. [5063]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: (a) The cash equivalent of the proportionate value as at 31 March 1995 the equipment transferred to the Computing Services Corporation from Highland health board was £120,000.

(b) The cash equivalents and proportionate values percentage for the other NHS data centres involved, showing which health boards they serve, are as follows:

	£	Per cent.
Northern Computer Services serving Grampian, Orkney and Shetland Health Boards	52,000	2
Maryfield Computer Services serving Tayside, Fife and Forth Valley Health Boards	144,000	6

Dyslexic Prisoners

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of the prison population are dyslexic; and what steps are taken to help such persons with difficulties experienced in educational or training courses undertaken. [4835]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 13 December 1995]: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mrs. Maria Fyfe, dated 18 December 1995:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question relating to dyslexia and the prison population.

I am afraid that the information you seek is not collected centrally. As a learning difficulty, dyslexia is most likely to surface amongst those prisoners taking part in education programmes, but not all prisoners participate in such programmes and even those who believe that they have learning difficulties may not come forward, thereby disguising the true numbers who are dyslexic.

In general, where a prisoner is identified (during induction, sentence planning or through educational or other activities) as having special educational needs, attempts will be made to meet those needs, for example, by providing tuition on a one-to-one basis or by calling in specialist support, if the prisoner is willing to cooperate, and subject to resources being available.

Patient Charges

Mr. George Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was collected within each health board area in patient charges in each financial year since 1990–91; and if he will make a statement. [6153]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The information is set out in the table. Figures have been taken from the annual accounts of health boards and from 1992–93 a combination of annual accounts of health boards and NHS trusts.

Procurators Fiscal

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the level of business undertaken by the procurators fiscal service in each of the past five years, by location. [6040]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 14 December 1995]: As the information requested is lengthy, I shall arrange for the details to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received on the operation of the procurators fiscal service in Scotland in each financial year since 1979–90. [6038]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 14 December 1995]: This information is not available.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many procurators fiscal there are in Scotland, by location. [6037]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 14 December 1995]: There are 49 procurator fiscal districts in Scotland. In some cases a procurator fiscal has responsibility for more than one district and where this is the case the districts have been grouped together.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what further changes he intends to make to the number and location of procurators fiscal in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [6039]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 14 December 1995]: A Crown Office steering group has been carrying out a senior management review of the Crown Office and procurator fiscal service. Depending on the outcome of the review any necessary consultations will be undertaken.

Advertising

Mr. George Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the cost of advertising by NHS trusts and health boards in each region in each financial year since 1990. [6157]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The information requested is not collected centrally.

NHS Trusts (Income)

Mr. George Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the level and percentage of NHS trust income in each region received from non-national health service sources in each year since 1991–92. [6159]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 14 December 1995]: Complete information on NHS trust income from non-national health service sources is not held centrally. The table details the level and percentage of total NHS trust income, by health board area, derived from non-national health service sources in respect of their main health care functions. This information has been taken from NHS trust accounts for financial years 1992–93, 1993–94 and 1994–95.

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many NHS trusts in Scotland have borrowed money from commercial sources and if he will list the sums involved. [6158]

Mr. Forsyth [holding answer 14 December 1995]: Currently there are no NHS trusts borrowing on a long-term basis from commercial sources within the private sector. However some NHS trusts may require the use of overdrafts to cover very short-term working capital requirements.

Dental Services

Mr. George Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the net expenditure on general dental services in each health board area in Scotland in each financial year since 1989–90; and if he will make a statement. [6154]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The information is set out in the table. Figures have been taken from the annual accounts of the 15 Scottish health boards.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. George Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was his Department's net expenditure on administration in each financial year since 1979–80 (a) in cash terms and (b) adjusted for inflation. [6160]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The Scottish Office accounts for its running costs on a gross rather than net basis. The figures for the Scottish Office, excluding Scottish Prison Service, are as follows:

£ million

Year	Cash	1995–96 prices
1995–96	188.3	188.3
1994–95	185.9	191.0
1993–94	188.3	197.1
1992–93	190.4	205.1
1991–92	175.1	196.3
1990–91	153.1	182.4
1989–90	142.0	182.7
1988–89	115.9	159.5
1987–88	109.3	160.5
1986–87	105.2	162.7
1985–86	100.8	160.6
1984–85	95.0	159.7
1983–84	92.0	162.4
1982–83	77.0	142.2
1981–82	74.0	146.4
1980–81	71.0	154.1
1979–80	58.0	148.9

Figures for early years are not comparable to recent figures owing to the introduction of superannuation charges of approximately 13 per cent., which have been taken into account from 1989–90 onwards, the introduction of charges for the occupation of Government offices in 1983–84—which now amount to some £25 million—and various shifts of responsibility from UK Departments to the Scottish Office. The total effect of these changes in accounting practice have increased the figures over the period by an amount estimated in 1995–96 to be approximately £40 million per annum.

Criminal Justice Services Fund

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money was paid by way of the criminal justice services fund to organisations in (a) Inverclyde, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland in each of the past three years; what is the amount budgeted for this fund in 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [4631]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The funding made available by the Scottish Office under the 100 per cent. funding arrangements for the provision of criminal justice social work services in the financial years 1993–94 to 1995–96 in Strathclyde region and Scotland is set out in the table. Allocations by the Scottish Office are not broken down below regional level, and it is therefore not possible to provide figures for Inverclyde. Allocations to new councils for the 1996–97 financial year have not yet been made.

	Allocation
Year	Strathclyde £	Scotland £
1993–94	10,040,122	25,122,495
1994–95	12,209,262	27,606,816
1995–96	12,031,200	28,969,400

Dry Stone Walls

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals his Department or its agencies have to institute a national survey of the state of repair of dry stone walls in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [3793]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 6 December 1995]: I have no proposals to institute such a survey. I am aware from other correspondence on this subject that the Dry Stone Walling Association has indicated to its members that it has asked Scottish Natural Heritage to undertake a national survey. However, Scottish Natural Heritage has no record of any approach from the association.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the funds paid through (a) farming capital grant schemes and (b) agri-environment schemes for the purpose of restoration and repair of dry stone walls in Scotland in each of the last three financial years. [3797]

Mr. Forsyth [holding answer 6 December 1995]: The information is as follows:

	1992–93 £	1993–94 £	1994–95 £
Capital grant schemes	353,557	356,762	187,485

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Departmental Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Attorney-General what is the amount owed to those businesses whose invoices were not paid within 30 days or within agreed contractual arrangements for 1994–95. [6512]

The Attorney-General: The departments for which I am responsible make every effort to settle invoices promptly. The information requested is not recorded and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Attorney-General how many (a) orders and (b) firms are represented by the percentage of invoices not paid by his department within 30 days in 1994–95. [6490]

The Attorney-General: Information is not held in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many illegal immigrants have been expelled in each year since 1979 from (a) the United Kingdom and (b) each separate region within the United Kingdom; [5160]

(2) which country has received most illegal immigrants expelled from the United Kingdom in each year since 1979. [5161]

Mr. Kirkhope: Information on the total number of illegal entrants and persons subject to deportation action who have been removed from the United Kingdom is given in table 1. The data for 1984 onwards show the nationalities grouped by main geographical region. The largest 10 individual nationalities, comprising two thirds of the total, in 1994 are shown in table 2; corresponding data for other years could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Data on nationalities have been given in the absence of statistics on the countries to which persons were removed. Data are also not available on the region of residence prior to removal.

Goods and Services

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department paid to the private sector for goods and services in 1994–95. [6503]

Mr. Howard: The Home Office central accounting computer system shows that approximately £290 million was paid to the private sector for goods and services in 1994–95. This figure includes payments made by the Home Office and the Prison Service agency, the United Kingdom Passport Agency and the Forensic Science Service.

Prisons (Probation Officers)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those prisons at which probation officers are currently based; and how many of these are scheduled to lose their prison-based probation officers as a result of changes being implemented by his Department. [7027]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Dafydd Wigley, dated 19 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about prison-based probation officers.

All prison establishments currently have probation officers working in them on secondment from their home service. Governors are looking critically at how the functions of their establishments are being delivered with a view to improving operating efficiency next year. Until the process is complete and their 1996–97 budgets have been finalised it is not possible to predict how many prisons might reduce or restructure their complement of seconded probation staff.

Learmont Report

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to publish the report of General Sir John Learmont's review of the implementation of the recommendations contained in Sir John Woodcock's report on the escape from Whitemoor prison; and if he will make a statement. [7661]

Miss Widdecombe: My right hon. and learned Friend has today placed a copy of General Sir John Learmont's report in the Library. We are extremely grateful to Sir John, and to Sir John Woodcock with whom the review was undertaken, for their work. The report concludes that in both security and control terms, a

"sea change for the better had taken place at Whitemoor"— paragraph 2.2—and that

"in a period of less than a year the Prison Service has made infinitely more headway in implementing the Woodcock recommendations than it seemed reasonable to expect, and in line with the published timetable. It has made this progress with an optimism and enthusiasm that demonstrates the calibre of the staff at all levels of the Service. All concerned deserve praise for what has been achieved in getting the fundamentals of custody, care and control into better balance"— paragraph 4.6.

General Sir John Learmont has already recommended the appointment of a director of dispersal prisons at prisons board level, and in this latest report he says that this issue needs addressing without delay. The acting director general has today appointed Mr. Philip Wheatley, at present area manager (London north), to be director of dispersal prisons—Frankland, Full Sutton, Long Lartin, Wakefield and Whitemoor—and of HMP Belmarsh, which also holds a significant number of category A prisoners.

Hagdi Elfons Tawafig

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his decision concerning the deportation of Hagdi Elfons Tawafig to Sudan; and if he will make a statement about the refoulement of Sudanese coptic Christians to Sudan. [7157]

Mr. Kirkhope: Mr. Tawafig has been refused leave to enter the United Kingdom and, his appeal having been dismissed, is liable to removal action. The United Kingdom fully complies with its international obligations in relation to non-refoulement.

Police (London)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussion he has had with the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to his policy of combating racial attacks in the Greater London area. [6460]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend meets the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on a regular basis to discuss a wide range of issues relating to the policing of London.

Flights (Criminal Incidents)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many arrests have been made by the police for criminal incidents on in-bound flights to the United Kingdom in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement; [6224]

(2) on how many occasions the police have taken action as a result of incidents on in-bound flights into the United Kingdom in each of the last five years; what has been the nature of the occurrences; and if he will make a statement. [6225]

Mr. Maclean: The information is not collected centrally.

Research Projects (Sunderland)

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all Home Office funded pilots, trials and research studies which have been conducted since 1989 in (a) the city of Sunderland, (b) Wearside district and (c) Sunderland travel-to-work area identifying (i) the title, summary and duration of the pilot/trial, (ii) the target population and total number of participants and (iii) whether each pilot, trial or research finding was published indicating the date of publication; and if he will give details of all other non-Home Office research bodies or organisations involved in each pilot, trial or research scheme. [6305]

Mr. Howard: There have been no major studies confined to the areas highlighted. However, each year, a number of research projects and surveys are conducted on the basis of nationally representative samples. Householders or other persons in the areas mentioned might have been included in these. The data are often confidential to the survey company, so it is not always possible to identify which areas have been surveyed.

Chauffeur-driven Cars

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of chauffeur-driven cars used by his Department was in each of the past five years. [5862]

Mr. Howard: The information in respect of ministerial cars was given in a reply to a question from the hon. Member for Birmingham, Selly Oak (Dr. Jones) on 7 November, Official Report, column 826.

Information relating to use by officials is not collected centrally and I will write to the hon. Member when it has been obtained.

Advertising

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the expenditure of his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title for each year since 1990–91; and what estimate he has made for 1995–96 based on expenditure to date and existing plans. [6570]

Mr. Howard: Information in the form requested would be available only at disproportionate cost. The table gives the aggregated expenditure of the Home Office, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on the space bought in the national press for the period requested. For the reason stated, the figures do not include local press, or the cost of creative and production work.

Knives

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances police officers are permitted to search people for concealed knives; and if he will make a statement on the measures relating to (a) detection and (b) punishment he is taking to deter knife-carrying in public. [6129]

Mr. Maclean: Under section 1 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 an officer may search a person for a knife where he has reasonable grounds for suspecting that he will find one. In addition, under section 60, of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994, an officer of superintendent rank or above may, where he reasonably believes that serious violence may occur and that it is expedient to prevent it, authorise officers to stop any pedestrian and search him for offensive weapons or dangerous instruments. Acting under the authorisation, an officer may stop and search any person he thinks fit, whether or not he has any grounds for suspecting the person is carrying weapons or articles of that kind. The authorisation applies to a specified area for a period not exceeding 24 hours. My right hon. and learned Friend supports proposals in a private Member's Bill which will increase the maximum penalty for carrying a knife in public without good reason or lawful authority under section 139 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988, from a £1,000 fine to six months' imprisonment.

Police Safe Scheme (Warwickshire)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on Warwickshire constabulary's police safe scheme; and if he will make a statement on the practice of making charges for police services of this nature. [6130]

Mr. Maclean: The Warwickshire constabulary's police safe scheme is a new computerised keyholder service which is designed to maintain accurate, up-to-date information about non-domestic commercial and community premises and so enable Warwickshire constabulary to identify and contact current keyholders whenever necessary, promptly and effectively.

Warwickshire constabulary intends to charge initial registration and annual renewal fees in respect of premises registered with police safe.

Under section 15 of the Police Act 1964, the chief officer of police of any police force may provide, at the request of any person, special police services at any premises or in any locality in the police area for which the force is maintained, subject to the payment to the police authority of charges on such scales as may be determined by that authority.

Warwickshire constabulary has made it clear that it will continue to deal with incidents at any premises, whether registered with police safe or not, according to the circumstances and priorities at the time and will perform its duty to ensure that a basic level of action is taken to secure premises if necessary.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 5 December, Official Report, column 216, if he will take steps to ascertain the proportion of persons attending for interviews at the asylum screening unit who have to wait more than (a) one, (b) two, (c) three and (d) four hours. [5960]

Mr. Kirkhope: There are no plans to carry out a survey of this kind. Waiting times vary according to a number of factors, including the purpose of the visit, the type of interview required and, most importantly, the number of people visiting the asylum screening unit on any given day. In response to a substantial increase in the number of callers during the last two months, separate accommodation has been equipped to enable the unit to deal quickly with straightforward inquiries and requests.

Missing Persons Helpline

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what representations he has received on the need for an independent missing persons helpline separate from the police; [5996]

(2) what is his Department's policy in respect of the formation of an independent missing persons helpline, separate from the police. [5997]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 18 December]: Dealing with missing persons reports is an operational matter for the police service. We have no plans to introduce a Government helpline independent of the police, and have received no representations indicating that a separate helpline should be set up.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the role of the national missing persons helpline in respect of the investigations of events at 25 Cromwell street, Gloucester. [5998]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 18 December]: I understand that the helpline assisted police with the identification of victims based on the information it holds on missing persons.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many requests for help the police make to the national missing persons helpline every week; and if he will make a statement on the use of the helpline by the police. [6000]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 18 December]: I understand that there are regular contacts between police forces and the helpline, but that no comprehensive figures are available.

Police (Complaints)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will produce a breakdown of the reasons given for complaints made against the police, in each of the years 1990 to 1994. [6278]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 18 December]: Information on the reasons for complaints recorded by the police is shown in the table. Figures for the Metropolitan police are available only for 1992 onwards.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Pensions Appeal Tribunals

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he is taking in relation to the recruitment of additional staff in the pensions appeal tribunals service in Wales. [5765]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The pensions appeal tribunals do not maintain a permanent staff in Wales. In common with most other pensions appeal tribunal locations, hearings there are attended by staff based in London, the number of which has recently been increased.

Mr. Wardell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the level of service that the pensions appeal tribunals (England and Wales) service provides to appellants from Wales. [5766]

Mr. Evans: The level of service provided to those wishing to have their appeal heard in Cardiff has been adversely affected since May 1995, when the independent tribunal service indicated that it was no longer in a position to allow the pensions appeal tribunals to use its premises in Cardiff. Hearings will, however, resume in south Wales in February 1996, at Cardiff county court. The Court Service is actively looking for additional locations in south Wales to reduce backlogs. Cases from south Wales, where the appellant has indicated that he or she does not wish to attend the hearing, are dealt with at hearing centres outside Wales to enable them to be dealt with more quickly.

Hearings for appellants from north Wales have always been held at Chester. From January 1996, the number of hearings at Chester will be doubled.

My Department keeps the service provided to appellants in Wales, as elsewhere, under review.

Mr. Wardell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the sites in Wales at which the Court Service's pensions appeal tribunals (England and Wales) were held prior to May 1995. [5764]

Mr. Evans: Prior to May 1995, the pensions appeal tribunals conducted hearings at the premises of the independent tribunal service at Oxford house, Hill street, the Hayes, Cardiff.

Small and Medium Enterprises

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what work his Department has done to develop best practice in the publication of departmental procurement guidance material relevant to small and medium enterprises' needs. [6604]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: In June 1995 the Department issued its procurement manual to all departmental purchasing officers. This contains advice on identifying suppliers and directs purchasing staff to seek assistance from trade journals and magazines, business and trade directories, trade associations and professional organisations, the Association of British Chambers of Commerce, local enterprise agencies and small firms organisations such as the Alliance of Small Firms and Self Employed People, the National Federation of the Self Employed and Small Businesses Ltd., the Small Firms Council and the CBI.

In addition, the manual contains comprehensive information about the special contracts arrangement, a Government scheme aimed at helping workshops for disabled persons compete for government contracts.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what progress his Department has made regarding establishing a contact point with responsibility for liaison with relevant business support organisations and taking forward small and medium enterprise related public procurement initiatives. [6710]

Mr. Evans: The Department's procurement unit is the contact point for all such matters. The publication "Government Opportunities" is one way in which contact details are publicised to potential suppliers, including small and medium enterprises.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what meetings his Department has had since May 1995 with organisations representing small firms to review tendering procedures. [6605]

Mr. Evans: None.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what advice has been given to procurement staff on the implications of purchasing from small and medium enterprises. [6606]

Mr. Evans: The following guidance has been issued.

> "Size may be relevant to the selection of tenderers, but only insofar as it is necessary to assess whether or not the job is within their capability. Once that assessment has been made, relative size is likely to be less significant than skills, efficiency, experience and reliability—characteristics relevant to value for money but just as likely to be found in small firms as in large and particularly relevant in the procurement of services".

Benzodiazepine

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many representations he has received since 1990 from (a) hon. Members, (b) health groups, (c) individuals and (d) legal representatives regarding benzodiazepine litigation and the withdrawal of legal aid certificates. [6329]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: My predecessor and I have received many representations about this case from a number of different sources, including those mentioned.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he or his departmental officials last discussed the benzodiazepine litigation with (a) the legal aid board, (b) the Benzodiazepine Solicitors Group and (c) the Lord Chief Justice. [6328]

Mr. Evans: My predecessor and I, and our officials, have been frequently in touch with the legal aid board and interested solicitors about the policy implications of these actions. There have been no discussions on this matter with the Lord Chief Justice.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many legal aid certificates are presently in force in respect of benzodiazepine litigation; and if he will make a statement. [6327]

Mr. Evans: None.

Departmental Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the amount owed to those businesses whose invoices were not paid within 30 days or within agreed contractual arrangements for 1994–95. [6510]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) orders and (b) firms are represented by the percentage of invoices not paid by his Department within 30 days in 1994–95. [6491]

Mr. Evans: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what response there has been to the consultation on the proposals for commercial borrowing by grant-maintained schools. [7662]

Mrs. Gillan: One hundred and fourteen responses to the consultation on commercial borrowing for GM schools were received. Of the responses which gave a view on the principle of commercial borrowing, 75 per cent. were in favour, including 80 per cent. of grant-maintained schools which responded. I have today deposited a policy briefing sheet summarising the responses in the Library.

School Inspections

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on future school inspection arrangements once the current four-year cycle has been completed. [7663]

Mr. Robin Squire: The inspection system is achieving its intended purpose: to make schools focus on areas that require improvement and to provide information to parents on the performance of their children's schools. Over 5,000 schools have already been inspected by the Office for Standards in Education under the current four-year inspection cycle. But we are more than halfway through the first cycle for secondary schools and well into the primary cycle and now need to consider the future.

The first cycle of inspection will establish a clear baseline for all schools. That was essential, and the Government will continue to ensure that all schools are inspected regularly. But having completed this necessary universal audit, it may be less necessary to inspect every school in the same depth and frequency in the next cycle.

Having consulted Her Majesty's chief inspector, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is minded to favour a more targeted approach in the second cycle of inspections. The practical issues associated with this will need to be carefully considered. She has invited Her Majesty's chief inspector to advise her, by 31 January 1996, on a range of possible options for adjusting the timing and intensity of inspections to the needs of particular schools. In the light of his advice she will make a further announcement before Easter.

Suffolk Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress Suffolk TEC is making in meeting the criteria for the award of a three-year licence. [7664]

Mr. Paice: I am pleased to announce the award of a three-year licence to Suffolk TEC which has now completed the process of meeting the rigorous standards we set.

Student Loans Company

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the Student Loans Company appointed a new chief executive. [7665]

Mr. Forth: Mr. Colin Ward, currently assistant managing director of the Student Loans Company, has accepted the post of chief executive with effect from 1 January 1996.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the Student Loans Company appointed a new assessor; and if she will publish his terms of reference. [7667]

Mr. Forth: Mr. Graham Chandler, retired registrar of the university of Nottingham, has agreed to become the independent assessor for the Student Loans Company from 1 January 1996. I am placing details of his terms of reference in the Library.

Schools (Capital Allocations)

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on capital allocations for local education authority maintained schools for 1996–97. [7668]

Mrs. Gillan: Local education authorities have today been informed of their annual capital guidelines for schools which, together with supplementary credit approvals, will total £458 million in 1996–97. They have also been informed of the allocations for spending by the governors of voluntary-aided and special agreement schools in their areas—the overall grant to be made available in 1996–97 will be £100 million.

ACGs do not represent the full total of funds available to LEAs for capital expenditure. Authorities are also able to spend additional sums from capital receipts and from their revenue budgets if they so choose.

Local authorities have received considerable resources in the last few years for building work at schools. The substantial sum available in 1996–97 is a 7.5 per cent. increase on the £426 million available in the current year and should enable local authorities to continue to make significant progress in improving the building stock.

The reserve held back for subsequent issue as supplementary credit approvals includes a substantial sum, £30 million to £40 million, for a new challenge fund which will be allocated towards innovative capital projects involving contributions from other bodies, including the private sector. The Department will be consulting shortly on the criteria against which bids to the challenge fund will be assessed.

In distributing ACGs, I have again given priority to the second and third year expenditure on work covered by ACGs in previous years; projects to provide new school places in areas of population growth—"Basic Need"—and projects to remove surplus places. For 1996–97, we are allocating a historically high level of cover for commitments—£282 million. We are also providing £90 million for basic need—a level of cover equal to 1995–96.

Of the total of £100 million grant for voluntary-aided schools, £62 million has been allocated for capital work and £38 million has been set aside for repairs. The figure of £62 million represents a very healthy 7 per cent. increase in funds available for capital work. More funds have had to be set aside for committed projects this year than in 1995–96 and allocations for basic need are also much higher than in previous years. I am pleased to announced 35 new major projects for the starts list and 27 projects for the design list.

Some £42 million of the ACG total will be allocated in the form of SCAs to LEAs during the course of the year. This figure includes provision for the challenge fund.

Details of individual LEA's ACGs and grant allocations have been placed in the Library.

Data (National Security Certificates)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on what occasions certificates under section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 were signed by members of her Department; for how long each certificate was valid; and in what circumstances employment records can be used for the purpose of safeguarding national security. [5341]

Mr. Robin Squire: I am aware of one such certificate so far as the Department for Education and Employment is concerned. Disclosing details of such certificates would itself not be in the interest of national security.

Classroom Certificates

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many classroom assistants were employed in (a) England and (b) each of the seven counties of the south-west in (i) 1992 and (ii) the latest year for which figures are available. [5350]

Mr. Robin Squire: The available information is shown in the following table:

Full-time equivalent numbers of education support staff[1] in maintained schools[2] for England and in each local education authority area of the South West: 1992 and 1995

	1992	[3]1995
Position in January each year
Avon	1,326	1,544
Cornwall	748	1,065
Devon	1,312	1,730
Dorset	608	800
Gloucestershire	609	736

[1] Nursery assistants, special needs support staff and other support staff including librarians, technicians, medical staff and child care assistants.

[2] Maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special schools.

[3] Provisional.

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much has been spent on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in his Department in each of the last three years. [5560]

Mr. Robin Squire: Expenditure on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in both the former Employment Department and the former Department for Education in each of the last three years is included in running cost expenditure, as published in the respective annual reports. It is not always possible to disaggregate the specific costs for a small number of rooms from the overall cost of refurbishing a whole floor of a building.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much her Department spent on official hospitality in 1994–95 and in the financial year to date; and what is the 1995–96 projected budget for official hospitality. [5577]

Mr. Robin Squire: In 1994–95 the cost of official hospitality, which was included in the running cost budget for the Department, was £99,004. Of this, £73,643 was attributable to the former Department for Education and £25,361 to the former Department of Employment.

For the combined Department for Education and Employment the figure for the financial year to date is £61,000 with expenditure for the year as a whole projected to be £90,000.

Telephone Hotlines

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what telephone hotlines are run by her Department; when each was set up; how much each costs annually to run; how many calls each has received to date; and what is the average cost of each call received. [5771]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department for Education and Employment does not operate any hotlines. However, the Department does run a small number of lines providing publicity and information to members of the public. To provide this information would incur disproportionate cost.

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many colleges of further education there are currently in the United Kingdom. [6071]

Mr. Paice: I am responsible for further education in England only. However, I understand that there are currently a total of 545 colleges of further education in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many colleges of further education in the United Kingdom have been transferred from local education authority control to management by incorporated bodies. [6073]

Mr. Paice: I am responsible for further education in England only. However, I understood that, of the 545 colleges of further education in the United Kingdom, 488 have been transferred from local education authority control to management by incorporated bodies.

Staff-student Ratios

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the current average staff to student ratio in primary, junior, further and higher education in (i) 1985, (ii) 1992, and (iii) the latest available date. [6552]

Mr. Robin Squire: The available information is shown in the following table:

Pupil: Teacher/student: Staff ratios in primary and junior schools and further and higher education in England in 1984–85, 1991–92 and at the latest available date

Academic year	Primary schools	(of which) Junior schools	Further education	Higher education
1984–85	22.2	22.4	n/a	n/a
1991–92	22.2	22.7	n/a	14.6
1993–94	—	—	15.4	16.5
1994–95	22.9	23.1	—	—

n/a = not available.

Advertising

Mr Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the expenditure of her (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title for each year since 1990–91; and what estimate she has made for 1995–96 based on expenditure to date and existing plans. [6563]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested by the hon. Member could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Research Projects (Sunderland)

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list all former Department for Employment/Employment Department Group, and former Department for Education and Department for Education and Employment funded pilots, trials and research studies which have been conducted since 1989 in (a) the city of Sunderland, (b) Wearside district, (c) the Sunderland travel-to-work district and (d) Sunderland local education authority identifying (i) the title, summary and duration of the pilot/trial, (ii) the target population and the total number of participants and (iii) whether each pilot, trial or research finding was published and if she will indicate the date of publication; and if she will make a statement on other non-Department of Employment/Employment Department Group, Department of Education and Department for Education and Employment research bodies, or organisations involved in each pilot, trial or research scheme. [6304]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following information is available about research projects which fall within the hon. Member's definition:

TITLE: "COUNTY DURHAM TEC INVESTORS IN PEOPLE TRAINING EVALUATION TOOLKIT" (NAME SUBSEQUENTLY CHANGED TO DURHAM EVALUATION SYSTEM)

Summary

This development project developed and piloted an effective, practical generic training evaluation toolkit, so that companies can easily and accurately assess and understand the effectiveness of their training investment in terms of their business objectives, development of people, and the development of their organisations. The specific outputs of the projects were a concept paper, a specification, a prototype paper-based evaluation system and a pilot using three companies within County Durham.

Target population

The target population was employers interested in Investors in People Standard, principally within County Durham, but the project outcomes were made available to TECs/employers outside the area including Wearside.

Total number of participants

Three companies took part in the pilot scheme (Liz Dargue Staffing; Tornado; and Seaward)

Date of publication

Report published June 1993

Other organisations involved

This project was a joint development by the [then Training Enterprise and Education Directorate of the] former Employment Department, County Durham TEC and Rubicon Associates.

TITLE: "OPEN LEARNING" CREDITS

Summary

The "Open Learning" Credits pilots were a White Paper initiative to trial the use of open learning for adult unemployed people. There were 14 pilots in all of which 11 were in England, two in Scotland and one in Wales. One of the English pilots was based at Wearside TEC (later renamed Sunderland City TEC).

Duration

The pilots were carried out in 1993–94.

Target population and number of participants

The target population was unemployed adults. About 100 learners participated in the pilot at Wearside TEC.

Publication of Findings

A national evaluation report for the Open Learning Credits was published and copies are placed in the Library.

Other organisations involved in the pilots

The British Association for Open Learning managed the pilots.

The Policy Studies Institute carried out the evaluation of the pilots.

TITLE: "TAKING TRAINING TO LOCAL COMMUNITIES" (SUNDERLAND)

Summary

This was one of the four pilot projects (the others were in Bradford Lewisham and Wandsworth) operating in housing estates which set out to investigate and demonstrate new ways to encourage and help develop their skills. The Sunderland project was a mobile service operating from a van displaying a range of open learning materials, with a project officer who helped steer people towards Open Learning or other provision, and helped set up training courses for groups with similar needs.

Duration

The project was funded for 15 months.

Target population

People living on housing estates with high unemployment. Women returning to the labour market were specifically targeted.

Total number of participants

Approximately 250 clients registered with the project, but the informal nature of the service meant that this take-up figure is an estimate. It is not known how many of those who came into contact with the project, and who did not take up Open Learning, went on to do other training.

Date of publication

The project was summarised in the Employment Department's report "Taking Training to Local Communities", published in 1993.

Other organisations involved

The contractor for the project was the library service of the Council, which provided the main open learning resource. Sunderland Open Learning (SOL) arranged open learning support. The day to day management of the project was shared between SOL and the library service. Wearside TEC (now Sunderland City TEC) paid the project officer's salary, including a six month extension beyond the Department's support.

TITLE: "YOUTH DROP-OUT RESEARCH PROJECT"

Summary

This project examines the experience of young people in the Ford and Pennywell area of Sunderland as they make the transition from school to the world of work and training. The project was funded from the Employment Service Programme Development Fund with additional support from the Ford and Pennywell Advice Centre (Sunderland).

Duration

The project lasted one year during 1994–95

Target population and number of participants

The target population was young people between 16 and 24. Two hundred and fifty young people in Sunderland were interviewed by the researcher.

Date of publication

The report was published in October 1995 by the Youth Work Press. Copyright resides with the publishers (Youth Workshop Press).

Other organisations involved

Dr. Clive Wilkinson, currently Rural Development Officer for the Community Council of Northumberland, carried out the research. Ford and Pennywell Advice Centre (Sunderland) provided part funding

TITLE: "LOCAL SUPPORT FOR TRAINING DEVELOPMENT—NORTH EAST ENGLAND"

Summary

The project piloted ways of helping trainers, managers and TEC advisors to use computer based information exchange as a way of providing mutual help in dealing with training problems and opportunities. Sunderland TEC was one of five TECs involved in this project.

Duration

10 months, from September 1994 to July 1995.

Target population

Trainers, managers and TEC advisors.

Date of publication

Report published as "Local Computer Support for Training Development" by Sandra Corlett, August 1995. The report is obtainable from Newcastle University or the Department (Trainer Development Team).

Other organisations involved

The work was contracted with the Northern Regional Management Centre in Washington. The co-ordination work has been moved to Newcastle University.

Note: Sunderland City TEC (formerly Wearside TEC) will have been involved in other pilots, trials and research studies, however information on these is not available centrally.

Training Schemes

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many people, after leaving (i) the adult employment subsidy scheme, (ii) the employment action scheme, (iii) the job creation programme, (iv) the job interview guarantee scheme, (v) the job review workshops scheme, (vi) the job splitting scheme, (vii) the job search seminars scheme, (viii) the job training programme, (ix) the job training scheme, (x) the jobplan workshops programme, (xi) the learning for work scheme, (xii) the new workers scheme, (xiii) the old training scheme, (xiv) the recruitment subsidy for school leavers scheme, (xv) the voluntary projects programme, (xvi) the work experience programme, (xvii) the workstart pilots scheme, (xviii) the wider opportunities training programme, (xix) the youth employment subsidy scheme between 1976 and 1978 and (xx) the young workers scheme (a) went into work, (b) went into further employment schemes and (c) became unemployed; [6423]

(2) how many people took part in (i) the adult employment subsidy scheme, (ii) the employment action scheme, (iii) the job creation programme, (iv) the job interview guarantee scheme, (v) the job review workshops scheme, (vi) the job splitting scheme, (vii) the job search seminars scheme, (viii) the job training programme, (ix) the job training scheme, (x) the jobplan workshops programme, (xi) the learning for work scheme, (xii) the new workers scheme, (xiii) the old job training scheme, (xiv) the recruitment subsidy for school leavers scheme, (xv) the voluntary projects programme, (xvi) the work experience programme, (xvii) the workstart pilots scheme, (xviii) the wider opportunities training programme, (xix) the youth employment subsidy scheme between 1976 and 1978 and (xx) the young workers scheme in each year of each scheme's operation including those who left before completion of the scheme; [6427]

(3) how many persons left (i) the adult employment subsidy scheme, (ii) the employment action scheme, (iii) the job creation programme, (iv) the job interview guarantee scheme, (v) the job review workshops scheme, (vi) the job splitting scheme, (vii) the job training programme, (ix) the job training scheme, (x) the jobplan workshops programme, (xi) the learning for work scheme, (xii) the new workers scheme, (xiii) the old job training scheme, (xiv) the recruitment subsidy for school leavers scheme, (xv) the voluntary projects programme, (xvi) the work experience programme, (xvii) the workstart pilots scheme, (xviii) the wider opportunities training programme, (xix) the youth employment subsidy scheme between 1976 and 1978 and (xx) the young workers scheme (a) in each year of each scheme's operation and (b) for each year as a percentage of the total numbers leaving all schemes; [6425]

(4) what type and level of qualification each leaver obtained from (i) the adult employment subsidy scheme, (ii) the employment action scheme, (iii) the job creation programme, (iv) the job interview guarantee scheme, (v) the job review workshops scheme, (vi) the job splitting scheme, (vii) the job search seminars scheme, (viii) the job training programme, (ix) the job training scheme, (x) the jobplan workshops programme, (xi) the learning for work scheme, (xii) the new workers scheme, (xiii) the old job training scheme, (xiv) the recruitment subsidy for school leavers scheme, (xv) the voluntary projects programme, (xvi) the work experience programme, (xvii) the workstart pilots scheme, (xviii) the wider opportunities training programme, (xix) the youth employment subsidy scheme between 1976 and 1978 and (xx) the young workers scheme; and in each case how many failed to obtain any qualification. [6424]

Mr. Paice: As the reply will consist of a large amount of data, I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the total Government expenditure on (i) the adult employment subsidy scheme, (ii) the employment action scheme, (iii) the job creation programme, (iv) the job interview guarantee scheme, (v) the job review workshops scheme, (vi) the job splitting scheme, (vii) the job search seminars scheme, (viii) the job training programme, (ix) the job training scheme, (x) the jobplan workshops programme, (xi) the learning for work scheme, (xii) the new workers scheme, (xiii) the old job training scheme, (xiv) the recruitment subsidy for school leavers scheme, (xv) the voluntary projects programme, (xvi) the work experience programme, (xvii) the workstart pilots scheme, (xviii) the wider opportunities training programme, (xix) the youth employment subsidy scheme between 1976 and 1978 and (xx) the young workers scheme in each year of each scheme's operation. [6422]

Nursery Education

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many children under the age of five years have (a) a full-time and (b) part-time place in (i) reception classes in school, (ii) nursery classes in schools and (iii) nursery schools by local education authority area; [6524]

(2) what percentage of children under the age of five years has (a) a full-time and (b) a part-time place in (i) reception classes in schools, (ii) nursery classes in schools and (iii) nursery schools by local education authority area. [6523]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is shown in the following table:

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the levels of public expenditure on education for children under school age in (a) Denmark, (b) France and (c) the United Kingdom, (i) in total, (ii) per child under school age, (iii) as a percentage of the national gross domestic product and (iv) as a percentage of total public spending in each country. [6522]

Mr. Squire: International comparisons of expenditure on early childhood education are difficult to make because of the need to ensure consistent definitions across countries. Compulsory schooling begins in the UK one year earlier than in France and two years earlier than in Denmark. Total spending on the education of children under school age in these countries is therefore likely to be higher than in the UK. In addition, UK figures exclude expenditure on primary provision in infant and reception classes which account for approximately half of all pupils below compulsory school age in this country.

There are particular differences making comparisons over time because of changes in countries' programmes and policies and in some international definitions.

The latest available estimates based on information provided by individual countries to the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development are shown in the table:

Public expenditure[1] on early childhood education, 1992

	Total public expenditure on early childhood education in publicly funded schools (£ million)	Public expenditure per FTE[2] pupil in early childhood education in publicly funded schools (£ per pupil)[3]	Public expenditure on early childhood education as a percentage of GDP	Public expenditure on early childhood education as a percentage of total public expenditure
Denmark[4]	399	2,790	0.7	1.2
France	3,900	1,530	0.6	1.1
United Kingdom[5]	484	2,040	0.1	0.2

Source:

DfEE estimates based on data supplied to OECD by individual countries for the publication "Education at a Glance", OECD April 1995.

Notes:

[1] Recurrent and capital expenditure, but excluding loan charges.

[2] Each part-time pupil is counted as 0.5 full-time equivalents.

[3] Rounded to the nearest £10.

[4] From 1992, includes expenditure on all pupils aged three to five. Prior to 1992, such pupils were excluded.

[5] From 1992, for international comparison purposes only, the UK has regarded early childhood education as covering only pupils in maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in maintained primary schools. Prior to 1992, all pupils below compulsory school age were included in this category.

Access to Work Scheme

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to end Government funding for the access to work scheme. [6429]

Mr. Paice: I refer the hon. Member to an announcement made on 14 December by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to the hon. Member for Tatton (Mr. Hamilton), Official Report, column 738. This makes it clear that the funding planned for next year will be maintained.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to introduce an employers' contribution to the access to work scheme. [6428]

Mr. Paice: I refer the hon. Member to an announcement made on 14 December by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to the hon. Member for Tatton, Official Report, column 738. This explains that discussions will be held about the future operation of the programme.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many disabled people are currently in employment following involvement in the access to work scheme. [6430]

Mr. Paice: Over 9,000 disabled people have been helped by the access to work programme since April 1995. Help is provided only to disabled people who need help to get or retain work. Of those helped, over 80 per cent. were already in employment when they applied for assistance.

Discretionary Grants

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will fund further research into the discretionary grants policy of local education authorities. [6934]

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no plans to do so.

Departmental Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many orders are represented by the percentage of invoices not paid by her Department within 30 days in 1994–95. [6488]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information required could be provided only at disproportionate cost to the Department. The Department does not maintain this statistical information.

Goods and Services

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much her Department paid to the private sector for goods and services in 1994–95. [6501]

Mr. Robin Squire: Detailed information is not held in the form requested. However, the Department paid over £1.5 billion to private sector suppliers in 1994–95, principally for the delivery of employment and training programmes.

GCSE Scores

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for all English secondary schools, including special schools, in 1995 (a) the average GCSE point scores, (b) the average percentages achieving at least five Cs, (c) the average percentages achieving at least five Gs and (d) the average percentages achieving at least one pass, in 5 percentile groups ranked by their 15-year-old pupils' achievements according to each of these indices, respectively, on the same basis as the annual schools performance tables. [7028]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following list for 1995, shows (a) the average GCSE point scores, (b) the average percentages achieving at least five Cs, (c) the average percentages achieving at least give Gs, (d) the average percentages achieving at least one pass, in 5 per centile groups ranked by their 15-year pupils' achievements according to each of these indices. These figures are based on the school performance tables published in November and they exclude data from the published schools that had less than 10 pupils aged 15. The averages quoted are simple averages, based on the sums of the percentage divided by the numbers of schools involved. This is consistent with the data for earlier years provided in the reply to the hon. Member's question of 8 November. Official Report, columns 960-61.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many times mobile telephones used by Ministers in her Department have been cloned during (a) the last six months, (b) the last 12 months and (c) the last 18 months; and which Ministers within her Department have had their mobile telephones cloned. [4256]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 7 December 1995]: There have been two such instances, one in May 1995 and another in September 1995. In both cases, it was the mobile telephone allocated to me that was cloned. To try to prevent any recurrence, following the first instance the number of my telephone was changed and following the second a new digital replacement was provided.

TRANSPORT

Local Roads (Capital Resources)

Sir Donald Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will announce the allocation of capital resources for expenditure on local roads and transport in England for 1996–97. [7543]

Sir George Young: This year a total of about £830 million is to be allocated to local highway authorities and passenger transport authorities in England for capital expenditure on their local transport infrastructure in 1996–97. This consists of £236 million in transport supplementary grant and around £594 million in annual capital guideline, supplementary credit approval, grant under section 56 of the Transport Act 1968, and grant under section 13 of the Industrial Development Act 1982.

In this year's settlement, I am funding 53 packages of measures proposed by authorities outside London to encourage public transport, cycling and walking and to offer attractive alternatives to car use. We were pleased to announce last week the successful bids in our cycle challenge competition at a value of £1.89 million. I am providing funding for a number of measures in London, including further support for the London bus priority network and the London cycle network.

I am increasing funding for local safety schemes from £50 million in 1995–96 to £55 million in 1996–97. I am also accepting five new bypasses for funding. These are designed to remove congestion and bring environmental relief to rural communities.

I am setting aside resources for two new major public transport schemes—a new transport interchange to serve Luton airport, and concourse improvements at Stratford station in east London—which are expected to begin construction during 1996–97. I am continuing to fund the Midland Metro light rail project and, subject to satisfactory bids being received, Croydon Tramlink. Some £187 million is being allocated for the assessment, strengthening and maintenance of bridges and the structural maintenance of principal road carriageways. As for previous years, local authorities will be free to vire resources between bridges and carriageways according to local priorities.

Table 1 sets out the national totals for different types of expenditure. Table 2 shows the total amounts of grant, credit approvals and gross approved expenditure for each of the 118 local highway authorities, and the six passenger transport authorities. The Department's government offices for the regions are notifying them today of their allocations. Table 3 details the package allocations, and table 4 lists the new major road and public transport schemes accepted this year.

Noise Insulation Regulations

Mr. Trend: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the Noise Insulation (Railways and other Guided Transport Systems) Regulations 1996 will be made. [7624]

Mr. Watts: The draft regulations have been amended to correct some defective drafting identified by the Joint Committee on Statutory Instruments; the substance of the draft regulations remains the same. The amended draft regulations, which supersede the draft regulations laid on 13 July 1995, have been laid before Parliament today. The draft regulations are subject to the negative resolution procedure and will be made at the end of a 40-day praying period. It is intended that the draft regulations will enter into force on 1 March 1996.

Goods and Services

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department paid to the private sector for goods and services in 1994–95. [6498]

Mr. Norris: The Department's records do not distinguish between private and public sector suppliers.

Departmental Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of bills owed by his Department in 1994–95 were not paid within 30 days or within agreed contractual arrangements. [6511]

Mr. Norris: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Dover (Mr. Shaw) on 18 July, Official Report, columns 1211-12.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many (a) orders and (b) firms are represented by the percentage of invoices not paid by his Department within 30 days in 1994–95; [6493]

(2) what is the amount owed to those businesses whose invoices were not paid within 30 days or within agreed contractual arrangements for 1994–95. [6515]

Mr. Norris: The information is not available.

Drivers (Alcohol)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the maximum legal blood alcohol levels for drivers in each European country. [7219]

Mr. Norris: The information is not readily available for all European countries. However, we do have details of legal blood alcohol limits for drivers in countries in the European Union and these are as follows:

	mg of alcohol/100 ml of blood
Austria	80
Denmark	80
Germany	80
Ireland	80
Italy	80
Luxembourg	80
Spain	80
United Kingdom	80
Belgium	50
Finland	50
France	50
Greece	50
Holland	50
Portugal	40
Sweden	20

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance he issues on the maximum average intake of alcohol for drivers. [7320]

Mr. Norris: Our advice to motorists is not to drink at all before or during driving. It was reiterated in the recent report of the interdepartmental group on sensible drinking.

Motor Vehicles

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has held on the issue of a trans-European agreement on low-volume type-approval for motor cars with his European counterparts. [6602]

Mr. Watts: Officials have held discussions with the type-approval authorities of Germany, France, Italy, Spain, the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg with a view to obtaining their agreement to accept vehicles type-approved to the UK low-volume scheme. So far, one vehicle type has been accepted in full by Germany and Italy and partially by France, Spain, Belgium and Luxembourg, the latter group of countries requiring some additional tests. We have also pursued the issue of a trans-European agreement at several meetings chaired by the European Commission.

British Rail (Members' Parking Passes)

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what will be the saving made to Railtrack in 1996–97 from the cancellation of free parking passes to hon. Members; and what is his estimate of the costs in 1995–96 of providing such passes. [6599]

Mr. Watts: The present free car parking passes are provided by the British Railways Board, which does not attribute a cost to the provision of the passes. The small administrative cost of issuing individual passes is not separately identified by the British Railways Board.

When the present passes issued by British Rail expire on 1 June 1996 it will be for the train operating companies, or Railtrack in the case of those stations owned and managed by it, to decide whether to provide free car parking passes for hon. Members.

Salford Quays-Eccles Metrolink Extension

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what estimate he has made of the amount of section 56 funding required in 1996–97 for construction of the Salford quays and Eccles extension to be started 1996; [7161]

(2) when he plans to announce his Department's contribution to the funding for the Salford quays and Eccles Metrolink extension. [7159]

Mr. Norris: Greater Manchester passenger transport authority has yet to obtain powers under the Transport and Works Act 1992 for the Metrolink extension between Salford quays and Eccles. GMPTA has bid for funding for the extension as far as Salford quays in the 1996–97 local transport settlement. We are announcing details of the settlement today. I am afraid that we have been unable to find resources for the scheme in 1996–97.

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he plans between his Department and the Greater Manchester transport authority in respect of starting construction of the Salford quays and Eccles Metrolink extension during 1996. [7160]

Mr. Norris: My Department will be happy to have further discussions with Greater Manchester passenger transport authority about its proposed Metrolink extension to Salford quays and Eccles.

Toll Bridges

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the single crossing charge for cars on toll bridges in England and Wales. [7238]

Mr. Watts: Current details of the tolls charged by toll bridges that were not promoted by statute is not available to me. For those bridges in England and Wales that were promoted by statute the car toll for a single crossing is:

Toll bridge	Toll for car
Aldwark bridge	8p
Cleddau bridge	75p
Clifton bridge	20p
Dartford bridge	90
Dunham bridge	20p
Humber bridge	£1.60
Itchen bridge	40p (50p peak)
Rixton Warburton bridge	10p
Severn bridge	£3.70 (Westbound only)
Shrewsbury (Kingsland) bridge	10p
Swinford bridge	5p
Tamar bridge	£1.00 (25p concession rate)
Whitchurch bridge	8p
Whitney on Wye bridge	50p

Ministerial Travel and Accommodation Costs

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the total cost for himself and other departmental Ministers for each year since 1991–92, including the current year of (a) overseas travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers and their advisers, (b) car and chauffeuring costs of Ministers, (c) ministerial security costs and (d) domestic travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers. [6386]

Sir George Young: The costs in the current and previous two financial years are set out. Information before that could be collected only at disproportionate cost.

1995–96 (April to end November)

(a) £57,516

(b) £159,177

(c) [1]£12,212

(d) £14,169

(b) £286,000

(c) As for item (c) in 1995–95 above.

(d) £65,303

[1] Costs of Ministerial security attributable to the move to Great Minister house.

Departmental Running Costs

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the cost of running his departmental office, and that of his predecessor, for each year since 1990–91 including the current year, broken down into (a) telephone bills, (b) total staff costs, (c) press and communications, (d) entertainment, (e) alcoholic drinks, (f) non-alcoholic drinks, (g) stationery, (h) office refurbishment and (i) other. [6385]

Sir George Young: This information was not collected in the format requested before the current financial year, 1995–96, but was included in the running costs expenditure of my Department which is published in the appropriate year's annual report.

The cost of running my departmental office, so far in the current financial year, April to November, 1995–96, is

(a) £2,799.55 (mobile telephones and pagers only—excludes costs of desk telephones which are not available in the format requested).

(b) £212,033.60

(c) This information is not collected in the format requested. It could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

(d), (e) and (f) £686.23 The budget does not differentiate between entertainment, alcoholic or non-alcoholic drinks.

(g) £835.31

(h) None.

(i) None.

InterCity West Coast Franchise

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the timetable for the franchising of the InterCity West Coast rail track from London to Glasgow; and if he will make a statement. [6380]

Mr. Watts: The franchising director will invite applications to pre-qualify and tenders for the InterCity West Coast franchise as soon as practicable in 1996. The franchise will be closely linked to the project to modernise the line. The Office of Passenger Rail Franchising will bring the franchise forward as the infrastructure project is developed. This will be timed to enable the franchisee to participate fully in the modernisation.

Trunk Roads

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the expenditure by his Department on the trunk road network in each of the last six years; and what is the planned expenditure for the current year. [6223]

Mr. Watts: The following table sets out the actual expenditure on trunk roads over the period 1989–90 to 1994–95 and the estimated expenditure in 1995–96.

Outturn	Total expenditure £ million
1989–90	1,416
1990–91	1,882
1991–92	1,975
1992–93	2,068
1993–94	2,182
1994–95	2,196
1995–96[1]	1,923

Road Improvements (Norfolk and Suffolk)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list each of the proposed road improvement schemes which were due to be started in Norfolk and Suffolk and which have now been either (a) abandoned or (b) suspended; and if he will make a statement. [6459]

Mr. Watts: Following the recent review of the trunk road programme, the list of schemes placed in each category is set out:

Longer term programme schemes

A12 Wrentham Bypass, Suffolk

A12 Wroxham Bypass, Suffolk

A12 Wickham Market—Saxmundham Improvement, Suffolk

A12 Martlesham-Wickham Market Improvement, Suffolk

A47 Acle Straight Improvement, Norfolk

A47 Blofield-Acle Improvement, Norfolk

A47 North Tuddenham-Easton Improvement, Norfolk

A47 Little Fransham Bypass, Norfolk

A47 Middleton and East Winch Bypass, Norfolk

A47 Wisbech Bypass A1101 Junction Improvement, Norfolk

A47 Tilney-Kings Lynn Improvement and A47/A17 GSJ, Norfolk.

The longer-term programme comprises those schemes, which although required, are not of the highest priority nationally. They will be taken forward only as the main programme is completed.

Withdrawn schemes

A10 Setchey and West Winch Bypass, Norfolk

A12 Kessingland-Pleasureland Improvement, Suffolk

A12 Sutton Bridge-Kings Lynn Improvement, Norfolk

A140 Dickleburgh-Norwich Improvement, Norfolk

A140 Long Stratton Bypass, Norfolk

A140 Beacon Hill-Scole Improvement, Suffolk

A140 Stonham Bypass, Suffolk.

Railtrack Assets

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the accuracy of the net book value of Railtrack's assets a published in its annual report for 1994–95. [5763]

Mr. Watts: The report of Railtrack's auditors to its shareholders included in the annual report for 1994–95 confirms that the financial statements give a true and fair view of the state of affairs of the company at 31 March 1995.

Rail Competition

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what safeguards he intends to apply to avoid (a) passenger and (b) freight train operating companies from establishing a monopoly in a sector of the privatised rail market by acquiring two or more franchises by direct application or as a result of a takeover. [6181]

Mr. Watts: The requirements of competition law apply to franchising and the disposal of other BR businesses including freight companies. Qualifying mergers are investigated by the Office of Fair Trading under the Fair Trading Act 1973 and the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry decides whether to make a reference to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission. The Rail Regulator is also required to approve any change of control of a licence holder and in exercising this function will bear in mind the availability of powers under the Fair Trading Act 1973 and the Competition Act 1980 which have been transferred to him.

Emergency Response Trains

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many times emergency response trains have been deployed on the rail network in response to rail incidents in each of the last five years and on how many occasions they have been deployed within the ScotRail network; [4440]

(2) what consultations his Department held with Railtrack over its recent decision in relation to the deployment of emergency response trains and what representations it made; [4438]

(3) if he will make a statement on the deployment of emergency response trains by Railtrack. [4437]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 6 December 1995]: The deployment of such trains is an operational matter for Railtrack, consulting the independent Health and Safety Executive as necessary. I understand from Railtrack that the information requested is available for the period 1992 to 1995 as follows:

Emergency response train/crane call-outs

	1992	1993	1994	[1]1995
Great Britain	415	334	182	131
Scotland	7	8	1	4

TREASURY

Corporation Tax

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the taxation effects on pension funds of the corporation tax changes outlined in the Finance Bill; and if he will make a statement. [6018]

Mr. Jack: Pension funds are not liable to corporation tax on their income or gains and are therefore not directly affected by the corporation tax changes proposed in the Budget.

Small and Medium Enterprises

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what meetings his Department has had since May 1995 with organisations representing small firms to review tendering procedures. [6608]

Mrs. Angela Knight: A meeting with the following organisations representing small firms was held on 27 September 1995 to review tendering procedures:

CBI Small Firms Panel;

Association of British Chambers of Commerce; and Forum of Private Business.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what advice has been given to procurement staff on the implication of purchasing from small and medium enterprises; [6609]

(2) what work his Department has done to develop best practice in the publication of departmental procurement guidance material relevant to small and medium enterprises' needs. [6607]

Mrs. Knight: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the Paymaster General gave to her on 6 December at column 258.

Goods and Services

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much his Department paid to the private sector for goods and services in 1994–95. [6519]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Treasury placed orders for £12.5 million with private sector suppliers for goods and services in 1994–95.

Sequestrated Iraqi Assets

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the original value of Iraqi assets sequestrated in United Kingdom banks as a result of the Gulf conflict; what is the current value of those assets; and if he will make a statement. [6600]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Sequestrated Iraqi assets are not deposited in the United Kingdom. However, the Bank of England advises that the value of Iraqi funds sequestrated in accordance with Security Council resolution 778 was $736,938.12 made up of $672,553.43 plus accrued interest of $64,384.69.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in which United Kingdom banks Iraqi assets sequestrated as a result of the Gulf conflict are deposited; and if he will make a statement. [6601]

Mrs. Knight: Banks in the United Kingdom do not hold any sequestrated Iraqi assets. As required by the provisions of Security Council resolution 778—adopted on 2 October 1992—concerning the temporary sequestration of certain Iraqi assets, all funds representing the proceeds of the sale of Iraqi petroleum or petroleum products, paid for on or after 6 August 1990, have been transferred to the United Nations' escrow account provided for in Security Council resolutions 706 and 712, which were adopted on 15 August and 19 September 1991 respectively. Funds in the escrow account are available for meeting the costs of compensation arising out of the Gulf war and costs of UN activities and humanitarian relief.

VAT (Subscriptions)

Sir George Gardiner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many pension associations are affected by the decision to levy VAT on their subscription income; and how much revenue he expects to raise as a result. [6752]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Following the decision of the independent value added tax and duties tribunal that membership subscription income of the Civil Service Pensioners Alliance does not qualify for exemption from VAT, two other pensioner associations were found not to be taxing such income. Customs and Excise is currently amending its public and internal guidance with a view to identifying any other associations affected by this decision. Not all of the subscription is taxable—for example, if it covers such items as a newsletter, which is zero-rated. The decision, which is not being made retrospective, will not affect the amount of revenue collected to any significant extent.

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to review the VAT status of subscriptions to occupational pensioner groups; and if he will grant them VAT exempt status. [6135]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The independent value added tax and duties tribunal recently ruled that, under the EC sixth VAT directive there was no scope to exempt from VAT the membership subscription income of the Civil Service Pensioners Alliance. I have no plans to review the VAT liability of subscriptions to occupational pensioner groups. However, not all of the subscription is taxable if it covers items such as a newsletter, which is zero-rated.

Long-term Care

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the unallocated sum for long-term care in the Red Book is deemed to cover England only; and if he will make a statement. [6819]

Mr. Waldegrave: The sum covers the whole of the United Kingdom.

VAT Thresholds

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has as to how many firms in each parliamentary constituency will be brought into paying VAT as a result of the decision not to raise the threshold in line with indexation. [6516]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There are no estimates available on a constituency basis on the number of businesses affected.

Publicity Costs (EU)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what expenditure is incurred by the EC Commission's London, Belfast, Cardiff and Edinburgh offices in publicising the work and activities of the EC and the EU in the United Kingdom; and what element of this is met from British public funds; [162]

(2) what expenditure is incurred by the European Parliament's London office in publicising the work and activities of the EC and the EU in the United Kingdom; and what element of this is met from British public funds. [161]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: These are matters for the European Commission and the European Parliament respectively. There is no direct contribution from UK public funds, although all the activities of the European Community institutions are financed from the general budget of the European Communities to which the UK contributes.

Income Tax

Mr. Denham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost of the 20p tax band; and if he will list the number in each successive £1,000 income band above the tax threshold, indicating the average annual tax reduction for a person in each £1,000 income band. [4002]

Mr. Jack: The estimated full-year tax cost at 1996–97 income levels of the proposed £3,900 20p band tax is £3.5 billion. The numbers of taxpayers and the average annual tax reduction by income band are given in the table:

Income band above the tax threshold £	Number of taxpayers millions	[1]Average tax reduction £
0–1,000	1.6	20
1,000–2,000	1.6	60
2,000–3,000	1.6	100
3,000–3,900	1.5	140
>3,900	19.5	156
Total	25.8	140

[1] A 20p rate compared with a 24p rate for the same income band.

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been spent on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in his Department in each of the last three years. [5565]

Mrs Angela Knight: Expenditure on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in each of the last three years is included in the running cost expenditure of the Treasury, which is published in the annual report.

Chauffeur-driven Cars

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost of chauffeur-driven cars used by his Department was in each of the past five years. [5863]

Mrs Angela Knight: The cost of chauffeur-driven cars over the last five years is as follows:

Year	£
1991–92	459,974
1992–93	453,781
1993–94	465,070
1994–95	431,777
1995–96 (to November)	245,220

Rural Business Unit

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for the establishment of the rural business unit for tax purposes, as set out in the rural White Paper. [6126]

Mr. Jack: As explained in the rural White Paper, the case for a rural business unit is being considered.

Government Shareholdings

Mr. Legg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in which privatised companies the Government retain a shareholding; and what number of shares the Government own in each such company. [6918]

Mr. Jack: The information requested is included in the table:

Government shareholdings

Company	Total Her Majesty's Government Holding Millions

Ministerial Transport, London

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many times the Chief Secretary to the Treasury has used (a) the London Underground and (b) London Buses in the last year while on official business. [7263]

Mr. Waldegrave: I have not used London Buses or London Underground while on official business in the last year, unless going to watch the Lord Mayor's show with my children counts as official business.

Personal Pensions (Tax Relief)

Mr. Denham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total revenue forgone from tax relief on appropriate personal pensions for individuals whose gross earnings are (i) £5,000 to £15,000, (ii) £15,000 to £25,000, (iii) £25,000 to £35,000, (iv) £35,000 to £45,000, (v) £45,000 to £55,000, (vi) £55,000 to £65,000, (vii) £65,000 to £75,000 and (viii) £75,000 to £82,000 per annum, (a) in aggregate and (b) per capita. [4491]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 11 December 1995]: Total income tax relief for contribution to appropriate personal pensions, including tax relief for the national insurance rebate, is provisionally estimated at £500 million for 1994–95. The average benefit per participant is about £85. I regret that a distribution of the relief by earnings of participants is not available.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of bills to his Department were paid in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receiving goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice in the last year for which figures are available. [5694]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 14 December 1995]: For invoices received between November 1994 and October 1995, 72 per cent. were paid within 30 days of receipt. Most of those paid later than 30 days were delayed due to problems associated with particular suppliers, such as an error in the invoice or problems with the goods or service including a failure to deliver. Some of these invoices would still be within contractual conditions but it would incur disproportionate cost to establish what percentage they represent.

This figure compares with a previous estimate of 82 per cent. of invoices paid within 30 days in 1994–95. This was given to the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Mrs. Roche) in a question answered on 22 November 1995 at column 108. I regret that the calculations underlying this higher number were flawed. However, we are taking additional steps to improve performance, and between 1 September and 30 November 1995 the Treasury has achieved the figure of 82 per cent.

Public Opinion Surveys

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list all qualitative and quantitative research projects and surveys carried out for his Department into aspects of public attitudes and opinions (a) in general and (b) in relation to specific policy proposals in each of the past three years to December 1995, indicating for each project or survey (i) the date on which the research was commissioned, (ii) the amount which his Department spent, (iii) who carried out the research, (iv) the number of people surveyed or taking part, (v) the location and time scale and (vi) which individuals and organisations have been given access to the findings. [5977]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 14 December 1995]: No such research projects or surveys have been carried out by the Treasury during the period in question.

Tax Receipts (Oil Production)

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what have been the tax receipts from oil production in each year since 1979. [6245]

Mr. Jack: [holding answer 18 December 1995]: Revenues raised from North sea oil and gas production since 1979–80 have been as follows:

£ million

Year	Petroleum revenue tax	Supplementary petroleum duty	Corporation tax		Royalty	Total
			ACT[1] set-off	Main-stream CT

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 19 December 1995. [5411]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Chauffeur-driven Cars

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Prime Minister what the cost of chauffeur-driven cars used by his Department was in each of the past five years. [5864]

The Prime Minister: No No. 10 staff, other than the Prime Minister, have a car and driver allocated for their use. The total costs of this allocated car, including security costs, Government car service cars allocated to No. 10 and GCS cars on short-term hire were as follows:

1992–93: £470,000

1993–94: £450,000

1994–95: £380,000.

These costs exclude VAT.

The figures for earlier years are available only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what is his estimate of the total cost for himself and other departmental Ministers for each of (a) overseas travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers and their advisers, (b) car and chauffeuring costs of Ministers, (c) ministerial security costs and (d) domestic travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers; [6412]

(2) what is his estimate of the running cost of his departmental office, and that of his predecessor, for each year since 1990–91 including an estimate for the current year, broken down into (a) telephone bill, (b) total staff costs, (c) press and communications, (d) entertainment, (e) alcoholic drinks, (f) non-alcoholic drinks, (g) stationery, (h) office refurbishment and (i) other. [6411]

The Prime Minister: Expenditure by my Office during 1993–94 and 1994–95 is as follows:

£000[1]

	1993–94	1994–95
Overseas travel and accommodation	1,000	790
Cars, Domestic travel and accommodation	490	440
Telephone and stationery costs	130	90
Total staff costs[2]	3,270	3,200
Entertainment	40	40
Office refurbishment	140	70
Other costs[3]	4,150	3,020
Total costs	9,220	7,670

[1] Figures rounded to the nearest £10,000.

[2] Includes the cost of the Press Office.

[3] Includes security costs; for 1993–94 includes telecommunications costs.

Small Firms

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Prime Minister what meetings his Department has had since May 1995 with organisations representing small firms to review tendering procedures. [6647]

The Prime Minister: Since May 1995, the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency has had meetings with the Federation of Electrical Industries and the Computing Services and Software Association.

Goods and Services

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Prime Minister how much his Department paid to the private sector for goods and services in 1994–95. [6508]

The Prime Minister: The information is not held in the form requested.

Council of Europe

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Prime Minister if he will announce the composition of the United Kingdom delegation for the 1996 Ordinary Session of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe. [7384]

The Prime Minister: The 1996 Ordinary Session of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe will be opened in Strasbourg on 22 January 1996. The delegation from the United Kingdom for the Session will consist of 19 members of the Conservative party, 15 members of the Labour party and two members from the minority parties.

The appointments of representatives and substitutes have been made on the basis of nominations by the parties concerned in accordance with the resolution of the House on 22 May 1992, Official Report, column 682, and of the House of Lords on 18 June 1992, Official Report, House of Lords, columns 290–92.

The same delegation will be representing the United Kingdom Parliament at the Assembly of the Western European Union, which next meets in London in February 1996.

Representatives from the Government benches will be:

My noble Friend the Lord Finsberg—who will continue to act as leader of both delegations.

My hon. Friends the Members for:

Warwick and Leamington (Sir Dudley Smith)
Calder Valley (Sir Donald Thompson)
Ashford (Sir Keith Speed)
Medway (Dame Peggy Fenner)
Lewes (Mr. Tim Rathbone)
Bournemouth East (Mr. David Atkinson)
Ravensbourne (Sir John Hunt)
Reading West (Sir Anthony Durant)
The Lord Newall

Representatives from the Labour Party will be:

The hon. Members for:

Wentworth (Mr. Peter Hardy)
Tooting (Mr. Tom Cox)
Wansbeck (Mr. Jack Thompson)
Newham North West (Mr. Tony Banks)
Don Valley (Mr. Martin Redmond)
Birmingham, Hodge Hill (Mr. Terry Davis)
The Lord Kirkhill

The representative from the minority parties will be:

The hon. Member for Inverness, Nairn and Lochaber
(Sir Russell Johnston)

The following substitutes have been appointed to act as necessary on behalf of the delegates.

From the Government benches:

The hon. Members for:

Sheffield, Hallam (Sir Irvine Patnick)
Norfolk North (Sir Ralph Howell)
Brighton Kemptown (Sir Andrew Bowden)
Northavon (Sir John Cope)
Hayes and Harlington (Mr. Terry Dicks)
Bridlington (Mr. John Townend)
Newark (Mr. Richard Alexander)
The Baroness Hooper
The Earl of Dundee

From the Labour Party:

The hon. Members for:

Glasgow, Pollok (Mr. James Dunnachie)
Glasgow, Provan (Mr. James Wray)
Newport East (Mr. Roy Hughes)
Easington (Mr. John Cummings)
Leigh (Mr. Lawrence Cunliffe)
Leicester South (Mr. James Marshall)
Manchester Central (Mr. Robert Litherland)
The Baroness Gould of Potternewton

From the minority parties:

The Lord Mackie of Benshie.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Peru

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place with the Government of Peru concerning (a) the operation of their emergency legislation and (b) human rights in respect of the emergency legislation; and if he will make a statement. [6019]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Since the answer I gave the hon. Member for Islington, North on 6 November, Official Report, columns 554-55, I personally discussed human rights with the Peruvian President of Congress and the Peruvian Foreign Minister in Lima on 29 November. Our ambassador in Lima held a further meeting with the Director General for Human Rights in the Peruvian Foreign Ministry on 14 December.

Small and Medium Enterprises

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice has been given to procurement staff in (a) the diplomatic wing and (b) the ODA on the implications of purchasing from small and medium enterprises. [6645]

Mr. Hanley: The diplomatic wing of the FCO provides detailed advice about business with small and medium enterprises through its purchasing manual, which as been distributed to all officers in the Department with purchasing responsibilities, and to those in its executive agency, the Wilton Park conference centre.

In addition, the DTI video "Think Big, Buy Small" is shown to all participants in the Department's introductory training course "Working on Purchasing and Supply".

The ODA's "Guide to Aid Procedures" is being revised to include advice on procurement from small and medium enterprises and reflect present policy.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what work (a) the diplomatic wing of his Department and (b) the ODA have done to develop best practice in the publication of departmental procurement guidance material relevant to small and medium enterprises' needs. [6643]

Mr. Hanley: The diplomatic wing of the FCO promotes best practice relating to small and medium enterprises through its purchasing manual, which has been distributed to all officers in the Department with purchasing responsibilities and to those in its executive agency, the Wilton Park conference centre.

The manual reiterates current Government policy which is to encourage the development of small and medium enterprises by giving them a full opportunity to bid for public sector business. SMEs are included, wherever possible, in inquiries for quotations and invitations to tender.

The ODA is revising its own "Guide to Aid Procedures" to reflect similarly present policy.

General guidance for SME's on purchasing by the FCO and ODA is included in the DTI booklet "Tendering for Government Contracts".

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress (a) the diplomatic wing of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and (b) the Overseas Development Administration have made regarding establishing a contact point with responsibility for liaison with relevant business support organisations and taking forward small and medium enterprise related public procurement initiatives. [6723]

Mr. Hanley: FCO diplomatic wing contact points have been established in central London, Croydon and Milton Keynes and communicated to the Department of Trade and Industry for inclusion in the DTI booklet "Tendering for Government Contracts". The ODA has similarly forwarded to the DTI a contact point and a list of procurement agents employed by the ODA.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings (a) the diplomatic wing of his Department and (b) the ODA have had since May 1995 with organisations representing small firms to review tendering procedures. [6644]

Mr. Hanley: The diplomatic wing of the FCO and the ODA have themselves had no meetings since May 1995 with organisations representing small firms to review tendering procedures. But on behalf of all departments, the Treasury's central unit on procurement met, on 27 September 1995, the CBI small firms panel, the Association of British Chambers of Commerce and the Forum of Private Business to review tendering procedures.

Goods and Services

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much (a) the diplomatic wing of his Department and (b) the Overseas Development Administration paid to the private sector for goods and services in 1994–95. [6507]

Mr. Hanley: Excluding amounts spent on major works and on local purchases overseas, it is estimated that the diplomatic wing spent £102.4 million on goods and services supplied by the private sector in 1994–95.

ODA figures on payments made for goods and services to the private sector are not separately held, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many firms are represented by the percentage of invoices not paid by his Department within 30 days in 1994–95. [6487]

Mr. Hanley: The Foreign and Commonwealth diplomatic wing and its executive agency, Wilton Park, use a sampling method of measure payment performance. During 1994–95, 8 per cent. of invoices or 55 payments sampled by the DW were not paid on time. During the same period, WP did not pay 5 per cent. of invoices on time, representing three firms.

The Overseas Development Administration and its executive agency, the Natural Resources Institute, monitor payment performance by analysing all payments. During 1994–95, 13 per cent. of ODA invoices and 4 per cent. of NRI invoices were not paid on time. It is not possible to break this down further by supplier without incurring disproportionate cost.

Antarctic Treaty

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have been held with interested parties on the future of the Antarctic treaty and the siting of the secretariat; and if he will make a statement. [6927]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Questions on the Antarctic treaty and the location of the secretariat are raised periodically as part of our regular meetings with other Antarctic treaty parties.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have been held with signatories to the Antarctic treaty on (a) the progress of ratification and (b) the siting and operation of the secretariat. [6829]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: No recent discussions have taken place on ratification of the Antarctic treaty. The treaty was ratified on 23 June 1961. The United Kingdom ratified the environmental protocol to the Antarctic treaty on 25 April 1995.

The question of the location and operation of the Antarctic treaty secretariat is raised periodically as part of our regular meetings with other Antarctic treaty parties.

European Commission Legislation

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many of the new initiatives proposed by the Commission for 1996 in its document Com(95) 512 final will require legislation; and how many of these legislative proposals will be subject to majority vote. [6820]

Mr. David Davis: The Commission's work programme for 1996—document Com(95) 512 final—indicates that the Commission intends to bring forward 19 new pieces of primary legislation as part of its new initiatives programme in 1996. How many of these proposals will be subject to majority voting will become clear only when the Commission makes known on what treaty base it intends to bring each of them forward.

Nigeria

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's representations to the Shell oil company concerning the activities of Shell Nigeria in the Ogoni lands; and if he will make it his policy to advise Shell to review its activities in this matter. [5958]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave the hon. Member for South Dorset (Mr. Bruce) on 29 November, Official Report, column 1190. It is for Shell to make its own commercial decisions and to explain them to those who express concern about them.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the discussions his Department held with Shell in respect of discussions between Shell Nigeria and the Nigerian Government prior to the execution of Ken Saro-Wiwa. [6002]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 18 December 1995]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave the hon. Member for South Dorset on 29 November, Official Report, column, 1190. It is for Shell to comment on any discussions it may have held with the Nigerian Government.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many ministerial visits have been undertaken by each Minister in his Department between 6 July and 1 December; and how many and what percentage of these have been involved with the Minister travelling abroad. [4229]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor [holding answer 6 December 1995]: Ministers carry out many visits in the course of their official duties. During the period in question the numbers of official visits by Foreign Office Ministers were as follows:

My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary made 14 overseas visits visiting 17 countries;

the Minister for Overseas Development made five overseas visits visiting 14 countries;

the Minister of State, the right hon. Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley), made four overseas visits visiting 11 countries and one dependent territory;

the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Boothferry (Mr. Davis), made 16 overseas visits visiting six countries and one dependent territory; and I made eight overseas visits visiting 13 countries.

SCOTLAND

Public Expenditure

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will announce the provision that he has made in his public expenditure plans for Government-supported expenditure and aggregate external finance in 1997–98 and 1998–99. [7692]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My plans for Government-supported expenditure and aggregate external finance for 1997–98 and 1998–99 and the actual figures for 1996–97 which I announced on Budget day are shown in the table. The plans for 1997–98 and 1998–99 will, in the normal way, be subject to review in future public expenditure surveys.

£ million

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
GSE	6,200.7	6,231	6,245
AEF	5,400.9	5,337	5,303

COMMUNITY CARE

The above amounts of GSE and AEF are inclusive of the following sums which are being transferred to local authorities in respect of their care in the community and the independent living fund responsibilities.

	£ million
1996–97	211.6
1997–98	245.0
1998–99	269.5

LOCAL GOVERNMENT REORGANISATION

My plans for GSE and AEF for the two forward years assume that the new councils will incur local government reorganisation related costs of £20 million in 1997–98, including £3 million for redundancy costs, and no such costs in 1998–99.

My right hon. Friend announced 12 months ago that, in his 1994 public expenditure plans, he had assumed that savings of £40 million per annum would be achieved from the new local government structure from 1997–98. I think that annual savings of at least that order are possible provided the new councils streamline their management and committee structures and seek the most effective means of delivering services.

Overall, therefore, my plans assume reorganisation-related savings of £20 million (net) in 1997–98 and £40 million in 1998–99.

Trunk Road Network

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about his programme of improvements to the trunk road schemes network in 1996–97 and in the subsequent two years. [7693]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Scotland's trunk road network is vital to the continuing health of Scotland's economy. We are committed to ensuring that it continues to give the highest service to all its users. Our strategy is to give priority to the key routes of major importance to the economy and my new plans will ensure further rapid progress in that strategy. Our priorities are the A74, central Scotland motorway network, A1 and A96, but the plans will also allow significant improvements on other important parts of the trunk road network. In all, I plan for 17 major schemes to start in the next three years.

I have already announced our decision to complete the final A74 upgrade project as a design, build, finance and operate scheme. Final tendering on that scheme will be under way soon with construction starting in 1997—fulfilling our commitment to complete the A74 upgrade by 2000. Our additional plans for the financial year 1996–97 are:

M8 Newbridge underpass

M90 Halbeath interchange

A96 Kintore bypass

A96 Blackburn bypass

A9 Logie Easter

A68 Dalkeith bypass

A830 Lock Nan Uamh to Polnish bridge.

The following schemes are planned to start between April 1997 and March 1999:

M8 Baillieston to Newhouse (DBFO)

including Newhouse to Shotts (Junctions 5-6) (DBFO)

M80 Stepps to Cumbernauld (DBFO)

M77 Fenwick to Floak

A1 Haddington to Dunbar

A830 Arisaig to Kinsadel

A828 Creagan Bridge

A75 The Glen

A92 Balmedie to Tipperty.

This is an ambitious programme involving substantial levels of investment. Private finance will have an increasing role to play in ensuring that we fulfil these commitments. I have already referred to the completion of the A74 upgrade by private finance. I also intend that private finance will be used for the M8 Baillieston scheme completing the motorway link between Glasgow and Edinburgh. A tender for that scheme will be issued next year to allow work to commence in the following year. It is also my intention to use private finance to take forward the M80 Stepps-Cumbernauld scheme. Subject to the successful completion of statutory procedures, I am planning for construction to start towards the end of this three-year programme. These are important links in the motorway system and will take us near to fulfilment of the objective of completing that network and they are major opportunities for the private sector and will ensure that we remain in the forefront of developments in the private finance initiative.

But public finance has an important role to play; the increased use of private finance complements those resources and ensures that we can make rapid progress on a variety of other long-awaited schemes. In particular, I am delighted to confirm our continuing commitment to the A96, where work on both the Blackburn bypass and the Kintore bypass will commence next year. These schemes will provide major improvements in service and road safety as well as improving the environment of these communities on this important route.

Our other high priority route is the A1. Our plans clearly demonstrate our continuing commitment to its improvements. In addition to the Haddington-Dunbar dualling scheme, an intensive package of measures on the A1 will be brought forward next year under the route action plan.

A75 The Glen and A92 Balmedie-Tipperty are schemes which have come into the construction programme for the first time and are significant improvements on routes of continuing economic importance. The A75 is the main route to the port of Stranraer and the important sea passage to Northern Ireland; the scheme will therefore benefit all those who have trade links with Ireland as well as holiday makers and local traffic. The A92 Balmedie-Tipperty is heavily used by fishing, oil and agriculture interests in the north-east. I am sure these commitments and the others which confirm our previous plans will be warmly welcomed by local communities throughout Scotland.

Work will continue throughout the rest of the network also, with smaller scale but still valuable improvements being made in pursuit of the other route action plans that we have for the A7, A9, A76, A77, A90 and A96. These improvements will include village gateways, traffic-calming measures and other road safety work, tackling accident black spots through minor road curvature changes and improved lighting, signing and skid-resistance measures. The provision made will enable many other pressing but localised needs throughout the network to be addressed within the three-year period. Planning for other important schemes will also continue and these will be added to the construction programme in future years. We shall continue to keep the performance of the network under careful review in order to assess future requirements in the light of developing transport policies and emerging conditions on the network.

In conclusion, at a time of very necessary restraint on Government spending, this increased roads programme is a major boost for Scotland and emphasises the importance and value of the Government's private finance initiative. It will ensure excellent progress with the Government's key objectives for improving the trunk road network and is excellent news for business and commerce as a whole, and for the people of Scotland.

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much has been spent on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in his Department in each of the last three years. [5570]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Expenditure on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in each of the last three years is included in the running cost expenditure of my Department, which is published in the annual report.

Plant Eradication

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much Scottish Natural Heritage has paid out in grants for the eradication of Japanese knotweed, Himalayan balsam and giant hogweed for (a) 1994 and (b) 1995; and how much was paid to Argyll and Bute district council. [5768]

Mr. Kynoch: Scottish Natural Heritage made a grant of £340.16 to Jura community council for the control of Japanese knotweed in 1994 and has offered £200 in 1995. SNH also made a grant of £2,500 in 1995 to the Tweed Forum for a hogweed study. SNH has not paid out any grant towards the eradication of Himalayan balsam. No grant in connection with any of the species has been paid to Argyll and Bute district council.

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the islands in Argyll and Bute where Japanese knotweed, Himalayan balsam and giant hogweed have been recorded in the wild. [5769]

Mr. Kynoch: Although no specific records of the distribution of these three plants throughout Scotland are kept, it is known that they are commonly found in the wild—especially along riverbanks, roadsides and wasteground.

There have been reports of the presence of Japanese knotweed on Coll, Islay, Jura, Mull, Lismore, Seil and Shuna, and it is suspected to be present on Colonsay and Bute. Himalayan balsam has been reported on Seil and Eilean Righ and is suspected to occur on Bute. Giant hogweed has been reported on one site on Mull.

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the plant species for which grants are available for eradication from Scottish Natural Heritage. [5770]

Mr. Kynoch: Scottish Natural Heritage will consider offering grant for the eradication or management of any plant posing a threat to the natural heritage of Scotland or to the enjoyment of the natural heritage by the public.

Chauffeur-driven Cars

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the cost of chauffeur-driven cars used by his Department was in each of the past five years. [5855]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The cost to the Scottish Office of chauffeur-driven cars in each of the last five years is as follows:

1991–92: £234,803

1992–93: £224,163

1993–94: £256,270

1994–95: £292,143

1995–96: £150,723 (six months).

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the breakdown of the £311 million of capital investment under the private finance initiative for the national health service which he announced in his oral statement to the Scottish Grand Committee on Monday 11 December 1995 at column 4. [6794]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The figure announced in the Scottish Grand Committee was an estimate based on the current capital programme of the NHS in Scotland. It covers schemes which are likely to proceed or are already proceeding using the private finance solutions. The £311 million is derived from estimated expenditure over the following years:

1996–97: £75 million

1997–98: £113 million

1998–99: £123 million.

Some schemes currently planned will continue beyond these three years. The values include capital expenditure only and are made up of expenditure projected for the new royal infirmary of Edinburgh, Western general hospital, Law and Hairmyres hospitals and a number of other schemes.

Small and Medium Enterprises

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what advice has been given to procurement staff on the implications of purchasing from small and medium enterprises. [6639]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office purchasing, contracting and supply manual contains advice on purchasing from small and medium enterprises. Copies of the DTI video and accompanying booklet "Think Big, Buy Small" are available to all purchasing divisions.

It is Scottish Office policy to encourage small and medium enterprises to compete for business on an equal footing with larger firms when they have the expertise, capacity and financial strength appropriate to the contract being awarded.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what work his Department has done to develop best practice in the publication of departmental procurement guidance material relevant to the needs of small and medium enterprises' needs. [6637]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office has produced a booklet "Selling to The Scottish Office" which is a guide to all suppliers interested in doing business with us. This booklet is available on request and has been widely distributed through chambers of commerce. The Scottish Office also has an entry in the DTI publication "Tendering for Government Contracts" giving a named contact point for suppliers.

Representatives from the Scottish Office have taken part in a number of publicity events organised in conjunction with local enterprise bodies aimed at stimulating the interest of small and medium enterprises in becoming suppliers to the Scottish Office.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress his Department has made regarding establishing a contact point with responsibility for liaison with relevant business support organisations and taking forward small and medium enterprise related public procurement initiatives. [6712]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office has a business inquiry point within its purchasing and supply division, which deals with inquiries from all firms interested in doing business with us.

The business inquiry point is continually involved in attending supplier events featuring small and medium enterprises with the next event scheduled for February 1996.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what meetings his Department has had since May 1995 with organisations representing small firms to review tendering procedures. [6638]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A representative from the Scottish Office was unable to attend the meeting held by Treasury's central unit on procurement in September 1995 but we have received full details of the discussions.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the outcome of his Department's review of measures taken to facilitate small firms' access to appropriate areas of Government procurement in the light of best practice. [6658]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 18 December 1995]: Prior to the review the Scottish Office already had in place a number of measures dealing with small firms and these have been enhanced over the last year. Information has been made available to small firms through our "Selling to The Scottish Office" booklet, establishment of the business inquiry point, updating our entry in the DTI publication "Tendering for Government Contracts" and through attendance at local supplier events.

Scottish Conveyancing and Executry Services Board

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the sources of funding of the Scottish Conveyancing and Executry Services Board. [6291]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Conveyancing and Executry Services Board receives funding from the Secretary of State for Scotland and when operational will also receive registration fees from qualified conveyancers and executry practitioners.

Departmental Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) orders and (b) firms are represented by the percentage of invoices not paid by his Department within 30 days in 1994–95. [6494]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Based on a sample but extrapolating to a full year, we estimate that some 2,500 invoices were not paid in accordance with the appropriate contract. The statistical process we used does not provide a basis for allowing us to estimate the number of firms these represent.

Goods and Services

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department paid to the private sector for goods and services in 1994–95. [6499]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: The Scottish Office spent £124 million in 1994–95 on goods and services in 1994–95 from external suppliers, including a number of public sector bodies such as HMSO.

Capital Projects

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the capital projects embarked on by Scottish local authorities in 1994–95 and 1995–96, the responsibility for which will be transferred to Scottish water authorities in 1996; [7223]

(2) if he will set out the liabilities that will be transferred from Scottish local authorities to Scottish water authorities in 1996. [7222]

Mr. Kynoch: Relevant property, rights and liabilities of regional and islands councils will transfer to the water authorities by virtue of transfer schemes prepared under section 91 of the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Act 1994. My right hon. Friend is currently considering the schemes which have been submitted to him.

Water Authorities

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to ensure that the new Scottish water authorities will have adequate funding to meet the capital expenditure requirements together with the operational expenses required of them and to prevent a negative cash flow arising from capped income. [7225]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has announced external financing limits for 1996–97 which should be sufficient to enable the water authorities to meet capital expenditure requirements and operating expenses with overall average charge increases of not more than 6 per cent. It is for each authority to prepare and submit a charges scheme to the customers council. External financing limits for future years will be considered in the context of successive public expenditure rounds.

Development Corporations

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland for each of the development corporations in Scotland if the bids submitted for the housing stock of each corporation by alternative landlords have met all the criteria down by his Department. [5798]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 14 December 1995]: My right hon. Friend was satisfied that the bids from the landlords which appeared on the ballots in East Kilbride and Glenrothes conformed with the criteria set out in the guidance issued. The bids received in Cumbernauld, Livingston and Irvine are currently being evaluated by the respective development corporations which are expected to make their ballot recommendations to my right hon. Friend shortly.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what approaches Irvine housing association has made to Irvine development corporation requesting additional funding from the corporation since the association's establishment; how much Irvine housing association has received in financial support from Irvine development corporation up until this point; how this was broken down; and what outstanding requests for support from Irvine housing association are being considered by Irvine development corporation. [5800]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 14 December 1995]: Prior to Irvine housing association becoming operational on 28 August 1995 it received support of £299,138 from Irvine development corporation. The breakdown is shown in the table. Since 28 August the corporation's only contribution has been £950 per month towards the costs of the senior official on secondment to the association from the corporation. There are no outstanding requests for additional funding.

Professional fees	133,833
Staffing costs	131,464
Fitting out office	39,754
Sundry	18,824
	323,875
Less contribution from Scottish Homes	24,737
	299,138

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements the board of Irvine development corporation has put in place to avoid a conflict of interests arising from the role of the vice chair of Irvine development corporation as the chair of the Irvine housing association. [5802]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The corporation's standing orders require the members of the board to declare any conflicts of interest.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to be in a position to announce the bidding organisations which will be included on the ballots for the housing stock of those development corporations which have still to ballot their tenants on the disposal of their housing stock. [5804]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 14 December 1995]: My right hon. Friend expects to announce his decisions during the first quarter of 1996.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions his Department has held with Irvine development corporation over the secondment of the former chief housing manager of Irvine development corporation to the Irvine housing association since the association's establishment; how much this secondment is costing the Irvine development corporation; when it is due to end; and if he will instruct the Irvine development corporation to end this arrangement. [5806]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The secondment is discussed as part of the on-going dialogue between officials in the Department and the corporation. The current cost of the secondment to the corporation is £950 per month. The Department is content for the secondment to be reviewed by the corporation after the outcome of the ballot of tenants is known.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many tenants of Scotland's development corporations have lost part or all of their right to buy as a result of accepting tenancies with housing associations that have been transferred to these bodies as a result of trickle transfer by those development corporations. [5786]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 14 December 1995]: None. All trickle transfer sales are of vacant untenanted homes.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what involvement his Department had in establishing the ballot areas which will be used by Irvine development corporation in balloting its tenants on an alternative landlord in advance of the corporation's wind-up; what criteria were considered in drafting these ballot areas; and what priority was accorded to an assessment of the housing stock transferred and still to be transferred to the Irvine housing association, indicating the form of discussions on this subject. [5787]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The Scottish Office approved the corporation's detailed plans for the disposals of its housing stock. A copy was sent to the hon. Member on 20 April 1995. The criteria taken into account in deciding the ballot areas were, as set out on page 7, to identify areas that would be attractive to a wide range of prospective landlords, the requirements of the existing communities and the geography of the area. The transfer of housing stock to Irvine housing association is a key part of the corporation's broader housing strategy intended to achieve maximum diversification of ownership of rented housing in the period prior to the ballot tenants and to provide meaningful choice for tenants at the ballot. The transfer to Irvine housing association is among the matters discussed at regular meetings between the Department and the corporation.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions his Department had with Irvine development corporation in advance of trickle transfer of stock to Irvine housing association relating to guarantees to be sought from the housing association about the right-to-buy entitlement of Irvine development corporation tenants transferring to Irvine housing association in advance of the ballots of tenants. [5788]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 14 December 1995]: None. All trickle transfer sales to Irvine housing association are of vacant untenanted homes.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions have taken place between his Department and Irvine development corporation in respect of the vice chair of Irvine development corporation continuing as the chair of the board of the Irvine housing association; if the Irvine development corporation intends this arrangement to end; and what assessment he has made of possible conflicts of interest arising between Irvine development corporation and the Irvine housing association in the disposal of Irvine development corporation's housing stock. [5799]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The appointment of the chairman of Irvine housing association is a matter for the association.

The guidance issued by the Scottish Office provides the criteria against which all bids are examined and the final decision on which organisations should appear on the ballot rests with my right hon. Friend.

Social Work Budgets

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the disaggregation of social work budgets by (a) Strathclyde regional council and (b) other regional and islands councils; and if he will make a statement. [4630]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 18 December 1995]: As part of the process of preparing notional 1995–96 budgets for their successor councils, Strathclyde, Central, Grampian, Lothian and Tayside regional councils have disaggregated their 1995–96 revenue budgets, including those for social work, to the new council areas. This exercise has been carried out having regard to principles prepared in consultation with the councils concerned and the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities.

Disaggregation is not necessary in the case of the other four regional councils and the three islands councils.

Asbestos

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the use of asbestos in the construction of public sector houses; and if he will make a statement. [4122]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 5 December 1995]: No information is collected centrally on the general use of asbestos in the construction of public sector dwellings. However, it is estimated from the first Scottish house condition survey that in 1991 between 3,000 and 5,000 public sector dwellings had sheets or tiles of cement reinforced by asbestos as their principal roof cover.

Local authorities were reminded in 1983 of their duties in connection with asbestos materials in buildings and urged to check whether asbestos products were used in any part of their housing stock. Further guidance was issued in 1986. It is for local authorities, Scottish Homes and new town development corporations to deal with any problems arising from asbestos from within the resources made available to them by the Secretary of State.

Water Rates

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will set out, by local authority, the amounts paid from reserves in Scotland to reduce the water rates in 1994–95 and 1995–96. [7224]

Mr. Kynoch: The information requested is contained in the following table:

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Bilateral Aid

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the countries which receive priority for bilateral aid under the Government's policy of providing aid to the poorest. [6186]

Mr. Hanley: In 1994–95, 55 per cent. of ODA bilateral aid, including emergency aid, went to the top 20 recipients. Of these, 17 were among the poorest countries in the world—with a GNP per capita under $676 in 1992. The other three were lower middle income countries—with a GNP per capita between $676 and $2,695 in 1992. The countries concerned are in the table.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the developing countries which are the direct recipients of aid from the United Kingdom indicating for the last available year the moneys paid in aid to each country, and the debt repayments made to the United Kingdom Government and United Kingdom banks. [6654]

Mr. Hanley: A list of developing countries showing the amount of aid granted to each country by the United Kingdom Government in financial year 1994–95 may be found in table 7 "Bilateral Aid by Country" in "Overseas Development Administration: British Aid Statistics 1990/91–1994/95", a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House of Commons.

Details of debt repayments made by developing countries to UK banks are commercially sensitive.

West Bank and Gaza

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the level of support for British Council projects in the west bank and Gaza in the last five years. [6686]

Mr. Hanley: British Council expenditure in the west bank and Gaza using grant in aid funding from the Overseas Development Administration and the diplomatic wing of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office was as follows:

1990–91: £471,000

1991–92: £499,000

1992–93: £973,000

1993–94: £997,000

1994–95: £1,050,000

In addition to work funded by the Government grant in aid, the council is contracted by ODA to manage its technical co-operation training programme, and some individual projects. It also manages the Chevening scholarship programme which is funded by ODA and the diplomatic wing of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Nigeria (Police Training)

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what were the costs of United Kingdom police training consultancy visits to Nigeria in each year since 1990; how many consultants visited Nigeria in each of those years; what was the total number of visits by consultants in each of those years; and to which United Kingdom police forces those consultants belonged. [6264]

Mr. Hanley: Apart from two short training advisory visits in September and October 1995, the project was staffed not by consultants but by long-term contract officers—technical co-operation officers. Overall staffing costs, including travel, accommodation, etcetera, in each year since 1990–91 are as follows:

1990–91: £16,869

1991–92: £188,612

1992–93: £253,978

1993–94: £232,199

1994–95: £133,946

1995–96: £60,000 (estimate).

The numbers of TCOs or consultants on the ground during all or part of each year since 1990–91 is as follows:

1990–91: 1

1991–92: 4

1992–93: 4

1993–94: 6

1994–95: 3

1995–96: 3.

The TCOs/consultants came from the Metropolitan, Cleveland, West Yorkshire and Greater Manchester police forces. There was also a retired British Transport police officer.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the nature of the training provided to Nigerian police officers in the United Kingdom and Nigeria since 1990. [6265]

Mr. Hanley: Training of Nigerian police officers in the United Kingdom has covered:

UK police training methodology.

Tackling serious crime including fraud.

Maintenance of public order (1990 and 1991 only).

Operating a Central Planning Services Unit.

Police Force administration and the direction of operations.

Command and management functions.

Training in Nigeria has covered:

Developing training methodologies and conducting classes.

Using audio-visual aids.

Preparing course work, examinations and training manuals.

Advising on detective training needs, including restructuring courses and reviewing teaching methodology.

Child Labour

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place with the International Monetary Fund and World bank concerning the use of child labour in countries that have been subject to structural adjustment programmes; and if he will make a statement. [6020]

Mr. Hanley: The World bank and the IMF participated in the world summit for social development in Copenhagen in March. Both organisations support programmes which strengthen the social dimensions of economic development, promote equitable economic growth and reduce poverty: they recognise child labour as one of the most serious manifestations of poverty.

Bosnia

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the amount of humanitarian aid provided to Bosnia in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96; and if he will make a statement on its purpose in each year. [6017]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 18 December 1995]: The ODA has contributed over £283 million since 1991 to the former Yugoslavia: £148 bilaterally and £135 million through the European Community. A further breakdown of bilateral expenditure, by financial year, is as follows:

1993–94: £51.8 million

1994–95: £43.508 million

1995–96: £14.15 million (latest figure).

We are unable to provide a separate breakdown for Bosnia.

The aim of the aid programme to the former Yugoslavia has been constant: to alleviate the suffering of people affected by war by getting food and medical relief into the country and assisting with infrastructure and utilities works.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

British Rail (Members' Parking Passes)

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Lord President of the Council what discussions he has had with British Rail about the continued issue of free parking passes to hon. Members.

Mr. Newton: None. This will be a matter for Railtrack and the train operating companies to consider.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Disabled People

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many disabled persons in Northern Ireland are presently awaiting adaptations to their homes. [5664]

Mr. Moss: Most of those disabled persons awaiting adaptations to their homes are either in public sector housing or in the private sector awaiting decisions on grant aid. These are matters for the Housing Executive. I understand from the chief executive that the information requested is not readily available. I will, however, write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many disabled persons in Northern Ireland are presently awaiting new build disabled accommodation. [5665]

Mr. Moss: I understand from the chief executive of the Housing Executive that the information relating to public sector housing is not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

International Investments Ltd. (Gibraltar)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions have taken place with the Government of the Irish Republic in respect of International Investments Ltd. (Gibraltar). [6248]

Sir John Wheeler: The Irish Government are aware that there are continuing inquiries into this company's activities.

Housing

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of the population of Northern Ireland live in (a) public and (b) private housing. [6529]

Sir John Wheeler: The 1991 census of population shows that 70 per cent. of the Northern Ireland population live in private housing and 28 per cent. in public housing. The remaining 2 per cent. of the population mostly live in communal establishments.

George Finbar Ross

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action has been taken to secure the extradition of George Finbar Ross with regard to contacts with the United States Government since May 1995. [6247]

Sir John Wheeler: There have been no contacts with the US Government in the period since May 1995.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects Crown counsel to respond to queries arising from the direction to prosecute George Finbar Ross. [6215]

Sir John Wheeler: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 25 October, Official Report, column 652.

Pensioners (Transport Concessions)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the reciprocal arrangements for Northern Ireland pensioners to be entitled to free transport in Eire and for Eire pensioners to be entitled to transport concessions in Northern Ireland; and how the scheme is funded. [6452]

Mr. Moss: There are no reciprocal arrangements. The cross-border free travel scheme is promoted and funded by the Republic of Ireland's Department of Social Welfare.

Departmental Running Costs

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimate of the cost of running his departmental office, and that of his predecessor, for each year since 1990–91 including an estimate for the current year, broken down into (a) telephone bills (b) total staff costs (c) press and communications (d) entertainment (e) alcoholic drinks (f) non-alcoholic drinks (g) stationery (h) office refurbishment and (i) other. [6389]

Sir John Wheeler: The information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Firearms

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many legally held firearms there are in Northern Ireland (a) in total and (b) of each type. [6729]

Sir John Wheeler: At 31 October 1995 there were 133,769 firearms held legally in accordance with article 3 of the Firearms (Northern Ireland) Order 1981.

These are broken down as follows:

Type	Number
Shotguns	85,186
Pistols	9,580
Revolvers	3,448
Rifles .22	12,456
Rifles centrefire	1,279
Air weapons	20,982
Humane killers	122
Signal Pistols	118
Starting pistols	87
Collectors items	501
Spear guns	10
Total	133,769

Belfast Corporation Act 1930

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to repeal section 42 of the Belfast Corporation Act 1930. [7166]

Mr. Moss: None.

Small and Medium Enterprises

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what advice has been given to procurement staff on the implications of purchasing from small and medium enterprises; [6630]

(2) what work his Department has done to develop best practice in the publication of departmental procurement guidance material relevant to small and medium enterprises' needs; [6628]

(3) what work his Department paid to the private sector for goods and services in 1994–95; [6502]

(4) what meetings his Department has had since May 1995 with organisations representing small firms to review tendering procedures; [6629]

(5) what progress his Department has made regarding establishing a contact point with responsibility for liaison with relevant business support organisations and taking forward small and medium enterprise related public procurement initiatives. [6715]

Sir John Wheeler: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave her on 18 December, Official Report, column 909.

EU Peace and Reconciliation Programme

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will provide a breakdown of the provisional allocations from the European Union peace and reconciliation programme included in the 1995 public expenditure survey for health and personal social services programme; [6437]

(2) if he will provide a breakdown of the provisional allocations from the European Union peace and reconciliation programme included in the 1995 public expenditure survey for the education, arts and libraries programme; [6438]

(3) if he will provide a breakdown of the provisional allocations from the European Union peace and reconciliation programme included in the 1995 public expenditure survey for the environmental and miscellaneous services programme; [6439]

(4) if he will provide a breakdown of the provisional allocations from the European Union peace and reconciliation programme included in the 1995 public expenditure survey for the housing programme; [6440]

(5) if he will provide a breakdown of the provisional allocations from the European Union peace and reconciliation programme included in the 1995 public expenditure survey for the roads and transport programme; [6441]

(6) if he will provide a breakdown of the provisional allocations from the European Union peace and reconciliation programme included in the 1995 public expenditure survey for the agriculture, fisheries and forestry services and support programmes; [6445]

(7) if he will provide a breakdown of the provisional allocations from the European Union peace and reconciliation programme included in the 1995 public expenditure survey for the energy programme; [6446]

(8) if he will provide a breakdown of the provisional allocations from the European Union peace and reconciliation programme included in the 1995 public expenditure survey for the industry, trade and employment programme. [6447]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is as follows:

European union peace and reconciliation programme—provisional allocations

Public Expenditure

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide a breakdown of the reduction in planned expenditure for 1996–97 in "Other Public Services" in the 1995 public expenditure survey. [6442]

Sir John Wheeler: The decrease in provision falls mainly in the superannuation vote, where 1995–96 includes provision for early departure costs under a Government-wide scheme. Provision in 1996–97 will be agreed when the position on redundancies is clearer.

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide a breakdown of the estimated reduction in expenditure in the industry, trade and employment programme for (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99, as shown in the 1995 public expenditure survey. [6443]

Mr. Ancram: The breakdown of the estimated reduction in expenditure in the industry, trade and employment programme is as follows.

£ million

	1997–98	1998–99
Industrial Development Board	3	—
EC Pool	1	—

Action for Community Employment

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, if he will define the extent of proposed reductions in expenditure on the ACE training scheme in each of the three years covered in the 1995 public expenditure survey. [6444]

Mr. Ancram: The proposed reductions in expenditure on the ACE training scheme in each of the three years covered in the 1995 public expenditure survey are as follows:

1996–97: £12.5 million (23 per cent.)

1997–98: £14.3 million (27 per cent.)

1998–99: £11.4 million (21 per cent.).

Acute Hospitals Reorganisation Project

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what studies or reports have been provided to those people who have been consulted, or who have a right to be consulted, about the work of the acute hospitals reorganisation project currently being undertaken by the steering group headed by Dr. James McKenna; [7338]

(2) what provision is made for access to the relevant studies for those people who are entitled to be consulted about the work of the acute hospitals reorganisation project currently being undertaken by the steering group headed by Dr. James McKenna; [7339]

(3) if he will ensure that all relevant parties have full and complete access to all studies relevant to the work of the steering group chaired by Dr. James McKenna. [7340]

Mr. Moss: The steering group which is taking forward the acute hospitals reorganisation project has published two reports for consultation. These are "In Shape for the future" and "A Singular Service". Both documents were issued to a wide range of interested parties for comment. The steering group hopes to publish a third report for consultation in the near future and, as before, this will be made available to all interested organisations and individuals.

Child Support

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps to prevent the Child Support Agency from declaring the parent with custody the absent parent in equal shared care arrangements. [7358]

Mr. Moss: In establishing who is the parent with care and who is the absent parent for child support purposes account is taken of the amount of overnight care provided by each parent. Where overnight is divided equally the parent receiving child benefit is treated as the parent with care. There are no plans to change these arrangements.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will amend the child benefit regulations to give a parent with custody the sole right to payment of child benefit in equal shared care cases. [7359]

Mr. Moss: No. Where both parents satisfy the conditions for entitlement to child benefit and the parents are unwilling to make a joint election as to which of them shall be entitled, the Department may at its discretion determine which of them is to be entitled. In reaching such a decision, the Department must consider the actual costs each customer incurs in looking after the child, and the impact of its decision on the welfare of the child. Court orders for the care of children cannot be accepted in isolation as a decision on child benefit.

Housing Benefit (Tenants)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the Housing Executive provides the Inland Revenue with details of housing benefit paid to tenants of private landlords. [7362]

Mr. Moss: The Northern Ireland Housing Executive does not provide the Inland Revenue with details of housing benefit paid to tenants of private landlords.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received about the evasion of tax in respect of housing benefits paid to tenants of private landlords. [7364]

Mr. Moss: None.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was paid in housing benefits to tenants of private landlords in each of the last three years. [7363]

Mr. Moss: The amount of housing benefit paid to tenants of private landlords in each of the last three years is as follows:

Year	Total payment made to tenants of private landlords
1992–93	42,986,889.41
1993–94	51,605,437.17
1994–95	60,670,126.62

Motor Vehicles (Damage Claims)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the Department of the Environment (Northern Ireland) policy in respect of acceptance of liability in respect of claims submitted for damage to motor vehicles when failure to maintain the carriageway is alleged. [7373]

Mr. Moss: Article 8 of the Roads (Northern Ireland) Order 1993 allows vehicles damage compensation claims to be made against the Department for failure to maintain the road. The same article, however, provides the Department with defences to such claims. If, for example, the Department can show that it operated a reasonable system of inspection and repair of the road in question, there is no entitlement to compensation and a claim in such circumstances must be refused. It is the policy of the Department to investigate fully all damage claims made against it and after a thorough investigation a decision is taken either to settle it, reject it or refer it to another party, for example, a contractor.

Housing Policy Review

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects to publish the housing policy review and if he will make a statement. [7546]

Mr. Moss: I have today placed in the Library of the House the Government's proposals for future housing policy in Northern Ireland entitled "Building on Success". This review has taken place following extensive local consultations in Northern Ireland. Those who responded, almost without exception, praised the work of the Housing Executive in providing and managing public sector housing. The Government are determined to build on that success. The proposals published today seek to strengthen the executive's role in a number of important strategic ways including the determination of the locations for all new social housing, their subsequent allocation, the monitoring and oversight of housing associations and the private rented sector, and urban and rural regeneration. I want to maximise the private housebuilding sector's contribution, and also that of housing associations which have access to private finance. The document outlines proposals through which this could take place, together with a number of other policy proposals which the Government believe will help achieve their housing objectives for Northern Ireland. I have now initiated consultations on these proposals, with comments sought by 31 March 1996, following which decisions will be taken.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Military Aircraft Exports (Indonesia)

Sir Alan Haselhurst: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about exports of military aircraft to Indonesia. [7545]

Mr. Nelson: I have authorised the issue of licences to British Aerospace in respect of the contract signed in 1993 to export Hawk aircraft and support equipment to Indonesia. This decision has been made, following consultation with the Ministry of Defence and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, in the light of the established and internationally agreed criteria for military exports. In accordance with Government policy, a thorough assessment of the likelihood of these aircraft being used for internal repression in Indonesia or East Timor has been undertaken. This assessment has concluded that it is not likely that these aircraft will be so used. In addition, the Indonesian Government have given assurances that the aircraft will not be used for internal security or against civilians in any part of Indonesia or East Timor.

It has been the practice of successive Governments not to disclose details of individual export licence cases, but, as I consider that the public interest in this matter outweighs the need for confidentiality, I have decided to make an exception.

British Coal Enterprise

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consideration he has given to maintaining outstanding commitments to projects or partnerships not completed by British Coal Enterprise at the time of its sale. [5887]

Mr. Page: The sale of British Coal Enterprise is a matter for British Coal. Where projects or agreements have been entered into prior to the completion of the sale these will pass, subject to the consent of the third parties involved in certain cases, to the purchasers of the relevant activities of BCE.

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if any European regional development fund grants paid to British Coal Enterprise will have to be repaid after privatisation. [5888]

Mr. Page: Where projects supported by ERDF grant and grant payments are complete, the Government do not believe that the sale of British Coal Enterprise or of its workspace activities, will affect the status of the projects or of the grants, provided that the assets continue to be used for eligible purposes and in accordance with the terms of the relevant offers of grant.

Where projects supported by ERDF grant or the associated grant payments are not complete, or where offers of grant are still to be made in response to applications from BCE, the Government will seek assurances from any prospective purchaser of BCE, or of its workspace activities, that they will complete the projects in accordance with the terms of the offer of ERDF grant, continue to use the assets for eligible purposes and comply with the other requirements, both of the Government and of European Community law, as they relate to the offer of those grants.

Electricity Prices

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in real terms, and expressed as a percentage of the 1994 figure, what is the annual average for the electricity component of the retail prices index in (a) 1979, (b) at the time of privatisation and (c) at the present time. [7031]

Mr. Lang: In real terms, domestic electricity prices, excluding VAT, have fallen by 7 per cent. between privatisation—taken to be the second quarter of 1990—and the third quarter of 1995. The detailed information requested is given in the table.

	Index number in current terms[1]	Real terms index number[2]	Percentage of 1994 figure
1979	44.2	96.4	100.2
1990	100.0	100.0	104.0

Business Investment

Mr. Booth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate his Department has made of the level of investment by United Kingdom industry since 1979. [5895]

Mr. Oppenheim: Business investment is over a third higher, in volume terms, than in 1979.

Mr. Booth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate his Department has made of the proportion of investment in United Kingdom industry by foreign sources for each year since 1979. [5894]

Mr. Oppenheim: The information required is given in the table.

Percentage of UK manufacturing investment by foreign-owned companies

Year	Number
1979	23.2
1981	25.5
1983	23.1
1984	21.1

Mr. Booth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the figures for investment in the United Kingdom in industry in relation to (a) investment in Germany and (b) investment in France in industry for each year since 1979. [5896]

Mr. Oppenheim: OECD estimates for business investment in the UK, France and Germany, expressed in relation to levels of GDP, are shown in the table. Since 1979, business investment in the UK has averaged 12.5 per cent. of GDP compared with 12 per cent. in Germany and 11 per cent. in France.

Oil and Gas Exploration

Dr. Godman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what information he has concerning the exploration of oil and gas fields in the firth of Clyde, the sound of Jura and the sound of Mull; and if he will make a statement. [5163]

Mr. Page: There are no extant oil and gas exploration licences for the firth of Clyde, sound of Jura and sound of Mull. No applications were received for these areas in the recent seventh round of onshore oil and gas licensing.

As in previous onshore rounds, all unlicensed areas including estuarine and near shore waters, referred to as "watery areas", were offered for licensing.

Chauffeur-driven Cars

Mr. MacShane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what the cost of chauffeur-driven cars used by his Department was in each of the past five years. [5861]

Mr. Lang: The total cost, excluding VAT, of chauffeur-driven cars is as follows:

Year	£
1990–91	197,496
1991–92	213,295
1992–93	321,664
1993–94	399,180
1994–95	411,827

These figures also reflect structural and ministerial changes within the Department resulting from machinery of government changes.

Docks Dispute (Merseyside)

Mr. Parry: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will establish an inquiry into the dispute between Merseyside dockers and the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company, and if he will make a statement. [7323]

Mr. John M. Taylor: No. The dispute is solely a matter for the parties concerned.

Mr. Parry: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the talks between ACAS and the Transport and General Workers Union concerning the dispute between the dock workers and the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company. [7156]

Mr. Taylor: No. ACAS does not divulge details of its contacts with the parties to a dispute without their permission.

Company Name Changes

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many companies have changed their name following direction by the Secretary of State under section 32 of the Companies Act 1985, in each of the last 10 years; and if he will name the companies involved and the nature of their business. [5773]

Mr. Oppenheim: Our records show that, in the last 10 years, one company has changed its name following a direction under section 32 of the Companies Act. It is not our practice to disclose details of a company so directed.

Marked Goods

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action is available by his Department or trading standards officers if goods purporting to be made in Sheffield and so stamped are not; and if he will make a statement. [6681]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Under the Trade Descriptions Act 1968, it is a criminal offence to mark goods with a false indication of their place of manufacture or production. The Act empowers trading standards officers to prosecute cases of false origin marking in the courts.

Small and Medium Enterprises

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress his Department has made regarding establishing a contact point with responsibility for liaison with relevant business support organisations and taking forward small and medium enterprise related public procurement initiatives. [6722]

Mr. Page: The small firms and business link division of my Department is the contact point for general small business issues relating to public procurement. However, departmental procurement contacts for specific goods and services have also been established in DTI headquarters. Contacts for general departmental procurement queries exist in headquarters and the Department's executive agencies. Details are published in "Tendering for Government Contracts".

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many and what percentage of small and medium enterprises (a) have been informed of and (b) have used the regional supply network; and what has been its cost to public funds. [6518]

Mr. Page: Information about how many small and medium enterprises have been informed of, or have used, the regional supply network could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. DTI expenditure was £1.3 million in 1994–95 and expenditure to end of November in 1995–96 is £1.4 million. The budget for each of the years 1995–96, 1996–97 and 1997–98 is £2.8 million.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what advice has been given to procurement staff on the implications of purchasing from small and medium enterprises; [6612]

(2) what work his Department has done to develop best practice in the publication of departmental procurement guidance material relevant to small and medium enterprises, needs. [6610]

Mr. Page: A copy of the chapter from the Department's procurement manual providing guidance on purchasing from small and medium enterprises has been placed in the Library of the House.

My Department has published a guide for small firms on "Tendering for Government Contracts", which contains advice on and details of the procurement requirements for each Government Department and its agencies, and a guide for Government procurement officers on purchasing from small firms called "Think Big, Buy Small". These publications are currently being updated and will be placed in the Library of the House in due course.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what meetings his Department has had since May 1995 with organisations representing small firms to review tendering procedures. [6611]

Mr. Page: My Department was represented at a meeting held by Her Majesty's Treasury officials between departmental purchasing officers and representatives of the CBI small firms council, the Association of British Chambers of Commerce and the Forum of Private Business on 27 September 1995 to review tendering procedures.

Exporting Firms

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many United Kingdom firms were exporting (a) in April 1995, and (b) on the latest available date. [6553]

Mr. Oppenheim: According to the most recent information from Her Majesty's Customs and Excise, there were approximately 112,000 firms exporting from the UK in 1994. This figure includes shipping agents but excludes those firms below the United Kingdom VAT registration threshold.

Design Advisers (Business Links)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many design advisers are currently in place in business links; in which business links they are situated; and who they are. [6517]

Mr. Page: There are currently 18 design counsellors in business links. A list of the counsellors and the business links in which they are based has been placed in the Library of the House.

Arms Exports

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what account is taken of human rights records in determining whether to permit the export of United Kingdom arms to overseas Governments. [7067]

Mr. Oppenheim: My Department seeks the advice of the FCO in making decisions on individual export licence applications for military, security and para-military equipment, which are taken in the light of extensive information on the human rights situation. Export licences would not be granted for equipment likely to be used for internal repression.

Export Licences

Mr. Simpson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will list the dates since 1985 when Wickman Harrison applied for export licences for the sale of machine tools to the Nasr, Badr, Shuala, Aquabin Nafi and Al-Am facilities in Iraq; [5597]

(2) if he will list the dates since 1985 when Philips Scientific applied for export licences for the sale of an atomic absorption spectrometer to the Tuwaitha and Hutteen facilities in Iraq; [5598]

(3) if he will list the dates since 1985 when Avesta Steels Ltd. applied for an export licence for the sale of non-corrosive steel to the State Organisation for Technical Industries in Iraq; [5604]

(4) if he will list the dates since 1985 when Atlas Equipment Ltd. applied for an export licence to sell nuclear triggers to the Al-Qaqaa General Establishment in Iraq; [5606]

(5) if he will list the dates since 1985 when Astra Holdings applied for an export licence for the sale of munitions to the Huteen and Nasr facilities in Iraq; [5605]

(6) if he will list the dates since 1985 when Cincinati Milacron Ltd. applied for export licences for the sale of machine tools to the Nasr, Badr, Shuala, Aquabin-Nafi and Al-Am facilities in Iraq; [5603]

(7) if he will list the dates since 1985 when Norman Rushworth Ltd. applied for export licences for the sale of machine tools to the Nasr, Badr, Shuala, Aquabin Nafi and Al-Am facilities in Iraq; [5599]

(8) if he will list the dates since 1985 when Gatewood Engineering Ltd. applied for an export licence for the sale of earth moving equipment to the Hutteen and Nasr facilities in Iraq; [5600]

(9) if he will list the dates since 1985 when Marconi applied for an export licence for the sale of artillery metereological systems to the Hutteen and Nasr facilities in Iraq; [5601]

(10) if he will list the dates since 1985 when Millitorr Engineering Ltd. applied for export licences for the sale of resin mixers to Iraq. [5602]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 14 December 1995]: Successive Administrations have not routinely disclosed such information, which is covered by commercial confidentiality, unless there is a clear public interest in doing so. Her Majesty's Customs and Excise is the investigating authority for breaches of export controls, and if the hon. Member has any evidence of such breaches he should inform customs.

Regional Grants

Mr. David Porter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what financial assistance through Government schemes will be available from 1 January 1996, for which the Lowestoft area will be eligible for support, development and diversification of its economic base; and if he will make a statement. [6201]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 18 December 1995]: The following are the main measures of Government and European assistance for which funding could be sought for projects to promote regeneration, economic development and direct support for businesses in the Lowestoft area:

(i) Objective 5b funding for the designated area within Lowestoft, in accordance with East Anglia Single Programming Document;

(ii) Single Regeneration Budget Challenge Funding in accordance with the bidding guidance to be issued early in 1996;

(iii) Two National DTI grant schemes for businesses. The Small Firms Merit Award for Research and Technology (SMART) is an annual competition offering financial support towards the development of commercially viable innovative projects. Support for Projects under Research (SPUR) offers flat rate grants to develop innovative products and processes;

(iv) Financial assistance to undertake market research or to visit overseas markets is also available through the DTI/Foreign and Commonwealth Overseas Trade Services programme.

Mr. Porter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions his Department is having with businesses, local authorities and other partners in Waveney to produce funding bids for support, development and diversification of the economic base of Lowestoft, in 1996 and beyond; and if he will make a statement. [6204]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 18 December 1995]: The government office for eastern region has indicated to the various interests in the Lowestoft area that it stands ready to discuss such bids. Preliminary discussions based on objective 5b funding and the third round of the single regeneration budget challenge fund will be taking place before the end of the month.

Mr. Porter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the eligibility criteria for gas and oil-related projects in the next round of regional challenge, mainstream objective 5b and single regeneration budget funding grants; how they are administered on a regional basis; and if he will make a statement. [6190]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 18 December 1995]: There are no specific criteria under these funding and challenge competitions in relation to oil and gas-related projects, but depending on the nature of any future projects account might need to be taken of any wider impact that they might have on the sector in terms of its existing capacity and employment. The same considerations would apply to projects in other industrial sectors. It is expected that the regional administrative arrangements for these measures will remain unchanged.

Mr. Porter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the eligibility criteria by which a scheme in Swaffham, Norfolk, won the regional challenge funding for East Anglia; and if he will make a statement. [6203]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 18 December 1995]: All bids, including the winning regional challenge project for the East Anglia objective 5(b) area, were assessed against the criteria for the regional challenge competition and those provided for in the East Anglia single programming document.

Mr. Porter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what (i) consultation, (ii) visits and (iii) submissions the government office for the eastern region was involved in and when they took place, to date in 1995, in connection with regional challenge and objective 5b funding in Suffolk and Norfolk; and if he will make a statement. [6196]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 18 December 1995]: Prior to the formal submission of the regional challenge bids, visits were made to Breckland district council on 10 July and Waveney district council on 26 July at the request of those councils. A sub-group of the objective 5b monitoring committee, accompanied by GOER officials, visited Breckland district council on 4 September and Waveney district council on 13 September for presentations on the regional challenge bids, in preparation for the consideration of those bids by the monitoring committee on 18 September. Senior officials from GOER visited Waveney district council on 10 November to discuss developments in market conditions affecting the regional challenge proposals for the marine base.

Other contacts, mainly by telephone and in writing, have taken place throughout the period, largely for clarification of the bids.

Mr. Porter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the considerations above the strict eligibility criteria he employed in determining the regional challenge and objective 5b funding applications for Suffolk and Norfolk. [6198]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 18 December 1995]: No special considerations above those applying to regional challenge and objective 5b funding were employed in determining the eligibility of the applications for the regional challenge competition. Projects considered to be eligible were assessed against the criteria in the regional challenge bidding guidance and the selection criteria provided for in the East Anglia single programming document. Those project selection criteria included value for money, taking into account the likelihood of achievement of the projected outputs from the proposals.

Mr. Porter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade at what stage during 1995 (a) his officials, (b) the government office for the eastern region and (c) he personally, determined that gas and oil-related projects were ineligible for regional challenge and objective 5b funding; and if he will make a statement. [6202]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 18 December 1995]: No such decisions have been taken.

Mr. Porter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade under what circumstances his Department reconsiders reworked bids from the Lowestoft area for funding assistance for projects relating to (a) gas and oil, (b) a port and (c) technological development, during 1996; and if he will make a statement. [6197]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 18 December 1995]: The government office for the eastern region stands ready to consider both new and revised bids from the Lowestoft area against the criteria for the range of measures listed in my previous answers. Any revised bids for oil and gas projects would also be expected to take account of the recent, local market developments in the offshore supply sector which have affected the feasibility of the regional challenge bid for an integrated offshore marine base.

Radio Communications Agency

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many times the Radio Communications Agency has had cause to reject an application from Scope Marketing (Communications UK) Ltd. Totnes, for an EC type examination certificate under the Electromagnetic Compatibility Regulations 1992 due to presentational errors from the type approvals laboratories. [7006]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 18 December 1995]: The Radiocommunications Agency has not rejected any applications from Scope Marketing (Communications UK) Ltd. Totnes for an EC type examination certificate under the Electromagnetic Compatibility Regulations 1992 No. 2372, solely on the grounds of presentational errors.

Contractorisation

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what systems are in place in (a) the Patent Office, (b) Companies House and (c) the Insolvency Service to compare costs of outside bidders with in-house services prior to any contractorisation; and if he will make a statement on the timetable and stages of contractorisation at each agency. [5836]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 18 December 1995]: The basis for assessing bids in each agency will be overall value for money, including both the cost and quality of service. On costs, any bids will be assessed against a benchmark of the cost of continuing in-house provision, taking into account any planned efficiencies.

On the timetables for each exercise: (a) Patent Office.

Contracting out is being considered for four areas of the Patent Office—the operation of London front office; accommodation and office services; marketing and information services and information technology services. The first two are in the early stages of competitive tender. If it is decided to award a contract, it is envisaged that contractors would begin work in the early summer of 1996. The other two areas are the subject of feasibility studies.

(b) The Insolvency Service: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for North Devon (Mr. Harvey) on 12 December 1995, Official Report, column 599.

(c) Companies House: Tenders are currently being evaluated for the London and satellite offices in England, the Edinburgh office, and the central inquiry unit and postal search services and the cheque processing functions in Cardiff. If it is decided to award any contract, it is currently envisaged that contractors would be in place by April.

Tender invitations are due to be issued in January 1996 in relation to office services in Cardiff which covers typing, reception, and so on.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultations have taken place with staff and unions and (a) the Patent Office and (b) the Insolvency Service with particular reference to benchmarking. [5839]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 18 December 1995]: Regular meetings have been held with the agency trade unions and staff have also been briefed regularly regarding the progress of the contracting-out process in both agencies. The issue of benchmarks has been covered in discussions or in correspondence with trade unions. Suggestions for efficiency improvements from staff put forward to management and agreed in the normal way are incorporated in the benchmarks.

Public Opinion Surveys

Mr. Dobson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list all qualitative and quantitative research projects and surveys carried out for his Department into aspects of public attitudes and opinions (a) in general and (b) in relation to specific policy proposals in each of the past three years to December 1995, indicating for each project or survey (i) the date on which the research was commissioned, (ii) the amount which his Department spent, (iii) who carried out the research, (iv) the number of people surveyed or taking part, (v) the location and time scale and (vi) which individuals and organisations have been given access to the findings. [5979]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 14 December 1995]: Surveys carried out by my Department into aspects of public attitudes and opinions in the three years to December 1995 are given in the table. In the time available, it has not been possible to assimilate information on the date the research was commissioned, the time scale, and on which individuals and organisations have been given access to the findings, nor to distinguish between general and specific policy proposals. The date in the table shows the survey was conducted. Information on the fee paid cannot be disclosed due to commercial confidentially considerations.

Table: Public opinion surveys commissioned by the DTI from December 1992 to December 1995

Departmental Grants

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about inquiries taking place into grants made by his Department in the south-west region. [5465]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 13 December 1995]: The Department's internal inquiries referred to in my answer on 7 November 1995 about the information given by my hon. Friends on 2 March 1995, Official Report, column 719, and 19 July 1995, Official Report, columns 1561–62, have now been completed. The situation is that, although some checks may have been made into the background to the directors of ROM-Data Corporation Ltd. before an offer of grant was made to the company in 1991, the subsequent investigation has revealed no documentary evidence that these checks were made.

It would therefore appear that those involved in appraising the case were not aware that Mr. John Dawson, who was involved with the ROM-Data Coroporation Ltd., was a discharged bankrupt even through that information was held by the Insolvency Service.

In addition to the meeting held on 29 October 1993 between a DTI official and Mr. Brad Shepard, a subsequent meeting was held between DTI officials and the company on 2 June 1994 in connection with an application under the small firms loan guarantee scheme, a point which was omitted from the earlier reply on 19 July 1995, Official Report, columns 1561–62.

I regret these errors. Ministers are considering what steps need to be taken to ensure that they do not recur. In general, the record for RSA grants has been good. In 1994–95 offers worth £159 million were made and only £2.4 million of grants paid in earlier years were written off in that year. I would also draw attention to the reply I gave to the hon. Member on 7 December 1995, Official Report, column 334, about the Department's policy in respect of making grants available to companies whose directors have had previous bankruptcies.

The Department's own inquiries into other aspects of its handling of the case are continuing and I will report the outcome to the House further as appropriate.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Departmental Staff (Members' Letters)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many officials he employed (a) full time and (b) part time in his Department in each of the last three years to answer letters sent to him from hon. Members; and what was the estimated overall costs of replying to them in each of the last three years. [5623]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service on 18 December 1995, Official Report, column 880.

Departmental Committees

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) if he will list the cost of each committee of inquiry listed in his answer of 25 May, Official Report, columns 717–20, and the amount of remuneration paid to the chairman; and if he will make a statement; [6336]

(2) if he will list the cost of each of the inquiries cited in his answer to the hon. Member for Carshalton and Wallington (Mr. Forman) of 25 May, Official Report, columns 717–20; and if he will make a statement. [7132]

Mr. Freeman: The information is not held centrally.

Small and Medium Enterprises

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what progress his Department has made regarding establishing a contact point with responsibility for liaison with relevant business support organisations and taking forward small and medium enterprise related public procurement initiatives. [6709]

Mr. Willetts: The contact points for my Department and its agencies will be published in the revised edition of the booklet "Tendering for Government Contracts", which will be available next month.

HMSO (Privatisation)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he has yet had the opportunity to respond to the Speaker's letter of 28 November to the Lord President about HMSO. [7062]

Mr. Freeman: I wrote to the Speaker on 12 December 1995 and placed a copy of my response in the House Libraries on 14 December 1995. My reply reads as follows:

Dear Madam Speaker,

Thank you for the copy of your letter of 28 November to the Lord President about our plans to privatise HMSO.

I recognise, and am sympathetic to, the concerns which you raise about the service which HMSO provides to the House and how to safeguard it for the future. There are two strands to the protection which I believe can be made strong enough to satisfy the House. At present, the quality of the service is dictated both by the requirement, which is set down in writing, and by long history and tradition creating a culture within HMSO which ensures that Parliament is seen and treated as the key customer. I believe these can be carried forward into the relationship with a private sector Stationery Office and can be even stronger than they are now.

Under the type of sale which we have proposed, HMSO staff, and with them tradition, knowledge and experience, would transfer to the new employer, who would have every interest in maintaining the best possible relationship with the House. House business would be financially important and would also carry significant prestige. No supplier would want to be associated with a failure to deliver the services required by such a noteworthy customer. Done well, the Parliamentary business would be the best possible advertisement for the company. Done badly, other potential customers would take flight.

The agreement between the House and the privatised Stationery Office would be an enforceable, legally binding contract. Ultimately, the content of that contract is for the House to decide, although the Government would be happy to offer advice.

The contract terms could make it clear that local overnight production facilities together with space and facilities for the staff of the House are required. The transfer would be subject to TUPE and therefore staff and management of the existing HMSO would transfer to the new employer. In addition, the contract could specify that it is dependent on the provision of properly trained staff. It would be quite normal to include a requirement for prior consultation in the event that significant changes to management or organisation are planned. It would also be quite usual, I think, for there to be a named senior individual responsible for the contract and for the relationship with the House. The Supply and Service Agreement would be the foundation of the contract, with the advantage that the minimum standards it establishes would be enforceable at law.

I would expect the examination of prospective purchasers to include an evaluation of their intentions and understanding with regard to the services which they will be supplying to the House. The rights of the House in respect of the production and reproduction of its documents will be made explicit in the contract. I see no difficultly whatsoever in building on the financial arrangements of the new Supply and Service Agreement in order to ensure that the House continues to benefit from the negotiations which have been so recently completed.

You raised the question of the possible future fragmentation of the organisation or sale to an unacceptable buyer. The Government intends to seek a buyer for the whole business and that buyer will have to be acceptable to key customers and in particular to the House. If, after the sale, the buyer sought to sell on to another party or sought to break-up the business the House could be protected both commercially and contractually. The contract could include the right to terminate on a change of supplier status; and commercially, of course, a considerable part of the value of the business would lie in the contract with the House. An owner who put this at risk would soon find that he had devalued what he wished to sell.

I hope that this outline of responses to the views of the Commission indicates the seriousness I attach to these issues but also perhaps the degree to which I have already begun to address them. I have invited House officials to join mine in carrying forward the privatisation process including advising me on the selection of a buyer.

I did, as you know undertake to make an oral statement to the House at the earliest opportunity and I hope to make this on Wednesday 14 December. I should also be pleased to seek an opportunity for the House to discuss its interest in the matter, in a debate as soon as possible after my statement.

I should like to thank you for your helpful and constructive approach to these issues and for the considerable amount of work which has been undertaken by the House of Commons Commission and the Finance and Services Committee and by the House officials concerned. I am confident that from this excellent starting point we shall be able to take this work forward together to achieve the sale, and end the uncertainty, by summer next year.

I understand that the House of Lords has similar concerns to yours though some details may be different, reflecting present business arrangements. But whatever the concerns, I am clear that they must be satisfied as a pre-requisite to the sale of HMSO.

I am copying this letter to the Lord President, the Lord Privy Seal and the Lord Chairman of Committees.

Please be assured of my close attention to this matter.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the office locations which will form part of the proposed sale of HMSO, indicating the number of staff employed in each. [6731]

Mr. Willetts: HMSO employs 2,898 staff in various locations around the United Kingdom. The geographical breakdown of those employees is as follows:

1,105 in Norwich: 399 in Chadderton, Manchester; 210 in Edinburgh and South Gyle; 198 in Bristol, 67 in Belfast and Newtonards; 49 in Cardiff; 17 in Birmingham; 10 in Leeds; in London there are 220 in Elephant and Castle, 253 in Southwark, 303 in Vauxhall, 18 in Whitehall, 28 in Holborn, 16 in Docklands; and five in Monchengladbach serving the MOD in Germany.

Under the proposed sale, all the staff assigned to the undertaking would transfer to the new employer. The number of staff involved in the residual body and who therefore would not transfer is not expected to amount to more than about 30.

Expense Reimbursement

Mr. Stern: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list those organisations holding national charters in which there are targets set for collecting statistics on claims for reimbursement of expenses submitted which are delayed for more than 50 per cent. of the average number of days for the year claimed. [4693]

Mr. Freeman: I am not aware that any of the organisations holding national charters have set targets for expense reimbursement. Whether such targets should be included in charter revising will be kept under review.

Chauffeur-driven Cars

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what the cost of chauffeur-driven cars used by his Department was in each of the past five years. [5857]

Mr. Willetts: Expenditure on the use of chauffeur-driven cars by the Cabinet Office including the Office of Public Service and its executive agencies, which includes expenditure for the Government and Opposition Whips, for the Leader of the Opposition and for ex-Prime Ministers, is as follows:

1993–94: £544,900

1994–95: £745,600

1995–96: £455,800.

Notes:

Actual expenditure to end of November. The figure for the Cabinet Office excludes expenditure by the Office of the Prime Minister, which was the subject of a separate Answer by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister.

Figures for earlier years are available only at disproportionate cost.

ENVIRONMENT

City Challenge

16. Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment from which city challenge partnerships he has received annual reports for 1994–95. [4890]

Mr. Curry: Annual reports for 1994–95 have been received from all 31 city challenge partnerships. The reports are very encouraging and they indicate that city challenge is having a major impact on the regeneration of our cities.

House Insulation

17. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the standard of insulation of housing in the United Kingdom with particular reference to the record of the last 20 years. [4892]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The standard of insulation of housing has improved dramatically over the last 20 years.

Information for the whole of the United Kingdom is not available. However, the proportion of homes in Great Britain with lofts that are insulated has more than doubled from 42 per cent. to 89 per cent.; the percentage with cavity walls that are insulated has increased nearly tenfold from 2.5 per cent. to 23 per cent.; and the proportion of homes with windows double glazed has risen over sevenfold from 8 per cent. to 59 per cent.

Local Government Finance

18. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussion he has had with local authority leaders on the Government contribution to overall local authority revenue. [4893]

Sir Paul Beresford: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met the leaders of the local authority associations on 11 December to discuss a range of issues affecting local government, including the financing of local authority revenue expenditure. He will be meeting them again on 15 January at the Consultative Council on Local Government Finance.

North East Lincolnshire Authority

19. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much will be lost to the new North East Lincolnshire authority as a result of the impact of the 1996 area cost adjustment on its financial allocations. [4894]

Mr. Curry: Nothing. The effect of using data from the 1994 new earnings survey is to reduce the area cost adjustment factors for authorities in London and the south-east and distribute more to other authorities, including North East Lincolnshire.

South Pennines

20. Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what special protection is provided by statute for the environment of the south Pennines. [4895]

Mr. Clappison: Large areas of the south Pennines have been notified as sites of special scientific interest under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981. Parts of the area fall within the Peak District national park, or are designated as green belt or areas of special landscape quality. The area also contains buildings listed as being of special architectural or historic interest.

Urban Design

21. Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to encourage high standards of urban design so that new developments in towns and villages enhance the urban landscape. [4897]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: As part of my Department's initiative, "Quality in Town and Country", we have launched a national urban design campaign to promote greater consideration of urban design at a local level. About 20 of the more promising proposals submitted under the campaign will receive modest financial support from my Department and will feature in a major exhibition next year. We hope to announce our selection of proposals early in the new year.

Rough Sleepers Initiative

22. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to continue the rough sleepers initiative beyond March 1996. [4898]

Mr. Curry: The housing White Paper, "Our Future Homes", issued on 27 June 1995, undertook to continue the Government's rough sleepers initiative in central London beyond March 1996, and to assist the development of the successful RSI model in other areas where rough sleeping could be demonstrated to be a major problem. Over the next three years, 1996–97 to 1998–99, my Department plans to make available £73 million to meet these commitments. Following analysis of the responses to a consultation paper issued on 3 October 1995, we will be issuing a strategy paper in the new year inviting bids for these resources.

Rented Homes

23. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many homes for renting were started by local authorities and housing associations in total in 1978–79; and what is his estimate for 1996–97. [4899]

24. Dr. Lynne Jones: To asks the Secretary of State for the Environment how many homes for renting were started by local authorities and housing associations in total in 1978–79; and what is his estimate for 1996–97. [4900]

Mr. Clappison: I refer the hon. Members to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration earlier today to the hon. Member for Lewisham, East (Mrs. Prentice).

Planning Applications

25. Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to revise the criteria for the calling in of planning applications. [4901]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: My right hon. Friend has at present no plans to revise his policy for calling in planning applications.

Local Authority Housing

26. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much in total will be available for investment in the renovation of local authority housing from (a) credit approvals, (b) estate action and the single regeneration budget and (c) capital receipts in 1996–97; and what the equivalent figures were for 1989–90 and 1993–94. [4902]

Mr. Curry: We are making £699 million available in 1996–97 for general housing credit approvals, £30 million for the housing partnership fund and £256 million for estate action. Seventy schemes in round 1 of the single regeneration budget challenge fund have a significant housing content and are expected to receive about £125 million of SRB resources in 1996–97. Similar details for round 2 are not yet available; £40 million will also be available from the deprived estates challenge fund, out of a three-year total of over £314 million. The amount available from capital receipts will depend on authorities' success in selling assets. I will arrange for figures for the earlier years to be put in the Library.

The proportion of these resources invested in the renovation of council housing will depend on authorities' own decisions about priorities.

London Docklands Development Corporation

27. Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals or plans he has for the transfer of the current responsibilities of the London Docklands development corporation subsequent to its dissolution in 1998. [4903]

Mr. Curry: The corporation's planning and development control responsibilities are transferring to the relevant local authority.

Successor arrangements for other responsibilities are the subject of detailed discussions between the corporation, the local authorities, the Department and other bodies, including English Partnerships.

Energy Efficiency

28. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many pensioners and people over the age of 60 years have received help under the home energy efficiency scheme. [4904]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Age became a ground for grant in April 1994. Since then, some 530,000 grants have been paid to householders who claimed on the basis that they or their spouse was aged 60 or over. Grant eligibility for over-60s currently depends solely on age, not income, and no information is available on how many grant recipients are pensioners.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) when he expects to lay before Parliament the order altering the structure of local government in Rutland and Leicestershire; [6207]

(2) what he expects to be the date of the first local government elections in Rutland within the proposed unitary county. [6208]

Sir Paul Beresford: My right hon. Friend intends to lay the order giving effect to structural change in Leicestershire before Parliament early in the new year. This will allow for elections to the future unitary authorities in May 1996 and reorganisation on 1 April 1997.

Cryptosporidium

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the latest advice he has received on cryptosporidium in drinking water. [4896]

Mr. Clappison: The expert group, chaired by Sir John Badenoch, published its second report on 2 November this year.

This confirmed that control over the catchment areas from which source waters are drawn and meticulous control and management of water treatment processes are the main safeguards against further outbreaks of waterborne cryptosporidiosis.

Outbreaks of cryptosporidiosis, which are thought to be linked to drinking water, are investigated by the drinking water inspectorate and the case for prosecuting a water company for supplying water unfit for human consumption is considered.

Landfill Sites (Essex)

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the landfill sites in Essex; and what type of waste can be deposited in each of these sites. [6049]

Mr. Clappison: The Department of the Environment does not keep records of individual landfill sites. This information can be obtained from the register maintained by Essex waste regulation authority.

Glow Worms

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about the numbers of glow worms in England over the past 30 years. [6180]

Mr. Clappison: The Government's statutory scientific advisers, English Nature, advise that quantitative data on the abundance of the glow worm—Lampyris noctiluca—in England is scarce. Accurate recording of the population trends is difficult, in particular because the species is nocturnal and is easily detected only for around two weeks of the year.

Available information suggests that the British population of Lampyris noctiluca may have declined over the past 50 years but is still present over most of its natural range.

Departmental Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) orders and (b) firms are represented by the percentage of invoices not paid by his Department within 30 days in 1994–95. [6492]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested is not held centrally by my Department and is available only at disproportionate cost.

Waste Collection and Disposal

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what was the number of tonnes of (a) inactive waste and (b) other waste, collected by local authorities in England and Wales and disposed of to landfill, in each year since 1990; [6821]

(2) what is the forecast number of tonnes of (a) inactive waste and (b) other waste, which local authorities in England and Wales will collect and dispose of to landfill, in each year from 1995 to 2000; [6822]

(3) what is the expected total amount of money that local authorities in England and Wales will pay in landfill levy in each year from 1996 to 2000; [6823]

(4) what is the current range of landfill costs per tonne in England and Wales; [6825]

(5) what assessment has been carried out by his Department into the price elasticity of demand for landfill. [6890]

Mr. Clappison: Local authorities are responsible for the collection and disposal of household and commercial waste. The Government's strategy for sustainable waste management, published last week, records that the estimated annual arisings for household and commercial waste in the United Kingdom are 35 million tonnes. Around 90 per cent. of household waste and 85 per cent. of commercial waste currently go to landfill. Very little of this is likely to fall within the definition of inactive waste. Figures are not available centrally on an annual basis.

Local authorities are responsible for meeting the cost of disposing of the 20 million tonnes of household waste produced each year. They are able to recover the cost of disposing of the 15 million tonnes of commercial waste from the producers of the waste. Assuming that the full amount of landfill tax is passed on to local authorities by landfill operators, the cost of disposing of the proportion of the 20 million tonnes of household waste that goes to landfill would increase by about £126 million. As the landfill tax and other policies in the Department's strategy for sustainable waste management will act as incentives to move away from landfill, we would expect this figure to fall over a period of time. Local authorities will also benefit from a reduction of 0.2 per cent. in the main rate of employer national insurance contributions in 1997–98, as part of the Government's policy of moving business taxation away from employment towards activities which damage the environment.

A study published by the Department shows that in April 1993 the cost of landfilling domestic and commercial waste ranged from £5 to £30 per tonne. Prices varied according to the type of waste and the location of the landfill site. Prices have risen since then, partly as a result of the implementation of the more stringent licensing regime under the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

The price elasticity of demand for landfill depends on the suitability and availability of alternative waste management practices. This will vary to some extent across the country and between different types of waste. It will also vary over time as the practices of waste producers and handlers change to reflect policies contained in the waste strategy.

Landfill Levy

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total increase in council tax bills in England and Wales forecast as a result of the introduction of the landfill levy, for each year from 1996 to 2000. [6824]

Sir Paul Beresford: Levels of council tax will depend upon budget decisions taken by local authorities. The net amount attributable to the landfill tax will depend on authorities' waste disposal policies and on the effect of offsetting savings in employers' national insurance contributions.

Pollution

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give details of how the best practice programme will save 2 million tonnes of carbon emissions. [7324]

Mr. Clappison: The energy efficiency best practice programme produces authoritative guidance on energy efficiency measures, promoted to industry, commerce and buildings professionals. It has a target of stimulating energy savings that, by the year 2000, will reduce carbon dioxide emissions by 5 million tonnes of carbon per year. Market research shows that the programme has already generated annual reductions of some 2 million tonnes of carbon, and that it is well on course to meet its target for 2000.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the energy efficiency programmes whose continuing effects are expected to contribute to reducing carbon emissions as stated in the progress report on carbon dioxide emissions, and the date that each programme (a) commenced and (b) finished or is expected to finish. [7331]

Mr. Clappison: Of the many energy efficiency initiatives which predate the United Kingdom climate change programme, the principal ones—the energy efficiency best practice programme and the Government's work in promoting combined heat and power—began in 1989 and 1990 respectively. Both programmes are on-going.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what factors underlay the reduction in forecast carbon dioxide savings from energy efficiency measures in the progress report on carbon dioxide emissions published on 14 December; [7325]

(2) what conditions led to the increase in the forecast contained in the progress report on carbon dioxide emissions for savings in carbon dioxide emissions as a result of road fuel duty. [7355]

Mr. Clappison: I refer the hon. Member to pages 23 and 24 of the report.

English Nature

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the budget for English Nature in (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96, (c) 1996–97 and (d) 1997–98. [7207]

Mr. Clappison: English Nature's grant in aid for the financial years in question are:

Year	Grant in aid £ million
(a) 1994–95	40.405
(b) 1995–96	40.419
(c) 1996–97	39.166
(d) 1997–98	[1]38.904

[1] Baseline planning figure.

Countryside Commission

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the budget for the Countryside Commission for (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96, (c) 1996–97 and (d) 1997–98. [7206]

Mr. Clappison: The grant in aid budget for the Countryside Commission was £46.137 million for 1994–95 and is £42.124 million for 1995–96. The allocation for 1996–97 is £25.787 million and the planning figure for 1997–98 is £24.727 million.

The reduction in 1995–96 included £2 million for the national forest, work on which was commenced by the commission but which is being taken forward by the National Forest Company. The reductions in 1996–97 and 1997–98 take account of agreed transfers to MAFF—£13.293 million in each year—to support the transfer of responsibility for countryside stewardship, and to the groundwork foundation, £1.200 million in each year, for work in groundwork trust areas formerly funded by the Commission, as well as the 5 per cent. reduction in running costs being applied generally to the Department's sponsored bodies.

Pesticides (Drinking Water)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans his Department has made to improve the standard of drinking water in response to the publication of the National Rivers Authority report into the levels of pesticides being found in water supplies; and if he will make a statement. [7335]

Mr. Clappison: The report makes it clear that serious incidents of pesticide pollution are rare, and that the data presented did not reflect drinking water quality. The quality of drinking water is very high; in 1994, of 3.5 million tests carried out, 99.3 per cent. met the relevant standards. Where standards were not met, water companies have provided legally binding undertakings to carry out the necessary improvements.

Advisory Committee on Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Pollution

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the final report of the advisory committee on Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution; and if he will make a statement. [7435]

Mr. Clappison: I am today placing a copy of the committee's final report in the Library of the House, together with responses by the inspectorate and the Environment Agency.

I am grateful to the committee for producing a final report, which will assist in preparing for the inspectorate's entry into the agency. The report provides a valuable independent assessment of the inspectorate's strengths, and it provides a set of recommendations to guide the further development of the effectiveness and efficiency of pollution regulation in the future.

I am pleased that the inspectorate and the agency have responded constructively to the committee's recommendations and are taking the necessary action to implement them.

National Park Authorities

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements have been made for appointing the members to the new national park authorities provided for by the Environment Act 1995. [7437]

Mr. Clappison: The new independent national park authorities, whose creation was provided for by the Environment Act, are intended to be established in England on 1 October 1996, and to take over their full powers and responsibilities on 1 April 1997.

During the passage of the Environment Act, the importance of the role for the Secretary of State's appointed members in bringing the wider national viewpoint to the deliberations of the national parks was emphasised.

My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside has today written to all Members who have a constituency interest in national parks, inviting nominations for Secretary of State members of the new authorities. Officials will also seek nominations from a wide range of organisations.

Candidates are sought from a wide range of backgrounds and interests. All those with an interest in the parks are encouraged to put forward names for consideration. Local publicity will be arranged in the individual national parks.

Nominations are required by 29 February 1996.

In making these appointments to the new authorities, we will wish to bear in mind the desirability of maintaining some continuity of membership as well as of introducing some new members. We will select individuals for their personal qualities and experience, and not as representatives for specific groups or organisations. We expect them to have regard to the interests of all those who are concerned with a specific park, but our primary concern is that those members should bring the wider national viewpoint to the authorities' discussions.

The Secretary of State will continue to be advised on his appointment by the Countryside Commission, which provides an independent input in to the selection process, and whose advice has always been valuable.

UK Round Table on Sustainable Development

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the UK round table on sustainable development has held another meeting; and if he will make a statement. [7694]

Mr. Gummer: The UK round table on sustainable development held its fifth meeting on 11 December, with Professor Sir Richard Southwood and me in the chair. The meeting discussed the liberalisation of the supply of gas and electricity to domestic consumers, freight transport and environmental audit. Reports by the round table on each of these topics will be published shortly. The round table also considered a framework for a sustainable transport policy, on which discussion will continue at the next meeting in February, and agreed to undertake further work on the structure and powers of economic and environmental regulators in the UK, and how these can best reflect the needs of sustainable development.

Packaging Industry

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the outcome of his meeting with the packaging industry on producer responsibility on 15 December. [7695]

Mr. Gummer: On 15 December, I met 30 representatives of leading businesses involved in packaging to hear their views on the best form of legal obligation to implement producer responsibility for packaging. This was a final opportunity to hear industry views before Government make their decision.

The first part of the meeting was chaired by Sir Peter Parker, president of the Industry Council on Packaging and the Environment, whom I had asked to help resolve remaining differences of view in industry on alternative methods of achieving a shared approach to producer responsibility for packaging. As a result of his discussions a proposal combining elements of both approaches and agreed by the meeting has now been submitted to me.

The main elements of this industry proposal are as follows:

Information. The Environment Agency should develop and acquire data on major package material flows, waste streams and recovery processes and make this available to the industry.

The legal obligation to valorise packaging to specific targets. A staged approach should be applied as follows, with the introduction of regulations in summer 1996:

> By the end of Year 1 (mid-1997) individual businesses or schemes should be under an obligation to provide packaging flow data to the Environment Agency;
> By Year 3 (1998–99) individual businesses or schemes should be assessed on completion of the first (3 year) tranche of recycling/recovery obligations. Compliance with Interim targets should not be enforced before 1998.

A review of the legal obligation involving all sectors of the packaging industry should be carried out on behalf of the Secretary of state by the end of 1997.

An Advisory Committee, giving balanced representation to the industry sectors involved, should be established early in 1996 to advise the Secretary of State on the drafting and implementation of the regulations and on arrangements for carrying out a review of the legal obligation, including consideration of actual burden on individual companies.

The principles on which the legal obligation should be based are:

1. the use of packaging;
2. the need to ensure effective co-operation throughout the packaging chain to achieve recycling and recovery, taking account of equity and the different roles of each sector.

c. that each sector must play an equitable part in relation to the domestic waste stream.

For the first two years, the legal obligation for sectors having taken into account exports and imports at all levels should be initially as follows (these would be the basis for figures applied to businesses outside a collective scheme):

Raw materials and imports: 5½ per cent.

Converters and imports: 14½ per cent.

Packer fillers and imports: 35 per cent.

Retailers, importers and distributers: 45 per cent.

In the operation and monitoring of the obligation, the maximum practicable use should be made of sampling; "ready reckoners" and counting at the interface between 2 sectors.

Companies supporting this approach are clearly committed to the principle that costs will be passed down the chain and through to the ultimate consumer.

Companies supporting this approach and wishing to join a collective scheme would be expected to commit themselves for the first 2 years (or such longer period as may be agreed) to raise funds through a turnover-related annual membership fee, subject to a maximum of £50,000 for the largest UK turnover and with proportionately smaller fees for smaller companies.

I welcome the very real efforts made by businesses in all sectors to achieve a consensus on the best means of implementing a shared responsibility approach in which they can have confidence.

Government will now need to consider and decide on the best form of the legal obligation, taking account of all relevant considerations.

I am placing copies of the full text of the industry proposal and a list of those who attended the 15 December meeting in the Library.

Land Disposal (Local Authorities)

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he proposes to alter the arrangements whereby local authorities obtain consent to dispose of land at less than best price. [7696]

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department and the Welsh Office have today issued the Local Government Act 1972 general disposal consent 1995, a copy of which has been placed in the Library, with the covering letter and explanatory commentary. This gives effect to proposals on which local authority associations and other interested organisations, including the Audit Commission, were consulted in March and which were generally welcomed.

This general consent defines certain circumstances in which local authorities may, in future, dispose of land for less than best price without making specific application to the Secretary of State. For example, local authorities will now have greater freedom to grant long leases to other local authorities, health authorities or charities, or for purposes for which they have powers to provide grants or loans.

The consent is designed to strike a balance between protecting the public purse and giving greater autonomy to local authorities to manage their own affairs.

Valuation Tribunals

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what response was received to the consultation paper on the appointment and jurisdiction of valuation tribunals in respect of local government reorganisation in parts of England. [7697]

Sir Paul Beresford: The list of responses received has been placed in the Library of the House; copies of individual response may be obtained through the Library. Regulations will be introduced shortly to give effect to the following measures.

(i) The Avon Valuation Tribunal is to be renamed the "Severnside Valuation Tribunal", and its members appointed by the four successor authorities in that area. Its complement will be increased to 40 members, with these shadow authorities entitled to appoint one member each immediately. As vacancies arise, they are to be replaced by appointments by the authorities in the following order in rotation: North West Somerset, South Gloucestershire, Bristol, Bath and North East Somerset.

(ii) The Cleveland Valuation Tribunal is to be renamed the "Teeside Valuation Tribunal", and its members appointed by the four successor authorities in that area. Its complement will be increased by one, which may be appointed by the shadow Hartlepool UA immediately. As vacancies arise, they are to be replaced by appointments by the authorities in the following order in rotation: Middlesbrough, Redcar and Cleveland, Stockton-on-Tees and Hartlepool.

(iii) The areas of the Selby District Council and the City of York Unitary Authority will be transferred from the area of jurisdiction of the North Yorkshire Valuation Tribunal into that of East Yorkshire Valuation Tribunal. The complement of the North Yorkshire tribunal will remain the same.

(iv) The Humberside Valuation Tribunal is to be renamed the "East Yorkshire Valuation Tribunal", and its area of jurisdiction will cover the unitary authorities of East Riding of Yorkshire, Kingston-upon-Hull and York, and the district of Selby. Its members are to be appointed by the unitary authorities and the North Yorkshire County Council (in the ratio of 3:2:1:1). Its complement will be increased to 49, with York and North Yorkshire councils entitled to appoint one member each immediately. As vacancies arise, they are to be replaced by appointments by the authorities in the following order: twelve by York and North Yorkshire councils alternately, and the remainder by East Riding and Hull councils in the ratio 3:2.

(v) The area of jurisdiction of the Lincolnshire Valuation Tribunal is to be extended to include the area south of the Humber which previously formed part of the area of the Humberside tribunal. Its complement will be increased to 90, with North Lincolnshire and North East Lincolnshire entitled to appoint 14 members each immediately. The first vacancy to arise will be replaced by these authorities, and the remainder by Lincolnshire County Council.

DEFENCE

Gazelle Helicopter (Alleged Misuse)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce the outcome of the investigation by the special investigation branch of the Royal Military police in Edinburgh into the alleged misuse of a Gazelle helicopter by an Army officer with regard to a golf course in Scotland earlier in 1995 and other similar incidents. [5312]

Mr. Soames: Investigations into this incident have been completed and the findings have been considered by the Army chain of command. A Gazelle helicopter deviated from its task to take two Army officers to a golf tournament. There was no dishonest intent on the part of the officer responsible. He did, however, make an error of judgment and he has been subject to the appropriate disciplinary action. In addition, the procedures for authorising requests for helicopter flights have been amended to ensure that similar incidents cannot happen in future. There is no connection between this incident and other allegations of the misuse of Army assets, which have not been substantiated.

Absence without Leave

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guidelines apply to the payment of members of the armed forces who are on unauthorised absence from service; how many such absences there have been in each year since 1990–91; how much pay has been received by individuals while on unauthorised absence; and if he will make a statement. [7165]

Mr. Soames: When a member of the armed forces absents him or herself without authority, action is taken to stop pay, including increments and additional pay, from day one of the absence. On recovery from absence, disciplinary action is usually taken and, if the case against the individual is proven, pay for the entire period of absence is forfeited; it follows that no pay is received by individuals while on unauthorised absence. Details of the numbers of such absences there have been in each year since 1990 are currently being collated and I will write to the hon. Member with this information.

Royal Naval College, Greenwich

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the steps to be taken following receipt of expressions of interest in the buildings of the Royal Naval college, Greenwich. [7199]

Mr. Portillo: In my capacity as sole trustee of the Crown charity, Greenwich hospital, and with the agreement of my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for National Heritage and for the Environment, I have invited Lord Faringdon, Dame Jennifer Jenkins, Lord Sainsbury and Jocelyn Stevens to form an advisory group to advise me on the expressions of interest and on the future use and management of the Royal Naval college, Greenwich. Hayden Phillips and Sir Moray Stewart—from the Department of National Heritage and the Ministry of Defence—would also participate in the work of the group.

It will be asked to give particular attention to the extent to which the proposals are sympathetic to the status of the building and their wide enjoyment by the public. A short list may be produced early in the new year; a final decision is not expected until summer 1996.

Directorate of Operational Capability

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the role and responsibility of the directorate of operational capability; to whom it reports; and what organisation it has replaced in his Department. [7139]

Mr. Soames: The directorate of operational capability was formed earlier this year. Its primary function is to provide a strengthened ability to assess defence-wide operational capability through a process of operational audit. This task was previously the responsibility of Assistant Chief of the Defence Staff (Operations).

The directorate also provides the military element of the secretariat for the Defence Council. The director of operational capability reports directly to the Deputy Chief of the Defence Staff (Commitments).

Small and Medium Enterprises

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what work his Department has done to develop best practice in the publication of departmental procurement guidance material relevant to small and medium enterprises' needs. [6640]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department produces a publication, "Selling to the Ministry of Defence", which, in addition to setting out our basic procurement procedures, also provides a range of useful contact points within the Department. This publication, has been well received by small and medium enterprises. I will place a copy in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what meetings his Department has had since May 1995 with organisations representing small firms to review tendering procedures. [6641]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Department maintains regular contact with a variety of trade associations representing companies involved in the defence sector that count among their membership small firms. Those discussions will from time to time include consideration of the Department's tendering procedures.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the outcome of his Department's review of measures taken to facilitate small firms' access to appropriate areas of Government procurement in the light of best practice. [6657]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 18 December 1995]: The Ministry of Defence has always encouraged small firms to bid for work appropriate to their skills and capabilities. No specific review of this area of the Department's procurement activity is currently being undertaken.

Goods and Services

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department paid to the private sector for goods and services in 1994–95. [6497]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department publishes each year in "UK Defence Statistics" an analysis of its expenditure on goods and services in the UK, broken down by industry group. The analysis for 1994–95 is not yet available; that for 1993–94 appears in the 1995 edition of "Defence Statistics", a copy of which is in the Library of the House. These figures do, however, include some expenditure on goods and services purchased from the public sector, such as rail transport and postal services. They exclude expenditure by the then Defence Research Agency.

RB44 Army Light Vehicle

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date his Department withdrew from service the RB44 Army light vehicle; and on what date his Department was first alerted to the problems with braking mechanisms of the RB44. [6987]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The issue of braking first arose during trials in 1989, but the shortcomings were addressed before the production contract was placed in 1990.

The vehicles were temporarily withdrawn from service in June 1992 following problems with braking performance reported by the Royal School of Artillery in May 1992; after modifications, they were restored to service in November 1992. Following the results of further testing under stringent conditions in August 1993, the vehicles were withdrawn from service in December 1993, but were accepted again for service in August 1995.

Biological and Toxic Weapons

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made at the ad hoc group meeting of states parties to the biological and toxic weapons convention in Geneva; what work has been carried out on compliance measures; and when the ad hoc group will complete its owrk. [6992]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The second substantive meeting of the biological and toxic weapons convention ad hoc group, which was held in Geneva from 27 November to 8 December 1995, made useful progress, building upon the work of the previous meeting in July. On compliance measures, a number of issues were explored on mandatory declarations; on-site visits/inspections, in particular regarding the role of non-challenge visits; and investigation of alleged biological weapon use. Much work remains to be done, however, and it is not possible at this stage to predict when the process will be concluded. The ad hoc group is mandated to complete its work as soon as possible and to submit its report to be considered at the fourth review conference, scheduled for November-December 1996, or later at a special conference.

Honourable Discharges

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Army service men have been given an honourable discharge in each of the last 36 months; and if he will indicate their units. [6887]

Mr. Soames: Honourable discharge is not an officially recognised term. However, excluding those who have been discharged as a result of sentencing by court martial or for misconduct, 48,377 soldiers have left the Army "honourably" since the beginning of 1993. This figure could be further broken down only at disproportionate cost.

Merchant Vessels

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 7 December, Official Report, column 344, relating to the charter of merchant vessels by his Department, what was the total cost of chartering these vessels. [6990]

Mr. Soames: The total cost of chartering these vessels is £25,807,174.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the name of every merchant vessel and its country of registration chartered by his Department for (a) exercises and (b) military support and re-supply operations in (i) 1992, (ii) 1993 and (iii) 1994. [6988]

Mr. Soames: The names of merchant vessels and their country of registration chartered for (a) exercises and (b) military support and re-supply in 1992, 1993 and 1994 are as follows:

Ministry of Defence Police (Colchester)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the MOD police are based in Colchester. [6827]

Mr. Soames: There are currently 43 MOD police officers, of whom six are CID, and two civilian members of staff based in Colchester.

Bosnia

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 6 December, Official Report, column 241, if he will list the US navy ships which have been chartered by his Department to move United Kingdom equipment to Bosnia; what consideration he gave to the chartering of British merchant vessels; and if he will provide details of the financial arrangements concerning this charter. [6989]

Mr. Soames: The names of the two US navy ships chartered to move United Kingdom equipment to Bosnia are USNS Cape Rise and USNS Cape Race. The Ministry of Defence charters shipping that best meets its sealift requirements in the most cost-effective manner possible. As they are non-trading vessels and therefore not committed to existing commercial charters, the US naval ships provide guaranteed availability with the ability to meet the initial rapid deployment time scales required of us by NATO. The US navy ships have been chartered under the auspices of a UK-US bilateral arrangement on a reimbursement basis. It is intended to charter civilian shipping on the international market for the balance of the sea deployment requirement for which British ship owners will have an opportunity to offer their vessels. The defence freight market representative at the Baltic exchange, acting on behalf of the Ministry of Defence, has now approached the market.

RAF Bases (Planned Closures)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 11 December, Official Report, column 485, if he will list the closure dates of (a) RAF Carlisle, (b) RAF Quedgeley and (c) RAF North Luffenham. [6993]

Mr. Soames: The planned closure dates for RAF Carlisle and RAF Quedgeley are 31 March 1997 and 31 March 1996 respectively. RAF North Luffenham is expected to close towards the end of 1997.

Ministry of Defence Police (Redundancies)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many redundancies there have been in the MOD police in each of the last five years. [6826]

Mr. Soames: There have been no redundancies in the MOD police during the past five years.

Special Investigations Branch (Colchester)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of his Department's special investigations branch are based in Colchester. [6828]

Mr. Soames: Five members of the special investigations branch of the Royal Military police are based in Colchester.

Departmental Targets

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how his Department performed against performance measurements in the period 1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995; and if he will make a statement. [7542]

Mr. Soames: My Department has today published a performance report covering the period 1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995, and I have placed a copy in the Library of the House.

Army Attack Helicopter

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the manufacture of the Army's attack helicopter will be made in Britain. [6991]

Mr. Arbuthnot: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 13 July 1995, Official Report, columns 1091–92, we have received guarantees that at least 50 per cent. of the Army's attack helicopter procurement by cash value will be manufactured in the United Kingdom. The details of how this will be achieved are being negotiated currently, and will be reflected in the contract, which we expect to place with Westland helicopters in the new year.

Service Housing

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total cost to date of consultancy payments made to firms in relation to work carried out to develop his Department's plans for the proposed sell-off of its housing stock. [6888]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The total cost to date of consultancy payments made to firms in relation to new arrangements for the married quarters estate, including work carried out on the previous proposal for a housing trust and on the establishment of the Defence Housing Executive, amounts to some £5.9 million, exclusive of VAT; on the basis of invoices received by early December. Such firms include financial legal and property advisers. Of this total, approximately £1.6 million has been incurred, subsequent to the abandonment of the housing trust proposal, on the development of the proposal to transfer the married quarters estate to the private sector announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 30 November 1995, Official Report, columns 810–11.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the approximate value of (a) land that has planning consent and (b) land that does not have planning consent that is planned to be sold in addition to the 73,000 dwellings already announced in the plans to privatise his Department's service dwellings. [5944]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 18 December 1995]: As set out in the preliminary information memorandum for the sale of the married quarters estate, a copy of which is in the Library of the House, the current expectation is that the number of dwellings to be sold will be approximately 60,000. The extent of the land to be included in the sale varies from, in a few cases, little more than that on which the quarters stand to, at the other extreme, spacious grounds with low density housing. Our assessment of the value of the married quarters estate under the terms of the proposed sale is commercially confidential.

Departmental Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) orders and (b) firms are represented by the percentage of invoices not paid by his Department within 30 days in 1994–95. [6489]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Most of my Department's bills are paid by the Defence Accounts Agency. The Defence Evaluation and Research Agency pays its own. I have asked the chief executives to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mrs. Barbara Roche, dated 19 December 1995:

You asked the Secretary of State for Defence about the number of orders and firms whose invoices are not paid by his Department within 30 days and what amount is owed to businesses by his Department whose invoices are not paid within 30 days. I am replying to both questions on behalf of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency, formerly the Defence Research Agency.

I explained in my letter to you of 1 November that virtually all our validated invoices are paid within 9 days of reaching our bill paying section. As the number of bills not paid within this period is so small I am afraid that we do not keep statistics on them.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful on this occasion.

Letter from P. J. Trevelyan to Mrs. Barbara Roche, dated 19 December 1995:

You asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) orders and (b) firms are represented by the percentage of invoices not paid by his Department within 30 days in 1994–95. As Chief Executive of the Defence Accounts Agency I have been asked to reply.

The payment performance statistics which are readily available are held in volume of invoices only so the information requested could only be provided as disproportionate cost.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the amount owed to those businesses whose invoices were not paid within 30 days or within agreed contractual arrangements for 1994–95. [6513]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Most of my Department's bills are paid by the Defence Accounts Agency. The Defence Evaluation and Research Agency pays its own. I have asked the chief executives to write to the hon. Member.

We monitor our prompt payment performance closely. Of the almost 3 million bills received by the Liverpool payment office in 1994/95, 329 were not paid within 30 days. The payment performance statistics which are readily available are held in volume of bills only, therefore the amount of money owed in respect of this very small percentage of invoices could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful.

Gulf Medical Assessment Programme

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many veterans have had a medical examination under the Gulf veterans medical assessment programme to date; and how many of these have (a) had a second medical examination or (b) been referred to specialists. [5316]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 11 December 1995]: To date, a total of 339 veterans have received an initial medical examination under my Department's Gulf medical assessment programme. Twenty-four of these veterans are still in the process of having their tests completed and evaluated. Of the remaining 315 individuals, 80 have received a second examination on the assessment programme and 158 have been referred to specialists.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

National Lottery

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what inquiries were made of Mr. Joseph Spinelli, former New York State Inspector General, about the due diligence meeting with the independent non-executive directors of Camelot before the award of the contract to Camelot, with particular reference to participants at the meeting; and if she will make a statement. [6685]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I have no knowledge of any such meeting.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when (a) officials and (b) Ministers were first informed of the use of GTec's private jet by the Director General of the National Lottery; what guidance was given to the director general, and when, on acceptable levels of hospitality; and if she will make a statement. [6334]

Mrs. Bottomley [pursuant to her reply, 18 December 1995 c.849-50]: I have today written to the Director General of the National Lottery and am placing copies of the letter in the Library of the House.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Computer Services

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will (a) place in the Library a copy of the full study report referred to in paragraph 12, (b) list the computer services referred to in paragraph 13 and (c) list the computer system faults referred to in paragraph 18 of the memorandum submitted by the Information Technology Services Agency to the Social Security Committee and published with the Committee's fifth report of Session 1994–95, the work of the Department of Social Security and its agencies (HC382). [4333]

Mr. Burt: It would not be appropriate to place a copy of the full study report in the library. The report contains information which is commercial in confidence, and also contains technical, security, and audit details, which would have potential security implications if in the public domain.

The operational accounting system functionality is a customised version of the accounting portion of the FLORIDA—Florida recipient integrated data access—application. It is composed of the following modules:

Financial Management and Control Module
Collection Module
Distribution Module
Disbursement Module
Enforcement Module
Reporting Module
Data Exchange Module.

Maintenance and Assessment, another adaptation from modules within FLORIDA, provides the following facilities:

Client Registration
Interactive Interview
Aging and Tracking
Case Load Management
Client Notices
Reporting
Enquiry
History Maintenance
Security Maintenance.

Three faults, relating to the incorrect issue of notifications by the child support computer system were recorded, analysed and corrected.

Fault 1: Relates to notifications which invited payment even though funds are already held through payment of a lump sum which has been allocated and de-allocated through a clerical process.

Fault 2: Relates to incorrect amounts contained within notifications because of a fault in a weekly to monthly conversion routine. Variations were always small in value

Fault 3: Relates to requests for incorrect direct debit payments in certain circumstances following the restart of a computer program after failure in a specific area of processing.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 27 November, Official Report, column 510, in respect of the legal dispute between EDS and Computer Associates, on which occasions his Department was able to obtain the Computer Associates products (a) Telon and (b) Eastrieve for use with the CSA computer system; what impact access to these products had on the completion of the project; and how much his Department had to pay for these products. [4692]

Mr. Burt: The Department obtained licences to run the Computer Associates products TELON and Easytrieve on the new child support computer system from 24 November 1992. The system as provided by EDS could not have been run without these products. They were obtained in sufficient time to ensure that successful delivery of the system was unaffected.

The cost of the products is commercial in confidence.

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the average amount of maintenance received by parents with dependent children claiming income support in each year since 1985 in constant prices. [4688]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is not available.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how the Child Support Agency measures travelling distance between (a) Clydebank and Greenock and (b) other places where water crossings or journeys around peninsulas are involved. [6062]

Mr. Mitchell: From April 1995, the formula used to assess liability for child support maintenance has included an allowance in recognition of the costs of travelling to work where these costs are high. The allowance is broad-brush in nature and is based upon the straight-line distance between the parents' home and their normal place of employment. The allowance is designed to be straightforward to administer and, in the vast majority of cases, will be a reasonable reflection of the additional costs involved.

It is recognised, however, that basing the calculation on the straight-line distance may cause some inequities, especially where there are geographical obstructions between the two locations. It is with these cases specifically in mind that high travel-to-work costs may be cited as grounds for varying the formula calculation under the new departure direction scheme which is to be piloted from April next year.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide a breakdown of the number of items of unlinked mail at the Child Support Agency at each month end since April 1994. [4173]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 18 December 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State about the number of items of unlinked post at the Child Support Agency.

I am sorry that it is not possible to provide an answer to your Question in exactly the form you have asked, but I will try to address what I think is your main concern.

All items of mail received at the Agency's six Centres are promptly sorted. A letter responding to a request for information is passed immediately to the relevant section which requested the information and staff will then take the necessary action. Other items of mail will have details of the correspondence entered immediately on the appropriate file held on the computer system.

If an item of post is received which we are unable to associate with the case (ether clerical or computer based) because, for example, there is insufficient information, the Agency writes to the correspondent asking for more details. The number of such items of unactioned and unlinked mail held by the Agency's Centres at 1 December 1995 amounted to 57.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update his answer to the hon. Member for Newham, North-East (Mr. Timms) of 18 May, Official Report, column 331, concerning maintenance assessments by the Child Support Agency with reference to cases cleared since April. [4717]

Mr. Mitchell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the chief executive of the Child Support Agency on 12 December, Official Report, columns 625–27.

Child Support Appeals

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many appeals which have been lodged with a child support appeal tribunal are currently pending; [4686]

(2) what is the average length of time between the lodging of an appeal to a child support appeal tribunal and the hearing of the appeal by the tribunal; [4684]

(3) how many appeals have been determined by a child support appeal tribunal; and in how many appeals the tribunal held that there had been no error by the child support officer. [4683]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: At 30 November 1995, there were 4,617 appeals outstanding at the child support appeal tribunals. In the last 12 months, 4,565 appeals have been determined; in 1,169 cases the child support officer's decision was upheld. The average clearance time is 41 weeks.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the total gross cost to public funds to date of the operation of (a) the child support appeal tribunals and (b) the child support commissioners. [4685]

Mr. Mitchell: The information requested on child support appeal tribunals is not available. However, we estimate that, excluding start-up expenditure, for the first two years of operation the child support appeal tribunals cost approximately £600,000. I am informed by my right hon. and noble Friend the Lord Chancellor that the information requested on the child support commissioners is not collected.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what undertakings he has given the Data Protection Registrar regarding the powers of the Child Support Agency to require the disclosure of personal data; and how these undertakings have been followed up. [5303]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The Child Support Agency is registered in accordance with the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1984. The agency's chief executive, Miss Ann Chant, has met the registrar several times and officials from this Department, the agency and the registrar's office are in regular contact to ensure effective liaison.

Motability

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how leasing or hire purchase agreements through Motability will be affected in circumstances when the disabled person is hospitalised for a period of more than four weeks; [5090]

(2) in what respects the treatment of vehicle owners under the Motability scheme differs from that applying to disabled people with vehicles obtained under independent car or wheelchair hire or leasing agreements. [5091]

Mr. Burt: Existing Motability agreements will be unaffected by the proposals. Agreements will not be renewable while a patient is in hospital. No special arrangements are proposed for people with private agreements.

Income-related Benefit Recipients

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many children in families were (a) dependent on income support, and (b) in receipt of family credit, by region, in each of the last five years. [4921]

Mr. Roger Evans: The available information is set out in the tables. No breakdown by Government standard statistical region is available in any year for family credit or for income support in 1990. Regional data for income support in 1995 are not yet available.

National Insurance

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the estimated total value of employers' contributions to national insurance in 1994–95 on behalf of all non-retired households, by gross income decile group, following the latest report on the family expenditure survey. [5381]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much his Department spent on official hospitality in 1994–95 and the financial year to date; and what is the 1995–96 projected budget for official hospitality. [5580]

Mr. Burt: Departmental expenditure on official hospitality in 1994–95 was £127,785. For the financial year to date—end of October—it is £58,007. The 1995–96 projected outturn is in the region of £100,000.

Housing Benefit

Mr. George Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many housing benefit claimants are in (a) the rent rebate and (b) the rent allowance categories; and what was the total amount paid under each heading in each year since 1991–92. [5052]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table:

Year	Rent allowance		Rent rebate
	Recipients (000)	Expenditure (£ million)	Recipients (000)	Expenditure (£ million)
1991–92	1,151	2,404	2,966	3,971

1994–95	1,686	4,908	3,006	5,345

1. Figures given for recipients relate to benefit units which may be a single person or a couple.
2. Figures for recipients are an average of 100 per cent. caseload counts taken at the end of May, August, November and February of each year.
3. Expenditure figures for 1991–92, 1992–93 and 1993–94 are outturn. 1994–95 is estimated outturn.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what protection will be available to the children of asylum seekers under the Children Act 1989 when the changes in benefits to asylum seekers come into operation. [5162]

Mr. Roger Evans: The proposed changes in benefits for asylum seekers would not alter the existing provisions of the Children Act.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the maximum amount of disability living allowance that may be claimed by an applicant for asylum; and what amount is then deducted from the amount paid to such an applicant in income support. [7135]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The current maximum rate of disability living allowance payable to an asylum seeker is £79.35 a week. This is fully taken into account when assessing an asylum seeker's entitlement to income support under the urgent cases provisions.

Small and Medium Enterprises

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what work his Department has done to develop best practice in the publication of departmental procurement guidance material relevant to small and medium enterprises' needs; [6616]

(2) what advice has been given to procurement staff on the implications of purchasing from small and medium enterprises; [6618]

(3) what has been the outcome of his Department's review of measures taken to facilitate small firms' access to appropriate areas of Government procurement in the light of best practice. [6665]

Mr. Burt: Procurement staff in the DSS follow the guidance on procurement from small and medium enterprises issued by HM Treasury's central unit on procurement. The DSS is working with CUP to review examples of best practice in this area in order to update current guidance.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what meetings his Department has had since May 1995 with organisations representing small firms to review tendering procedures. [6617]

Mr. Burt: The director of procurement for DSS attended a meeting on 27 September 1995 organised by HM Treasury's central unit on procurement.

The meeting, which was also attended by the CBI small firms panel, the Association of British Chambers of Commerce and the Forum of Private Business, reviewed tendering procedures.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress his Department has made regarding establishing a contact point with responsibility for liaison with relevant business support organisations and taking forward small and medium enterprise related public procurement initiatives. [6719]

Mr. Burt: The director of procurement for DSS has taken personal responsibility to act as a contact point for all issues relating to small and medium enterprises.

Goods and Services

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much his Department paid to the private sector for goods and services in 1994–95. [6506]

Mr. Burt: In 1994–95, the DSS paid £1.42 billion to third parties for goods and services. This includes payments of £360 million to Post Office Counters.

Benefits (Disabled People)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average amount in benefit currently claimed by a disabled person. [6448]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Depending on a person's circumstances, he or she may be entitled to the following benefits:

Incapacity Benefit
Attendance Allowance
Disability Living Allowance
Disability Working Allowance
Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit
Other Industrial Injuries Benefit
Severe Disablement Benefit
Invalid Care Allowance
Independent Living Fund
Income Support
Housing Benefit
Council Tax Benefit.

Attendance allowance and disability living allowance are the two main benefits available to help disabled people with some of the extra costs arising from disability. Information for these benefits are in the table.

Average amounts for disabled people

	Average amount[1] (£ per week)
Disability Living Allowance[2]	44.11
Attendance Allowance[3] [4]	37.55

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidance is issued to general practioners about charges for completion of disability living allowance claim forms. [6277]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. David Hinchliffe, dated 18 December 1995:

The Secretary of Stae for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about what guidance is issued to general practioners about charges for completion of Disability Living Allowance (DLA) claim forms.

The Benefits Agency has produced booklet IB204: A Guide for Registered Medical Practitioners. It contains specific details of when fees are paid for the information GPs may be asked to provide. It is available to all GPs and a copy has been placed in the Library.

IB204 informs GPs that their patients may ask them to complete a statement at the back of the DLA claim form and all that is required is a brief note on their disabling condition(s). It clearly states that a fee is not paid for completing this statement.

Information is also included with the DLA claim form outlining the help available to a customer who requires assistance completing a DLA claim form. The notes and advice section which accompanies the DLA claim form stresses that all of these services are available to customers at no cost.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Dumping at Sea

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will conduct an investigation into the environmental impact of dumping at sea. [4891]

Mr. Baldry: Deposit at sea is controlled by means of licences issued under the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985.

In considering a licence application a full assessment is made by our marine scientists and fisheries inspectorates of the potential implications for the marine environment, of any risk to human health and of any nuisance or interference which may be caused to other users of the sea.

Licensed sites are monitored periodically to assess the extent of any environmental effects and to determine the dispersal characteristics of any material disposed of in this way.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated to determine whether (i) bovine spongiform encephalopathy and (ii) Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease can be caused by organo-phosphate pesticides; and if he will make a statement. [6070]

Mrs. Browning: Scientists from this Department, the Department of Health and the Medical Research Council have met the proponent of the theory that BSE is caused by exposure of cattle to organo-phosphate pesticides to discuss his ideas in detail. They concluded that the ideas were unsubstantiated, as they failed to explain a number of key facts about the disease. In addition, the MRC has carried out an independent test, designed in full collaboration with the proponent of this theory, to test the hypothesis, that OPs bind to the BSE prion protein. The independent MRC scientists found no evidence of binding and have said that the theory does not merit further investigation.

The hypothesis has also been considered by the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee, which noted that any possible association between the use of agricultural pesticides, including OP insecticides, and the occurrence of BSE had been considered in the original epidemiological investigation, and none had been found; that the lesions of delayed neurotoxicity induced by OPs are clearly distinguishable from those in BSE; that many countries without BSE use OPs on cattle; and that Guernsey, where OPs are not significantly used, does have BSE. It also noted that the OP hypothesis does not explain the temporal occurrence of BSE.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much money his Department has spent in each of the last 10 years; and how much it estimates it will spend in the current year and each of the next three years on research into the risk of transmission of the BSE agent from cattle to (a) humans and (b) other primates. [6183]

Mrs. Browning: This Department has a very wide-ranging research programme on BSE, many elements of which address the question of the risk of transmission of the BSE agent. It is not possible, without disproportionate cost, to separate out the elements as requested.

Since BSE was first identified in November 1986, this Department has spent, or intends to spend, the following sums on research into the disease:

Financial Year	£ million
1988–89	0.5
1989–90	1.0
1990–91	1.5
1991–92	5.0
1992–93	5.9
1993–94	5.7
1994–95	5.4
1995–96	5.4
1996–97	6.4

No estimates are available of expenditure beyond the next financial year.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the reasons for not extending the Specified Bovine Offal Order to all calves and young cattle. [6128]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) on 14 December 1995, Official Report, column, 830.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research has (a) been commissioned and (b) evaluated into the number of BSE-infected cattle being eaten in British abattoirs. [6975]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: None, since cattle are not eaten in abattoirs.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the number of asymptomatic bovine spongiform encephalopathy infected cattle (a) that have been consumed and (b) that will have been consumed by 2001; what estimate he has made of the number of bovine spongiform encephalopathy infected dairy cattle slaughtered at the end of their milking life that will have been consumed in these periods; and if he will make a statement. [6957]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to him on 31 October 1995, Official Report, column 223. All the controls in place to protect the public from any remote theoretical risk from BSE are based on the assumption that any cattle going for slaughter may be infected with BSE.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action is being taken to ensure that animal tissue being eaten in the United Kingdom does not contain bovine spongiform encephalopathy infection. [6955]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: All cattle suspected as suffering from BSE are killed and the carcase incinerated. In addition, the specified bovine offals, which include the tissues known potentially to contain BSE infectivity, have to be removed from all cattle at slaughter, and cannot be used for human food or animal feed.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the murine test in respect of its sensitivity towards infectivity of the various tissues of an infected cow. [6972]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: The effectiveness of the murine assay for the presence of BSE infectivity is clearly demonstrated by the success of this assay in detecting infectivity by both intracerebral and by oral ingestion routes of exposure. The intracerebral route is the more sensitive. Using the appropriate strains, the murine test is the most sensitive currently available consistent with obtaining answers in experiments with reasonable speed. We are also currently carrying out a comparative bioassay experiment to assess the differences in sensitivity of cattle to cattle to mice transmission of BSE. The results will be published in the normal way when the experiment is completed.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what arrangement his Department has made of the dangers posed by central nervous tissue in the production of manufactured meat. [7020]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to the hon. Member for Wealden (Sir G. Johnson Smith) on 28 November, Official Report, columns 530-31.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what considerations underlay his Department's response to the conclusions of the 1984 report of the Advisory Committee on Dangerous Pathogens on the handling of bovine spongiform encephalopathy infected liver. [6959]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: No infectivity has ever been demonstrated in bovine liver.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the sensitivity of the mouse inoculation test to assess the level of infectivity of bovine spongiform encephalopathy infected (a) brain and spinal cord, (b) other specified bovine offal, (c) bovine tissue other than SBO and (d) bovine milk; and if he will make a statement. [6964]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: The sensitivity of the mouse bioassay test is independent of the tissues assayed. Using this test, BSE infectivity has been detected in the brain, spinal cord and retina of clinically affected cattle and in the distal ileum of calves experimentally challenged with BSE, but no other tissue.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the number of bovine spongiform encephalopathy infected cattle which have been eaten in the United Kingdom each year from 1965 to 1985. [6953]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: The first case of BSE is believed to have occurred in April 1985. There is no evidence that it occurred in previous years.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evidence his Department evaluated in respect of bovine liver in their determination in 1988 of which offals should be banned from human consumption. [6970]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: The choice of offals for inclusion in the specified bovine offal ban when it was introduced in 1989 was based on an assessment of the risk that tissues would contain significant levels of the BSE infective agent if BSE behaved in the same way as scrapie. Subsequent experimental evidence has shown that BSE infectivity is detectable in a narrower range of tissues than scrapie infectivity. No BSE infectivity has ever been demonstrated in the liver of affected cattle, but, in one exceptional case, the liver of a clinically affected sheep has shown a trace level of scrapie infectivity. In eight others in the same study no infectivity was detected.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps have been taken to ensure that all bovine spongiform encephalopathy infected cattle with symptoms are picked out and marked; and to what extent cattle sold in markets have been so checked at abattoirs. [6949]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: BSE is a notifiable disease and farmers and other people in control of cattle must report to MAFF any animal they suspect of having BSE. The animal is then examined by a Ministry veterinary officer and if the suspicions of BSE are confirmed it is killed and incinerated. Cattle at markets are subject to some checks by market inspectors, and any displaying potential symptoms of BSE are reported to the Ministry. We do not rely on these checks as the final level of protection, as all cattle going for slaughter, including those which have not been sold through markets, are subject to an ante mortem check and all adult cattle and any displaying unusual signs are subject to veterinary examination prior to slaughter at abattoirs. Again, any BSE suspects identified will be killed and incinerated.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the number of spinal columns used in the production of manufactured meat since the beginning of the bovine spongiform encephalopathy epidemic; and how many of these he estimates derive from infected bovine, including young cattle. [6966]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: It is not possible to make meaningful estimates.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what considerations underlay the conclusions of the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee that unimportant amounts of infectivity would be found in (a) the liver, (b) the lung, (c) the kidney and (d) the peripheral nerves of the cows; [7018]

(2) if he will make a statement on the research findings available to the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee on (a) the infectivity of animal tissue and (b) the species barrier between bovines and humans when it determined which tissue were considered acceptable for human consumption. [6967]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee is an independent advisory committee. In a recent open letter to my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health, the chairman of the SEAC, Professor John Pattison, and the deputy chairman, Dr. Robert Will, said:

> "SEAC regularly receives a great range and amount of information. Much of it is in the public domain but SEAC also has a data monitoring function with respect to long term research. Thus we are able to regularly look at the interim results of experiments that will take some years to complete so that we may have the earliest warning of any information which may be important for human and animal health."

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what considerations underlay his conclusions that (a) the majority of confirmed cases of BSE born since 1988 are due to cattle feed contamination by ruminant protein set out in his answer of 31 January 1995, Official Report, column 646, and (b) that this has arisen from failings in the handling of a specified bovine offal after removal from the carcase which could have resulted in the offal entering the food chain. [7019]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him on 31 October 1995, Official Report, columns 220–21.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of the cattle (a) in the current bovine spongiform encephalopathy study and (b) of the group in the study that died of bovine spongiform encephalopathy were fed feed concentrates before becoming part of the study; and what proportion of the cattle in the study were separated from their farm, indicating the specific ages in weeks. [6952]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: The Ministry is undertaking a number of different studies into BSE using groups of cattle and it is not clear to which in particular the hon. Member refers.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what reports he has received from veterinary surgeons on failures fully to recover bovine offals prior to carcases being dispatched to produce mechanically recovered meat. [6969]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to the hon. Member for Scarborough (Mr. Sykes) on 22 November, Official Report, columns 192–93. Since that question was answered, and up to 14 December, we have found a further four cases in which small pieces of spinal cord were left attached to carcases after dressing.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what experiments his Department has funded into the transmission of bovine spongiform encephalopathy from cow to offspring. [6961]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: This Department has funded a number of pieces of research into the possibility of maternal and horizontal transmission of BSE, some of which are still in progress. The four main studies are the on-going epidemiological study of the epidemic; the bioassay of reproduction tissues from clinically affected cattle; the case control study, all the details of which were published in the progress report on BSE presented to Parliament in May of this year, copies of which are in the Library of the House; and, finally, the cohort study: this is a blind study which will end in 1997. Details of this are given in the latest edition of the progress report on BSE, which was laid in the Library of the House on 14 December. So far, there is no statistically significant evidence for maternal transmission of BSE.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his Department's research into the links between bovine spongiform encephalopathy and scrapie. [6965]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: Details of research into the links between BSE and scrapie are given in the report by the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee, entitled "Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathies: A Summary of Present Knowledge and Research—September 1994", which was published in February 1995, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the degree of under-reporting of cases of clinical BSE. [7021]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: Our analysis does not show any under-reporting of clinical cases of BSE.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the number and proportion of (a) sheep, (b) goats, (c) pigs, (d) mink, (e) mice and (f) chickens that have developed a spongiform encephalopathy after being fed bovine spongiform encephalopathy as part of experimental work; and if he will make a statement. [6963]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: In experiments funded out by this Ministry, sheep, goats, mink and mice have succumbed to disease when fed orally with BSE-infected brain material. Pigs and chickens have not succumbed to oral challenge with BSE-infected brain material.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what tests the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee conducted on primates in respect of bovine spongiform encephalopathy transmission to humans. [6950]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee gives advice to the Government; it does not carry out research itself.

Spongiform Encephalopathy (Dogs)

Mr. Hinchcliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what reports his Department has received of dogs displaying symptoms similar to those of spongiform encephalopathy. [6948]

Mrs. Browning: Up to 31 October 1995 material from 14 dogs had been examined in veterinary investigations centres for spongiform encephalopathy. None of these suspected cases was confirmed, and SE has never been confirmed in dogs in the UK or anywhere else.

Calves (Feed)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidelines his Department issues in respect of the normal calf age for feeding (a) the colostrum of the mother, (b) milk substitute and (c) feed concentrates. [6973]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 December 1995]: This Ministry, excluding agencies, issues no guidelines on the feeding of calves. The milk and colostrum of a cow under restriction as a BSE suspect can be fed only to that cow's own calf.

Pesticides

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the current permitted levels of pesticide residues in British (a) beef and (b) milk. [6068]

Mrs. Browning: Pesticides maximum residue levels have been set for a number of active ingredients in a range of commodities, including meat and milk. The MRLs are set out in the Pesticides (Maximum Residue Levels in Crops, Food and Feeding Stuffs) Regulations 1994, as amended.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the names and manufacturers of the pesticides licensed for the treatment of British cows. [6069]

Mrs. Browning: The following table lists all ectoparasiticides and endectocides currently authorised as veterinary medicines for the treatment of cattle in the United Kingdom, as shown in our records:

Dioxin Monitoring

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all the sites in the United Kingdom being monitored for dioxin emissions. [7208]

Mr. Boswell: The Ministry has collected cows' milk from farms around 29 industrial sites representative of processes that may release dioxins or related compounds. These sites are:

Chineham Municipal Waste Incinerator, Basingstoke, Hampshire
Otterbourne Municipal Waste Incinerator, Winchester, Hampshire
Brockhampton Municipal Waste Incinerator, Havant, Hampshire
Vine Street Incinerator Plant, Huddersfield, West Yorkshire
Avonmouth Refuse Disposal Works, Bristol, Avon
Stoke Incineration Plant, Stoke-on-Trent, Staffordshire
Coventry Waste Reduction Unit, Coventry, West Midlands
Eastcroft Municipal Waste Incinerator, Nottingham, Nottinghamshire
Coleshill Sludge Disposal Plant, Coleshill, Warwickshire
Hillingdon Hospital Incinerator, Uxbridge, Middlesex
New Cross Hospital, Wolverhampton, West Midlands
Cherry Tree Hospital, Stockport, Greater Manchester
Stepping Hill Hospital, Stockport, Greater Manchester
ICI Chemicals and Polymers, Runcorn, Cheshire
Cleanaway Ltd. Incineration Plant, Ellesmere Port, Cheshire
Fine Organics Ltd., Middlesbrough, Cleveland
Polymeric Treatments Ltd., Kilamarsh, Derbyshire
CBDE, Porton Down, Wiltshire
Rechem International Ltd., Hythe, Southampton, Hampshire
John Betts Refiners, West Bromwich, West Midlands
Specialist Metal Services, Tilbury, Essex
West Thurrock Power Station, Essex
Tilbury Power Station, Essex
Castle Cement Ribblesdale Works, Clitheroe, Lancashire
Tip 2/1, Lostock Gralam, Northwith, Cheshire
Sutton Walls, Herefordshire
Higher Kiln Quarry, Bampton, Devon
Villa Farm, Wolvey, Warwickshire
Commonside Tip, Alvanley, Cheshire

Results are available for seven of these sites and none exceeds the normal background range for dioxins in milk.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minster of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many statutory instruments his Department sponsored in the last Session of Parliament; how many of these (a) constituted a new rule or regulation, (b) were introduced to implement European Community directives and (c) amplify the minimum standards set out in an original European Community directive. [2467]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 28 November 1995]: In the 1994–95 Session the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food sponsored 121 statutory instruments.

The cost of analysing each to provide detailed responses would be disproportionate. However, approximately half the SIs involved new rules or regulations and about a third were introduced to implement European Community directives, neither category being exclusive.

It is firmly not our policy to amplify the minimum standards set out in directives unless there are overwhelming policy reasons for doing so. We have recently introduced new internal procedures to ensure this.

HEALTH

Redundancy Payments

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what have been the gross redundancy payments made by each (a) health authority and (b) trust in each region in each year since 1990. [4187]

Mr. Malone: The information will be placed in the Library. The figures for 1994–95 are provisional.

Residential Homes

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many long-stay geriatric beds have been closed since 1979; and how many private residential nursing home beds opened since that date. [5592]

Mr. Bowis: Information is not available in the form requested.

Mental Health

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what checks and safeguards are in place in respect of inmates in institutions for the criminally insane ordering goods by mail order for individuals outside that institution who do not wish to receive them. [6025]

Mr. Bowis: This is a matter for the Special Hospital Services Authority. Decisions to withhold mail are subject to review by the Mental Health Act Commission.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he proposes to take to bring up to the average the spending of those English local authorities which is below the average expenditure of personal social services budgets on mental health services. [6748]

Mr. Bowis: None. It is for the elected member of local authorities to decide how much to spend on particular services in the light of local needs and priorities.

Dr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he plans to take in response to the sixth biennial report of the Mental Health Act Commission on acute hospital beds in (i) all major conurbations, (ii) Devon, (iii) East Anglia and (iv) Cheshire. [6750]

Mr. Bowis: We shall be responding in due course.

Mr. Litherland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many detained non-UK national hospital patients have been removed to a country abroad since 1983, under the provision in the Mental Health Act 1983. [6926]

Mr. Bowis: Twenty-five.

Mr. Litherland: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of detained non-UK national hospital patients requiring mental health treatment and removed to a country abroad have had their cases considered by the mental health review tribunal; and to how many of these the tribunal has refused to give its approval for removal since 1983. [6922]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what checks and safeguards are in place to regulate the use of telephones by inmates in institutions for the criminally insane. [6024]

Mr. Bowis: This is a matter for the Special Hospital Services Authority.

Dr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken by his Department and by the relevant professional organisations to organise training for their members in respect of the provisions of the Mental Health (Patients in the Community) Act 1995, and their duties under the Act. [6749]

Mr. Bowis: The Department will be issuing comprehensive guidance on the implementation of the Act's provisions which will assist in training.

Advertising

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the expenditure of his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title for each year since 1990–91; and what estimate he has made for 1995–96 based on expenditure to date and existing plans. [6561]

Mr. Horam: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Lindane

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the level of risk to human health from the use of lindane as a pesticide. [6216]

Mr. Horam: The Government are advised on the safety of pesticides by the independent expert statutory Advisory Committee on Pesticides. It has reviewed the use of lindane as a non-agricultural pesticide and concluded that used in accordance with the conditions of approval there would be no undue risk to human health. Details of this review were published in December 1992 in the document "Evaluation of Gamma HCH (Lindane 2)", copies of which are available in the Library. A review of the agricultural uses of lindane is presently being undertaken by the committee and the results of this are expected early next year.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence he has evaluated in respect of a possible link between lindane and breast cancer. [6220]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health's independent expert Advisory Committee on the Carcinogenicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment reviewed the available epidemiology data on breast cancer in women and levels of lindane in serum and breast fat tissue at its meeting on the 16 March 1995. The committee concluded that there was no clear evidence of an association between serum and fat levels of lindane and breast cancer at the present time, but recommended that the matter be kept under review.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the countries which have banned the use of lindane as a pesticide and their reasons for doing so. [6221]

Mrs. Browning: I have been asked to reply.

This information is not collected by the Government. I am aware that approvals have been withdrawn for uses of lindane in Denmark, Sweden and Finland.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the statutory maximum safe level for lindane in milk for human consumption in each European country; [6218]

(2) what is the maximum recommended safe level for consumption of lindane by humans in each European country. [6219]

Mrs. Browning: I have been asked to reply.

Statutory pesticide maximum residue levels—MRLs—for all active ingredient/commodity combinations in the EU are being established through an EC Commission priority programme. The MRL for lindane in milk was included in directive 93/57/EC and is set at 0.008 mg/kg of milk.

Safety limits are expressed in terms of the acceptable daily intake—ADI—of a particular pesticide from all sources, which is the level that can be consumed every day for an individual's entire lifetime in the practical certainty, on the basis of all known facts, that no harm will result. ADIs are agreed internationally through a World Health Organisation procedure, and for lindane the recommended level is 0.008 mg/kg/bodyweight.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the maximum safe level of lindane in milk for human consumption; and how many times in each of the last five years milk has been found to contain higher amounts than the maximum safe level. [6217]

Mrs. Browning: I have been asked to reply.

For lindane in milk, the current maximum residue level is 0.008 mg/kg, and at no time during the last five years has monitoring by the Government's working party on pesticide residues revealed an exceedance of this limit.

Latex Sensitivity

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what progress his Department has made in assessing the cost to the NHS of skin diseases caused by certain types of latex surgical gloves; and if he will make a statement; [6316]

(2) if the Medical Devices Agency has now issued a device bulletin to the health service in respect of latex sensitivity. [6318]

Mr. Horam: The Medical Devices Agency expects to publish the device bulletin on latex sensitivity in the health care setting early in the new year. Information on the cost of particular skin diseases to the national health service is not available centrally.

Systemic Lupus Erythematosus

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people are suffering from systemic lupus erythematosus in England; what is the age-sex distribution of the disease; and if he will make a statement on systemic lupus erythematosus; [6296]

(2) what was his total budget for (a) self-help groups and (b) self-help groups dealing with systemic lupus erythematosus in each of the last five years; [6298]

(3) what was the total amount of research money given for systemic lupus erythematosus by his Department in each of the last five years. [6297]

Mr. Bowis: The information available centrally is shown in the table. The information covers admissions to hospitals.

The Department's principal channel of support to voluntary organisations is the section 64 general scheme. Lupus UK, the main charity providing help for sufferers from systemic lupus erythematosus in the United Kingdom, is currently receiving a core grant under the scheme totalling £24,000 spread over the three years 1994–95 to 1996–97 towards its administrative costs. Information on grants awarded specifically to self-help groups is not separately identified.

The Department of Health is not currently funding research into systemic lupus erythematosus. The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council which is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

Waiting Lists

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on equality of access to services in the national health service with particular reference to waiting lists. [6231]

Mr. Horam: We are committed to improving the health of the population as a whole and reducing variations in health status by targeting resources where needs are greatest. As far as patients requiring admission to hospital are concerned, emergency cases are always treated immediately. Patients not requiring emergency treatment are treated on the basis of clinical priority within the terms of the contracts agreed between health authorities and general practitioner fundholders and trusts.

Family Planning Clinics

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many family planning clinics there were in each of the last five years. [6233]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

Tuberculosis Notifications

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if he will list the three areas with the highest number of TB notifications in the last year. [6237]

Mr. Horam: The three local authorities with the highest number of notifications of all forms of tuberculosis, excluding chemoprophylaxis, in 1994 are shown in the table:

Birmingham: 263 notifications
Newham: 206 notifications
Brent: 162 notifications

GP Notes

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, who owns the written notes used by general practitioners and the equivalent computer data. [6238]

Mr. Malone: Ownership of records on patients maintained by national health service general practitioners in accordance with their terms of service, is vested in family health services authorities.

Health Authority Allocations

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the funding allocation by health authority for 1995–96 and 1996–97. [6214]

Mr. Horam: For details of 1995–96 district health authority initial revenue cash limits I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 11 December at column 520. Details of 1996–97 planned initial cash limits for the new health authorities will be placed in the Library.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the district health authority budget allocations for next year have been determined: what representations he has received from medical professionals and academics on the calculation of the budget allocations; what work has been done in respect of these allocations by the York centre for health economics; and if he will make a statement. [6678]

Mr. Horam: Planned general allocations for 1996–97, as given in my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Broxtowe (Mr. Lester) on 30 November at columns 869–71, have been informed by the national weighted capitation formula. I am unaware of any representations concerning the calculation of these allocations.

The national formula includes adjustments for age and need which are based on work commissioned by my Department from a team from York university.

GP Fundholding

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the percentages of GP practices which are fund-holders in each family health services authority. [6226]

Mr. Malone: Information on the percentage of fund-holding general practitioners for each family health services authority will be placed in the Library.

NHS Bodies

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the total amount of subscriptions to (a) the National Association of Health Authorities and Trusts and (b) the Trust Federation from (i) health authorities, (ii) trusts and (iii) family health services authorities in each of the last five years. [6227]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

"The Health of the Nation"

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list "The Health of the Nation" targets that have not been met in the last five years. [6232]

Mr. Horam: "The Health of the Nation" strategy was launched in July 1992. It is essentially a medium-to-long-term strategy—target years vary in each key area and range from 1994 to 2010. Only one target was set for 1994, and this has not been met. It was:

> "To reduce the smoking prevalence among 11–15 year olds by at least 33 per cent. (from about 8 per cent. in 1988 to less than 6 per cent)".

The second progress report on "The Health of the Nation" strategy, "Fit for the Future", presents full details of progress towards targets. This document was published in July 1995, and copies are available in the Library.

Public Health Consultants

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to make reductions in public health consultant posts. [6234]

Mr. Malone: None.

Consultants

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of (a) female and (b) male consultants at September 1994, indicating the Government target for female consultants at that date. [6236]

Mr. Malone: The number of female and male consultants in England at September 1994 was:

Female: 3,070

Male: 14,030.

The Department of Health's target was to increase the percentage of women consultants from 15.5 per cent. in 1991 to 20 per cent. by 1994.

Child Day Care

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of children under the age of five years who are in the care of (a) private child minders, (b) nannies and (c) private or voluntary playgroups. [6527]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the publication "OPCS Survey of Day Care Services for Children".

Edgware Hospital

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on future accident and emergency arrangements at Edgware general hospital, following the meeting he held on Wednesday 13 December with the official deputation from the area. [6879]

Mr. Malone: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's primary concern is to ensure that the quality of service for local people is at least maintained, and wherever possible improved. There will continue to be an accident service at Edgware hospital which will have close links with the new accident and emergency centre at Barnet general hospital. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has also asked Barnet health authority to examine with general practitioners their possible role in the new arrangements at Edgware.

Fluoridation

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of public opinion towards water fluoridation with particular reference to (a) inner-city residents and (b) ethnic minority groups; [6653]

(2) what assessment he has made of the benefits of community-based water fluoridation for (a) inner-city residents and (b) ethnic minority groups. [6676]

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which areas had artificially fluoridated water supplies before privatisation; and which have fluoridated since. [7319]

Mr. Malone: The Government remain fully convinced of the safety and efficacy of fluoridation, in providing a cost-effective method of improving oral health for all members of the community. Studies have consistently shown that the prevalence of dental decay in fluoridated areas is between one third to one half lower than in comparable non-fluoridated water areas.

Professionally conducted opinion polls have consistently shown public support for fluoridation running at around 70 per cent. for fluoridation. Opinion surveys of particular groups are not routinely undertaken as water fluoridation benefits all sections of the population served, including inner-city residents and ethnic minorities.

United Kingdom water companies supplying artificially fluoridated water supplies to various localities within their catchment area before water privatisation include:

Severn Trent Water
South Staffordshire Water
East Worcestershire Waterworks Company (now part of Severn Trent)
North East Water
North West Water
Welsh Water
Yorkshire Water
Anglian Water
Colne Valley Water Company.

Severn Trent Water and Anglian Water have extended artificially fluoridated water supplies to new locations within their areas since water privatisation.

Community Psychiatric Nurses

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many whole-time equivalent NHS community psychiatric nurses were employed by English regions per thousand population on 30 September 1994. [6751]

Mr. Horam: The available information about nurses working in psychiatric areas in the community who are employed by the national health service is shown in the table.

NHS Hospital and Community Health Services Nursing and Midwifery staff working within the Community Psychiatric Nursing Area of Work (excluding Senior nurses and Agency staff)—England by Region as at 30 September 1994

Blackburn Royal Infirmary

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the access to brain scanning facilities afforded to Mr. Craig Yates of Darwen. [7068]

Mr. Horam: Blackburn, Hyndburn and Ribble Valley Health Care national health service trust has announced a review of the clinical management of Mr. Yates's case. The hon. Member may wish to approach Mr. W. Woolley, chairman of the trust, for more information.

Alcohol

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response the Government will now be making to the World Health Organisation's European alcohol action plan. [7120]

Mr. Bowis: None.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths there have been from alcohol-related illness in each of the last five years. [7322]

Mr. Bowis: There is no accepted definition of the term "alcohol-related".

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which organisation he consulted before his announcement on changes to the recommended weekly amounts of consumption of alcohol. [7221]

Mr. Bowis: Interested persons and organisations were invited to submit written evidence to the inter-departmental group reviewing the sensible drinking message.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost to the national health service of alcohol-related disease in each of the last five years. [7321]

Mr. Bowis: There is no generally accepted method of producing such estimates.

Care in the Community

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many violent deaths have been caused by care in the community patients with particular reference to (a) homicides, and (b) suicides; and if he will make a statement. [7119]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally. We have no reason to believe that the implementation of community-based mental health care has led to an increase in either homicides or suicides.

"Policy Appraisal and Health"

Dame Jill Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish guidance on how to assess the impacts of policies on health. [7438]

Mr. Horam: I am today publishing a guide, "Policy Appraisal and Health". Copies have been placed in the Library and will be distributed to Government Departments, local authorities, health authorities and other interested organisations.

The guide is designed to give practical guidance to Government Departments and other public sector agencies on how to assess the impact of their policies on health. It describes how to incorporate health impacts into the wider assessments of costs and benefits required for policy development. The advice is intended to be helpful and to encourage consistency throughout the public sector but is not mandatory.

Appraisal in Government is concerned with the best use of the nation's resources. Health is a key aspect of the nation's well-being. Any significant effects on the health of the nation should therefore be assessed and taken into account.

The costs and benefits of alternative policies, programmes and projects need to be carefully compared in order to make best use of the nation's resources. The Treasury's guidance, "Economic Appraisal in Central Government", explains how to do this. The guide I am publishing today provides specific advice in the health field to supplement the more general Treasury guidance.

The guide was prepared with assistance from many Government Departments and other organisations. I am grateful to them for their contribution to producing this useful guide.

Frozen Embryos

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the report of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority on the statutory storage period for embryos; and will he make a statement. [7544]

Mr. Dorrell: I have today published the report from the authority.

I thank the authority for this helpful and thoughtful review of problems arising from the current five-year limit on the storage of embryos. The authority recommends that regulations should be brought forward to allow for embryo storage up to 10 years and exceptionally for longer, where this is justified on medical or social grounds.

The Government intend to lay regulations which will give effect to the authority's recommendation. These regulations will allow those whose embryos will have been in store for five years or more by July 1996 to be consulted and counselled about extending the storage period for their embryos, before the five-year period expires.

Copies of the authority's report have been placed in the Library.

Learning Disabilities

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his Department's policy regarding residential services for people with learning disabilities; what research he has commissioned to evaluate such facilities; and when he expects to receive the results of that research. [7623]

Mr. Bowis: Current policy on residential services for people with learning disabilities as set out in LAC(92)15 recognises that authorities should provide a range of residential services in order to meet the diverse needs of this client group. Authorities are able to purchase or provide places in a range of residential facilities—for example, in group homes or residential and village communities—provided they meet the criteria set out in the guidance. The primary concerns are the needs and preferences of each person and his or her family. Authorities should exercise their discretion in a way that maximises choice within available resources. Guidance on the National Assistance Act 1948 (Choice of Accommodation) Directions 1992 (LAC(92)27) makes it clear that where a prospective resident cannot express a preference authorities should act on the preferences of the carer unless, exceptionally, to do so would be against the best interests of the resident. Copies of LAC(92)15 and LAC(92)27 have been placed in the Library.

To help authorities in their task of making the best use of resources in meeting the needs of people with learning disabilities the Government have set up an independent evaluation of the cost and outcomes of various types of provision, including village and residential communities. The first phase of the evaluation will be completed by 31 May 1996. It will comprise a review of relevant research literature conducted by Professor Cullen of Keele university and Dr. Emerson of the Hester Adrian research centre and an analysis of any readily available information on costs conducted by the personal social services policy unit at the university of Kent.

Access to Health Records

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has concluded his review of the need for regulations to provide a complaints procedure for handling complaints by patients who are denied access to their health records under the Access to Health Records Act 1990; and if he will make a statement. [7690]

Mr. Horam: As announced by my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Health on 21 March 1995 at column 130, the Government are introducing on 1 April 1996, a new national health service-wide complaints procedure. This will include arrangements for dealing with patients' complaints about access to their health records.

Small and Medium Firms

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what meetings his Department has had since May 1995 with organisations representing small firms to review tendering procedures. [6623]

Mr. Horam: Meetings are normally held with suppliers to give them information about their tendering performance, once a competitive tendering exercise has been completed. This procedure is particularly valued by companies, no matter what their size. Feedback from these meetings suggests that suppliers are generally content with the tendering procedures used by the Department.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what work his Department has done to develop best practice in the publication of departmental procurement guidance material relevant to small and medium enterprises' needs. [6622]

Mr. Horam: The Department's guidance on procurement procedures is used by all staff engaged in buying goods and services. It ensures that all legal requirements are complied with and sets out good practice relating to the whole tendering process. This material guides staff to deploy an objective and fair competitive tendering process that will achieve best value for money for the Department and does not, therefore, distinguish between small and large firms.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice has been given to procurement staff on the implications of purchasing from small and medium enterprises. [6624]

Mr. Horam: The Department's purchasing manual and guidance on the use of management consultants includes advice on the selection of companies. This guidance has been circulated not only to procurement staff but to those involved occasionally in purchasing goods and services.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress his Department has made regarding establishing a contact point with responsibility for liaison with relevant business support organisations and taking forward small and medium-sized enterprise related public procurement initiatives. [6717]

Mr. Horam: The head of purchasing in my Department is the single point for contact for companies of all sizes, on all procurement issues. He is actively engaged in improving the value for money we obtain by assisting all interested suppliers improve their competitiveness.

GP Funding

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many family doctor practices in the area covered by Leeds family health services authority have had their funding (a) increased and (b) decreased as a result of the changed criteria for fund distribution; what is (c) the largest increase and (d) the largest reduction in funding; and in which area of the city practices (c) and (d) are located. [6598]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Primary Care

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes have been made, for the financial year 1996–97, in the use of census data by local family health services authorities, in the formula for the distribution of funding to primary care practices. [6597]

Mr. Malone: Family health services authorities will continue to use 1991 census data as the basis for calculating deprivation payments to general practitioners in 1996–97.

Health Authorities (Management Costs)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for 1995–96 and 1996–97, using the Audit Commission's M2 definition, the management costs of all district health authorities and trusts; and what this data is as a per capita figure. [6928]

Mr. Horam: The Audit Commission's M2 definition is applicable only to trusts. Planned trust management costs, using the M2 definition, are not available centrally for either 1995–96 or 1996–97.

Insulin

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his policy in respect of the continued universal availability of animal insulin to NHS patients who prefer such insulin to synthetic insulin. [7026]

Mr. Horam: We recognise that some people with diabetes prefer to use animal rather than human insulin. Decisions as to the most suitable type of insulin for particular patients are matters for professional clinical judgment. The main supplier of animal insulin in this country has assured us that it has no plans to discontinue its production in the foreseeable future. Therefore, animal insulin will continue to be available for those patients who are prescribed it.

Camden and Islington District Health Authority

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the total level of grant made available to Camden and Islington district health authority in each year from 1992 to the current financial year; what grant he expects to make in 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [6830]

Mr. Horam: The 1992–93, 1993–94 and 1994–95 final revenue cash limits, the 1995–96 initial revenue cash limit and the 1996–97 initial planned revenue cash limit for Camden and Islington health authority are shown in the table.

Camden and Islington Health Authority cash limits

	thousand
1992–93 Final Revenue Cash Limit	[1]254.759
1993–94 Final Revenue Cash Limit	247.858
1994–95 Final Revenue Cash Limit	255.344
1995–96 Initial Revenue Cash Limit	226.343
1996–97 Planned Initial Revenue Cash Limit	268.145

[1] This is the sum of the final cash limits for Bloomsbury and Islington DHA and Hampstead DHA, which merged to form Camden and Islington DHA on 1 April 1993.

Notes:

1. Final revenue cash limits for 1992–93 to 1994–95 were made by North East Thames regional health authority. In 1995–96 the initial revenue cash limit was made by North Thames regional health authority. In 1996–97 Secretary of State was responsible for making the planned initial revenue cash limit.
2. 1996–97 cash limits are planned only as formal cash limits cannot be made until the new health authority legally comes into existence on 1 April 1996.
3. For 1995–96 and 1996–97 figures recorded are initial cash limits and will exclude any in year adjustments made during the year. For 1992–93 to 1994–95, the figures are final cash limits and hence include any adjustments made in year.

Hospitality

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money has been spent from his hospitality budget on alcohol in each of the last five years. [7720]

Mr. Horam: Expenditure on alcohol is not separately identified within the hospitality budget.

Breast Cancer

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his reply to the third report of the Health Committee on breast cancer services, Cm 3007, what targets he has set for the number of specialist breast cancer care units. [7129]

Mr. Horam: No targets have been set for the number of specialist breast cancer units. It is for the local health authorities to determine the number of cancer units specialising in the treatment of breast cancer and where they should be situated based on the needs of their local populations.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ensure that adequate resources are made available to establish the number of specialist breast care units recommended by the Health Committee in its third report of Session 1994–95, HC 324, on breast cancer services; and what plans he has to proceed with the target set out by the Committee. [7130]

Mr. Horam: National health service spending will grow by £1.3 billion in 1996–97. This will enable further improvements in cancer services to be made in line with the recommendations set out in the document "A Policy Framework for Commissioning Cancer Services", which sets out the new strategic framework for the organisation of all cancer services.

Portman Group

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what meetings he has had with members of the Portman group in the last year; with which members; and when the meetings took place. [7175]

Mr. Bowis: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met Sir Anthony Greener, the chairman of Guinness plc, on 14 November 1995 to discuss a wide range of matters of mutual interest.

NHS Capital Expenditure

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to PO513/1995/96 Friday 8 December 1995, what figures he has for total NHS capital expenditure in 1994–95 and forward years; and if he will give those figures. [7177]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 8 December at columns 429-30 for details of capital expenditure by national health service bodies in 1994–95.

The figures for NHS capital spending for the current and future years were announced by my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 28 November 1995. These are shown in the table.

NHS Capital Spending 1995–96 to 1998–99

	Revised plan 1995–96	Plan 1996–97	Provisional 1997–98	Plans 1998–99
Hospital and community health services
Government spending	1.806	1.543	1.495	1.430
Receipts from land sales[1]	250	310	300	290
PFI Investment	47	165	200	300
Other NHS Capital Spending[2]	17	20	17	17
Total	2,120	2.038	2.012	2.036

Factor 8

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if recombinant, genetically engineered, factor 8 is available on the NHS to all patients. [7176]

Mr. Horam: Like other treatments, recombinant factor 8 is available to national health service patients if their doctor decides that they should receive it having taken account of the patient's individual needs, the alternative treatments available and the availability of resources.

GP Commissioning Groups

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what sums health authorities are spending on GP commissioning groups. [7178]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if the Committee on Safety of Medicines considered the manuscript produced by Professor Jick and what supplementary written material was made available from that study at its meeting on 13 October; [6085]

(2) pursuant to his oral statement to the House on 23 October, Official Report, column 701, on what date the Medicines Control Agency commissioned Professor Jick to conduct a study to examine safety questions regarding third generation oral contraceptives; and what was the cost of that study to the Medicines Control Agency. [5968]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The Medicines Control Agency did not commission Professor Jick to conduct a study of the safety of oral contraceptives and did not provide him with funding. During June and July 1995 the MCA discussed with him the feasibility of his conducting a study which would help to evaluate further concerns regarding venous thromboembolism arising from a study conducted by the World Health Organisation. The findings of Professor Jick's study were considered by the Committee on Safety of Medicines at its meeting on 13 October. The committee also considered the findings of a study by Professor Jick of fatal cardiovascular events in users of oral contraceptives.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the publication date of the report produced by Professor Spitzer and colleagues and considered by the Committee on Safety of Medicines at its meeting on 13 October; [6084]

(2) on what date (a) the Medicines Control Agency requested expedited analysis of the trinational study on oral contraceptives, (b) the Medicines Control Agency first received data from the study and (c) the Medicines Control Agency received a written report of the study. [5970]

(3) what discussions his officials held on 9 October regarding safety concerns relating to third generation contraceptives. [5969]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 14 December 1995]: Official of the Medicines Control Agency first saw preliminary data from the transnational study on 10 July 1995. It made a written request for an expedited analysis of the study on 13 July 1995. Such an analysis was presented by the investigators to officials from the MCA at a meeting held on 9 October 1995, and to a meeting of a working group which included members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines and invited experts on 10 October 1995. The MCA has not received a final report of the study but it has reviewed the published protocol and received written documentation of the findings including an abstract which was understood to have been submitted to a scientific meeting.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what action has been taken with respect to third generation oral contraceptives by (a) the licensing authority and (b) the Medicines Control Agency under powers conferred by the Medicines Act 1968 and subsidiary legislation; [6086]

(2) from what date he proposes to (a) suspend, (b) revoke and (c) vary the licences of the third generation oral contraceptives which were recently the subject of advice from the Committee on Safety of Medicines; [5916]

(3) what regulatory action has been taken in respect of the third generation oral contraceptives referred to in the "Dear Doctor" letter of 18 October; and if he will make a statement. [5919]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 14 December 1995]: Any consideration of possible regulatory action is treated in confidence between the licensing authority and the company or companies concerned. The licensing authority makes a public announcement only after any regulatory action has been completed.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) at whose request, and when, the issue of the third generation oral contraceptives was placed on the agenda of the meeting of the Committee on Proprietary Medicinal Products held on 17 and 18 October; [5914]

(2) if the United Kingdom representatives at the meeting of the Committee on Proprietary Medicinal Products on 18 October told that committee of the intention to issue later that day the "Dear Doctor" letter relating to third generation oral contraceptives; [5910]

(3) what assessment he has made of the licensing authority's compliance with its obligations to its European partners in relation to those matters relating to the safety of third generation oral contraceptives considered at the meetings of the Committee on Proprietary Medicinal Products held on 17 and 18 October and on 26 and 27 October. [5913]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The Medicines Control Agency has an obligation to keep other European Community member states informed of issues on the efficacy, quality and safety of medicines and it has taken extensive action in this respect for oral contraceptives. When information from the World Health Organisation study was first provided to the MCA in confidence, it sought to ensure its release to other member states, although its request was not granted. The safety of third generation oral contraceptives was placed on the agenda of the Committee on Proprietary Medicinal Products—CPMP—pharmacovigilance working party in August 1995 and other member states were informed that important new evidence was about to emerge. The United Kingdom made it clear that the issue would need urgent consideration and that steps were being taken to obtain further information.

The safety of third generation oral contraceptives was placed on the agenda of the CPMP meeting of 17 and 18 October at the formal request of the UK representatives of the committee on 11 October, after further information on the issue became available. At the meeting on 17 and 18 October, UK representatives presented the new data to the committee and made it clear that the UK considered that there was an urgent need to communicate the findings with appropriate recommendations to doctors and women in the UK without delay.

The CPMP was unable to reach a position at the meeting of 17 and 18 October and a further meeting was convened for 26 and 27 October. UK representatives participated in this meeting and arranged for Professor Rawlins and Professor Langman of the Committee on Safety of Medicines to attend as additional UK experts. The CPMP assessment which was issued following the meeting of 26 and 27 October makes it clear that, on the basis of three studies, oral contraceptives containing desogestrel or gestodene are associated with an increased risk of venous thromboembolism. Its position statement recommends that preparations containing desogestrel and gestodene should not be withdrawn but does not make specific recommendations for action. This and the fact that the CPMP's position statement is not a binding opinion indicate that the matter of informing and advising doctors and users is for individual member states to deal with based on their particular prevailing circumstances.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what information relating to third generation oral contraceptives was considered by the sub-committee on pharmacovigilance before the meeting of the Committee on Safety of Medicines on 13 October; [5921]

(2) which members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines and what other persons were present at the special meeting of the committee held on 13 October; [5925]

(3) what arrangements were made for the chairman of the Committee on Safety of Medicines to attend the special meeting of the Committee on Safety of Medicines held on 13 October; [5966]

(4) at what date and time the special meeting of the Committee on Safety of Medicines held on 13 October was called; [5931]

(5) if he will list the names and appointments of all persons present at the ad hoc sub-committee of the Committee on Safety of Medicines which met on 11 October, to consider issues relating to the third generation oral contraceptives; [5907]

(6) if he will publish the full text of the recommendations of the Committee on Safety of Medicines on third generation oral contraceptives; [5930]

(7) what factors led the sub-committee on pharmacovigilance not to consider safety concerns relating to third generation oral contraceptives prior to the meeting of the Committee on Safety of Medicines on 13 October; [5911]

(8) when he will publish the full documentation which was made available to the Committee on Safety of Medicines before its meeting on 13 October. [5917]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 14 December 1995]: No ad hoc meeting of a sub-committee of the Committee on Safety of Medicines was held on 11 October. A working group which included members of the CSM and invited experts was convened on 10 October to consider new information relating to the safety of third generation oral contraceptives. This issue was not considered by the sub-committee on pharmacovigilance before the meeting of the CSM on 13 October due to the urgency of the matter. It is normal practice for urgent safety issues to be considered by CSM without prior consideration by the sub-committee on pharmacovigilance when there are time constraints. In these circumstances ad-hoc working groups are convened as necessary.

Arrangements for the meeting of the CSM of 13 October were made during the morning of 11 October and by agreement with the chairman of the committee.

The papers and proceedings of meetings of the CSM, its sub-committees and ad hoc working groups which advise the CSM are confidential. The recommendations made by the CSM at the meeting on 13 October are embodied in the letter from the chairman dated 18 October.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of deaths which would be prevented annually if the prescribing advice from the Committee on Safety of Medicines on third generation oral contraceptives were acted on by all United Kingdom general practitioners. [5929]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 14 December 1995]: It is estimated that about two deaths and 100 to 150 cases of venous thromboembolism would be prevented annually in the United Kingdom if the Committee on Safety of Medicines' recent advice on third generation oral contraceptives was acted upon.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what information relating to the potential beneficial effects of third general oral contraceptives was made available to the Committee on Safety of Medicines before its meeting on 13 October; what steps the Medicines Control Agency took to establish that all currently available information was presented to the committee; and what steps the Medicines Control Agency took to establish when further information might be available; [5918]

(2) what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the information made available to the Committee on Safety of Medicines before its meeting on 13 October. [5967]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The Medicines Control Agency sought to obtain data on all information relevant to the cardiovascular risks of oral contraceptives. This included whether the third generation oral contraceptives might be associated with a lesser risk of arterial disease than other oral contraceptives that might offset the increased risk of venous thromboembolism. The data examined related to large populations of women in the United Kingdom with careful and exhaustive analyses to assess factors which could influence the findings. Two of the studies provided to the committee prior to the meeting included data on the risk of stroke and myocardial infarction and one study provided data on mortality. In October 1995, the MCA discussed with the investigators of the studies the availability of further information on the relative risks of myocardial infarction and stroke with different oral contraceptives and understood that substantive data would not be available for one to two years.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information was made available by the Medicines Control Agency to Wyeth, Schering and Organon, relating to safety concerns regarding third generation oral contraceptives before the meetings held between the Medicines Control Agency and those companies on 12 October. [5908]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 14 December 1995]: These companies were already aware of the preliminary findings of the World Health Organisation's study through their attendance at a meeting held in Geneva in July 1995 to discuss the data. After a review of the findings of the three studies on third generation oral contraceptives that were provided to the Medicines Control Agency in confidence by the investigators, the MCA arranged meetings with companies to present the findings to them. The MCA provided the companies with Professor Jick's data with his agreement and requested and received assurances from the investigators of the other studies that the companies were being provided with the data from these studies.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when the despatch of the "Dear Doctor" letters relating to safety concerns about third generation oral contraceptives was begun; [5923]

(2) when the Government's Chief Medical Officer was informed of the decision to issue the "Dear Doctor" letter to general practitioners dated 18 October; [5912]

(3) when the order was placed for the printing of the "Dear Doctor" letters which were dated 18 October; [5927]

(4) on whose authority the "Dear Doctor" letters relating to safety concerns on third generation oral contraceptives dated 18 October were issued. [5909]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The decision to issue the letter to all United Kingdom doctors and pharmacists from the chairman of the Committee on Safety of Medicines was taken by Ministers following advice from the Committee that there was an urgent need to inform doctors and users about new information relating to the safety of third generation oral contraceptives. The Chief Medical Officer was made aware of the CSM's advice on 13 October and was made aware of the CSM's advice on 13 October and was informed of the decision to issue the letter on 16 October. The order for the printing of the letters was placed on 16 October and dispatch began at 4.30 pm on the 18 October.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps the Medicines Control Agency and the Committee on Safety of Medicines have taken to establish that the information which they considered on 13 October in relation to third generation oral contraceptives was final; [6087]

(2) when the Medicines Control Agency received the final version of the reports for each of the three studies on third generation oral contraceptives which were considered by the Committee on Safety of Medicines on 13 October. [5928]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The Medicines Control Agency investigated the safety of oral contraceptives in the light of the new evidence emerging from three studies during the period July to October 1995. During this time it received several manuscripts from the World Health Organisation and Professor Jick providing the findings of their respective studies. The final reports of the studies conducted by the WHO and Professor Jick were received by MCA on 6 and 11 October respectively. Near-final drafts of both papers were provided by the end of September 1995 and, in each case, the MCA was assured by the investigators that there would be no substantive change to the analysis. In the case of the transnational study, MCA was presented with an analysis of the data on 9 and 10 October. During these meetings assurances were given by the investigators that these analyses were final.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will publish the advice which he received during the period 9 to 18 October from the Medicines Control Agency with respect to safety concerns relating to third generation oral contraceptives; [5915]

(2) what advice the licensing authority received from the Medicines Control Agency following the special meeting of the Committee on Safety of Medicines on 13 October. [5920]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 14 December 1995]: Following the meeting of the Committee on Safety of Medicines on 13 October, Ministers received from the Medicines Control Agency a submission containing the CSM's advice. It is not normal practice to publish such internal documentation.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what public sector dividend capital each trust has been required to pay in each year since its inception. [6101]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The information requested will be placed in the Library.

Progestogens

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has in respect of clinical trials for third generation progestogens for their metabolites. [5922]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 14 December 1995]: Any company or investigator wishing to conduct a clinical trial with third generation progestogens or their metabolites would have to apply to the Medicines Control Agency in accordance with the Medicines Act 1968 and would have to provide a justification for the use of third generation progestogens taking into account the recent advice of the Committee on Safety of Medicines.

Prodigy

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what mechanisms will be used by Prodigy to allow general practitioners to make choices from alternative lists; [6312]

(2) which skin preparations and drugs used in the treatment of skin disorders will appear in the first choice list provided for general practitioners in the Prodigy trial; [6311]

(3) if his Department has determined which general practitioner's practices will be included in the Prodigy trial; and if he will make a statement. [6310]

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the general practitioners prescribing computer pilot project, Prodigy, and its cost. [6239]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Macclesfield (Mr. Winterton) on 18 December, Official Report, columns 945-46.

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the drugs and preparations which appear on the first choice list offered by Prodigy will be generics. [6313]

Mr. Malone: The majority of drugs are listed by approved name. The only exception is where it is established as clinically important that the patient should always receive the same brand, in which case the brand name has been stated.

Advice contained within the British National Formulary, and that of experts in clinical pharmacology, has been followed.

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how his Department will choose between a number of similarly efficacious products when deciding which will appear on the first choice list offered to general practitioners by Prodigy; [6314]

(2) what mechanisms are used to determine the preparations and drugs appearing in the first choice list of Prodigy. [6315]

Mr. Malone: Where one or more drugs are clinically efficacious, choice for inclusion in the guidelines was then based on other factors including safety, known side effects, best practice and cost. The guidelines were then referred to a clinical expert panel for peer review.

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what mechanisms products excluded from the first choice list under Prodigy can later be added to it. [6319]

Mr. Malone: The content of the guidelines used in the project will be kept under review. Discussion with the medical profession and the Association of the British Pharmaceutical Industry about how this is best done will take place in the new year.

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what surveys his Department has (a) carried out and (b) plans to carry out, in order to determine whether general practitioners are likely to take the first choices offered them by Prodigy or whether they will make alternative choices. [6320]

Mr. Malone: The extent to which general practitioners use, amend or override the guidelines will be carefully monitored during the project.

Advisory Committee on Pesticides

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the members of the Advisory Committee on Pesticides and their qualifications. [6222]

Mrs. Browning: I have been asked to reply.

Members of the Advisory Committee on Pesticides and their qualifications are:

(Chairman) Professor Sir Colin Berry Dsc, MD, PhD, FRCPath, FFPM, FRCP

(Deputy Chairman) Professor Geoffrey Sagar CBE, BA, MA, DPhil(Oxon)

Dr. Andree Carter Bsc, MISoilSci, MIWEM

Professor Nicola Cherry MD, PhD, FFOM

Professor Michael Claridge MA, Dphil, FIBiol, FLS, FRES

Professor Anthony Dayan Bsc, MD, FRCP, FRCPath, FFRM, FIBiol

Mr. John Leahy MA(Oxon), CChem, MRSC

Professor Donald Lee Bsc, PhD(Cantab), FIBiol, FRSA

Dr. Alexander Proudfoot MB, ChB, FRCP, FRCPE

Dr. Eve Roman Bsc, PhD

Mr. Roger Tayler BSc(Agric), Postgrad Dip Agric(Reading), NDA, Cbiol, MIBiol

Professor Paul Webster Bsc, PhD, FBIM, FRSA.

WALES

Departmental Performance

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the work of his Department since May 1993. [3485]

Mr. Hague: My Department's main achievements since May 1993 are as follows:

The NHS has treated a record number of patients and waiting times have fallen substantially;

Performance against patient's charter standards has continued to improve, and further expansion of the GP fundholder scheme has extended patient choice;

Over 340 inward investment projects have been secured, promising nearly 16,000 new jobs and safeguarding a further 13,000, with capital investment of over £2 billion;

Over 260 small or medium-sized businesses have been helped to enter market overseas;

Modern apprenticeships were successfully introduced to manufacturing in 1994–95. By March 1996, the estimated number of participants will have grown to over 4,000 covering the manufacturing, service and business sectors;

Increased levels of careers advice and guidance for young people are being delivered through the new careers service companies. Provision in 1995–96 represents an increase of over one third on previous local authority expenditure on the service;

Plans have been made to launch Business Connect Wales on 15 January 1996. This new initiative, which can be accessed through one low-cost telephone call, will greatly simplify access to publicly funded business support services throughout Wales;

At least £1 billion of private finance has been recorded in support of Welsh Office programmes;

Construction of the Cardiff bay barrage has started;

The final link of the M4 motorway and the dualling of the A55 across the mainland have been completed;

Significant progress has been made in improving standards in schools in Wales and I have set the framework for the way ahead following the publication of "A Bright Future: Getting the Best for Every Pupil at School in Wales".

Student enrolments on further and higher education courses in Wales have increased to record levels;

Public and Crown bodies are working towards the provision of a better service in Welsh for the public in Wales in accordance with the Welsh Language Act 1993. The Welsh Office will have its Welsh language scheme operating by 1 April 1996;

Local government is being reorganised into 22 unitary authorities under the Local Government (Wales) Act 1994;

More than £770 million has been made available for the renovation and improvement of the housing stock in Wales. By the end of March Housing for Wales will have secured over £12,000 additional units of social housing;

More people have received community care in their own homes or in their choice of accommodation in the community;

Implementation of the reformed common agricultural policy has progressed.

Further details are set out in the Welsh Office departmental reports for 1994, Cm 2515, and 1995, Cm 2815, together with the update which I gave to the Welsh Grand Committee on 29 November.

Breast Cancer

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will allocate sufficient resources to establish specialist breast care units in Wales; [7123]

(2) what plans he has to establish specialist breast care units in Wales in accordance with the recommendation of the Health Committee's third report of Session 1994–95, HC324, on breast cancer services. [7131]

Mr. Richards: Recommendations for the future provision of cancer services are set out in "A Policy Framework for Commissioning Cancer Services", a report by the chief medical officers of England and Wales. An expert advisory group has been established in Wales to assist health authorities to implement the recommendations of the report.

Health authorities will be expected to prioritise their resources to ensure that the health needs of their local population are met. In doing so, they will need to take into account the recommendations of the chief medical officers' report.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the mortality rate figures for women with breast cancer aged 50 to 69 years in 1992 for each health authority in Wales. [5677]

Mr. Richards: The information, provided by the Office for Population Censuses and Surveys, is given in the following table. As mortality rates for small subsets of the population can fluctuate considerably from year to year, an average based on five years' data has also been included.

Female breast cancer (ICD 174)—Deaths per 100,000 female residents aged 50 to 69

	1992	1990–1994[1]
Clwyd	99	93
East Dyfed	133	107
Pembrokeshire	129	95
Gwent	92	91
Gwynedd	64	87
Mid Glamorgan	85	90
Powys	88	103
South Glamorgan	78	81
West Glamorgan	100	103

[1] Data for 1993 and 1994 are provisional.

International Classification of Diseases, Injuries and Causes of Death (9th revision).

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the age standardised mortality rate figures for women with breast cancer aged 50 to 69 years in Wales in (a) 1992 and (b) 1993. [5676]

Mr. Richards: In Wales, age-standardised mortality rates for women aged 50 to 69 years with breast cancer—ICD9 code 174—are 99.7 in 1992 and 105.4 in 1993. Data for 1993 are provisional. Using data provided by OPCS, these standardised rates are worked out by adjusting the actual rates for Wales so that they are based on the age distribution within the relevant age group of women in England. For example, on the basis of the figure for 1993, for every 100 deaths from breast cancer in England there would be 105.4 in Wales if the proportions of women in each five-year age band were the same for the two countries.

National Disability Council

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what Welsh representation there will be on the National Disability Council; and if he will make a statement. [6463]

Mr. Richards: The appointment of members to the National Disability Council is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security; I refer the hon. Member to the answer he gave on 13 December, Official Report, columns 671–72.

Council Houses (Construction)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many council houses were built in 1994; [6467]

(2) how many housing association homes were built in 1994. [6468]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information provided by local authorities on the number of completions, by tenure, in 1994 has been published in table 2.3 of Welsh housing statistics, No. 15 1995, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Construction Industry

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of jobs in the construction industry which would be created by a building programme of (a) 500, (b) 750, and (c) 1,000 houses in one year. [6465]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh Office has made no such assessment.

Council Houses (Receipts)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his latest estimate of the amount of cash in district and borough council balances from the sales of council housing; and if he will make a statement. [6466]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The usable amount of receipts from the sale of council houses available at 31 March 1995 is set out in the following table.

Receipts from the sale of council houses[1]

Departmental Priorities

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the current priorities of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [6470]

Mr. Hague: Current priorities for the Welsh Office are set out in the departmental report 1995. Good progress is being made.

Wye and Lugg Rivers

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make it his policy to ensure that the National Rivers Authority becomes the navigation authority for the Rivers Wye and Lugg; [6667]

(2) if he will make a statement on the future control and supervision of the Rivers Wye and Lugg. [6668]

Mr. Hague: The National Rivers Authority has undertaken a consultation exercise on its proposals to become the navigation authority for the Rivers Wye and Lugg. The consultation paper issued by the authority outlined their views on the future management of the rivers. As the River Wye flows through England and Wales any application made by the NRA for navigation authority status following the consultation exercise would be considered jointly by myself and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will submit the River Wye to the European Commission as a special area of conservation in accordance with the EU habitats and species directive, 92/43/EEC; and if he will make a statement. [6669]

Mr. Hague: Consideration is being given as to which riverine sites might be submitted to the EC as special areas of conservation. Before sites are submitted there will be consultation with those who may be affected. Not all the potential riverine sites are yet wholly covered by designation as a site of special scientific interest, the building block for special area of conservation.

Welsh Language Schemes

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all bodies required to submit language schemes to the Welsh Language Board, indicating which have so far submitted schemes and how many have as yet been recommended by the board to be accepted; and if he will make a statement. [6003]

Mr. Hague: This is an operational matter for the Welsh Language Board. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member with the information he is seeking, and I will arrange for a copy of the letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Small and Medium Enterprises

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what advice has been given to procurement staff on the implications of purchasing from small and medium enterprises; [6636]

(2) what work his Department has done to develop best practice in the publication of departmental procurement guidance material relevant to small and medium enterprises' needs; [6634]

(3) what progress his Department has made regarding establishing a contact point with responsibility for liaison with relevant business support organisations and taking forward small and medium enterprise related public procurement initiatives. [6713]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 18 December 1995, Official Report, column 998.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what meetings his Department has had since May 1995 with organisations representing small firms to review tendering procedures. [6635]

Mr. Hague: None. The Department plans to hold meetings soon with training and enterprise councils and Welsh chambers of commerce to discuss how access to the Department by small firms can be improved through the review and revision of procurement procedures.

Goods and Services

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his Department paid to the private sector for goods and services in 1994–95. [6500]

Mr. Hague: The information is not available in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Tai Cymru

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) on what date he decided to sell to the private sector the loan book of Tai Cymru; and to which divisions of the departmental budget he will apply the proceeds of the sale; [6930]

(2) what proposals he has to spend the receipts from the sale of the Tai Cymru/Housing for Wales loan book on additional public expenditure on housing by that corporation. [6817]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, my hon. Friend the Member for Skipton and Ripon (Mr. Curry), on 28 November, Official Report, column 568, and by my statement on 13 December, Official Report, column 1007.

A477

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what inquiries his Department has carried out into the quality of the new road surface laid between Redberth and Sageston on the A477. [7125]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Testing of the materials used in the resurfacing together with testing of the new surface for skidding resistance and surface irregularity to check compliance with the specifications have taken place both during the contract in April 1995 and on three occasions since.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the new road surface was laid on the A477 between Redberth and Sageston, how many road traffic accidents were recorded in each of the 12 months preceding the laying of the new surface; and how many have been recorded in each month following the laying of the new surface. [7126]

Mr. Jones: In the 12 months preceding the laying of the new surface there were no accidents recorded; since the new surface was laid there have been two accidents—one in July and one in October.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many road traffic accidents resulting in personal injury have occurred in each of the last five years on the A477 between (a) St. Clears and Red Roses, (b) between and including the service station, Llanteg and Folly Cross, Llanteg and (c) Nash and Bangeston. [7127]

Mr. Jones: The accident details are set out in the following table:

Location	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994
(a)	15	10	11	16	11
(b)	3	2	3	2	6
(c)	3	4	10	2	6

European Agricultural Guarantee and Guidance Fund

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, what programme was agreed with the European Agricultural Guarantee and Guidance Fund for the current and subsequent years in Wales; and on what dates he made the announcements covering the European Agricultural Guarantee and Guidance Fund. [7128]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: An announcement concerning the approval of the objective 5b programme for rural Wales 1994 to 1999, including the European Agricultural Guidance and Guarantee Fund element, was made on 8 February 1995. The programme will in total provide £28 million in grant from the fund of which £17 million will be for the specific development of agriculture and forestry.

Countryside Council for Wales

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the actual and planned expenditure of the Countryside Council for Wales in each year since 1992–93; and what is the planned expenditure for the current year and for 1996–97. [7200]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Details of actual and planned expenditure for the years up to 1994–95 are in the Welsh Office's departmental report, copies of which are held in the Library of the House. The Countryside Council for Wales's planned expenditure for 1995–96 is £18.39 million. On 13 December my right hon. Friend announced the provision of £22 million for the council for 1996–97, Official Report, column 1007.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the budget for the Countryside Council for Wales for (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96, (c) 1996–97 and (d) 1997–98. [7204]

Mr. Jones: The final budget figures are as follows:

1994–95: £21,135,000 (outturn)

1995–96: £18,390,000 (expected outturn)

1996–97: £22,000,000 (plans).

The level of funding for 1997–98 and beyond will depend on future spending decisions.

Anti-smoking Campaign

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the estimated cost of the 1995–96 campaign by the Health Promotion Authority for Wales to encourage people to stop smoking; if he will break down the figure to show expenditure on each element of the campaign; and how much was spent on television advertising. [7202]

Mr. Richards: Forecast expenditure on smoking related projects for 1995–96 is shown in the following table. Health Promotion Wales does not propose to fund any television advertising campaigns for smoking cessation in 1995–96.

1995–96	£ thousand[1]
Co-ordination of a national initiative for No Smoking Day 1996	12.0
Joint Initiative with community pharmacists for No Smoking Day 1996	16.0
Smokers Helpline	10.0
Research on impact of No Smoking Day	10.0
Pilot project on prevention of smoking during pregnancy	16.1
Evaluation of 1995 Quit and Win competition for 15–19 year olds	10.1
Smokebusters Cymru	92.0
Advice and information support service	2.1
Publication and launch of 1994–95 review of teenage smoking	5.9
1995–96 Total forecast outturn for smoking related projects	174.2

Health Purchasing Authority Allocations

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the total allocations to each health purchasing authority in Wales for (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97. [7201]

Mr. Richards: District health authority allocations for 1995–96 are as follows:

	£ million
Clwyd	199.8
Dyfed	175.6
Gwent	213.4
Gwynedd	124.5
Mid Glamorgan	276.7

	£ million
Powys	67.8
South Glamorgan	231.3
West Glamorgan	179.0

An announcement about the 1996–97 revenue allocations will be made in due course.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what credit approvals he proposes to issue in 1996–97 for the transitional costs of local government reorganisation. [7666]

Mr. Hague: I have allocated £39,954,000 of supplementary credit approvals for the transitional costs of reorganisation in 1996–97. These are additional resources, so that the costs do not have to be met by council tax payers or from councils' own resources.

Some £23,358,000 is earmarked for mandatory and discretionary compensation costs. SCAs will be issued to councils after they have incurred expenditure, on the basis of claims certified by chief finance officers. National park authorities will be eligible for support under these arrangements.

Some £11,764,250 of SCAs will be issued for information technology changes. I will announce the allocation for each county and county borough council shortly.

Finally, £4,831,750 is being added to the strategic development scheme in 1996–97 to support councils in acquiring, refurbishing or building office accommodation. I plan to announce my final decisions early in January. Any further funding for such projects in 1996–97, and all funding in later years, will be provided from within the strategic development scheme or, directly or indirectly, from receipts generated by the residuary body for Wales.

Under-fives

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will indicate when the report of the Office of Her Majesty's chief inspector survey of provision in schools and in playgroups for the under-fives will be published. [7691]

Mr. Richards: I welcome the report by OHMCI which is being published today. Copies will be placed in the Library of the House, as soon as possible.

The report provides useful information on current educational standards and practice in schools and in playgroups and will help inform our deliberations on the introduction of a voucher scheme for four-year-olds. It highlights several areas where there is good provision, but I am concerned that there are too many instances of unsatisfactory standards in both schools and playgroups.

OHMCI has inspected both sectors according to its framework for inspecting early years provision in schools. In terms of education provision, it is not surprising that the playgroup sector lags behind the maintained sector since, traditionally, playgroups have had different aims and objectives.

To participate in the voucher scheme, playgroups will need to work to achieve the desirable outcomes to be drawn up for four-year-olds in all settings.

Officials of the Welsh Office will be having discussions with both the Wales Pre-Schools Playgroup Association and Mudiad Ysgolion Meithrin to discuss issues arising from the report and how they might be addressed.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what is the total estimated expenditure of the Welsh Development Agency for the financial year 1995–96 and 1996–97; and what are the origins of the Welsh Development Agency's estimated income for those years; [6994]

(2) what was the total expenditure of the Welsh Development Agency in the financial years 1993–94 and 1994–95; and if he will give a breakdown of the origin of the Welsh Development Agency's income for those years. [6995]

Mr. Hague [holding answer 18 December 1995]: The information requested is as follows:

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Collection Centres

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list the approved collection centres in England and Wales as defined by the Animals and Animal Products (Import and Export) Regulations 1995; [3861]

(2) if he will list the approved collection centres in Scotland as defined by the Animals and Animal Products (Imports and Export) Regulations 1995. [3852]

Mrs. Browning: The following premises in Great Britain are approved collection centres, as defined in the Animals and Animal Products (Import and Export) Regulations 1995:

England and Wales

Chelford Market, Chelford Agricultural Centre, Cheshire.

Lichfield Auction Centre, Fradley Park, Lichfield, Staffs (approved for cattle only).

New Lairage, Borderway Market, Rosehill Estate, Carlisle, Cumbria.

Penrith Auction Mart., Agriculture Hall, Penrith, Cheshire.

Scotland

Glenfield Auction Market, Paisley

John Swan and Sons Ltd., Newmarket Road, Edinburgh

John Swan and Sons Ltd., Newton St. Boswells, Roxburgh.

Livestock Auction Marts Ltd., Central Auction Mart, Kildean, Stirling.

RMR Lairage Co., Eloradanin, Lochmaben, Lockerbie, Dumfries and Galloway.

Royal Highland Agricultural Society, Ingleston, Newbridge, Midlothian.

United Auctions Ltd., Perth Agricultural Centre, East Huntingtower, Perth.

Wallet's Marts plc., New Market Street, Castle Douglas, Kirkcudbrightshire.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is his estimate of the total cost for himself and other departmental Ministers for each year since 1991–92, with an estimate for the current year of (a) overseas travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers and their advisers, (b) car and chauffeuring costs of Ministers, (c) ministerial security costs and (d) domestic travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers; [6388]

(2) what is his estimate of running his departmental office, and that of his predecessor, for each year since 1990–91 with an estimate for the current year, broken down into (a) telephone bills, (b) total staff costs, (c) press and communications, (d) entertainment, (e) alcoholic drinks, (f) non-alcoholic drinks, (g) stationery, (h) office refurbishment and (i) other. [6387]

Mr. Boswell: The Ministers' and top management programme budget provides for the salaries of Ministers, the permanent secretary, the special adviser and the costs of operating private offices, a parliamentary branch, a Ministers' correspondence unit and an appointments section. The appointments section has formed part of this programme only since October 1994. The total cost of this programme for the financial years readily available was as follows:

Year	£ million
1992–93	1.5
1993–94	1.7
1994–95	1.7

The estimated expenditure for the current financial year is £1.8 million. The costs of travel and subsistence for Ministers, the permanent secretary, the special adviser and their staff is estimated to be £130,000 for the current financial year. The budget does not cover other advisers, nor does it distinguish between overseas and domestic travel.

The cost of providing Government cars and drivers to Ministers in the Department in the current financial year is estimated to be £229,000 for this financial year.

There is no specific budget for ministerial security costs. Expenditure on telephones and office refurbishment in each of the years 1990–91 is included in the running cost expenditure of the Department, which is published in the annual report.

Total staff costs for the programme—which includes the offices described—is estimated to be £1 million in the current financial year. Press and communications costs relating specifically to Ministers cannot be separately identified.

Entertainment, alcoholic drinks and non-alcoholic drinks are included in the hospitality budget. The estimate for the current year for this budget item is £25,000. Stationery costs for the whole of the programme are also estimated to be £25,000.

Small and Medium Enterprises

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice has been given to procurement staff on the implications of purchasing from small and medium enterprises. [6615]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 19 December 1995]: Advice and guidance to procurement staff is contained in the departmental procurement and procedures manual, which is currently being brought up to date to take account of the information and direction given in the central unit for procurement guidance notes and the White Paper "Setting New Standards", Cm. 2840. On current plans, the manual will be re-issued no later than end of January 1996.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what work his Department has done to develop best practice in the publication of departmental procurement guidance material relevant to small and medium enterprises' needs. [6613]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The Department has recently made a contribution towards the DTI's booklet on "Tendering for Government Business", which is aimed at enterprises of all sizes. In addition, we are producing a booklet entitled "Selling to MAFF", which is intended to provide guidance to any enterprise who wishes to provide us with goods and services. The booklet is in final draft and on current plan will be released in January 1996.

Small Firms

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what meetings his Department has had since May 1995 with organisations representing small firms to review tendering procedures. [6614]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 19 December 1995]: Since May 1995, MAFF procurement staff have not met any organisations representing small firms to review the tendering procedures. However, the director of purchasing and supply is due to meet the sheltered employment procurement and consultancy service in January 1996. In addition, a suppliers' conference is being considered for 1996.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the outcome of his Department's review of measures taken to facilitate small firm's access to appropriate areas of Government procurement in the light of best practice. [6672]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 18 December 1995]: It is the Ministry's policy that procurement should be based on value for money. Goods and services should be acquired by competition unless there are convincing reasons to the contrary. The form of competition should be appropriate to the value and complexity of the goods or services to be acquired.

In following such a policy, opportunities for small firms to gain access to areas of MAFF procurement are readily created. In choosing its suppliers, the Ministry makes every attempt to judge suppliers on eligibility, economic and financial standing and technical capacity.

Goods and Services

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much his Department paid to the private sector for goods and services in 1994–95. [6496]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The combined departmental non-pay running cost and the departmental capital outturns for the Ministry and its agencies for the year 1994–95 were £231,963,000.

Departmental Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the amount owed to those businesses whose invoices were not paid within 30 days or within agreed contractual arrangements for 1994–95. [6514]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 19 December 1995]: All invoices, authorised and submitted for payment in respect of 1994–95 have been paid; there are no amounts owed to businesses in respect of these invoices for 1994–95.

EC Fruit and Vegetable Regime

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has made to the European Commission to amend the EC fruit and vegetable regime intervention system in order to allow apples available through intervention to be purchased at a commercial rate by cider makers and other manufacturers with any monetary difference made up by the Intervention Board. [6885]

Mr. Boswell: None. The EC fruit and vegetable regime is currently being reformed. Our efforts have been, and will continue to be, aimed at securing a complete end to the withdrawal—intervention—system. This will allow the price of fruit to be set by the market alone.

EU Processing and Marketing Grant

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the estimated net saving to his Department from ending the participation in the EU processing and marketing grant. [7380]

Mr. Boswell: The estimated net savings during the next three financial years are as follows:

Year	£
1996–97	1,270,000
1997–98	4,006,000
1998–99	8,061,000

Spending Reductions

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food from which budget heading will come the savings necessary in order for his Department to meet the spending reductions indicated for the next three years in the public expenditure survey 1995 outcome public expenditure plan for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. [7381]

Mr. Boswell: The necessary savings have been found across a wide range of the Department's activities, involving most of the 80 programmes which cover all of the Department's work.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Stormont Estate

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what portions of the Stormont estate have been built over or taken out of their natural state since 1 January 1985; what was the size and purpose of each action and the total proportion of the estate so lost; and what further areas are proposed for either new-build or return to nature. [5457]

Mr. Moss: Since 1 January 1985, the following portions of the Stormont estate have been built over or taken out of their natural state:

	Size (hectares)	Purpose of Action
1.	0.08	Construction of car park.
2.	1.11	Intended for construction of building. Now in use as a site for temporary decant buildings.
3.	0.65	Originally designated as a site for a building but has been returned to grass and tree saplings.
4.	0.36	Construction of car park.
5.	0.05	Access road.
6.	0.19	Construction of car park.
7.	0.07	Extension of existing car park.
8.	0.14	Hard standing and small car park.
9.	0.55	Provision of plastic playing pitch.
	3.20

This represents 2.5 per cent. of the whole estate.

It is not envisaged that any further areas will be used for new-build or will be converted into wooded or grassed areas. At present, some areas normally grassed over are in use, on a temporary basis, either by contractors engaged in the refurbishment work to Parliament Buildings or for temporary accommodation for staff displaced by refurbishment work to Parliament Buildings, Castle Buildings and Stormont house. Those areas will be reinstated at the end of the contracts.

Education and Library Boards (Property)

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what requirements are placed on the education and library boards by his Department in respect of the undertaking of property condition surveys; [6056]

(2) if the Department of Education in Northern Ireland will undertake a review of existing property management organisational arrangements across the education and library boards; [6027]

(3) how the Department of Education in Northern Ireland monitors whether the education and library boards have internal systems in place which ensure adequately that maintenance funding is applied properly and used to good effect; [6052]

(4) if DENI will be reviewing its existing arrangements in respect of the number of its branches dealing with estate management; [6054]

(5) what was the recurrent expenditure on the repair and maintenance of the education and library boards' estates during 1994–95 (a) in total; and (b) by board; and on what was spent; [6028]

(6) what mechanisms exists to facilitate the centralisation of estate management functions by the education and library boards; [6053]

(7) what proposals (a) DENI; and (b) education and library boards have to review the level of funding allocated to repair and maintenance of board property; [6051]

(8) how much of the maintenance expenditure has been spent on day-to-day maintenance; and how much on planned work in each of the education and library boards in the last five years. [6055]

Mr. Ancram: These questions all relate to issues covered by the report by the Comptroller and Auditor General for Northern Ireland, "Education and Library Boards: Maintenance of Board Property", which was published on 7 December 1995. In these circumstances it is appropriate for me to amplify only material contained in the report itself.

Expenditure by the education and library boards on maintenance over the last five years is set out in the table. This relates to a wide range of maintenance work on controlled and maintained schools, further education colleges and other board property—this included electrical re-wiring, boiler and mechanical replacements, re-roofing, window replacement, painting, ground maintenance, energy efficiency measures, re-pointing of brickwork and concrete repairs. The division of expenditure between plan end and response maintenance is not readily available other than for 1994–95.

Councillors Road, Carrickfergus

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the defect to the road surface at Councillors road, Carrickfergus which was repaired on 14 April, was first notified to the Department of the Environment (Northern Ireland) road service, as requiring repair, prior to notification of the accident which occurred on 13 April. [7365]

Mr. Moss: The defect in question was first reported to the Department's roads service on 14 April 1995.

Arable Area Payments Scheme

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money was spent in Northern Ireland (a) on set-aside payments under the arable area scheme; and (b) total arable area payments; in 1994–95. [7190]

Mr. Ancram: In Northern Ireland in 1994–95, £509,736.33 was spent on set-aside under the arable area payments scheme; and £5,604,643.53 was spent in total under the arable area payments scheme.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money is forecast to be spent in Northern Ireland in (a) set-aside payments under the arable area scheme; and (b) total arable area payments in 1995–96. [7191]

Mr. Ancram: In Northern Ireland in 1995–96, £556,110 is forecast to be spent on set-aside under the arable area payments scheme; and £8,222,180 is forecast to be spent in total under the arable area payments scheme.

Housing (Negative Equity)

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the percentage of house buyers in each of the past five years experiencing negative equity in Northern Ireland. [7250]

Mr. Moss: There is no reported negative equity in Northern Ireland at present, nor has there been in the past five years.

Inward Investments

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many visits were made by industrialists in connection with potential inward investment projects to each district council area in Northern Ireland from 1 April to 30 November; and how many of these were repeat visits. [7343]

Mr. Ancram: During the period between 1 April 1995 and 30 November 1995, the Industrial Development Board arranged 200 visits to Northern Ireland by industrialists in connection with potential inward investment projects. Some 156 were first-time visits and 44 were repeat visits.

A breakdown of the visits by district council area is as follows:

DEFENCE

Porton Down

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many scientific papers have been published between April 1991 and the present day under the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment technical papers series; and how many of these papers were produced as unclassified papers; [7302]

(2) when the Porton technical papers series was first produced by the chemical defence establishment at Porton Down. [7303]

Mr. Arbuthnot: These matters are for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive, DERA, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 20 December 1995:

Your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence asking when the Porton Technical Paper series was first produced by the Chemical Defence Establishment at Porton Down and how many papers have been produced between April 1991 and the present day under the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment (CBDE) Technical paper series and how many of these were produced as unclassified papers have been passed to me to reply as the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) which includes CBDE as one of its divisions. I am replying to both questions in this letter.

The first Porton Technical Paper has a publication date of 1947.

Since the change of name to the CBDE Technical Paper series in 1991 a total of 179 papers have been published, 90 of which were produced as unclassified documents.

I hope this information is helpful.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in which countries outside Britain the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down has carried out tests and studies involving service personnel. [7296]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive, DERA, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 20 December 1995:

Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking in which countries outside Britain the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment (CBDE) at Porton Down has carried out tests and studies involving service personnel has been passed to me to reply as the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) which includes CBDE as one of its divisions.

Trials of equipment developed at Porton Down involving service personnel have taken place in many countries and on many occasions over the 80 year history of CBDE. These include an assessment of the difficulties of using respirators in the Khyber Pass in the 1920s, assessment of protective equipment in India in 1930s and assessment of protective clothing in Australia during the Second World War. It would involve disproportionate costs to try to identify all the studies which have been undertaken in various parts of the world as part of the development of equipment by CBDE to ensure the safe and effective protection of the United Kingdom's Armed Forces.

I hope this information is helpful.

Animal Welfare Advisory Committee

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the members of the Animal Welfare Advisory Committee; for what reasons these individuals have been chosen to serve; if the committee will be able (a) to review experiments before they are carried out and (b) to veto or modify such experiments; which establishments this committee will review; what access to information and data this committee will have and if members of the committee have to sign the Official Secrets Act; how many members of the committee have either previously (i) served on a committee connected to the work of the chemical and biological defence establishment, (ii) worked at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment or (iii) been in receipt of an extramural contract from the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment; and if (1) the whole or (2) parts of the committee's annual report to his Department's chief scientific officer will be available to the public or hon. Members. [7304]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The terms of reference of this committee were placed in the Library of the House, as reported on 17 July 1995, Official Report, column 971. There is some further work to be done concerning membership and detailed committee procedures. I expect to make an announcement soon.

Chauffeur-driven Cars

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost of chauffeur-driven cars used by his Department was in each of the past five years. [5860]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This information is not held centrally and could be provided in the form requested only at disproportionate cost.

For that information which is readily available, however, I refer the hon. Member to the answer which my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces gave to the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 11 July 1995, Official Report, column 534, the letter which my noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State sent to the hon. Member for Darlington on 20 July 1995 and my letter of 28 November 1995 [illegible] the hon. Member for Birmingham, Selly Oak (Dr. Jones).

A copy of both letters have been placed in the Library of the House.

Land Mines

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received regarding a ban on the production of land mines in the United Kingdom. [7330]

Mr. Arbuthnot: A number of representations have been received regarding the production of anti-personnel mines.

Chemical Weapons (Papers)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what papers concerning Britain's decision to abandon production of chemical weapons have been opened to the public at the Public Record Office under the open government initiative. [7300]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Since records released to the Public Record Office under the open government initiative are not organised by subject matter, we can not identify which relate to Her Majesty's Government's decision to abandon production of chemical weapons without disproportionate cost.

Buy American Act

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with the United States Government on the implications for the United Kingdom defence industry of "Buy American" clauses inserted in the most recent Department of Defence budget. [7140]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The provisions of the Buy American Act are waived for UK defence equipment in accordance with the US-UK defence co-operation memorandum of understanding signed in January 1995. Frequent representations are made at all levels to the US Administration and Congress to convey Her Majesty's Government's concern that such provisions damage the prospects for defence co-operation between the US and its allies. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence expects to raise the matter when he visits Washington in January.

Royal Naval College, Greenwich

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what fees or liabilities have been incurred to date in the course of the marketing of the Royal Naval college site in Greenwich. [7144]

Mr. Soames: The costs to date of exploring interest in the future use for the Royal Naval college, Greenwich amount to £55,590 plus VAT, exclusive of in-house staff resources. An additional sum will be payable to the Government Property Lawyers on receipt of the invoice.

British Nuclear Tests

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what facilities used for the incineration of clothing, furniture and other combustible material radioactivity contaminated as a result of British nuclear tests in the Pacific and Australia have been monitored since 1965; and what arrangements are in place to assess the levels of radioactivity at the site. [7145]

Mr. Soames: Christmas island sites were monitored in 1981 by the New Zealand Department of Health and do not require further monitoring as it was found that no site on the island presented a health risk. In Australia the nuclear test sites are subject to frequent monitoring by Australian organisations. No contaminated equipment or material was returned to the United Kingdom for incineration, therefore, no monitoring for this type of contamination is required.

Naval Stores, Portsmouth

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the value of naval spares stored in his Department's Portsmouth naval depot; what are the main categories of spares held at the depot; what condition these spares are currently in; how many lorries per week are bringing spares to the depot; from what bases these spares are being brought; and if he will make a statement. [7189]

Mr. Soames: The current value of naval stores held at the RN stores depot in Portsmouth naval base is £758 million.

The main categories of stores held are marine engineering equipment, electrical and electronic material and general stores which are not applicable to specific ships or equipment.

Stock is categorised as either serviceable, current value £638 million, or repairable, current value £120 million. The repairable stocks are subject to regular critical review by commodity managers and are either retained to meet anticipated service needs or disposed of through existing sales agreements.

An average of 18 lorries per week are bringing stores to the Portsmouth depot from RN stores depots at Devonport, Eaglescliffe, Exeter and Rosyth.

Nuclear Weapons

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated time necessary to make (a) fresh nuclear fuel and (b) irradiated fuel into a bomb. [7282]

Mr. Arbuthnot: It is not our practice to release information about the manufacture of nuclear weapons.

Small and Medium Enterprises

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress his Department has made regarding establishing a contact point with responsibility for liaison with relevant business support organisations and taking forward small and medium enterprise related public procurement initiatives. [6711]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The Ministry of Defence has had an organisation of this kind, now known as the Defence Suppliers Service, in place since 1986.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what advice has been given to procurement staff on the implications of purchasing from small and medium enterprises. [6642]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The advice given to procurement staff is that they should ensure that they achieve value for money for the Department. That objective is best served through broadly based competition. The Ministry of Defence promotes competition by regularly publishing details of its contract opportunities and by explaining to companies of all sizes, but particularly small and medium enterprises, how they should set about exploiting those opportunities.

Joint Advanced Strike Technology Programme

Mr. Charles Wardle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress he had made in negotiating a memorandum of understanding with the United States for co-operation in the joint advanced strike technology programme; and if he will make a statement. [7806]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Negotiations with the United States Department of Defence have been successfully concluded with the signature today of a memorandum of understanding on arrangements for United Kingdom participation in the JAST programme. A copy of the MOU will be placed in the Library of the House. The proposed JAST advanced short take-off and vertical landing aircraft offers a potential future carrier-borne aircraft to replace the Royal Navy's Sea Harrier in the second decade of the next century. Arrangements set out in the MOU provide significant opportunities for British industry in the JAST programme.

Private Finance Initiative

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list his Department's projects which currently involve the private finance initiative. [5380]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 13 December 1995]: In addition to the one approved PFI project mentioned in an earlier reply on 7 November 1995, Official Report, column 666, MOD has a portfolio of "Pathfinder" projects which will be tested for the suitability of PFI. Of these, a number are already in the procurement process and may, subject to value-for-money considerations, result in the delivery of a privately financed solution.

The pathfinders include the provision of training and support services for the Naval Recruitment and Training Agency; telecommunications services for the defence fixed telecommunications system; the revitalisation of water and sewerage works at Tidworth garrison; the refurbishment of MOD's main building in Whitehall; provision of vehicles for the defence support vehicle fleet; and the provision of a visitors' centre for the Royal Navy at Devonport.

MOD is committed to the use of PFI and will consider a PFI solution, alongside other options, wherever it needs to consider using its own capital resources. It also remains MOD policy to obtain best value for money in its procurement activity and a PFI solution will be adopted if it demonstrates best value for money against other options.

PRIME MINISTER

Organised Crime

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Prime Minister what plans the Intelligence and Security Committee has to produce a report on the proposed involvement of the Security Service in the work against organised crime. [7768]

The Prime Minister: I can confirm that I have recently received an ad-hoc report on "Security Service Work Against Organised Crime" from the Intelligence and Security Committee. After consultation I have concluded that the report does not contain any matter whose publication would be prejudicial to the continued discharge of the functions of the Secret Intelligence Service, the Security Service or Government Communications Headquarters, and I have presented the report to Parliament today. Copies are also being placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Ukraine

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his talks with President Kuchma of Ukraine on (a) co-operation on nuclear power matters, (b) co-operation on space matters and (c) future joint use of Baikenor expertise. [7061]

The Prime Minister: During my meeting with president Kuchma of Ukraine, I informed him that the United Kingdom looked forward to the signing in the near future of a G7-Ukraine memorandum of understanding regarding the closure, by the year 2000, of the remaining reactors at Chernobyl. The memorandum sets out a comprehensive programme of co-operation to support Ukraine's decision on closure within the framework of wider energy sector reform and investment. I stressed the Government's firm support for this programme. I did not discuss with President Kuchma co-operation on space matters or the joint use of the Baikenor launching site in Kazakhstan.

Small and Medium Enterprises

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Prime Minister what advice has been given to procurement staff on the implications of purchasing from small and medium enterprises; [6648]

(2) what work his Department has done to develop best practice in the publication of departmental procurement guidance material relevant to small and medium enterprises' need. [6646]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 19 December 1995]: Guidance is included in the Cabinet Office's draft procurement manual, which is due to be issued shortly to supplement existing Treasury guidelines. The Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency has provided guidance to its staff on the treatment of small and medium enterprises by means of legal and commercial practice notices.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Burma

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out his Department's policy in relation to aid to Burma; and if he will give the amount of British Government aid given in each of the last three years and the purpose to which it is being put. [7057]

Mr. Hanley: Apart from some residual commitments, United Kingdom bilateral aid to Burma is available only for humanitarian support. This policy has been agreed with our EU partners and is kept under review. Total UK bilateral aid in each of the last three years was:

1992–93:	£79,000
1993–94:	£195,000
1994–95:	£350,000.

The support given consisted of relief for displaced people, including education programmes; emergency aid following floods, fires and an outbreak of dengue fever; payment of pensions for former colonial servants; assistance through the United Nations drugs control programme; and minor payments arising from projects now completed.

The United Kingdom also provided approximately £400,000 as our contribution to the European Community aid programme of £2.4 million in the five-year period from 1989 to 1993.

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give figures in constant prices for grant in aid for St. Helena for the last 10 years for which figures are available; and what factors underlie the trends in these figures. [7072]

Mr. Hanley: The figures are:

£ thousand

	Cash prices	1995–96 prices
1987–88[1]	2.300	3.378
1988–89	3,542	4.876
1989–90	3.904	5.023
1990–91	3.477	4.142
1991–92	3.424	3.839
1992–93	3.479	3.748
1993–94	3,495	3.659
1994–95	3.225	3.314
1995–96	3.560	3.560

[1] Earlier figures are not available on a consistent basis.

UK grant in aid to St. Helena finances the difference between government budgetary recurrent expenditure and locally generated revenue. This varies between years due to a wide range of factors which can affect either the expenditure or the revenue side of the budget. It is a long-term aim to maximise the proportion of budgetary expenditure which is locally financed.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what extent nationality was a factor in appointing a chief education officer in St. Helena. [7073]

Mr. Hanley: In July 1995 the St. Helena Government requested recruitment of a technical co-operation officer to fill the vacant post of chief education officer, in the absence of any sufficiently qualified St. Helenians who were available to take up the post. The recruitment process is under way. As for all other ODA-recruited posts, applicants are required to be either nationals of the European Economic Area or Commonwealth citizens who have an established right of abode and right to work in the United Kingdom.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the total cost of the budgetary aid mission to St. Helena to negotiate grant in aid support. [7074]

Mr. Hanley: The cost is expected to be approximately £17,000.

International Committee of the Red Cross

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance the Overseas Development Administration has provided to the International Committee of the Red Cross to assist with its projected end of year deficit. [8017]

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development has recently agreed a new contribution of £2 million to help alleviate this problem, due in part to the increased costs of the ICRC's work in the former Yugoslavia and the Africa great lakes region. As a result of this and other donors' responses the ICRC end of year financial situation is much better than projected earlier.

China

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions have been held at (a) the International Monetary Fund and (b) the World bank concerning child and prison labour in China; and if he will make a statement. [6021]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 19 December 1995]: We understand that an investigation by the World bank of alleged linkages between World bank-financed projects and child and prison labour in China is nearing completion. Management will report its findings to the board of directors. The matter has not been discussed in the IMF, which has no financial programme in China.

TRANSPORT

Passenger Rail Franchises

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the award of the franchises for the first passenger rail services will be announced. [5950]

Sir George Young: The franchising director has announced the award of the first three passenger rail franchises. The South West Trains franchise has been won by Stagecoach Holdings plc. The Great Western franchise has been won by Great Western Holdings Ltd., a management and employee team backed by First Bus, 3i Intermediate Capital Group and the Royal Bank of Scotland. The London, Tilbury and Southend franchise has been won by Enterprise Rail Ltd., a management and employee team backed by 3i and Gresham Trust.

All three franchises are committing themselves to significant improvements in services and have imaginative plans for developing their businesses. I look forward to the first franchised services operating in the new year and to passengers experiencing for themselves the benefits which privatisation will bring to the railway.

A41

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his latest estimate of average daily traffic flows and average peak hour traffic flows along the A41 at Aston Clinton, Buckinghamshire; and if he will make a statement. [7134]

Mr. Watts: The estimated average daily flow along the A41 at Aston Clinton, Buckinghamshire for 1995 was 24,700 vehicles and the average peak hour flow was 2,300 vehicles.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the percentage increase in average daily traffic flows and average peak hour traffic flows on the A41 at Aston Clinton, Buckinghamshire, since the opening of the Berkhamstead–King's Langley bypass: how these figures compare with his Department's original estimates; and if he will make a statement. [7133]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Laurie Haynes to Mr. David Lidington, dated 20 December 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State for Transport, what is the percentage increase in average daily traffic flows and average peak hour traffic flows on the A41 at Aston Clinton, Buckinghamshire, since the opening of the Berkhamstead-King's Langley Bypass: how these figures compare with his Department's original estimates: and if he will make a statement.

There have ben increases of approximately 19% and 20% in the annual average daily traffic flows and peak hour traffic flows respectively on the A41 at Aston Clinton since the opening of the Berkhamstead-King's Langley Bypass. This is broadly in line with our original estimates.

Roads (Withdrawn and Deferred Schemes)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each road scheme which has been withdrawn from the road programme (a) the sums expended by interested parties in developing the proposals, (b) the stage which the scheme had reached, (c) the reasons for the withdrawal, (d) the latest annual accident figures for the roads affected by the scheme and (e) the current volumes of traffic recorded on roads affected by the scheme. [6457]

Mr. Watts: I have set out the schemes which are shown in the November 1995 review as being withdrawn together with the stage that each scheme had reached.

During the review, careful consideration was given to allocating the limited road construction resources to where the need is greatest. Clearly, some schemes have a greater call on the available resources than others and it is now clear that resources were no longer available to allow all the 1994 roads review schemes to proceed in the foreseeable future.

Information relating to sums expended and to the accident and traffic figures above is currently being collated and I will write to the hon. Member separately as soon as it is available.

[6456]

Mr. Watts: I have set out the schemes in preparation which are now included in the longer-term category of "Managing the trunk road programme November 1995". During the review, careful consideration was given to allocating the limited road construction resources where the need is greatest. While these longer-term schemes have been retained in the road programme, they are not as pressing as certain others. Consequently, funds cannot be allocated to take them forward in the immediate future. All preparation work on these schemes will be stopped by the end of this financial year 1995–96.

Information relating to the accident and traffic figures is currently being collated and I will write to the hon. Member separately as soon as it is available

Office of Passenger Rail Franchising

Mr. Macshane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the annual budget of the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising; and how much of that total has been spent to date (i) in the current financial year and (ii) for each year since the office's inception, on legal fees. [7264]

Mr. Watts: The information on the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising is as follows:

Financial year	Annual budget (thousand)	Expenditure on legal fees
1993–94	2,443	827
1994–95	1,799,631	5,059

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the Office of Passenger Rail

Franchising's total expenditure, in the most recent available year, on (a) car allowances and (b) chauffeur-driven cars. [7327]

Mr. Watts: In 1994–95 the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising spent:

(a) £1,070 travel on private cars;

(b) £46,254 on chauffeur-driven cars;

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he is taking to encourage the staff of the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising to use British Rail services in their duties; and if he will make a statement. [7329]

Mr. Watts: The franchising director encourages his staff to use the most cost-effective mode of transport available when travelling in the course of their duties.

Chauffeur-driven Cars

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total number of his Department's Ministers and staff entitled to the use of a chauffeur-driven car in each of the last five years. [7262]

Mr. Norris: Between 1990 and 1994, five Ministers and the permanent secretary were entitled to a chauffeur-driven car.

Since July 1994, four Ministers and the permanent secretary have been entitled to a chauffeur-driven car.

Heathrow and Manchester Airports

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of (a) passenger and (b) freight capacity is being used currently at Heathrow and Manchester international airport. [7015]

Mr. Norris: This is a matter for BAA plc and Manchester Airport plc, respectively.

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passengers used each of the terminals at (a) Heathrow and (b) Manchester international airport in the last 10 years. [7014]

Mr. Norris: I understand from BAA plc and Manchester Airport plc respectively, that the information requested is as follows:

Million passengers

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the environmental impact of the airports at (a) Heathrow and (b) Manchester international airport. [7016]

Mr. Norris: For Heathrow the Department publishes an aircraft noise exposure index in the form of annual noise exposure contours using Leq—equivalent continuous sound level, 16 hour dBA. Similar information about Manchester is available from the airport authorities. It is the responsibility of airport operators or developers to undertake appropriate environmental impact assessments of any major new developments proposed at airports.

Eccles-Stratford Quays Metrolink Extension

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what progress has been made with the Greater Manchester transport authority's application for European regional development fund funding for the Metrolink extension to Eccles via Stratford quays; [7162]

(2) what plans he has to ensure that ERDF funding is available to the Salford quays and Eccles Metrolink. [7163]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 19 December 1995]: I can give no assurances and no guarantees. The Greater Manchester transport authority's application for ERDF funding is being considered by colleagues at the Department of the Environment. I understand that the application will be submitted to the Greater Manchester, Lancashire and Cheshire monitoring committee in the new year.

Roads (Complex Schemes)

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which road schemes are now being reassessed as complex schemes following the Standing Advisory Committee on Trunk Road Assessment report; and how many complex schemes are (a) motorway widenings, (b) bypasses, (c) estuarial crossings and (d) new roads. [6677]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Dr. Tony Wright, dated 20 December 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr John Watts, has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State for Transport which road schemes are being assessed as complex following the report by the Standing Advisory Committee on Trunk Road Assessment on "Trunk Roads And The Generation Of Traffic".

Schemes are being assessed at the appropriate stage in their development. To date 12 schemes have been provisionally assessed as "Complex". These are:

Motorway Widenings

M1 Junctions 6A–10

M1 Junctions 10–15

M1 Junctions 15–16

By-passes

A1 Gateshead Western Bypass

A6 Clapham Bypass

Estuarial Crossings

M6

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to extend motorway lighting on the M6 from its present point close to the M1 to junction 3. [7137]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. James Pawsey, dated 20 December 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about M6 motorway lighting between the M1/M6 Interchange and Junction 3.

There are no plans to light the M6 between these junctions.

As you would expect, the key test in any appraisal of lighting need is the performance, from a safety point of view, of the road during the hours of darkness. Having examined the overnight safety record for this section of motorway over the last three years, we cannot justify extending the existing lighting provision to this area. Any proposal to go forward in this way would not be an effective use of funds and would certainly be at the expense of other much-needed lighting schemes elsewhere.

However, all sections of the motorway and trunk road network are the subject of periodic review and factors could emerge at some stage in the future which may be significant and be such to justify the Agency taking a fresh look at the lighting need.

In the meantime, I am sorry I cannot be more helpful.

Government Car Service

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 28 November, Official Report, column 549, what increases in charges were made by the Government car service in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement regarding the reasons for the increase in spending on these services over the last five years. [7328]

Mr. Norris: The Government car service charges are as follows:

Date	Financial year	Increase (percentage)
—	1990–91	—
1st July 1990	1991–92	12.0
1st January 1991		10.0
1st April 1992	1992–93	16.5
1st April 1993	1993–94	2.5
1st April 1994	1994–95	1.0

VAT rates changed from 15 per cent. to 17.5 per cent. on 1 April 1991.

Road Accidents (Summer Time)

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if his Department will estimate the change in (a) road accident fatalities, (b) serious injuries and (c) total casualties that would have occurred in 1994, based on the figures published in "Road Accidents GB", if Great Britain had adopted double summer time. [4509]

Mr. Norris: Figures based on 1992 for a change at the end of October were given in a reply on 20 May 1994, Official Report, column 958. The Transport Research Laboratory calculates that updating these figures to take account of changes in casualty numbers since then results in a forecast that approximately 2,080 casualties of all severities would have been saved in 1994, including 110 deaths and 590 serious injuries. These estimates are based on an analysis of accidents in the period 1968 to 1971 when summer time continued throughout the year, compared with years when it did not, and take account of subsequent changes in accident patterns and vehicle usage. Estimates published in "Summertime: A consultation document" in 1989 were obtained using the same method applied to the year 1987. These are GB estimates and cannot be taken to show what might happen in any particular region of the country where special circumstances may exist.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Chauffeur-driven Cars

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost of chauffeur-driven cars used by his Department was in each of the past five years. [5865]

Mr. Hanley: The cost of chauffeur-driven cars used by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office over the last five years was as follows:

Government Car Service contracts

1990–91: £248,546

1991–92: £268,332

1992–93: £370,656

1993–94: £383,188

1994–95: £383,188.

The figures above represent the cost of agreed hours of usage and do not include VAT. The Government car service says that it has not been possible to calculate the charges for additional hours.

In addition, the cost of chauffeur-driven cars provided from the FCO car pool during the 1994–95 was £86,266. Prior to this date no separate breakdown of figures was recorded.

Information on expenditure by overseas posts on hauffeur-driven cars is not readily available and could be rovided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for oreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate f the total cost for himself and other departmental Ministers for each year since 1991–92, with an estimate or the current year of (a) overseas travel and ccommodation expenses of Ministers and their advisers, b) car and chauffeuring costs of ministers, (c) ministerial ecurity costs and (d) domestic travel and accommodation xpenses of Ministers. [6402]

Mr. Hanley: The information requested will take some ime to compile; I will write to the hon. Gentleman shortly.

Departmental Running Costs

Mr. Malcom Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the estimate of the cost of running his departmental office, and that of his predecessor, for each year since 1990–91 with an estimate for the current year, broken down into (a) telephone bills, (b) total staff costs, (c) press and communications, (d) entertainment, (e) alcoholic drinks, (f) non-alcoholic drinks, (g) stationery, (h) office refurbishment and (i) other. [6401]

Mr. Hanley: The information requested will take some time to compile; I will write to the hon. Gentleman shortly.

Small Firms

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the outcome of his department's review of measures taken to facilitate small firms' access to appropriate areas of Government procurement in the light of best practice in respect of (a) the diplomatic wing and (b) the Overseas Development Administration. [6655]

Mr. Hanley: Diplomatic wing purchasing forms relating to suppliers now also identify the size of companies by number of employees; FCO and ODA contact points have been included in the DTI booklet "Tendering for Government Contracts". FCO procurement literature on access for small firms to departmental business has been sent to the central unit on procurement at HM Treasury.

FCO departmental guidance on purchasing has been updated to reflect present Government policy on small and medium enterprises. The ODA is revising its own "Guide to Aid Procedures" to reflect present policy. All newcomers to purchasing attending the FCO introductory course on purchasing and supply—which is run in conjunction with the Chartered Institute of Purchasing and Supply—are shown the DTI film "Thinking Big, Buy Small" Copies of the booklet with the same title are being ordered for distribution to purchasing staff.

FCO model tender documentation ensures that appropriate contacts are identified and made available to deal with the procedural and technical issues relating to the contract.

China

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the United Kingdom Government plan to take against the Chinese Government as a result of their gaoling of Wei Jingsheng; and if he will make a statement. [7209]

Mr. Hanley: We and our European Union partners have raised with the Chinese authorities our deep concern about the detention, trial and imprisonment of Wei Jingsheng. We look to the Chinese to show clemency and allow his early release.

On 14 December, the Spanish presidency, on behalf of the EU, issued a statement in Madrid and Brussels, calling for Wei Jingsheng's unconditional release. A copy of the statement has been placed in the Library.

High Commissions

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 12 December, Official Report, columns 577–79, if he will make a statement on the function of British high commissions; and what were the costs of the sub-leases for the residences in list B, the date on which they were taken out and the date of expiry. [7058]

Mr. Hanley: The function of British high commissions is to promote UK interests in Commonwealth countries and to provide the full range of diplomatic, commercial and consular services of an overseas post.

The details requested for the relevant high commissioners' residences are shown on the list.

Embassies and Consulates

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give the average cost of operation for United Kingdom (a) embassies and (b) consulates worldwide for each of the past five years; and if he will provide a breakdown by FCO geographical department. [7270]

Mr. Hanley: This information could not be produced in the format requested without incurring disproportionate cost.

Information on the FCO's overseas expenditure can be found in the FCO's departmental reports, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Mykola-Zelyukin

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the migration and visa correspondence unit received a letter on behalf of Mr. Pawlo-Trtiakow in regard to his relative Mr. Mykola-Zelyukin; when it replied; and what factors determined the length of the interval. [7376]

Mr. Hanley: The hon. Member's letters of 3 October and 15 November, addressed to the entry clearance section at Kiev, were received in the migration and visa correspondence unit on 28 November. Having in the interim obtained information from Kiev, the unit replied to the hon. Member on 7 December about the outcome of the application.

GCHQ

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the conditions of service of staff employed at GCHQ. [7741]

Mr. Rifkind: The conditions of service of staff employed at GCHQ are set out in the GCHQ staff handbook. Following advice from the director of GCHQ and, in agreement with the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, I have today agreed that they should be amended.

The Government's purpose in introducing new conditions of service in 1984 was to protect national security by ensuring continuous operations at GCHQ.

This required that GCHQ's activities and operations should be protected from industrial disruption, whether in pursuit of national or local disputes; and should be protected from any risk arising from a conflict of loyalty of the staff; that negotiations on departmental issues should be carried out by departmental staff representatives answerable only to the staff of GCHQ; and that, for national security reasons, GCHQ staff should not have access to industrial tribunals. These objectives have been secured. The amendments I am now making will not affect them or the Government's original purpose, which remains unchanged.

The Government have always accepted that staff at GCHQ should have the right to join a staff association which would represent their interests in negotiations over pay, conditions of service and a wide range of other issues. Since 1985 staff have been represented by the Government Communications Staff Federation; this arrangement has worked well, and a good working relationship has been developed between GCHQ management and the GCSF. The GCSF has been recognised by the certification officer for trade unions and employers associations as a trade union.

However, certain details of the arrangement whereby the staff federation must be approved by the director of GCHQ, and his power to veto membership of its by staff, have caused the GCSF some difficulty in gaining a certificate of independence.

In response to representations from the GCSF, the Government have considered how the conditions of service might be amended, consistent with the needs of national security, to remove this obstacle. The amendments which I have agreed today should do this. They reflect the Government's desire to recognise and to maintain the good working relationship which has been developed between GCHQ management and GCSF. For reasons of national security, staff at GCHQ will continue to be restricted to membership of a body whose officers and representatives are appointed from, and answerable only to, GCHQ staff. Their conditions of service will continue to exclude any form of industrial action. Within this framework, I have agreed to the director's recommendations that his power of approval, and his power of veto over membership of a staff association, should be withdrawn. He will instead exercise the right that every employer has, to choose to recognise for purposes of negotiation and staff representation only one union, and that one remains GCSF.

Through these changes, I have carried forward the Government's policy of protecting national security, while also protecting to the maximum extent possible the employment rights of the staff of GCHQ on whose diligence, professionalism and commitment the nation depends.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Attorney-General what estimate he has made of the savings to public funds from allowing the CPS rights of audience in Crown courts. [7229]

The Attorney-General: The Lord Chancellor and designated judges have not yet reached a final decision on whether Crown prosecutors should have rights of audience in the higher courts and, if so, to what extent. Pending such decisions, there are too many variables to make a reliable estimate.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Exhibitions

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he has considered an application for an exhibition relating to the famine decade to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall. [7386]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Administration Committee, arrangements have been made for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 29 January to Friday 2 February 1996.

WALES

Council Tax

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what revenue was raised from council tax in Wales for the last available three years; and what is his estimate of revenue for (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98. [5954]

Mr. Hague: The amounts Welsh local authorities expected to raise from council tax when setting the tax and their annual budgets were:

£325.3 million for 1993–94;

£354.4 million for 1994–95 and

£394.2 million for 1995–96.

If authorities budget in line with the spending plans announced on 13 December 1995, council tax revenue for 1996–97 would be £380.5 million. However, it will be for individual authorities to determine their own budgets for the year. Estimates for 1997–98 are not yet available.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he intends to issue guidance to new unitary authorities with regard to arrangements for staff who will be employed by more than one authority following reorganisation. [5412]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend has no plans to issue such guidance,. It is for local authorities to advise their employees on matters relating to their employment and to comply with relevant employment legislation.

Reservoirs (Business Rates)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the reservoirs in Wales which have a rateable value accorded to them together with the business rate or other rates paid on account of each. [7041]

Mr. Hague: At 1 April 1995 the following seven reservoirs were the subject of separate entries in the rating list. Other reservoirs in Wales form part of larger hereditaments in either the cental or local rating lists and, as a consequence, have no separate rateable values. The rate yield is calculated by multiplying the rateable value listed by the Welsh poundage for 1995–96 of 39p.

Arable Area Payments Scheme

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money was spent in Wales in (a) set-aside payments under the arable area payments scheme and (b) total arable area payments in 1994–95. [7194]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In 1994–95 payments in Wales under the arable area payments scheme amounted to (a) £1,104,525 for set-aside payments and (b) £7,923,953 in total.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much money is forecast to be spent in Wales in (a) set-aside payments under the arable area payments scheme and (b) total area payments in 1995–96. [7195]

Mr. Jones: The forecast expenditure in 1995–96 in Wales under the arable area payments scheme is (a) £1.1 million for set-aside and (b) £10 million in total.

Council House Funding

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what new money he has made available to local authorities in Wales for the modernisation of aging council house stock. [6469]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend has made available £48.2 million for capital works to council housing in 1996–97.

Interreg II Programme

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for (a) each county (b) Wales, the amount of money expressed in pounds sterling paid or committed under the Interreg programme for each available year since its inception. [7039]

Mr. Hague: Nil. The Wales-Ireland II programme was officially launched by the two member states on 25 November 1995. Wales has been allocated approximately £11.4 million of EC grant—at current exchange rates—for implementation of the programme. Applications for funding are currently being considered.

Negative Equity

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the percentage of home buyers in each of the past five years experiencing negative equity in Wales. [7249]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Estimates of the percentage of home buyers experiencing negative equity in Wales in each of the past five years are as follows:

1990: 1 per cent.

1991: 2 per cent.

1992: 3 per cent.

1993: 3 per cent.

1994: 2 per cent.

These estimates are prepared by the Department of the Environment on the basis of a house price index. The estimates are sensitive to the assumptions made and are intended to provide only a broad indication of the level of negative equity.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police (Grants)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is, for each police authority in England and Wales, (a) the revenue grant that he proposes to make in 1996–97 and the revenue grant offered for 1995–96 and for each of the previous five years, together with (b) the actual figure of revenue grant paid where it is different from the figure offered and (c) any supplementary revenue grant offered or paid in any year. [7273]

Mr. Maclean: For allocations to each police authority in 1995–96, and proposed allocations for 1996–97, I refer to the reply given by my right hon. and learned Friend on 30 November, columns 891–92 to my hon. Friend the Member for Croydon, North-East (Mr. Congdon). Details of allocations of Home Office specific grant paid in 1995–96 are set out in the "Police Grant Report (England and Wales) 1995–96". Details of proposed allocations for 1996–97 are set out in the draft "Police Grant Report (England and Wales) 1996–97". Copies of both are in the Library.

Information on Home Office specific grant advanced to police authorities, and actual grant paid, is set out in the Table. No supplementary revenue grant was offered or paid.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is, for each police authority in England and Wales, (a) the capital grant that he proposes to make in 1996–97 and the capital grant offered for 1995–96 and for each of the previous five years, together with (b) the actual figure of capital grant paid where that is different from the figure offered and (c) any supplementary capital grant offered or paid in any year for special or designated purposes. [7274]

Mr. Maclean: Details of capital grant proposed for allocation to each police authority in 1996–97 and allocated in each of the previous six years are given in the table. Figures for proposed allocations in years prior to 1996–97, and for additional sums paid in year, are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

London Fire Stations

Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the average number of on ground calls for each category (a) A, (b) B, (c) C, and (d) D fire station in London for (i) 1992–93, (ii) 1993–94 and (iii) 1994–95 and (iv) for the latest period available; [6925]

(2) what (a) percentage and (b) number of incidents in London were attended by each London fire station within the recommended attendance standards in (i) 1992–93, (ii) 1993–94, (iii) 1994–95 and (iv) the latest period available; and how this breaks down by risk category. [6924]

Mr. Sackville: The information requested is not available centrally.

UK Passport Agency

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which consultancy firms have been employed in market testing the UK Passport Agency; how much each has been paid; and which offices they are considering for contracting out. [7212]

Mr Kirkhope: No consultancy firms have been employed in market testing the UK Passport Agency. There are no plans for contracting out passport offices.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if staff in the Belfast UK Passport Agency office will be permitted to submit in-house bids for any areas which are under consideration for contracting out. [7210]

Mr. Kirkhope: If any areas of work in the Belfast passport office are considered suitable for contracting out it would not be appropriate for staff to submit in-house bids.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff (a) are currently employed in the UK Passport Agency Offices and (b) were employed 12 months ago. [7211]

Mr. Kirkhope: The UK employs a mixture of permanent staff and seasonal staff. The latter are either retained on part-year appointments or as casual employees. The number of seasonal staff in post varies according to demand for passports, which is abnormally high at present in anticipation of the abolition of the British visitor's passport from 1 January 1996. The information requested is as follows:

	Permanent	Part year	Casual
30 November 1995	1,213.5	123.5	155.5
30 November 1994	1,269.5	36	21

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many consultants have been employed to consider the contracting out of the UK Passport Agency Belfast Office; with what terms of reference; over what time period; to consider what functions of the agency; and how many staff were involved on each occasion. [7153]

Mr. Kirkhope: The UK Passport Agency has no plans to contract out the Belfast Office.

Civil Servants (Asylum Cases)

Mr. Mellor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many civil servants were employed to deal with asylum cases on (a) 1 October 1980, (b) 1 October 1985, (c) 1 October 1990 and (d) 1 October 1995. [6944]

Mr. Kirkhope: The numbers of civil servants employed to deal solely with asylum cases—screening, determination and appeals—were as follows:

1 October 1980: 30

1 October 1985: 48

1 October 1990: 91

1 October 1995: 596

Prisoners (Shopping Visits)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what shopping visits were made by prison officers for prison inmates detained in prisons in England and Wales during the week of 5 December. [6458]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 20 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about shopping trips by prison officers for prison inmates.

No shopping trips by prison officers were made during the week of 5 December. This is in line with the Home Secretary's announcement in December 1994 that the practice of prison officers going shopping at the behest of prisoners had stopped.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the total cost for himself and other departmental Ministers for each year since 1991–92, including the current year of (a) overseas travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers and their advisers, (b) car and chauffeuring costs of Ministers, (c) ministerial security costs and (d) domestic travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers. [6400]

Mr. Howard: The estimated cost for myself and my departmental Ministers for the current year and for 1993–94 and 1994–95 are as follows:

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Overseas travel/accommodation	38,892	40,441	70,000
Car and chauffeuring costs	228,424	228,424	232,669
Domestic travel/accommodation	29,524	41,000	56,000

The figures for car and chauffeuring costs are inclusive of value added tax.

Ministerial security costs, which include the cost of chauffeuring myself, are not collected in the format requested. Part is included in the running cost expenditure of my Department which is published in the annual report, annexe 3, and part is covered by the Metropolitan police.

Figures for 1991–92 and 1992–93 can be made available only at disproportionate cost.

Prisoners (Education Provisions)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the minimum education provisions per prisoner per week in (a) Prison Service and (b) privately run prisons; what safeguards exist to ensure that these provisions are met; and if he will make it his policy not to reduce the minimum education provision during (i) 1995 and (ii) 1996 in respect of (1) the Prison Service and (2) privately run prisons. [6029]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 20 December 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about education provisions in Prison Service and privately run prisons.

Statutory minima for education (which apply both to directly and privately managed establishments) are set out in Rule 35(2) of the Young Offender Institution Rules 1988, which states that young offenders under seventeen years old are required to attend classes for at least fifteen hours within the normal working week, and Rule 29(2) of the Prison Rules 1964, which states that evening classes must be provided.

The Prison Service Code of Operating Standards stipulate that establishments should provide an education programme, including vocational training courses, based on a needs assessment and that classes should, subject to local needs, be provided in the morning and afternoon, five days a week for fifty weeks in the year, and in the evenings five days a week for forty two weeks of the year. A system of standards audit has recently been put in place to monitor compliance with the code of operating standards, including those relating to education.

Within this framework governors are responsible for determining the level and nature of provision, having regard to the relevant Service-wide plans and policies, and to the resources available.

The Service's strategic plan for 1995–98 includes a strategic priority of improving the quality, relevance, and delivery of regime activities and to this end the 1995–96 business plan includes a commitment to implement a core education curriculum which will be common to all establishments.

Delivery of adequate education programmes is assured through the normal line management process of the Prison Service, supported by standards audit and specialist advice from the central education and training advisory service. In the case of privately operated prisons, and of Manchester prison, which operates under a service level agreement, this is underpinned by specific requirements in the contracts and service level agreement.

Small Firms

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what meetings his Department has had since May 1995 with organisations representing small firms to review tendering procedures. [6626]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The Treasury central unit on procurement arranged a meeting with the Confederation of British Industry small firms panel, the Association of British Chambers of Commerce and the Forum of Private Business in September 1995 to review tendering procedures. Representatives of some individual Departments attended; the Home Office will consider any recommendations which are made.

Home Office tendering procedures are subject to periodic review. Measures which may assist small firms include the use of simple written requests for quotations, rather than formal tenders, for lower value purchases of goods and services, and increased delegated powers to managers to buy locally.

Small and Medium Enterprises

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice has been given to procurement staff on the implications for purchasing from small to medium enterprises. [6627]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 19 December 1995]: Procurement staff are advised that the size of a company is relevant to the selection of tenderers only in so far as it affects its capability to meet our requirements. Once that capability is established, there is no discrimination between small, medium or large companies. Contracts are awarded to firms which best meet our value for money criteria, which will include skills, efficiency, experience, price, delivery and quality. Small and large firms should be equally capable of meeting these criteria.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what work his Department has done to develop best practice in the publication of departmental procurement guidance material relevant to small and medium enterprises' needs; [6625]

(2) what progress his Department has made regarding establishing a contact point with responsibility for liaison with relevant business support organisations and taking forward small and medium enterprise related public procurement initiatives; [6716]

(3) what has been the outcome of his Department's review of measures taken to facilitate small firms' access to appropriate areas of Government procurement in the light of best practice. [6662]

Mr. Howard [holding answers 18 and 19 December 1995]: Although we have undertaken no formal review of measures to facilitate small firms' access to appropriate areas of procurement, the inherently devolved nature of Home Office procurement provides an excellent opportunity for small firms to establish local contact. The Home Office procurement unit has a number of staff with special responsibility for policy in relation to small to medium enterprises and for ensuring that those wishing to supply the Home Office receive all the necessary support and information. In response to the Government White Paper, "Setting New Standards", the Home Office will shortly be publishing a small business contact point in a revised booklet for new suppliers. This will contain additional information of interest to small to medium enterprises. In addition, the Home Office procurement manual, widely circulated throughout the Home Office, contains guidance on purchasing from small firms.

Prisoner Transfers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have been moved from prisons in England and Wales to prisons in Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland since September 1994; and if he will make a statement. [6831]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 19 December 1995]: Since September 1994, 22 prisoners have been transferred from England and Wales to prisons in Northern Ireland. Ratification of the Council of Europe convention on the transfer of sentenced persons by the Republic of Ireland came into force on 1 November 1995. To date, no prisoners have been repatriated to the Republic.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Services Ombudsman

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) if he will conduct an inquiry into the actions of Chambers and Co. solicitors of Brighouse, west Yorkshire, in relation to the case of Mrs. Daphne Turner of Huddersfield and the recommendations of the legal services ombudsman; [7417]

(2) what powers he has to ensure that compensation recommended by the legal services ombudsman is paid. [7317]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The office of the legal services ombudsman is statutorily independent from the Government and I have no powers to intervene in individual cases. The ombudsman's powers to make recommendations in his reports are set out in section 23 of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990. Should any persons fail to comply with a recommendation, they are required to publicise that failure. Should they not do so, the ombudsman may publicise the matter.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) if he will review legislation establishing the legal services ombudsman, with particular reference to circumstances in which solicitors fail to carry out his recommendations; [7315]

(2) if he will meet the Law Society to discuss cases in which solicitors ignore recommendations from the legal services ombudsman for compensation. [7318]

Mr. Evans: My Department will carry out its quinquennial review of the office of the legal services ombudsman next year. I do not see any need for an earlier review of this aspect of the legislation or for a discussion on it with the Law Society.

Child Witnesses (Judicial Training)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what representations he has received (a) regarding the need for more training for judges in handling child witnesses, particularly in cases of alleged child abuses, and (b) suggesting the exclusion of certain judges from sitting on cases involving child witnesses particularly in cases of child abuse. [7173]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: In the past year, the Lord Chancellor received one representation specifically on judicial training in handling child witnesses, from the shadow Minister for children and the family. Other representations primarily on other matters may also refer to judicial training, but to collate information on these would incur disproportionate cost. Two representations to exclude certain judges from sitting in such cases were considered by the Lord Chancellor in the same period, one of which was made by the hon. Member. To collate the information requested over an extended period of time would incur disproportionate cost.

Magistrates (Ethnic Minorities)

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many members of the magistracy in England and Wales were from an ethnic minority in (a) 1989 and (b) 1995; and what in each year was the total number of magistrates. [7625]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: No figures are currently available for the total number of magistrates who are from an ethnic minority. In England and Wales, excluding the Duchy of Lancaster, 4.7 per cent. of those appointed in 1989 were from an ethnic minority; between 1 January and 31 October 1995 the figure was 8.1 per cent. At 31 December 1989, excluding the Duchy of Lancaster, there were 24,521 magistrates and at 1 January 1995 there were 25,723.

Chauffeur-driven Cars

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellors Department what the cost of chauffeur-driven cars used by his Department was in each of the last five years. [5866]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Chauffeur-driven cars are used by the Lord Chancellor, Parliamentary Secretary and the permanent secretary. The Law Lords and members of the Scottish Office also use the cars on occasions. Expenditure over the last five years has been calculated as follows:

1991: £409,909.10

1992: £353,818.05

1993: £195,995.35

1994: £227,229.70

1995: Figures for the complete year are not yet available.

It should be noted that the figures above do not include cars used by the judiciary on the circuits.

Internet

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what web site his Department maintains on the Internet; what information is provided there; how often it is updated; what is the address; and if he or his Department answers questions and supplies additional information through the Internet. [7569]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: My Department has its own web site held on the Government information service, an Internet server maintained by the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency.

The Department's home page contains extracts from the LCD strategic plan for 1995–96 to 1997–98 providing details about the Department, its aims and key challenges, plans for the future and some departmental facts and figures. It also includes a summary of the consultation paper "Legal Aid—Targeting Need". The information was published on the Internet in August and no updates have taken place.

The address of the home page is http://www.open.gov.uk/lcd/lcdhome.htm.

The Department neither answers questions nor supplies additional information through the Internet and has no current plans to do so.

The Court Service agency has two sites on the Internet: the home page and the charter for court users. The home page contains information on the structure and workings of the Court Service in England and Wales. The charter site contains the substantive pages of the charter for court users published in July 1995. The sites have not been updated since they were established in October 1995; they are currently being updated and it is intended to place Court Service leaflets on the Internet by June 1996. The addresses of the site are as follows:

home page—http://www.open.gov.uk/courts/court/cs_home.htm
charter—http://www.open.gov.uk./courts/charter/courts.htm

The Court Service neither answers questions nor supplies additional information through the Internet.

The Public Trust Office does not have a site on the Internet at present.

Departmental Running Costs

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is his estimate of the cost of running his departmental office, and that of his predecessor, for each year since 1990–91 including an estimate for the current year, broken down into (a) telephone bills, (b) total staff costs, (c) press and communications, (d) entertainment, (e) alcoholic drinks, (f) non-alcoholic drinks, (g) stationery, (h) office refurbishment and (i) other. [6409]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: This information is not collected in the format requested but is included in the running cost expenditure of the Lord Chancellor's Department which is published in the annual report, Cm 2809. Projections for 1995–96 are in line with overall expenditure for next year as published in the public expenditure survey statement.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is his estimate of the total cost for himself and other departmental Ministers for each year since 1991–92, including an estimate for the current year of (a) overseas travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers and their advisers, (b) car and chauffeuring costs of Ministers, (c) ministerial security costs and (d) domestic travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers. [6410]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Information on expenditure in the format requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Legal Aid

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the impact of the new franchises on legal aid cash; and if he will make a statement. [7592]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: None. However, the Legal Aid board, whose initiative franchising is, conducted extensive research to assist it in setting up the franchising scheme, and is monitoring its operation closely.

HEALTH

Health Authorities and Trusts (Advertising)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the cost of advertising by trusts and health authorities in each region in each year since 1990. [4186]

Mr. Malone: The available information is shown in the table. Advertising is not defined in the national health service manual accounts and may be undertaken, for example, both for staff recruitment and for health promotion purposes.

Research

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money his Department has spent in each of the last 10 years and how much it estimates it will spend in the current year and each of the next three years on research (a) into the risk of transmission of the BSE agent from cattle to (i) humans and (ii) other primates, (b) into an early diagnostic test for Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease and (c) effective treatment for Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease. [6188]

Mr. Horam: The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council. The MRC is an independent body which receives its grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade. For information on the amount spent by the MRC on research, I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the Minister for Science and Technology gave him on 18 December at columns 863–64.

The Department of Health has recently funded a series of studies, at the Institute for Animal Health, Edinburgh, into time-temperatures combinations required to inactivate BSE and related agents. Total expenditure on the studies was £340,000.

The Department of Health and the Scottish Office jointly fund the National CJD surveillance unit in Edinburgh. Set up in 1990, the unit monitors and investigates the epidemiology of the disease, paying particular attention to occupation and eating habits, so that any change in the pattern of CJD following the advent of BSE can be detected. The unit produces annual reports, copies of which are available in the Library. Funding for the unit by this Department since 1990 is given in the table.

The Government receive independent expert advice on matters relating to BSE and CJD from the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee, chaired by Professor John Pattison. The committee advises on research needs and priorities. The committee's latest report, "Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathies—A Summary of Present Knowledge and Research", is available in the Library.

2. 1990–91 figure of £234,000 includes expenditure on capital equipment of £134,000.
3. 1995–96 figure of £263,000 includes expenditure on capital equipment of £35,000.
2. 1996–97 figure of £291,000 includes expenditure on capital equipment of £47,000.

Deparmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the total cost for himself and other departmental Ministers for each year since 1991–92, including the current year of (a) overseas travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers and their advisers, (b) car and chauffeuring costs of Ministers, (c) ministerial security costs and (d) domestic travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers. Information is not available for 1991–92.

Expenditure on the other items is not collected in the format requested, but is included in the running cost expenditure of my Department, which is published in the annual report.

NHS Staff Earnings

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the average earnings of (a) consultants, (b) nurses and (c) chief executives of trusts and health authorities in each year since 1989. [6240]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Benzodiazepine

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the individuals or organisations receiving Health Department research funds for projects investigating the effects of medium and long-term use of benzodiazepine tranquillisers; and if he will indicate the total moneys allocated, a brief description of research hypothesis, the length of time for research projects and the expected date of publication of research results for each project. [6325]

Mr. Bowis: None. The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council, which receives its grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all the guidance notes issued to health authorities and general practitioners regarding the prescription of benzodiazepine tranquillisers since 1985. [6326]

Mr. Bowis: Guidance on the prescribing of benzodiazepines was given to doctors by the Committee on Safety of Medicines in "Current Problems" No. 21 issued in January 1988; in the British National Formulary, a twice yearly publication which is issued free to all doctors; in "Drug Misuse and Dependence: Guidelines on Clinical Management" issued to all doctors in 1991; in "Guidelines for the Prevention and Treatment of Benzodiazepine Dependence" published by the Mental Health Foundation, sent to all family health services authorities in March 1994; and in the MeReC bulletin issued to all doctors in October 1995. "The Health of the Nation" key area handbook, published in 1993, suggested that family health services authorities should agree with general practitioners local targets for reducing benzodiazepine prescriptions.

Computerised General Practices

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of general practices are computerised in the United Kingdom; and what assessment he has made of computerisation of general practices in the Netherlands. [6299]

Mr. Malone: The average of computerised general practices in the United Kingdom is estimated at 88 per cent. My Department has made no assessment of computerisation in the Netherlands.

Departmental Running Costs

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the cost of running his departmental office, and that of his predecessor, for each year since 1990–91 including the current year broken down into (a) telephone bills, (b) total staff costs, (c) press and communications, (d) entertainment, (e) alcoholic drinks, (f) non-alcoholic drinks, (g) stationery, (h) office refurbishment and (i) other. [6383]

Mr. Horam: The available information is shown in the table:

Financial year[1]	Total staff cost £	Hospitality[2] £
1992–93	1,083,758	31,164
1993–94	1,387,955	31,814
1994–95	1,525,940	22,567
1995–96[3]	1,525,074	17,787

Expenditure on the other items is not collected in the format requested but is included in the running cost expenditure of my Department, which is published in the Departmental report.

[1] Information is not available for 1990–91 or 1991–92.

[2] Expenditure on hospitality includes entertainment, alcoholic drinks and non-alcoholic drinks.

[3] Estimated.

Chronic Fatigue Syndrome

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is his Department's estimate of the number of sufferers from myalgic encephalomyelitis in the United Kingdom in the last five years for which figures are available; [6897]

(2) how much his Department has spent on funding research into myalgic encephalomyelitis in each of the last five years; and how much is planned to be spent in each of the next five years. [6898]

Mr. Horam: The nature of myalgic encephalomyelitis—which is increasingly being referred to as chronic fatigue syndrome—is not fully understood or defined. Until this is resolved, it will not be possible to determine the number of sufferers from chronic fatigue syndrome nor commission research into the prevalence of the condition.

The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council, which receives its grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade. During the past five years, the MRC funded a study at the Institute of Psychiatry at an estimated cost of £91,000 to investigate chronic fatigue in general practice attenders. The MRC is always willing to consider high-quality research proposals.

Meningitis

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out information held by his Department or on his behalf concerning the causes, frequency and locations of outbreaks of meningitis. [7370]

Mr. Horam: Outbreaks of meningitis are usually due to meningococcal infection. Two thirds of cases in the United Kingdom are from the group B meningococcal strain, one third from the group C strain. Outbreaks of the latter tend to occur more in closed or semi-closed communities, such as schools and military establishments. There are no known causes for outbreaks. They occur throughout the year, but the frequency increases over the winter months. There are approximately 2,000 notified cases of meningococcal infection—meningitis and septicaemia—each year. Some of the cases are sporadic; when more than one case occurs and there appears to be an epidemiolocical association between cases, there may be considered to be an outbreak. Information on the particular localities and number of notified cases of meningococcal infection is held by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys and is published in the OPCS Monitor MB2 series, copies of which are available in the Library.

Hospital Admissions

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements he has made within his Department, or by co-ordination between relevant authorities, for logging, analysing and indexing monthly, or annually, the number of cases when admission to hospital of seriously ill people is delayed by failure within given times to local suitable centres of treatment, length of journey, or combination of both. [7374]

Mr. Horam: Health authorities and national health service trusts should work together to plan and ensure that facilities are adequate to meet demand. In some areas emergency beds services will play a co-ordinating role in matching patients to beds. We would expect any incident where there is an unnecessary delay in the admission of a seriously ill patient to be thoroughly investigated by local management.

Psychiatrists

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary for Health how many (a) community-based and (b) hospital-based psychiatrists in the NHS (i) left the NHS and (ii) were appointed in each of the last five years. [7391]

Mr. Malone: The information is not available centrally.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement in respect of (a) morale and (b) recruitment of psychiatrists in the NHS. [7392]

Mr. Malone: Information about the morale of psychiatrists is not available centrally. We recognise that some of the psychiatry specialties, such as adult mental illness, have been experiencing difficulties in recruiting consultants. This matter is currently being given high priority by the specialist workforce advisory group, whose responsibility is to ensure an adequate number of doctors in higher specialist training in each specialty to meet likely future consultant opportunities.

Alternative Therapies

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what alternative therapies are available on the NHS; and what steps he is taking to publicise their availability. [7705]

Mr. Horam: Homoeopathy has been an integral part of the national health service since its inception. NHS purchasers—district health authorities and general practitioner fundholders—have the freedom to purchase other forms of complementary medicine for their patients where they consider that is the most appropriate means of meeting assessed health needs of their local population. Like other forms of treatment—both orthodox and complementary—availability on the NHS and publicity of availability is a matter for local decision in the light of competing priorities against available resources.

Hospital Bed Availability

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date form KH03 on hospital bed availability was issued to NHS providers; and on what date completed returns have been requested. [7432]

Mr. Horam: The last KH03 form issued to providers was for 1994–95. Forms were sent to national health service trusts and other provider hospitals on 10 March 1995, and they were asked to send back completed forms to reach the Department of Health no later than 31 May 1995.

Forms for 1995–96 will be sent out in February-March 1996.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to publish in full the results of his Department's survey on bed availability among NHS providers collected on form KH03. [7431]

Mr. Horam: It is the policy of the Department of Health to publish the results of KH03 in full. The latest Publication of "Bed availability for England" contains figures for the financial year 1994–95. Copies of the publication are available in the Library.

Internet

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what web site his Department maintains on the Internet; what information is provided there; how often it is updated; what is the address; and if he or his Department answers questions and supplies additional information through the Internet. [7568]

Mr. Horam: The Department has maintained an Internet world wide web site on the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency's open government WWW server since 20 June. It is amongst the most heavily used of the departmental home pages. The site includes details of the Department of Health strategic aims and objectives, national health service developments, research and development activities, departmental publications and events, progress on "The Health of the Nation" initiative and details of departmental public information phone lines. In addition, departmental press releases are available, as are links to departmental agencies. The period of update of the pages varies according to the information. For example, the text of departmental press releases is updated daily. A "What's New" page is available to help alert users to new amendments to the Department's home pages. The address of the Department's Internet site is http://www.open.gov.uk/doh/dhhome.htm and a feedback form facility is available. Details of departmental publications and their availability, as well as the full text of some departmental publications and information packs, can be downloaded. A departmental Internet mail box is under consideration.

Sheffield Hospitals

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals have been closed or are to be closed in the Sheffield area; what sums are expected to be raised from the sales for development; how much of this will be returned to the successor hospitals; and if he will make a statement. [7594]

Mr. Horam: In the Sheffield area three hospitals have closed since 1990, including King Edward VII hospital, St. George's hospital and Fulwood hospital.

It is anticipated that, with the rationalisation programme of future health care provision, a further four hospitals may close wholly or in part; including Lodge Moor, Jessops, Middlewood and Nether Edge hospitals.

It is not possible at this time accurately to identify what sums are expected to be raised from the sales of those hospitals. However, the amount of reinvestment directed into health care services for Sheffield is expected to be substantially more than sale proceeds will realise.

Paediatric Intensive Care

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made by his Department on implementing the plans made as a result of the review of intensive care for children undertaken by regional health authorities to achieve a national service; and if he will make a statement. [7326]

Mr. Bowis: Health authorities are responsible for implementing these plans through contracts with hospitals providing appropriate facilities. To assist, the Department is collaborating with the Medical Research Council, which receives its grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade, on research to identify the optimum size and distribution of a national network of paediatric intensive care units.

Workplace Injuries

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total number of workplace injuries, and other work-related medical complaints and deaths for each of the last 10 years. [7316]

Sir Paul Beresford: The table shows the total number of fatal and other injuries in all industries reported to all health and safety enforcing authorities between 1986–87 and 1994–95.

Comparable comprehensive figures for work-related medical complaints are not available. Many occupational diseases have long latency and the link with work may not be immediately obvious. The Health and Safety Executive obtains information on work-related diseases from a variety of sources and detailed discussion of these is included in its annual publication, "Health and Safety Statistics", copies of which have been deposited in the Library of the House. However, global estimates for work-related ill health compiled by the HSE from the 1990 labour force survey pointed to some 2.2 million cases of work-related ill health.

[2] Data includes the 167 fatalities of the Piper Alpha disaster, 6 July 1988.

[3] Data includes the 95 fatalities to members of the public in the Hillsborough disaster, 15 April 1989.

HSE gets to know of virtually all workplace deaths. However, non-fatal injuries are subject to under reporting. HSE included a set of questions in the 1993–94 and the 1994–95 Labour Force Surveys (LFS) to establish the true levels of workplace injury. The results of the surveys show that just over 40 per cent. of non fatal injuries to employees are reported.

Sewers (Rodent Infestation)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent studies have been made concerning the volume of rodent infestation of sewers and its impact on public health. [7122]

Mr. Clappison: I have been asked to reply.

No national studies have been undertaken into the level of rats in sewers. However, all sewerage undertakers have programmes to control and reduce the number of rats in their systems. The scale of the problem of rat infestation is generally considered to be static or declining in some areas.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Citizens Charter Unit

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what criteria are used to measure the success of the citizens charter unit. [6896]

Mr. Willetts: The key criterion is improvement in the standards and responsiveness of public services. A full account of this is set out in "The Citizen's Charter: The Facts and Figures", Cm 2970.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the responsibilities of the citizens charter unit. [6894]

Mr. Willetts: The unit works with the Prime Minister's advisory panel on the citizens charter and aims to improve the standard and responsiveness of public services. Its main tasks are:

(i) promoting use of Charters.quality improvement through workshops, conferences, support to local Charter Quality Networks, Charter News;

(ii) advising services on Charters;

(iii) running the annual Charter Mark awards scheme and associated Charter Mark nomination scheme;

(iv) monitoring and reporting progress through the Charter White Paper and other means.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the cost to public funds in each financial year since its establishment of the citizens charter unit. [6893]

Mr. Willetts: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 12 December 1995, Official Report, column 634.

"Charter News"

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what has been the cost per issue of (a) the production and (b) the distribution of "Charter News" since its inception. [6895]

Mr. Willetts: The average production cost for issues 1 to 9 of "Charter News" was £43,632.14. The average distribution cost for issues 1 to 8 was £28,823.14. The distribution cost for issue 9 is not yet available.

Private Finance Initative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will provide a breakdown of administration costs incurred to date and forecast for the future on PFI work. [5714]

Mr. Freeman: Costs incurred by the Cabinet Office, including the Office of Public Service, HMSO and Central Office of Information directly identifiable to PFI administration are negligible. The Department is undertaking a procurement exercise for the upgrade of the Government's metropolitan telecommunications service, for which overall project development and procurement costs are estimated at around £250,000, and private finance options are being considered.

Local Government Enforcement Review

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what action the Government are taking in response to the local government enforcement review published last year. [7952]

Mr. Freeman: The then President of the Board of Trade and the Secretary of State for the Environment commissioned the local government enforcement review on 17 January 1994. Its remit was to look at the scope for improving co-ordination and reducing inconsistencies in the way legislation is enforced by local authorities. This follows concerns about burdens on business raised by the business deregulation task forces chaired by Lord Sainsbury.

The report of the review team was published on 30 September 1994. It identified examples of existing best practice which might be more widely adopted by local authorities, including means of making enforcement more transparent, providing guidance, and encouraging flexibility. Relevant organisations including local authorities, business and professional bodies were consulted. Some 150 replies were received and carefully considered. There was broad support for the report's recommendations.

The Government's conclusions in response to the review are as follows:

> The Government welcome the fact that the local authority associations have responded to the review by commissioning the production of a guide to good practice in local authority enforcement, accepting many of the recommendations of the review including the setting and publishing of clear and fair enforcement policies and complaints procedure; communicating effectively with business about requirements imposed by legislation; and involving business in the enforcement process generally, in a spirit of co-operation designed to reduce the need for heavy-handed enforcement. Work on the guide is underway, and the Government look forward to final publication with great interest.
> The Government agree that the review's recommendation that local authority officials be consulted at an early stage about proposed new EC laws which will have an impact on local authority enforcement. The Government accept that this should also be the practice for United Kingdom legislation—as it frequently is. Local business partnerships, which promote a dialogue between business and enforcement officers, have an important part to play by extending this consultation process to the business community who ultimately have to fulfil the requirements of the legislation.

The Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994, which received Royal Assent after the local government enforcement review was published, takes the review's recommendations further in two areas:

> Section 5 of the Act enables Ministers to introduce into existing legislation requirements which the review proposed as good practice. This includes a requirement for enforcement officers to provide a written explanation of any remedial action suggested, what action is necessary and why with a chance to make representation, and to provide details of the mechanisms for appealing against the enforcement action.
> Section 6 of the Act provides for the introduction of a model appeals mechanism which will be available for take-up by Departments, which should provide a quicker, simpler and less expensive way for business to challenge decisions when other means of resolving the difference of views have been exhausted.

The review also made recommendations concerning co-ordination by different local enforcement departments of inspection visits they make on business. These were echoed by similar recommendations in the September 1995 deregulation task force report, which have been accepted by Ministers. The Cabinet Office deregulation unit will discuss with central Government Departments and with enforcers how best these recommendations might be taken forward.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Chauffeur-driven Cars

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Lord President of the Council what the cost of chauffeur-driven cars used by his Department was in each of the past five years. [5859]

Mr. Newton: The information is as follows:

1991–92	146,000
1992–93	151,000
1993–94	158,000
1994–95	167,000
1995–96[1]	101,000

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Construction and Engineering Courses

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many colleges of further education in the United Kingdom have facilities for students who wish to pursue vocational qualifications in construction and engineering at N/SVQ levels 2 and 3; [6074]

(2) what measures are being taken to safeguard those who wish to pursue lifetime learning in construction and engineering at local colleges of further education. [6072]

Mr. Paice: Information on the number of further education colleges in the United Kingdom which provide courses in construction and engineering is not held centrally. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is responsible only for further education in England.

Details of the type of provision available in further education colleges in England are matters for the Further Education Funding Council. I am therefore asking the council's chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which bodies will be involved in the investigation into allegations of misinformation concerning the grant maintained ballot at Hurworth school; what are their terms of reference; and how much the investigation will cost. [5778]

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 14 December 1995]: My officials have written to the chairman of the governing body of Hurworth school and the local education authority inviting their comments on the allegations. This is in accordance with normal departmental procedures. As with all other such investigations, officials will review the evidence submitted taking account of any other available information. The costs of the investigation to the Department will largely depend on the time spent by the officials concerned as part of their normal duties and cannot readily be identified.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many complaints about disinformation she has received in connection with ballots on grant-maintained status; how many such complaints she has investigated; how many of the complaints investigated have been upheld; and how much, in total, investigations into such complaints have cost. [5779]

Mrs. Shephard [holding answer 14 December 1995]: My Department receives a considerable volume of correspondence about ballots on grant-maintained status, and information on the number of letters complaining about misinformation is not available. Since the implementation in January 1994 of section 31(1)(g) of the Education Act 1993, my Department has received complaints of misinformation leading to a formal investigation concerning 35 ballots. Of the completed cases, two complaints relating to misinformation have been upheld and the ballots—one of which resulted in a yes vote, and in one a no vote—were declared void. The costs of such investigations to the Department largely depend on the time spent by the officials concerned as part of their normal duties and cannot readily be identified.

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in respect of each school which has been the subject of a formal inquiry by her Department into the running of its ballot on opt-out status, in which instances was (a) a letter sent by her to the local hon. Member informing them of the setting up of the inquiry, (b) was the letter also released to the press and (c) did the letter contain references to the hon. Member's spouse or child. [5937]

Mrs. Shephard [holding answer 14 December 1995]: In the case of Hurworth school in Durham, serious allegations had been made in the press relating to its ballot for grant-maintained status, and it was reported that the head teacher of the school had written to the right hon. Member for Sedgefield (Mr. Blair) expressing his concern. In the light of these circumstances, I considered it appropriate to write to the hon. Member as I did.

Ms Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in respect of each school which has been the subject of a formal inquiry by her Department into the running of its ballot on opt-out status, in which cases the setting up of the inquiry also announced in a press release; how long the inquiry took; and how was the outcome of the inquiry was made public. [5939]

Mrs. Shephard [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The available information indicates that inquiries into ballots on grant-maintained status have been announced in press releases relating to the following schools:

Eastwood School, Nottinghamshire
George Spencer School, Nottinghamshire
Grangefield School, Cleveland
Laisterdyke Middle School, Bradford
Abbs Cross School, Havering
Sacred Heart High School, Hammersmith and Fulham
George Tomlinson School, Bolton
Canon Slade School, Bolton
All Saints Schools, Sheffield
Rutlish School, Merton
St. Thomas Becket School, Knowsley
Codsall High School, Stafordshire
Great Wyrley High School, Staffordshire
Calday Grange Grammar School, Wirral
Wirral Grammar School for Boys, Wirral
Hurworth School, Durham.

The investigation into the ballot at Hurworth school continues. Information on the length of previous inquiries and how the outcomes were made public is not readily available.

Ms Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the total cost so far to her Department of the decision to hold an inquiry into the ballot at Hurworth school. [5935]

Mrs. Shephard [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The cost to my Department of the decision to hold an inquiry into the ballot at Hurworth school cannot readily be identified because the work has been undertaken by a number of officials as part of their normal duties.

Ms Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list each school which has been the subject of a formal inquiry by her Department into the running of its ballot on opt-out status, and in each case indicating (a) who or what prompted her Department to launch a formal inquiry, (b) what had been the result of the ballot into which the inquiry was held and (c) what was the outcome of the inquiry, (d) what was the parliamentary constituency of the schools. [5936]

Mrs. Shephard [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The following table shows such information as is readily available:

Ms Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will arrange for all press releases and letters to hon. Members relating to every school which has been the subject of a formal inquiry by her Department into the running of its ballot on opt-out status to be placed in the Library. [5932]

Mrs. Shephard [holding answer 14 December 1995]: Press releases which have been issued by my Department relating to inquiries into the running of ballots on grant-maintained status have been placed in the Library. Letters to hon. Members concerning school ballots on grant-maintained status are between my Department and the hon. Member concerned.

Dangerous Weapons

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidelines her Department has issued to schools regarding pupils found with dangerous or offensive weapons while attending school. [6981]

Mr. Robin Squire: None on this specific subject, but in May 1994 the Department issued guidance on a whole range of issues relating generally to pupil behaviour and discipline in the "Pupils with Problems" series of circulars.

Student Support

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what financial assistance is available to students registered for full-time courses required to attend only to retake an examination and not eligible for (a) a student loan, (b) a grant or (c) income support, and who cannot register as unemployed. [6335]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 18 December 1995]: Students required to attend full time remain eligible for grant, student loan and access fund payments. Those required to attend part time are able to take part-time employment. Vulnerable students, such as lone parents and the disabled, retain their right to state benefits whether they are attending full time or part time.

Part-time Teachers

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the number of part-time teachers in each of the past three years. [7012]

Mr. Robin Squire: The numbers of part-time qualified teachers serving in the maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special schools sector in England were as follows:

January 1993: 54,900
January 1994: 57,300
January 1995: 59,400.

Teachers in sixth form colleges, pupil referral units, unattached special units and teachers providing education other than in schools are excluded throughout.

Learning Credits

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans her Department has to introduce learning credits for post 16-year-olds; when it intends to implement them; and what funding mechanism it intends to use. [6960]

Mr. Paice: The Government remain attracted in principle to the idea of learning credits for all 16 to 19-year-olds but recognise that their introduction would have significant practical implications. Comments have been invited on the Coopers and Lybrand study of learning credits which has published alongside the second Competitiveness White Paper, "Forging Ahead", in May.

We are now considering how best to develop the idea of learning credits further in the context of the Department's wider programme, set out in the White Paper, to improve education and training for 16 to 19-year-olds.

Pupil: teacher Ratios

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the average pupil:teacher ratio for each year since 1992; and if she will make a statement on the average pupil:teacher ratio forecast for the year 1996. [7011]

Mr. Robin Squire: The available information is shown in the following table. Information on the 1996 overall pupil:teacher ratio will be available in April 1996.

Overall pupil:teacher ratio[1] in schools[2] in England 1992–95 position in January each year

Year	Including sixth form colleges	Excluding sixth form colleges
1992	17.4	—
1993	17.7	17.8
1994	—	18.1
1995	—	18.3

[1] Including the full-time equivalent of part-time teachers and counting part-time pupils as 0.5 FTEs.

[2] Maintained nursery,primary and secondary schools.

Enterprise Allowances

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the cost of the enterprise allowance initiative in each of the years since its introduction. [6978]

Mr. Paice: The enterprise allowance scheme was introduced in 1982. Its successor, from 1991, was the business start-up programme.

The information requested is given in the following table:

Year	Cost £ million
1982–83	2.4
1983–84	23.2
1984–85	80.1
1985–86	108.4
1986–87	149.7
1987–88	200.7
1988–89	196.7
1989–90	170.9
1990–91	133.1
1991–92	161.8
1992–93	149.2
1993–94	123.3

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have benefited, and how many businesses have been generated by the enterprise allowance since its inception. [6979]

Mr. Paice: A total of 565,700 people joined the enterprise allowance scheme between 1982–83 and 1990–91 and 162,800 joined its successor, business start-up, between 1991–92 and 1994–95. In 1994–95 the budget for the programme was absorbed by the single regeneration budget.

The number of businesses generated is lower than the number of people in the programme because not all grants were made to sole proprietors.

Greenbank Project, Liverpool

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the timing of European social fund payments to the Greenbank project, Liverpool. [7158]

Mr. Forth: The Greenbank project submitted claims for three projects in 1994. The payments were issued on the following dates:

		Date
940892UK1	First advance	25 October 1994
	Second advance	3 April 1995
	Interim payment	13 December 1995
940912UK1	First advance	9 December 1994
	Second advance	3 April 1995
	Interim payment	8 December 1995
940913UK1	First advance	10 March 1995
	Second advance	10 March 1995

The Department has issued first advances for two of the three projects submitted by Greenbank in 1995.

		Date
950992UK1	First advance	2 October 1995
950993UK1	First advance	25 August 1995

The third project—950991UK1—will receive its first advance once the Department has received a public match funding certificate. The Government have not yet received sufficient second advanced claims from objective 1 projects in 1995 for the second advance payment to be drawn down from the European Commission.

European Social Fund

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many representations she has received in 1995 about payments to voluntary organisations from the European social fund; and if she will make a statement. [7124]

Mr. Forth: There have been 60 recorded representations from or on behalf of voluntary organisations made to the Department in 1995, about payment delays and the European social fund payment process. Payment delays have been caused by a series of difficulties arising from the late signing of the 1994–96 programme and from the interpretation of the new 1993 ESF regulations.

Small and Medium Enterprises

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what work her Department has done to develop best practice in the publication of departmental procurement guidance material relevant to small and medium enterprises' needs. [6631]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The Department has produced a purchasing manual which deals with all aspects of procurement, including purchasing from small and medium enterprises.

In addition, staff follow central guidance such as the best practice guides, issued by the central unit on procurement, and other recommendations, as in "An Efficiency Unit Scrutiny: The Government's Use of External Consultants", to keep documentation issued as simple and user-friendly as is practicable.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what meetings her Department has had since May 1995 with organisations representing small firms to review tendering procedures. [6632]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The Department was represented at a meeting with the CBI small firm panel, the Association of British Chambers of Commerce and the Forum of Private Business held on 27 September 1995 to review tendering procedures.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what advice has been given to procurement staff on the implications of purchasing from small and medium enterprises. [6633]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 19 December 1995]: All staff involved in procurement have been issued with a purchasing manual which deals with all aspects of procurement including purchasing from small and medium enterprises.

Procurement staff also have copies of guidance issued by the central unit on procurement which has issued a series of best practice guides, copies of which are available in the Library.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress her Department has made regarding establishing a contact point with responsibility for liaison with relevant business support organisations and taking forward small and medium enterprise related public procurement initiatives. [6714]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 19 December 1995]: A contact telephone number for the purchasing co-ordinating unit of the former Employment Department is given in "Tendering for Government Contracts", a copy of which is available in the Library. That contact remains extant.

Access to Work

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the budget for the access to work programme in each region of Britain in the current financial year. [7164]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 19 December 1995]: I have been asked to reply.

The regional distribution of resources is a matter for the Employment Service to manage as an agency. The Employment Service allocates and monitors resources so as to achieve the most effective use of the money available.

Teacher Recruitment (Priority Subjects)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much money will be available to trainee teachers under the new priority subject recruitment scheme for 1996–97; and how this money will be allocated to individual students. [7333]

Mr. Robin Squire: A total of £1.4 million has been retained in the bursary scheme to cover students in the second year of two-year courses in England and Wales. In 1996–97 £7.869 million will be available under the new priority subject recruitment scheme in England, administered by the Teacher Training Agency. I have asked the chairman of the TTA to write with details of the allocation arrangements. The Higher Education Funding Council for Wales will be administering a similar initiative in Wales in 1996–97.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much funding has been made available in bursaries to trainee teachers in priority subjects since the commencement of the scheme; and what subjects have been covered. [7334]

Mr. Squire: By the end of the current financial year some £67 million will have been made available since the start of the scheme in 1986–87. The following subjects have been included at some time in the course of the scheme: chemistry, physics, biology, technology, mathematics, modern foreign languages and Welsh.

Nursery Education Vouchers

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many nursery vouchers will be issued to parents in respect of three terms of nursery education; and how many vouchers in total will be issued in (a) the pilot phase of the scheme and (b) in the first year of national implementation of the schemes. [7345]

Mr. Robin Squire: In each phase, every eligible parent of a four-year-old child will receive vouchers for a maximum of three terms of nursery education, concluding with the term before the child attains compulsory school age. Parents will receive one voucher for each term.

Teacher Training

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was (a) the target intake and (b) the actual intake to teacher training courses, in each subject area, in each year since 1989. [7342]

Mr. Robin Squire: Intake targets, and the actual intakes, for initial teacher training courses for each year since 1989 are given in the following table:

ITT target and actual intake in each subject area since 1989

		England and Wales					England

[1] Figures for 1995–96 are provisional.

Private Sector Loans

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how the savings in 1996–97 resulting from the delay in the introduction of subsidised private sector loans will now be accounted for in the budget of the Department for Education and Employment. [7382]

Mr. Forth: The postponement of the introduction of private loans will mean that the resultant savings will not be made in 1996–97. The Government will be considering what, if any, steps need to be taken as a consequence in the light of expenditure plans for 1996–97 as a whole. The Department's estimate for 1996–97 will provide for expenditure on student loans.

Education Outside School

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children between the ages of five and 16 years receive their education outside school; and what percentage of the total five to 16-year-old population this figure represents. [7651]

Mr. Robin Squire: As of January 1995, a total of some 17,650 children between the ages of five and 16 years were receiving education "otherwise than at school" provided by local education authorities. Of that number, some 9,170 were registered at pupil referral units. The figure of 17,650 represents approximately 0.24 per cent. of the total of five to 16-year-old population in England.

ENVIRONMENT

Queens Square Hotel, Liverpool

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what account was taken of the impact the hotel element of the Queens square development, Liverpool, on the position of the existing hotels; how many beds (a) will be provided and (b) jobs created; how much Government grant was provided; what capacity of rooms is expected; what will be the average room rate; and if he will list the projects which were turned down following the funding provided for the hotel development; [5171]

(2) what consultation, took place with existing hoteliers and Liverpool businesses before embarking on the Liverpool Queens square hotel development; what assessment he has made of (a) the extent of discussions with the local community and (b) the effect of subsidies to surrounding infrastructure development on the competitiveness of the new hotel. [5172]

Mr. Gummer: The proposal for a new hotel, as part of the overall development of Queens square, is a key element of Liverpool city challenge's action plan, which has been subject to consultation with a wide range of interests.

An application for funding has been submitted by the developers to English Partnerships and EP is seeking European funding from the European regional development fund under the objective 1 programme. No decision has yet been taken by either. The package is being appraised in the normal way both by EP and the objective 1 secretariat to determine costs, benefits and value for money.

Structural Funding (Liverpool)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much of the objective 1 money allocated for tourism and related purposes in Liverpool has been (a) allocated and (b) designated; and what remains. [5117]

Mr. Gummer: Allocations in the objective 1 programme cover the whole of Meseyside. The total allocation to support the cultural, media and leisure industries—driver 4—is approximately £42 million, of which £2.4 million has been committed in offer letters. Projects seeking a further £15.5 million are under consideration. Within driver 4, some £10 million is allocated specifically to support the development of visitor attractions. Of this, £887,000 has been committed in offer letters; projects seeking a further £9 million are under consideration.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much his Department spent on official hospitality in 1994–95 and the financial year to date; and what is the 1995–96 projected budget for official hospitality. [5591]

Sir Paul Beresford: In 1994–95 the cost of hospitality, which is included in the running cost budget for my Department, was £121,000. Figures for the financial year to date are £63,000.

The projected budget for 1995–96 is £114,000.

Pipeline Link (Yorkshire Water)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the cost of constructing a mains pipeline link into the Yorkshire Water area from an adjacent water authority area. [6431]

Mr. Clappison: The cost of such a pipeline would depend on the length, the type of terrain to be crossed and whether there are suitable water treatment facilities to process the water. Yorkshire Water announced a new programme on 13 December, estimated to cost around £50 million and to be completed by early next summer, to provide some 35 miles of new pipeline and five new pumping stations to create a new east-west link from the Yorkshire grid near Selby to the major conurbations of West Yorkshire.

Advertising

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the expenditure of his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title for each year since 1990–91; and what estimate he has made for 1995–96 based on expenditure to date and existing plans. [6567]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested is not kept in the required format and is not available except at disproportionate cost.

Research Studies (Wearside)

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all Department of Environment funded pilots, trials and research studies which have been conducted since 1989 involving the residents of (a) the City of Sunderland, (b) Wearside district and (c) the Sunderland travel-to-work area identifying (i) title, summary and duration of the pilot-trial, (ii) target population and total number of participants and (iii) whether each pilot, trial or research finding was published and date of publication; and if he will give details of all other non-Department of the Environment research bodies or other organisations involved in each pilot, trial or research scheme. [6306]

Sir Paul Beresford: Information on this range of activities is not held centrally, either by the Department of the Environment or the Government office for the north-east.

The only information held centrally by the Department of the Environment relates to statistical surveys and is shown in the table. The Department has carried out a number of national surveys since 1989, in which residents of the Sunderland-Wearside area may have been selected to take part. However, the Department does not have a central record of the residence of all persons participating in these surveys.

Water Grid

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimates he has made of the likely cost of constructing a water grid in Great Britain. [6420]

Mr. Clappison: The National Rivers Authority's discussion document "Water Resources Development Strategy" estimates that the capital cost of a water grid to meet additional demands of 2,000 ml/d would be several billion pounds.

Telephone Helplines

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what financial support Government give through (a) the standard spending assessments, (b) the rate support grant and (c) other means to local authorities to fund rape crisis or sexual assault telephone helplines; and which authorities receive such funding. [6433]

Sir Paul Beresford: As part of the safer cities initiative, we provide grant direct to a number of voluntary bodies and other organisations for the provision of rape crisis or sexual assault telephone helplines.

Standing spending assessments are made in relation to the major groups of services. They do not distinguish such detailed provision as telephone helplines. Revenue support grant is based on the total of SSAs, without distinction between services. It is for authorities to decide how much of their revenue from RSG and other sources they will spend on such telephone helplines. The Department has no information on authorities' expenditure on these services.

Discharge Consents (Appeals)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many appeals have been lodged by water companies against National Rivers Authority consents; if he will list each appeal; and how long each appeal has been on file. [6048]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 18 December 1995]: Since 1990, water companies have lodged a total of 1,854 appeals against NRA discharge consents. Following clarification of policy issues arising in the appeals, the NRA has been reviewing the consents in question with the water industry. As a result, over 700 appeals have now been satisfactorily resolved and work is continuing to deal with the remaining cases as expeditiously as possible. I am placing the information requested in the Library of the House.

Air Pollution (London)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information was received by his Department concerning air pollution levels in London between 8 and 11 December; and if he will make a statement. [6479]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 18 December 1995]: The Department of the Environment receives information on hourly concentrations of nitrogen dioxide, sulphur dioxide, fine particles—PM10—carbon monoxide, ozone, benzene and 1, 3–butadiene from its data dissemination unit at the national environmental technology centre, Culham, Oxfordshire. This information is also made available on the Internet. Information on hourly levels of nitrogen dioxide, sulphur dioxide and ozone, described as "very good", "good", "poor" or "very poor", together with a forecast for the following day, is made available on Ceefax, Teletext and a range of other media.

Between 8 and 11 December "poor" air quality was forecast for London. "Poor" air quality then occurred for nitrogen dioxide for a period of eight hours at the Department's automatic monitoring site at Cromwell road and for two hours at Earls Court. One hour of "poor" sulphur dioxide occurred at Bexley. There were no forecasts or occurrences of "very poor" air quality.

Repossessions

Mr. Jim Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the progress of schemes to assist home owners threatened with repossession by banks and building societies. [7004]

Mr. Clappison: Mortgage lenders are pursuing a range of initiatives designed to help borrowers in difficulty and to avoid unnecessary repossessions. The success of Government policies in securing sustainable economic growth, increased employment opportunities and low interest rates means fewer people are likely to get into difficulties with their mortgage payments and those in arrears are more likely to be able to pay them off.

Do-it-yourself Shared Ownership Programme

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultation was undertaken with housing associations before amendments were made to the eligibility criteria of the do-it-yourself shared ownership programme in respect of private tenants; what account was taken of the practice of housing associations in respect of their policy towards applications from private tenants when their quotas were filled; and what action his Department intends to take to help those private tenants who have (a) signed agreements with housing associations, (b) given notice to their present landlords and (c) paid for valuation fees, mortgage offers or local authority searches who were subsequently informed that their agreements have been cancelled. [6910]

Mr. Clappison: Housing associations were not consulted about our decision, as part of the Budget settlement for the Housing Corporation's approved development programme, to direct the whole of the DIYSO programme at housing association and local authority tenants from April 1996, to ensure that for every successful DIYSO applicant a social letting would be released for another family in housing need.

We have asked the Housing Corporation to honour any firm pre-commitments it has made on the DIYSO programme. My officials are considering with the corporation what procedures should be adopted by housing associations to protect private sector tenants who have been accepted onto the DIYSO scheme.

Homelessness

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the number of individuals registered as being homeless in (a) England, (b) each region and (c) each local authority in each year since 1979; and what was the percentage change on the previous year. [7000]

Mr. Clappison: I have today placed in the Library tables giving the figures for, and percentage changes in, the numbers of households for which each local authority in England reported it had accepted responsibility to secure accommodation, under the homelessness provisions of the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977 and the Housing Act 1985 in the years 1979 to 1994.

The table also gives regional and England totals, which include estimates for missing data.

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the cost of providing bed-and-breakfast accommodation for homeless persons for the last five years; and if he will provide a breakdown by (a) region and (b) local authority. [7001]

Mr. Clappison: The net costs of housing homeless households in bed-and-breakfast accommodation are reported by local authorities in England on their revenue outturn returns.

I have today placed in the Library a table giving the reported information for the years 1990–91, the first year in which this information was collected on the revenue outturn return, to 1993–94.

Data on local authorities' expenditure on bed-and-breakfast accommodation are also published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy in its annual "Homelessness Statistics Actuals" publication. Copies of these publications, which are available for all years since 1989–90, are in the Library.

Water Conservation

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of customers' willingness to respond to appeals to save water since privatisation. [6675]

Mr. Clappison: The issues of demand and consumption management are being considered as part of the longer-term review of water resource management announced by my right hon. Friend on 1 September this year.

Rented Accommodation (Expenditure)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much he is spending on the rental of accommodation in (a) London and (b) Greater Manchester. [7002]

Mr. Clappison: My Department's spend on the rental of accommodation includes:

(a) £231.4 million per annum in Central London; and

(b) £16.1 million per annum within the old Greater Manchester boundary, both sums being inclusive of VAT.

New Forest Heritage Area

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to be able to make an announcement on the extent of the New Forest heritage area. [6984]

Sir Paul Beresford: In his answer of 14 July 1994, Official Report, column 767–69, announcing that the same planning policies as apply to a national park will apply to the wider New Forest heritage area, my right hon. Friend, the former Minister for the Environment and Countryside, said that the boundary of the heritage area would emerge from the current local plan process. The preparation and adoption of local plans is the responsibility of the statutory local planning authorities.

I understand that the relevant New Forest district local plans defining the New Forest heritage area boundary were adopted recently, but that an area of land north of Totton and to the east of the Totton western bypass is proposed by the district council in the deposited New Forest district local plan to be included in the heritage area. This proposal will be considered in the context of the emerging New Forest district-wide local plan.

Rivers

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of rivers in England is in good or fair condition and what is the European average. [7005]

Mr. Clappison: The recent Dobris report prepared by the European Environment Agency on the state of the pan-European environment includes estimates of the percentage of river length in various European countries which, on the basis of the definitions given in the report, can be described as of good or fair quality. These definitions do not necessarily correspond to those used in individual countries.

The report includes data in respect of 12 European Union countries, including Scotland and Northern Ireland, and 10 other European states. The table provides a comparison, as a percentage of river length, between the data for England and Wales and, respectively, the average for the European Union countries and for all the countries for which data are provided.

	Good	Fair
England and Wales	65	23
European Union	43	36
All countries	34	43

Rented Housing

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to make additional resources available for the provision of affordable housing for rent. [7003]

Mr. Clappison: Over the next three years, 1996–97 to 1998–99, we estimate that public resources and private finance will provide an average each year of around 60,000 new social lettings for rent and shared ownership reflecting our estimate of need.

Wearmouth Colliery (Regeneration)

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his definition of suitable regeneration use in respect of the Wearmouth colliery site in Sunderland. [7155]

Sir Paul Beresford: Urban development corporations can reclaim land for a wide variety of uses, subject to their general object of securing the regeneration of their areas. The phase 2 scheme at Wearmouth colliery is expected to be taken forward on the basis of offers of interest from the private sector, and it is not appropriate at this stage to predetermine what uses might be the most suitable for the site.

Enterprise Allowances

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) in how many regions of the United Kingdom enterprise allowances are currently available through training with enterprise councils; [6996]

(2) in how many TEC areas enterprise allowances are currently available. [6977]

Sir Paul Beresford: The enterprise allowance scheme is no longer available.

Since 1 April 1995, support for new businesses is one of the objectives of the SRB challenge fund, which is available throughout England. Some 80,000 new business start-ups are forecast to be supported over the lifetime of schemes approved in the first and second challenge fund bidding rounds. These new business-start-ups will take place in all regions in England.

Training and enterprise councils may also provide additional support for enterprise and the expanding network of business links will give access to practical advice and guidance for new and growing businesses.

Workplace Accidents

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the accident, work-related medical complaint and death rates for workplaces where the work force was (a) represented by a trade union in collective bargaining and (b) not represented by a trade union, for each of the last 10 years. [7203]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Health and Safety Executive does not collect the information in the form requested. However, the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985, RIDDOR, require work-related deaths, certain injuries and cases of occupational disease to be reported to the enforcing authority for the purposes of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974. The table gives the overall rates for injuries reported under RIDDOR for each of the years since the regulations came into force on 1 April 1986.

Based on the global estimates for work-related ill health compiled by HSE from the 1990 labour force survey, which pointed to some 2.2 million cases of work-related ill health, it is estimated that work-related illness may affect some 6 per cent. of the adult population.

Injury rates (per 100,000 workers) as reported to enforcing authorities 1986–87 to 1994–95[1]

	Fatal		Major injuries		Over three-day injuries

[1] Provisional.

[2] Data includes the 167 fatalities of the Piper Alpha disaster, 6 July 1988.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his assessment of (a) the number of employers discouraging employees from reporting workplace accidents and (b) the effect of such discouragement on industrial accident statistics collected by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [7314]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information is not available to make such an assessment.

Whatley Stone Quarry

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the effect of the plan to double the output of Whatley stone quarry on the immediate environment, the City of Bath's hot springs and on the water supply to Bristol; and if he will make a statement. [7332]

Sir Paul Beresford: Two planning applications for the proposed extension of Whatley quarry were the subject of a public inquiry in the spring of 1992, at which their environmental effects, including those on the Bath hot springs and the water supply to Bristol were considered. The planning applications were subsequently refused by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. A revised planning application for a smaller extension to the quarry is now before my right hon. Friend for him to decide whether to call it in for his own determination following another public inquiry. His decision will be made shortly.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations his Department has received about plans to increase the size of Whatley stone quarry in Somerset; and if he will make a statement. [7341]

Sir Paul Beresford: A planning application for the extension of Whatley quarry is currently before my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for him to decide whether it should be called in for his own determination following a public inquiry. We have received over 500 representations about the proposal from the local authorities, organisations and individuals. Many are objecting to the application or requesting that it be called in; others request that it be left to Somerset county council as planning authority to determine.

Hedgerows

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Government will publish their consultation paper on the draft regulations to protect important hedgerows as provided for by section 97 of the Environment Act 1995; what is the delay in the production of hedgerow evaluation criteria by ADAS; and when he expects the final regulations to be implemented. [7075]

Mr. Clappison: The hedgerow evaluation criteria, which are being developed by ADAS under a research contract, will be an integral feature of the consultation paper on the draft regulations to protect important hedgerows. Production has been delayed by several factors associated with our aim to introduce a scheme which is fair, workable and practical. For example, additional effort was devoted to testing the criteria on a large number of hedgerows of different types. ADAS was asked to undertake more detailed analysis of the data that resulted from this field trial and survey. The consultation paper will be produced following publication of the ADAS research report. It remains our aim to introduce the hedgerow protection scheme by July 1996.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of hedgerow loss between January 1995 and January 1996. [7071]

Mr. Clappison: The results of the last hedgerows survey commissioned by the Department were announced by my right hon. Friend the Member for South Ribble (Mr. Atkins) on 21 July 1994. These indicated a net loss, as a result of both removal and change in management, of 18,100 km of hedges per year in England and Wales during 1990–93. No further research into hedgerow loss has been undertaken.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the original timetable for the production of hedgerow evaluation criteria by ADAS; what is now the timetable; and if he will make a statement. [7146]

Mr. Clappison: The original research contract was due to end on 8 August 1995. This has since been extended to 29 February 1996.

Negative Equity

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the percentage of home buyers in each of the past five years experiencing negative equity in England. [7247]

Mr. Clappison: Estimates of negative equity are sensitive to underlying assumptions such as changes in house prices. Using the Department's house price index, it is estimated that, in each of the last five years, the percentage of households in England buying their home with a mortgage who experienced negative equity was as follows:

1990: 3 per cent.

1991: 6 per cent.

1992: 10 per cent.

1993: 11 per cent.

1994: 8 per cent.

Average Rents

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the average rent in (a) local authority, (b) housing association and (c) private sector accommodation in each year since 1979 in (i) cash and (ii) real terms. [7242]

Mr. Clappison: The available information is given in the tables.

Health and Safety

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) which organisations he consulted about changes to the guidance on health and safety enforcement practice; and if he will make a statement; [7243]

(2) when he issued his proposals on health and safety enforcement practice for consultation under section 3(1) of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994; and if he will make a statement. [7244]

Sir Paul Beresford: Guidance on arrangements for the enforcement of health and safety at work is a matter for the Health and Safety Commission. The commission has drawn up statutory guidance under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974, which reflects the enforcement principles of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994. In so doing the Commission has sought the views of local authorities through the Health and Safety Executive local authority enforcement liaison committee and the deregulation task force. I understand that the commission plans to issue the guidance early next year. It will be reflected in instructions to Health and Safety Executive inspectors.

Police Authorities (Standard Spending Assessments)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is, for each police authority in England and Wales, the proposed standard spending assessment for 1996–97 and the standard spending assessment set for 1995–96 and each of the previous five years. [7275]

Sir Paul Beresford: The total standard spending assessments of police authorities in England are given in table 1. SSAs for police authorities in Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

In non-metropolitan counties before 1995–96, the element of the SSAs relating to police formed part of the SSA for the county council. The police elements of the SSAs for all authorities are given in table 2.

Krypton Gas

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what inquiries are being made into the climatic effects of krypton gas being released into the atmosphere as a result of uranium reprocessing. [7254]

Mr. Clappison: I am not aware of any inquiries in progress at present. In 1993, Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution published a report, entitled "A Review of the Potential Effects of the Release of Krypton-85", which had been prepared for it by the university of Manchester institute of science and technology. This confirmed the conclusion of an earlier study, commissioned by British Nuclear Fuels from Imperial college, London, that the reprocessing of spent nuclear fuel at the thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield would have insignificant effects on cloud microphysics.

Waste Regulations

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress he has made on the revision of waste regulations. [7807]

Mr. Clappison: My Department is currently working on a number of measures in the waste management field, which are at various stages of development. We have been concerned about the implications of implementing these proposals for local waste regulation authorities, including those affected by local government reorganisation, and for the new environment agencies which take over the waste regulation function on 1 April.

In order to avoid overloading regulators with change during this busy transitional period, and to help to ensure a smooth transfer of responsibilities, we envisage a progressive timetable for these new measures. Against this background, the Government have also decided to provide a further extension to 30 September of the transitional arrangements for trade effluent treatment plants, further to the extension introduced last August which expires on 1 April. The proposals are as follows:

Proposed new Special Waste Regulations, published for consultation last March, are intended to be made and laid before Parliament by 1 April, which will come into force in the summer.

Regulations to extend until 30 September current transitional arrangements for effluent treatment plant which will be made in the New Year, which will come into force before 1 April. Proposed changes to requirements concerning technical competence may also be included, subject to consultation.

Measures to extend and amend waste management licensing exemptions for composting, and sewage/water treatment plant and possibly other activities will be proposed in the Spring, with a view to their coming into operation by 1 October.

Measures to extend waste management controls to certain types of agricultural and mining and quarrying waste; and provisions about consulting and compensating those with rights in land adjoining waste facilities, will also be proposed later in the year, with a view to these taking effect by the end of the year.

Local Authority Housing Stock

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to encourage more local authorities to transfer their housing stock to alternative landlords. [4875]

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply 19 December 1995, c. 1327]: I have today issued bidding guidance to enable authorities to bid for resources from a challenge fund to improve the remaining poor-quality council estates. The name of the fund is the estates renewal challenge fund.

The estates renewal challenge fund is worth more than £300 million over the next three years and will help improve the remaining poor quality estates by speeding their transfer to housing associations and other new landlords.

The money will be available to meet a wide range of costs associated with transfer and I want all local authorities to consider this option as part of their housing strategy. Transfers, which would go ahead only if both councils and tenants wanted them, can bring real benefits to tenants living in the worst conditions where there is the greatest need for investment.

I will be placing copies of the guidance in the Libraries of both Houses.

TREASURY

Income Tax

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people paid tax at marginal rates of 50 per cent. and above, broken down (a) into 10 per cent. bands and (b) by family type in (i) 1988 and (ii) the latest date available. [7187]

Mr. Jack: Nobody has had a marginal rate of income tax of 50 per cent. or above since 1988.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was raised by the 1p on the basic rate of income tax in each year since 1985. [5500]

Mr. Jack: Information for years 1985–86 to 1993–94 is available in table 4.5 of the Autumn Statement. Information for later years is available in table 6 of the tax ready reckoner. Copies of these are available in the Library.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update, to take account of the 1995 Budget, the information on tax changes contained in his answer of 21 October 1986, Official Report, columns 812–14, and indicate separately the effects of the 1995 Budget on each of these levels. [4513]

Mr. Jack: Readily available information on the annual reduction in income tax liability for 1996–97 compared with the 1978–79 indexed regime is given in the table. This comparison is hypothetical since if an indexed version of the 1978–79 tax regime had prevailed over the last 18 years the income base would not have grown in the way it has. The effect of changes in mortgage interest relief cannot be included in the analysis because most mortgage interest relief is given at source and therefore is not recorded on individual tax records.

Table A: Average reduction in income tax per individual[1] in 1996–97 compared with the 1978–79 indexed regime

Range of individual's income in 1996–97 (£)	Number of individuals 1996–97[1] (million)	Total reduction (£ million)	Average reduction (£ per annum)

5,000 to 10,000	8.0	3,100	390
10,000 to 15,000	6.0	4,900	810
15,000 to 20,000	4.2	5,200	1,240
20,000 to 30,000	4.1	7,300	1,790
30,000 to 50,000	1.7	4,700	2,780

[1] Individuals liable to income tax under the 1978-79 indexed regime.

In contrast to these hypothetical figures, table B shows how the share of income tax actually paid by high-income groups has risen since 1979, while the share of the income tax burden borne by low-income tax payers has fallen.

Motability

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, if he will make a statement on the measures he has taken to prevent the Motability scheme from being used for tax evasion purposes. [5095]

Mr. Jack: I cannot comment on a particular body or organisation's tax affairs.

Value Added Tax (Wales)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what revenue was raised from (a) VAT and (b) income tax in Wales in 1994–95; and what is his estimate for revenue from (a) and (b) for 1996–97. [5955]

Mr. Jack: Consumer spending in Wales on goods and services subject to VAT is a little under 5 per cent. of the United Kingdom total. On this basis, VAT in Wales was about £1.8 billion in 1993–94 and £2 billion in 1994–95. The income tax liability for residents of Wales was around £2.3 billion in 1993–94, excluding the impact of mortgage interest relief at source. Estimates are not available for later years.

Advertising

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the expenditure of his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title for each year since 1990–91; and what estimate he has made for 1995–96 based on expenditure to date and existing plans. [6573]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Newspaper advertising is not distinguishable from other types of advertising. The total expenditure is as follows:

Year	£
Treasury
1992–93	286,538
1993–94	281,330

Sale of shares in BT and the electricity generating companies

1993–94: £12 million

1994–95: £8 million

1995–96 (estimate): £0.

The non-departmental public bodies have reported no spending on advertising in any of these three years.

Disposable Incomes

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each member state of the European Union the level of net disposable income per head in constant 1995 prices for the last available three years. [6001]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 18 December 1995]: Information on the net disposable income per head at constant 1995 prices is not available. Information on disposable income per head is published in the Eurostat publication "National Accounts ESA, Detailed tables by sector, Volume 1, Non-financial transactions, 1982–1993" which is available in the Library.

The ESA term gross disposable income corresponds to personal disposable income in the United Kingdom national accounts.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the total cost for himself and other departmental Ministers for each since 1991–92, including the current year of (a) overseas travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers and their advisers, (b) car and chauffeuring costs of ministers, (c) ministerial security costs and (d) domestic travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers. [6396]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Expenditure for the Chancellor of the Exchequer and other departmental Ministers is shown in the table:

	Overseas travel and accommodation £	Cars and chauffeuring £	Domestic travel and accommodation £
1991–92[1]	66,444	—	2,185
1992–93[1]	49,005	—	1,725
1993–94	77,266	284,694	4,268
1994–95	67,335	283,518	2,564
1995–96[2]	43,785	192,569	1,142

[1] The cost of chauffeur-driven cars was centrally accounted for and the costs for the Ministers' cars are indistinguishable from other officials' cars.

[2] To end November.

Departmental spending on ministerial security (c) forms an indistinguishable part of the Department's overall security budget.

Departmental Running Costs

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the cost of running his departmental office, and that of his predecessor, for each year since 1990–91 including the current year, broken down into (a) telephone bills, (b) total staff costs, (c) press and communications, (d) entertainment, (e) alcoholic drinks, (f) non-alcoholic drinks, (g) stationery, (h) office refurbishment and (i) other. [6395]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Figures for running the departmental office of the Chancellor are given in the table.

	1990–91	1991–92	1992–93 £	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96[4]
Telephone[1]	4,391	3,391	5,154	13,303	13,661	8,727
Staff costs	345,907	387,921	424,805	475,078	461,577	283,414

	1990–91	1991–92	1992–93 £	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96[4]
Press[2]	468,125	503,474	493,517	600,761	591,192	383,607
Other[3]	98,498	178,738	142,844	211,025	196,426	96,502

[1] The increase in costs between 1992–93 and 1993–94 largely reflects the delegation of the costs of the Reuters service.

[2] Press and Communications have been defined as the running costs of the Press Office.

[3] Figures for entertainment and drinks are not separately identifiable and have been included in Other.

[4] To end November.

Stationery costs are centrally funded.

Figures for refurbishment are not readily available but are included as part of the running cost expenditure shown in the departmental annual report.

This table does not include the Chancellor's car, as this cost is not distinguishable from the other Ministers' cars.

Family Expenditure Survey

Ms Corston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of those in households (a) responding to the family expenditure survey of 1994–95 and (b) completing census forms in 1991 were (i) aged 75 to 84 years, (ii) aged 85 years or older, (iii) long-term sick and/or because of handicap limited in their activities, (iv) sharing household with others in the same dwelling, (v) homeless and (vi) unemployed for six months or more. [6799]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Information for (iv), (v) and (vi) is not available from either the family expenditure survey or the 1991 census. Information for (iii) is not available from the FES of 1994–95.

(a) Percentage of those in households responding to the family expenditure survey of 1994–95

(i) aged 5 to 84 years: 4.5

(ii) aged 85 years or older: 1.1

(b) Percentage of those in households completing census forms in 1991

(i) aged 75 to 84 years: 5.5

(ii) aged 85 years or older: 1.5

(iii) long term sick and/or because of handicap limited in their activities: 12.2

Ms Corston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the disposable household income at April 1995 prices of (a) the poorest decile group, (b) the poorest quintile group, (c) the average household, (d) the richest quintile group and (e) the richest decile group in the family expenditure surveys of (i) 1965, (ii) 1970, (iii) 1980, (iv) 1990 and (v) 1994–95. [6800]

Mrs. Knight: Data from the family expenditure survey are given in current prices.

Information from the 1980 FES may be found for category (c) in table 44, and for categories (a), (b), (d) and (e) in table 47 of the 1980 FES report.

Information from the 1990 FES may be found for category (c) in table 31, and for categories (a), (b), (d) and (e) in table 25 of the 1990 FES report.

Information from the 1994–95 FES may be found for category (c) in table 8.1, and for categories (b) and (d) in table 8.3 of the 1994–95 FES report. Average weekly disposable household income of category (a) was £60.41, and of category (e) was £800.66.

All these reports may be found in the House of Commons Library.

Information from the 1965 and 1970 family expenditure surveys could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ms Corston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to Tables 4.1 and 10.4, how many one adult and two adult retired households participating in the family expenditure survey for 1994–95 received income from (a) state pensions and/or income support only, (b) state pensions and occupational pensions, (c) state pensions and personal pensions, (d) state pensions, occupational pensions and personal pensions and (e) none of these sources, by gross income decile group. [6798]

Mrs. Knight: Pursuant to tables 4.1 and 10.4 in the report on the 1994–95 family expenditure survey, in each gross income decile group, over 90 per cent. of one adult and two adult retired households received income from category (b) state pensions and occupational pensions, category (c) state pensions and personal pensions and category (d) state pensions, occupational pensions and personal pensions. In each gross income decile group, less than 5 per cent. of one adult and two adult retired households received income from category (a) state pensions and/or income support only, and category (e) none of these sources.

Labour Statistics

Ms Church: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the change between 1992 and 1995, in absolute terms and as a percentage of the work force, in (a) full-time permanent employment, (b) part-time permanent employment, (c) temporary employment, (d) full-time self-employment and (e) part-time self-employment. [6913]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The requested information is shown in the following table.

Employees in Great Britain[1]

	Change—Summer 1992 to Summer 1995 Thousands	Per cent.
Full-time permanent	–126	–1
Part-time permanent	205	5
Temporary	339	25

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the extended life of the private finance panel and the provision of grant in aid. [7953]

Mr. Jack: My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has agreed that the life of the private finance panel be extended to 30 September 1997. Grant in aid to meet the running costs of the private finance panel executive, which provides administrative and other assistance to the panel, will be sought in estimates for Her Majesty's Treasury's vote, class XVI, vote 1.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the letter of comfort to be provided to financial institutions and other participants in consortia participating in the private finance initiative to cover business expectations beyond the public sector contracting cycle. [2821]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 November 1995]: I know of no such general letter of comfort and have no plans to issue one. Particular contracts may provide for possible extension of the contract beyond the period initially planned, although in general there will be competitive benefits if the original supplier is not guaranteed to recover the original investment. I would like to draw the hon. Member's attention to the case studies, which discuss optimum contract length, in chapter 4 of the private finance guidance handbook "Private Opportunity, Public benefit", a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Small and Medium Enterprise

Mr. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what has been the outcome of his Department's review of measures taken to facilitate small firms' access to appropriate areas of Government procurement in the light of best practice; [6671]

(2) what progress his Department has made regarding establishing a contact point with responsibility for liaison and relevant business support organisations and taking forward small and medium enterprise related public procurement initiatives. [6721]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The Treasury set up a central purchasing unit five years ago to deal with all matters relating to the procurement of goods and services within the Department. This follows advice on good procurement practice issued by the central unit of procurement and acts as a focal point for all suppliers' business inquiries irrespective of the size of supplier.

Manufacturing Employees

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many jobs in manufacturing were lost between (a) the first quarter of 1974 and the second quarter of 1979 and (b) the second quarter of 1979 and the present day. [7032]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The information requested is set out in the table:

Employees in Great Britain (seasonally adjusted) (net change—thousands)

	June 1974–June 1979	June 1979–October 1995
Standard Industrial Classification 1980 Divisions 2, 3 and 4	–609	—

Housing Authorities (Loan Books)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what date the decision to sell the loan books of the Housing Corporation, Scottish Homes and Tai Cymru was made; and for what reasons it was not included in the Red Book expenditure tables. [6929]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The decision to sell the loan books was taken alongside other public expenditure decisions announced in the Budget. Allowance for the sales was made in the Red Book expenditure tables.

Benefits-in-kind

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultation the Inland Revenue has had with the chairmen of non-departmental public bodies concerning revenue investigations into the value of benefits-in-kind, executive car leasing and other prerequisites. [6818]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 19 December 1995]: I am not aware of any such consultations. But, as part of its general tax compliance programme, the Inland Revenue may seek to satisfy itself that all benefits that are taxable on directors and employees have been disclosed.

Landfill Levy

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the two rates at which the landfill levy will be applied were arrived at; and if he will make a statement. [6889]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The different rates of landfill tax for inactive and other wastes reflect the different effects on the environment caused by landfilling these different types of waste.

Commemorative Coins

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if Her Majesty's Government plan to issue any new commemorative coins. [7769]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Her Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to approve my recommendation that a Crown be issued in 1997 with new obverse and reverse designs to mark the 50th anniversary of the wedding of Her Majesty the Queen and His Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh.

It is not intended that these coins should go into general circulation although the coins will be available at most banks and post offices for £5 and special collectors' versions will be issued in precious metal and base metal. The coins will not be issued to the public until 1997.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Inward Investment

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for (a) each standard region of the United Kingdom and for (b) the United Kingdom, all inward investment projects published (i) during 1994 and (ii) since January 1995, indicating (1) the number of jobs committed and (2) the amount of gross investment, where published, expressed in pounds sterling at constant prices. [7040]

Mr. Oppenheim: A record number of inward investment projects were notified to the Invest in Britain Bureau in the financial year 1994–95. The regional breakdown of this is as follows.

Table A: 1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995

Region	Number of projects	Total jobs (created/ safeguarded)
East	12	2,462
East Midlands	44	11,670
North-east	41	15,281
Northern Ireland	23	5,259
North-west	53	7,494
Scotland	81	10,795
South-east	40	18,195
South-west	21	2,093
Wales	51	5,235
West Midlands	62	12,266
Yorkshire and Humberside	25	6,274
Total	453	91,394

Table B: 1 April 1995 to 18 December 1995

Region	Number of projects	Total jobs (created/ safeguarded)
East	2	400
East Midlands	4	353
North East	11	1,095
Northern Ireland	4	237
North West	13	1,276
Scotland	21	2,592
South East	23	10,439
South West	4	1,648
Wales	13	2,215
West Midlands	24	3,613
Yorkshire and Humberside	23	4,394
London[1]	1	150
N/S[2]	2	210
Total	145	28,622

[1] Figures for London are now separate from those of the South East.

[2] Not specified—project will create or safeguard jobs in more than a Single region.

Capital expenditure is not quoted in the preceding tables. This is because the information is not always made available to the Invest in Britain Bureau by the investor. Figures in table (B) should be taken only as indicative, as there is often a delay between a project announcement and official notification reaching the IBB.

IBB figures are based on numbers of projects notified to the IBB at the time of the decision to invest. Companies are under no obligation to notify their investment decisions and the figures take no account of subsequent developments.

New Companies

Mr. Welsh: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many new companies in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland have registered in each of the past seven years; and if he will provide a breakdown by sector. [7245]

Mr. Oppenheim: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to Companies House under its chief executive Mr. David Durham. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Durham to Mr. Andrew Welsh, dated 20 December 1995:

You recently asked the President of the Board of Trade for information on the registration of new companies. The President has asked me to deal with your request, as I have responsibility as Chief Executive and Registrar of Companies.

We are able to give you separate figures for the seven years for Scotland and Northern Ireland, but only a combined figure for England and Wales. We are not sure what you mean by "breakdown by sector". If you are referring to industry type, this information could be gathered from our database, but the exercise would be extremely time consuming and would not be economically viable.

New Companies Incorporated

Financial year	England/Wales	Scotland	Northern Ireland
1994–95	124,800	7,100	1,053
1993–94	109,000	6,400	955
1992–93	102,700	6,100	891
1991–92	105,400	6,600	1,075
1990–91	108,700	6,800	1,103
1989–90	119,300	7,000	1,186
1988–89	128,100	6,900	1,067

The statistics for England/Wales and Scotland are taken from DTI report "Companies in 1994–95": statistics for Northern Ireland are provided by the Information Unit, NI Registry.

I hope this information is helpful.

Ministerial Offices

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much has been spent on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in his Department in each of the last three years. [5561]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Expenditure on furnishing and decorating ministerial offices in each of the last three years is included in the running cost expenditure of my department, which is published in the annual report.

Export Credits Guarantees

Mr. Welsh: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total value of export credits guarantees in each of the past five years; and if he will provide a breakdown by sector. [7267]

Mr. Oppenheim: The figures requested are as follows:

£ million

	1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
Civil	1,318	1,442	1,881	1,507	1,325
Defence	640	276	1,591	1,973	543
Aerospace	342	377	330	606	1,137
Total	2,300	2,095	3,802	4,086	3,005

These figures relate to guarantees issued for project capital goods only. They do not include guarantees for short-term credits by ECGD's insurance service group prior to privatisation in 1991, nor do they include contracts covered under ECGD reinsurance treaties.

Shipyards

Mr. Welsh: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, how many shipyards were operational in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland in each of the past 10 years. [7276]

Mr. Eggar: The following table gives the numbers of operational United Kingdom shipyards known to the Department, and building merchant ships of 100 gross tonnes or more, over the past six years.

Year	Number
1990	25
1991	19
1992	19
1993	16
1994	14
1995	13

Information for earlier years and by country could be produced only at disproportionate costs.

Nuclear Power

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were, in 1995 prices, the construction costs of each of the advanced gas-cooled reactor nuclear power stations currently scheduled for privatisation. [7060]

Mr. Lang: I refer the hon. Member to the notes on tangible fixed assets on pages 55 and 65 of the report and accounts of Nuclear Electric 1994–95 and pages 49 and 56 of the report and accounts of Scottish Nuclear 1994–95, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the amount of the nuclear levy spent on the AGR stations currently scheduled for privatisation for each year of operation. [7059]

Mr. Eggar: Income from the fossil fuel levy forms part of Nuclear Electric's total income; the uses to which this income has been put are a commercial matter for the company.

Foreign Investment

Mr. Booth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the estimated figures for foreign investment into the United Kingdom for each year since 1979; and what equivalent figures his Department compiled in respect of (a) Germany and (b) France for the same period. [5893]

Mr. Oppenheim: Data on foreign direct investment into the United Kingdom, Germany and France are regularly published in "International Direct Investment Statistics Yearbook, OECD", copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Data from this source are currently available for the years 1981 to 1993. Definitions of foreign direct investment differ from country to country.

Inward direct investment flow figures into the selected countries 1981–93

Year	UK $bn	Germany $bn	France $bn
1981	5.9	0.3	2.4
1982	5.3	0.8	1.6
1983	5.1	1.8	1.6
1984	-0.2	0.6	2.2
1985	5.8	0.6	2.2
1986	8.6	1.2	2.7
1987	15.5	1.9	4.6
1988	21.4	1.2	7.2
1989	30.4	7.1	9.6
1990	32.9	2.5	9.0
1991	15.8	4.2	11.1
1992	16.4	2.5	15.9
1993	14.5	0.5	12.1

Notes:

1. Flow figures are volatile and fluctuate year to year in part due to the cyclical nature of reinvested profits and the lumpiness of merger and acquisition activity.

2. The definition of direct investment differ between countries.

British Coal

Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when British Coal sold CINMan; what was the total number of bidders; which bid was successful; and what criteria were used to make the choice. [6740]

Mr. Page: These are matters for British Coal as vendor.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the sale on CINMan by British Coal; and if he will indicate where the advertisements were placed. [6739]

Mr. Page: These are matters for British Coal. I am asking the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Mineworkers' Pension Scheme

Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the latest valuation of the (a) mineworkers' pension scheme and (b) the staff superannuation fund; how many trustees of the scheme there are including the chairperson; who is the sponsoring body of each trustee; and what is the annual salary that has been proposed or agreed for the scheme's trustee's. [6741]

Mr. Page: The market values of the mineworkers' pension scheme and the staff superannuation scheme funds at the end of October 1995 were £8.52 billion and £8.87 billion respectively.

The current trustees of the mineworkers' pension scheme are:

M. Butler (Chairman)
P. Keenan
S. Gleig
G. Ferguson
M. Atkinson
G. Bolton
N. Greatrex
J. Stones
J. Wills
T. Gay

Mr. Butler, Mr. Keenan, Mrs. Gleig, Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Atkinson have been selected and appointed by the Secretary of State, in accordance with the provisions of the appendix to the articles of the trustee company. These provisions also allow for the phased replacement of union-appointed trustees by elected pensioner representatives. Mr. Bolton and Mr. Greatrex, both of whom were previously union-appointed representatives, were elected as pensioner representatives in their respective constituencies from 1 October 1995. The election process for the remaining three constituencies begins this month with the three further elected trustees due to take office from 1 April 1996. No remuneration is currently paid to MPS trustees, although I understand the question of modest remuneration remains under consideration.

The trustees of the staff superannuation scheme, their sponsors and remuneration, remain as set out in my answer to the hon. Member for the City of Durham (Mr. Steinberg) on 28 November 1995, Official Report, column 546.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the annual salary that was (a) proposed and (b) agreed for the (i) chairperson of the mineworkers' pension scheme and (ii) the chairperson of the staff superannuation fund; and what salary was paid to the previous chairperson of each fund. [6742]

Mr. Page: Under the rules of the staff superannuation scheme the remuneration of the trustees may be determined by me after consultation with them. The salary of the current chairman was accordingly determined by me at £15,000 per annum. Her predecessor received no remuneration.

The rules of the mineworkers' pension scheme do not currently allow remuneration to be paid to the chairman or to the trustees.

Electro-shock Batons

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade of whom inquiries were made by his Department in the process of investigating allegations concerning British companies' involvement in the sale of electro-shock batons abroad. [7312]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Inquiries were made by the Department of the companies concerned and within government.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the human rights record of the country for which the electronic batons were destined for which his Department issued a trans-shipment licence in 1993; and what monitoring the Department is undertaking of their use. [7313]

Mr. Taylor: I refer the hon. Member to my letter to her of 3 August 1995 in response to her question tabled on 17 July 1995. No further details can be released about this matter.

Fuel Rods

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is (i) the average cooling time for reprocessed fuel rods and (ii) the effect on containment of radiation shortening the cooling time of reprocessed fuel rods has on a reprocessing plant. [7261]

Mr. Page: The cooling time for spent fuel rods prior to reprocessing is dependent on the nature of the fuel and the conditions under which it was irradiated.

Dounreay

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what investigations have been conducted in response to Dounreay management's failure to disclose a 1977 explosion in an intermediate-level waste shaft to the COMARE committee. [7289]

Mr. Page: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the then Under-Secretary of State for Scotland to a question from the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill (Mrs. Fyfe) on 21 June 1995, Official Report, column 316.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will provide details of (a) maintenance procedures at Dounreay and (b) any fires or other accidents occurring during maintenance procedures at Dounreay. [7293]

Mr. Page: Maintenance procedures at Dounreay are matters for the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority. Details of all incidents at Dounreay are contained in site newsletters, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to change the requirement that Dounreay workers maintain secrecy regarding materials deposited in a sealed-up intermediate-level waste disposal shaft. [7292]

Mr. Page: An inventory of the intermediate level waste disposal shaft at Dounreay was published in the 1988 report of R. M. Consultants Ltd. which was placed in the Library of the House. The inventory has since been updated and was made available at the Dounreay local liaison committee meeting on 28 November 1995.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the average number of fuel rods reprocessed at Dounreay for each year between 1965 and 1990. [7252]

Mr. Page: During the period 1965 to 1990, UKAEA reprocessed 9,027 material test reactor fuel elements at Dounreay. The reprocessing plant has not always operated continuously in the past but in discrete campaigns; it would be misleading therefore to quote an annual average. However, for eight of the years in this period the plant reprocessed more than 600 elements in each year. These figures do not include the reprocessing of oxide fuel from the prototype fast reactor.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to privatise the Dounreay facility. [7378]

Mr. Page: I have no plans to privatise the Dounreay facility.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what types of public consultation have been undertaken with the Scottish or United Kingdom public to determine the acceptability of processing foreign waste at Dounreay. [7255]

Mr. Page: Reprocessing of spent nuclear fuel at Dounreay is an established industrial process which has been undertaken at Dounreay for more than 30 years. It is carried out subject to nuclear installations inspectorate and Her Majesty's industrial pollution inspectorate regulation. There has been no reason to engage in public consultation about the continuation of such a well-established and well-regulated activity.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what is the minimum cooling period for reprocessing fuel rods enforced by the management of Dounreay; [7277]

(2) what is the estimated time from shipment of spent nuclear fuel from a foreign country to Dounreay with the return of uranium per the return to sender clause; [7284]

(3) what steps have been taken to reduce the fire risk at the Dounreay facility especially during maintenance operations; [7279]

(4) what disposal methods are used to deal with the nitric acid used to wash out contaminated areas of the Dounreay facility prior to maintenance; [7257]

(5) what process is in place for analysing alpha contamination at Dounreay; [7260]

(6) what percentage of low-level waste produced as a result of re-processing at Dounreay ends up in the low-level waste dump site at Dounreay; [7285]

(7) what further checks were made on containment of radiation immediately after the windows and concrete shielding were replaced in the Dounreay facility's D1206 caves; [7280]

(8) what is the current status of the dissolver tank at Dounreay that experienced an incident eight years ago resulting in high levels of neutron radiation in the area; [7258]

(9) what actions were taken at Dounreay to remedy or replace the leaking transportation flasks responsible for contaminating the area around the Caithness complex; [7377]

(10) what action has been taken over the last 10 years to resolve the problems of inadequate containment of radiation in the Dounreay facility's D1206 caves where irradiated fuel rods are dissected; [7379]

(11) what long-term contingency plans there are for the Dounreay intermediate level waste shaft in the event of a breach in the next 100 years. [7290]

Mr. Page: These are operational matters for UKAEA. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Radioactive Waste

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the definition of (a) high-level waste and (b) low-level waste used by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority. [7283]

Mr. Page: UKAEA uses the waste category definitions given in the Reviews of Radioactive Waste Management Policy (Final Conclusions), Cm 2919.

ECGD

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the future of the transitional reinsurance facility provided by the Export Credits Guarantee Department. [7844]

Mr. Nelson: On 24 June 1993, Official Report, column 265, my predecessor announced to the House that the Government would extend the transitional reinsurance facility until at least the end of 1997. At the same time he undertook to give two years' notice of any decision to withdraw from the facility. The case for the continuation of the facility beyond 1997 would be reviewed in 1995.

The review has now been completed. It remains the Government's objective to maximise the provision of this type of reinsurance by the private market, with the aim of ultimately eliminating the need for this form of Government support. The review has confirmed that we are making progress towards this objective. Only minimal support was required in 1995, and we do not expect the facility to be called on at all in 1996. Nevertheless, the Government recognise that there remains a need for the facility to remain in place for the time being, to be used as a last resort in the unexpected event that the private reinsurance market is not able to meet fully the needs of United Kingdom exporters. The terms and conditions under which the facility is offered will continue to reflect this objective. We intend that the facility should be reviewed again in 1999, and as before, in order to provide a stable framework of support for both insurers and UK exporters and to avoid disruption to the market, adequate notice will be given of any decision to withdraw the facility.

Research Masters

Mr. Forman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress has been made by the pilot scheme for research masters, announced by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in October 1994. [7846]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The progress has been encouraging. It is plainly too early to reach firm conclusions about either the first year or the pilot more generally, but I congratulate all the university and research council staff involved on their achievements to date.

The new, one-year, research master's—"MRes"—degree comprises: a significant, original research component; a grounding in research techniques and/or development of specialist knowledge; and modules to broaden the student's experience by equipping him or her with transferable skills and knowledge, such as team-working, communication, and the exploitation of research. The purpose of the pilot is to test the effectiveness of this new degree as a direct route into employment or as a preparation for a PhD. Courses began admitting students for the first time this October.

We estimated that the research councils would support some 250 students. However, in view of the quantity and quality of submissions from university departments, the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council—BBSRC—Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council—EPSRC—Medical Research Council—MRC—and Natural Environment Research Council—NERC—made provision to support a total of 275 students on some 35 courses in 25 universities. A total of 265 places had been taken up by the end of October. Successful applicants were required to hold at least an upper second class honours degree, as for research council PhD studentships. The table gives the numbers of studentships offered, applications made, and awards taken up by the end of October in more detail.

	Offered	Applications	Taken up
BBSRC	45	321	45
EPSRC	160	442	150
MRC	25	166	25
NERC	45	467	45
Total	275	1,396	265

I understand that many of the courses have additional students supported by industry or other means, and that other industry or external involvement includes offers of placements for research projects, of contributions to teaching and course modules; and of assistance in final examinations.

The research councils are currently collecting more detailed information from the first year's intake by means of an "entry" questionnaire. Preliminary analysis will be available in the spring. The councils also plan to visit courses, and to collect further data using an "exit" questionnaire. I shall publish a more detailed report on overall experience with the first year of the pilot as soon as this is possible.

The Economic and Social Research Council—ESRC—and the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council—PPARC—are not involved directly in the pilot. The ESRC has very largely anticipated the research master's in the social sciences through its research training guidelines and course recognition procedures. There will, for example, be some 350 ESRC students on 135 master's courses with a recognised research weighting in 1995. The ESRC is asking students starting standard and research-weighted master's course to complete the "entry" questionnaire which is being used in the pilot. PPARC is monitoring the EPSRC's experience with the pilot, as well as the progress of recently introduced, four-year, first degrees—"MPhys" and "MSci".

National Weights and Measures Laboratory

Mr. Hawksley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what decision has been reached on the financial control regime under which the National Weights and Measures Laboratory will operate. [7845]

Mr. Lang: Following endorsement by the Treasury, the National Weights and Measures Laboratory will begin operating on a net expenditure control basis from 1 April 1996. From this date I shall expect it to recover its costs in full from income from customers, including the DTI. I am confident that by moving to net control the agency will have the flexibility needed to develop its business further and to meet a wider range of customer needs.

Patent Office

Mr. McAllion: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many consultants were employed in each of the years 1993, 1994 and 1995 in the information technology section at the Patent Office; and what were the costs of employing them in each year. [6688]

Mr Ian Taylor: The Patent Office made no use of external consultants in the years 1993 and 1994 in the information technology section. In 1995 it employed Coopers and Lybrand at a total cost of £35,900 plus expenses. The Patent Office has also used a number of external IT experts for specialist work as particular needs arose.

Shipbuilding

Sir Giles Shaw: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the OECD agreement on shipbuilding. [7847]

Mr. Eggar: The signatory countries to the OECD agreement decided in Paris on 11 December to postpone the entry into force of the agreement from 1 January to 15 July 1996 at the latest. This was necessary to allow more time for the United States and Japan to complete their ratification of the agreement.

The Community had already decided that, if the OECD agreement could not enter into force on 1 January 1996, it would extend its current regime for shipbuilding under the seventh directive for a further nine months until 30 September 1996 or until entry into force of the OECD agreement, if earlier. The current EC regime for shipbuilding under the seventh directive will therefore now continue on this basis in 1996.

In the United Kingdom the home credit guarantee scheme will continue on its current basis until the OECD agreement enters into force in 1996. As we announced in March, the future of the scheme is under review and I will make a further announcement about the results of the review when this is completed.

An announcement about shipbuilding intervention fund grants will be made early in 1996 once the Commission has decided the level of the EC subsidy ceiling.

Arms Export Licences

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the procedures for (a) reviewing and (b) renewing arms export licences. [7063]

Mr. Ian Taylor: All export licences for military equipment, both individual and open, are issued and, as appropriate, reviewed in accordance with United Kingdom Government policy and criteria, which are agreed with European partners and in other international forums.

Ceramic Industry

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will visit Stoke on Trent to assess developments in the ceramic industry. [6938]

Mr. Page: My right hon. Friend has no current plans to visit Stoke on Trent. I was pleased to note the recent publication of the interim report of the ceramic industry's tableware strategy group. This sets out for wider consultation a series of issues likely to affect this sector's global prospects in the long term. I welcome this initiative and hope that it will lead to an agreed agenda of competitiveness issues on which my Department can work with the industry.

Redundancies

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 7 December, Official Report, column 338, what is the required run-down in staff numbers; and what posts he expects to lose at what grades within his Department. [6509]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The Department's MINIS process is currently being used to seek savings in all areas of the Department's running costs. The balance between staff-related and other savings will not be clear until that process is completed. As in past years, the outcome of MINIS will be published and a copy placed in the Library of the House.

Goods and Services

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much his Department paid to the private sector for goods and services in 1994–95. [6495]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 19 December 1995]: My Department procured goods and services to the value of £311 million in financial year 1994–95.

OECD Comparisons

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library figures for the United Kingdom's position relative to other OECD countries in terms of (a) gross domestic product growth, (b) the level of investment in the United Kingdom as a share of gross domestic product, (c) employment creation and (d) growth in exports between (i) the second quarter of 1979 and the latest figures available and (ii) the first quarter of 1974 and the second quarter of 1979. [7022]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 19 December 1995]: Details of the UK's position relative to other OECD countries are not readily available on a quarterly basis for the information requested.

Trade Deficits

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in which years a deficit in invisible trade has been recorded since 1965; and what was the deficit. [7033]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The information is published by the Central Statistical Office as table 1.16 of the "Economic Trends" annual supplement. The publication is available in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in which year since 1965 the highest deficit in real terms has been recorded in (a) visible trade and (b) the balance of payments current account. [7053]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The visible trade deficit was equivalent to 6.2 per cent. of money GDP in 1974. The current account deficit was equivalent to 4.3 per cent. of GDP in 1989.

Manufacturing Output

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the manufacturing output change between the first quarter of 1974 and the second quarter of 1979 (a) in total and (b) as annual growth. [7030]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 19 December 1995]: Manufacturing output rose by 2.9 per cent. between the first quarter of 1974 and the second quarter of 1979, an annual growth rate of 0.5 per cent. However, manufacturing output in these periods was affected by the miners' strike and the winter of discontent. Between the first half of 1974 and the first half of 1979, manufacturing output fell by 2.5 per cent. an annual rate of fall of 0.5 per cent.

Manufacturing Trade

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the United Kingdom's percentage share of world trade in manufacturing goods for (a) the first quarter of 1974, (b) the second quarter of 1979 and (c) the present day. [7034]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 19 December 1995]: Information of the UK's percentage share of world trade is available only on a half-yearly basis.

Nuclear Electric

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the reasons for the change from previous plans of £650 million in 1997–98 and £150 million in 1996–97 in the financial requirements of Nuclear Electric; [7035]

(2) if he will make a statement on the financial requirements of Nuclear Electric in 1996–97 and 1997–98; [7037]

(3) if he will make a statement on the effect the announcement of privatisation has had on Nuclear Electric's ability to contribute to the Exchequer. [7054]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The financial requirements of Nuclear Electric in 1996–97 and 1997–98 are shown in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" for 1996–97. As outlined in the report, there will be a change in Nuclear Electric's external financing requirements following the privatisation of the company's advanced gas-cooled reactor and pressurised water reactor stations in 1996, which will leave only the magnox stations in the public sector. The change also includes revision of economic and other estimates such as electricity prices, station outputs, and cost savings, as in normal practice.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the cost of building, designing and commissioning Sizewell B and the seven advanced gas-cooled reactors; and what are the expected receipts from the privatisation of Nuclear Electric. [7036]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 19 December 1995]: I refer the right hon. Member to the notes on tangible fixed assets on pages 55 and 65 of the report and accounts of Nuclear Electric 1994–95 and pages 49 and 56 of the report and accounts of Scottish Nuclear 1994–95, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

The receipts from the Government's planned privatisation of parts of the nuclear power industry will depend on a variety of factors, including market conditions at the time of the sale.

Inflation

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the United Kingdom's position relative to OECD countries in respect of inflation. [7024]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The information is published by the OECD in "Main Economic Indicators," which is available in the Library of the House.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Millennium Exhibition

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) if the Millennium Commission will take into account in deliberating on the content and siting of any millennium exhibition, the ability of the United Kingdom to provide suitable venues for sporting events and festivals of (a) international and (b) worldwide significance; [4614]

(2) what guidelines (a) her Department and (b) the Millennium Commission, have issued for the inclusion of (1) covered and (2) open (i) arenas and (ii) stadiums to be provided in submitted plans of prospective operators of millennium exhibitions sites. [4615]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 11 December 1995]: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I shall write to the hon. Member in my capacity as chairman of the Millennium Commission and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

National Lottery

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when the Director General of the National Lottery visited Australia; who paid for the visit; how long was the visit; and what assessment he made as to the conformity of the visit with guidelines. [6684]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Office of the National Lottery is a non-ministerial Department and therefore responsible for implementing its own hospitality and travel arrangements, taking into account the principles and rules set out in the civil service management code. Oflot is under no obligation to clear with, or inform my department about, detailed arrangements. This is therefore a matter for the director general and I have asked him to write to the hon. Member, placing copies of his response in the Libraries of the House.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on what occasions for each certificate under section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 was signed by a member of his Department what was the length of time for which the certificate was valid; and in what circumstances benefit records can be used for the purpose of safeguarding national security. [5304]

Mr. Burt: No such certificates have been issued by the Department of Social Security. It seems unlikely that benefit records would have any relevance to national security.

We cannot deal in advance with the circumstances that might apply in the event of an application for a section 27 certificate being made.

War Pension

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will now end the policy of counting the first £10 of a war pension received as a result of an injury sustained while fighting as income; and if he will make a statement. [4942]

Mr. Heald: The first £10 of a war disablement pension is disregarded in all income-related benefits. We have no plans to end this arrangement.

Housing Benefit

Mr. George Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many discretionary payments under regulation 69(8) have been made; for what amounts; and what percentage this was of total housing benefit expenditure, in each year since 1991–92. [5055]

Mr. Roger Evans: The available information is set out in the table.

Housing benefit discretionary expenditure: Great Britain

Year	Discretionary payment expenditure £	Percentage of total housing benefit expenditure
1992–93	740,000	0.01
1993–94	960,000	0.01

1. Expenditure figures are final audited returns rounded to the nearest £10,000.
2. Percentages have been rounded to the nearest hundredth of a per cent.
3. Reliable data is not available for 1991-92.
4. Detail of the numbers of discretionary payments made is not collected.

Motability

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the extent to which Motability Finance Ltd., Motability Car Leasing, Motability Hire Purchase and Motability Quarter End Partnerships have used their tax capacity status for the sole and full benefit of disabled people in the scheme. [5137]

Mr. Burt: The Motability scheme has been structured to take advantage, whenever possible, of capital allowances against corporation tax to reduce the size of loans needed to finance the scheme. This is normal business practice and disabled people receive the benefit in the form of lower charges for obtaining personal transport.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the special privileges and protection from competition in respect of car leasing and hire purchase agreements enjoyed by Motability. [5089]

Mr. Burt: In general, the reliefs and benefits which underpin the Motability scheme apply equally to any suppliers whose predominant business is the supply of vehicles on lease or hire purchase to disabled people. There is one exception. Regulations provide for direct payment of a beneficiaries' qualifying benefit, in whole or in part, in support of an agreement through the Motability scheme. The Motability scheme has to compete for business in the normal way.

National Insurance Fund

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost to the national insurance fund of all current holders of an appropriate personal pension with an annual income of (a) £2,000 or below, (b) up to £3,000, (c) up to £4,000, (d) up to £5,000, (e) up to £6,000, (f) up to £7,000, (g) up to £8,000, (h) up to £9,000 and (i) up to £10,000, opting back in to SERPS in 1995–96 basing this estimate on the assumptions that (i) those contracting into SERPS continue within SERPS up to the year 2050 instead of being in an APP and (ii) future earnings remain the same in real terms. [5523]

Mr. Heald: Information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is readily available is in the table, and is based on the following assumptions:

(i) the year in which opting into SEEPS is assumed to take place is 1997–98;

(ii) earnings have been assumed to increase with age and, in addition, by 1.5 per cent. above prices for each age level;

(iii) not all earners have been assumed to work until they reach State pension age.

Extra SERPS expenditure in selected years if APP holder in low earnings bands opt back into SERPS

£ million 1995–96 prices

Earnings band for opting back into SERPS	2010–11	2020–21	2030–31	2040–41	2050–51
<2,000	—	—	—	—	—
<3,000	—	—	—	—	—
<4,000	0	0	0	10	10
<5,000	0	0	20	50	50
<6,000	0	10	40	130	120
<7,000	1	10	80	250	240
<8,000	1	20	130	420	400
<9,000	2	30	200	650	610
<10,000	3	50	300	920	860

1. Little extra cost until 2010 as most APP holders are under age 45.
2. Estimates of numbers affected based on data for 1993–94, the most recently available, used to estimate proportions of APP holders in respect of people in the earnings bands quoted.
3. Earnings under £3,000 would not accrue SERPS so no financial effect in respect of that year.
4. Earnings have been used, as a breakdown by income is not available.
5. All expenditure of £10 million and above has been rounded to the nearest £10 million.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the cost to local authorities of the software and other administrative changes that will be necessitated by the provisions of the Housing Benefit (General) Amendment Regulations 1996 in respect of payments four-weekly in arrears. [6131]

Mr. Roger Evans: The estimated total gross administrative cost to local authorities arising from the introduction of new payment rules for housing and council tax benefit is some £3 million. However, there are offsetting savings for local authorities because we estimate that there will be a reduction in overpayments of benefit as a result of the changes. On-going costs after introduction are expected to be negligible although authorities will continue to benefit from savings arising from overpayments avoided.

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the annual cost of reducing the housing benefit taper for those in work to (i) 60 per cent., (ii) 55 per cent., (iii) 50 per cent., (iv) 45 per cent., (v) 40 per cent., (vi) 35 per cent. and (vii) 30 per cent., and how many people would be entitled to housing benefit in each of these cases. [7185]

Mr. Evans: The information is set out in the table.

Estimated cost of reducing the housing benefit taper for those in work

Taper	Net cost £ million	Housing benefit caseload
65 per cent.	—	4,875,000
60 per cent.	70	4,895,000

Estimated cost of reducing the housing benefit taper for those in work

Taper	Net cost £ million	Housing benefit caseload
55 per cent.	160	4,925,000
50 per cent.	265	4,975,000
45 per cent.	390	5,030,000
40 per cent.	545	5,105,000
35 per cent.	740	5,195,000
30 per cent.	980	5,295,000

Notes:

Estimates based on the Family Expenditure Surveys of 1991, 1992 and 1993, uprated to 1996–97 prices and benefit levels.

Estimates of costs are rounded to the nearest £5 million.

Estimates of caseloads are rounded to the nearest 5,000.

Figures may not sum exactly due to rounding.

Retirement Pension

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made based on assumptions used in "Equality in State Pension Age", Cm. 2420, of the amount of (a) basic retirement pension and (b) SERPS addition payable to someone newly retired in (i) 1996–97, (ii) 2025 and (iii) 2035, giving figures separately for men and women with a full contribution record and lifetime earnings equal to (1) average male or female earnings and (2) half of average male or female earnings, expressed in cash terms in April 1996 prices and as a percentage of average earnings in the relevant years. [6530]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table.

	1996	2025	2035
Basic retirement pension	61.15	61.15	61.15
Additional pension based on average earnings
Male	77.30	99.60	103.50
Female	47.70	68.90	79.60
Additional pension based on half average earnings
Male	32.10	43.90	50.60
Female	17.30	25.50	31.70
As percentage of average earnings
Basic retirement pension
Male	15	10	9
Female	21	14	12
Additional pension based on average earnings
Male	20	16	15
Female	17	16	15
Additional pension based on half average earnings
Male	8	7	7
Female	6	6	6

Notes:

1. Estimated average earnings 1996–97 Males 397.44
Females 288.91

2. Real earnings are assumed to increase by 1.5 per cent. a year.

3. Estimates take Annualisation from 2000 and the equalisation of State pension age from 2020 into account.

4. Amounts are expressed in 1996 prices. Estimates are rounded to nearest 10 pence. Percentages are rounded to nearest whole per cent.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many times since incapacity benefit began the adjudicating authorities have decided against the opinion of Benefits Agency medical services doctors in cases of (a) mental illness and (b) physical illness in (i) the United Kingdom, (ii) Wales, and (iii) England. [6257]

Mr. Burt: Decisions on capacity are taken by independent adjudication officers who are required to take account of all relevant evidence, including medical advice from a Benefits Agency doctor. Information on the extent to which the decisions of adjudication officers concur with medical advice is not available.

Industrial Injuries

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list be each independent tribunal service region-area the total number of industrial disease mucous membrane medical appeal tribunal appeal hearings held each month since January 1994 giving (i) the number of successful awards and the average percentage of disability awarded and (ii) the number of percentage of (1) successful cases and; (2) unsuccessful cases conducted with (a) a claimant's representative present and (b) no claimant's representative present. [6323]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information requested is not readily avaiable and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what research his Department has undertaken to assess differences in social security appeal tribunal, MAT and disability appeal tribunal appeal outcomes for claimants with or without representation at the appeal hearing. [6322]

Mr. Roger Evans: No research has been undertaken by this Department specifically on this subject.

Lone Parents

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the annual cost of introducing a maintenance disregard for lone parents on income support of (i) £10, (ii) £15, (iii) £20; and how many lone parents would receive maintenance in each case. [7180]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: It is estimated that by 1998–99 the annual cost of a £10 maintenance disregard would be around £110 million; the cost of a £15 disregard would be around £140 million; and the cost of a £20 disregard would be around £170 million. Actual costs would depend on the exact level and pattern of compliance among absent parents. It is estimated that around 300,000 lone parents on income support will be in receipt of maintenance by 1998–99. In the long run, as the number of lone parents with a child support maintenance assessment increases, the annual cost of maintenance disregard is likely to double.

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the annual cost of disregarding child care costs for lone parents on income support. [7182]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information requested is not available.

Income Support

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate what the earnings disregard for income support claimants would now be if it had been uprated since 1975 under supplementary benefit; and what the costs to public funds would have been of that uprating. [7184]

Mr. Roger Evans: The earnings disregards until November 1975 were £1 a week for those required to register for work and £2 for all other claimants. Those disregards uprated in line with the Rossi index[1] would now be £4.45 and £8.65 respectively. It is not possible to make a meaningful estimate of the current costs of such an uprating because the structure and rules of earnings disregards changed with the introduction of income support in 1988.

The current standard disregard is £5 a week but a higher £15 disregard is available to lone parents, people entitled to the disability premium, couples aged under 60 who have been receiving income support continuously for two years or more, members of certain specialist forces—for example, part-time firefighters—and carers entitled to the carer premium.

Note:

[1] Rossi is the CSO retail prices index minus adjustments for housing expenditure. Rossi is the price index used for uprating most income support allowances.

Family Credit

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the cost of providing free school meals for children living in families receiving family credit. [7186]

Mr. Roger Evans: About £130 million a year.

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the annual cost of increasing the maintenance disregard for lone parents in receipt of family credit by (i) £20, (ii) £25, (iii) £30 and how many lone parents would receive maintenance in each case. [7181]

Mr. Evans: The information is set out in the table.

Estimated cost of increasing the maintenance disregard in family credit for lone parents 1996–97

Maintenance disregard increased to £	Additional net benefit costs £ million
25	10
30	15
35	20

Estimates are rounded to the nearest £5 million.

It is estimated that around 90,000 lone parents would receive maintenance in each case.

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the annual cost of reducing the family credit taper for those in work to (i) 65 per cent., (ii) 60 per cent., (iii) 55 per cent. and (iv) 50 per cent.; and how many people would be entitled to family credit in each of these cases. [7198]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table.

Estimated cost of reducing the family credit taper: 1996–97

Taper	Family credit £ million	Housing benefit £ million	Council tax benefit £ million	Net cost £ million	Family credit estimated caseload

55 per cent.	435	–40	–5	390	820,000
50 per cent.	645	–50	–10	585	900,000

Estimates based on the Family Expenditure Surveys of 1991, 1992 and 1993, uprated to 1996–97 prices and benefit levels.

Estimates of costs are rounded to the nearest £5 million.

Estimates of caseloads are rounded to the nearest 5,000.

Figures may not sum exactly due to rounding.

Voluntary Unemployment Deduction

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people received a voluntary unemployment deduction, grouped by the reason for the deduction, on the latest date for which figures are available. [7188]

Mr. Roger Evans: Based on a 5 per cent. sample taken in February 1995, 33,000 people[1] were receiving income support with a voluntary unemployment deduction.[2] The precise reason for the deduction in these cases is not known. However information as to the numbers and types of adjudication officer decisions taken in relation to voluntary unemployment is routinely kept and produced as the analysis of adjudication officers' decisions, copies of which are available in the Library.

[1] Figures rounded to the nearest thousand.

[2] Income Support Statistics Quarterly Enquiry February 1995.

Council Tax Benefit

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the annual cost of reducing the council tax benefit taper for those in paid work to (i) 15 per cent. and (ii) 10 per cent.; and how many people would be entitled to benefit in each of these cases. [7179]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table.

Estimated cost of reducing the council tax benefit taper for those in work

Taper	Net cost £ million	Council tax benefit caseload
20 per cent.	—	5,620,000
15 per cent.	40	5,675,000
10 per cent.	120	5,870,000

Estimates based on the Family Expenditure Surveys of 1991, 1992 and 1993, uprated to 1996–97 prices and benefit levels.

Estimates of costs are rounded to the nearest £5 million.

Estimates of caseloads are rounded to the nearest 5,000.

Figures may not sum exactly due to rounding.

Earnings Disregard

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost of increasing the earnings disregard for income support claimants by (i) £5, (ii) £10 and (iii) £15 a week. [7183]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table.

Increase in disregard £	Cost £ million
5	35
10	65
15	100

1. Modelled on the 1991, 1992 and 1993 Family Expenditure Surveys and the 1994 Quarterly Statistical Enquiry uprated to 1995–96 prices, benefits and earnings levels.

2. Costs include the increased costs of Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit due to increased entitlement to these benefits.

3. It has been assumed that both the head and the spouse of a couple each gain by the increases in the earnings disregards.

4. It has been assumed that no behavioural changes take place.

Benefit Savings

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list each local authority in England which achieved (a) less than 50 per cent. and (b) between 50 per cent. and 60 per cent. of its target level of weekly benefit savings resulting from the detection of housing benefit fraud in the last available year; and if he will list the actual percentage achieved by each local authority which achieved less than 50 per cent. of its target. [7147]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information for the latest available year, 1994–95, is set out in the table.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide revenue forecasts for the current year and the next five years of expenditure on schemes provided under the PFI. [5734]

Mr. Burt [holding answer 14 December 1995]: Revenue costs from public funds will not arise until 1997 when the first of our PFI systems has been developed and successfully delivered. Estimated revenue costs are subject to continuing negotiation and are commercial in confidence.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide a breakdown of administration costs incurred to date and forecast for the future on PFI work. [5733]

Mr. Burt [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The administrative costs incurred in the DSS in 1994–95 on PFI work are estimated at around £2 million. The estimated costs for 1995–96 are £8 million. It is not possible to forecast, with confidence, future administrative costs associated with PFI work.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide for schemes so far agreed under the PFI the level of financing costs above the current cost of Government borrowing for the scheme with (a) the highest financing costs and (b) the lowest costs. [5735]

Mr. Burt [holding answer 14 December 1995]: The information is not available in the format requested. It is a fundamental principle when considering schemes under the private finance initiative that what is assessed is the overall best value for money in providing a specified service, taking into account all aspects of design, building, finance and operation as a unified whole.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what technical difficulties the Child Support Agency has encountered in meeting requests for subject access under the Data Protection Act 1984; what investigations were instigated in respect of those difficulties; and what steps he has taken to ensure that future software procurement programmes will include, as part of their design criteria, routines which support the rights of data subjects under the Data Protection Act 1984. [5301]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 19 December 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary for Social Security about the Data Protection Act 1984.

Prior to August 1995 the Agency experienced some difficulties in providing information from the Child Support Computer System to the public in a clear and understandable format.

System enhancements introduced during August this year have eradicated the major technical difficulty which meant that explanations and other actions had to be undertaken clerically before personal information held on the Child Support Computer System could be issued.

The latest information that I can give you is that in over 90 per cent. of cases the Agency is answering requests for information within 40 days as required by the Data Protection Act 1984.

The Child Support Agency is registered with the Data Protection Registrar's Office in accordance with the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1984. Any future software procurement programmes will take full account of its requirements.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update his answer of 23 November, Official Report, column 231, regarding savings achieved by the Child Support Agency, to the same format as his answer of 19 July, Official Report, column 1499, to provide a full breakdown of the maintenance contributing to benefit savings from (a) pre-CSA arrangements paid direct by absent parent to parent with care, (b) pre-CSA arrangements paid through the agency collection service, (c) CSA assessments and paid direct by absent parent to parent with care and (d) CSA assessments and paid via the agency collection service. [5651]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. John Greenway, dated 19 December 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about benefit savings.

You asked for an answer given on 23 November 1995 to be updated to provide a breakdown of maintenance contributing to benefit savings between that arising from pre CSA assessments and that arising from CSA assessments.

The Child Support Agency is responsible for recording all Social Security benefit savings arising as a result of action taken to arrange maintenance. During the first two years we sought to estimate a breakdown between pre and post CSA maintenance. This was appropriate as, like any new organisation, the Agency wished to monitor its progress.

As an ever increasing proportion of all the maintenance paid has now been arranged by the Agency, producing estimates between "old" and "new" money would no longer be either valid or useful; the Agency no longer has a business need to try to divide maintenance paid in this way. I cannot therefore provide the data you ask for.

Day Centres (Homeless People)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many day centres for the homeless have received funding from his Department in the last 12 months. [7216]

Mr. Clappison: I have been asked to reply.

My Department does not fund the capital costs or the overall running costs of day centres for homeless people, but 21 day centres have received grant under section 73 of the Housing Act 1985 which is paid to voluntary sector organisations for specific projects to prevent and relieve homelessness.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many day centres for homeless people there are in the United Kingdom. [7217]

Mr. Clappison: I have been asked to reply.

This information is not held by my Department.

SCOTLAND

National Lottery

15. Mr. Jessel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of benefits to Scotland from the national lottery. [5211]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Scotland is doing extremely well from the national lottery. To date, over 560 awards have been made, totalling around £125 million.

Lockerbie

16. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the meeting of the hon. Member for Linlithgow with the Lord Advocate and the Solicitor-General concerning the request for a trial in The Hague, under Scottish rules of evidence, and under a Scottish judge, of the two Libyans accused of bombing Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie, what approach the Lord Advocate has made to lawyers in Germany and the United States, and Scots lawyers representing the accused Libyans. [5214]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None.

Local Government Finance

17. Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the percentage change in aggregate external finance to local authorities between 1995–96 and 1996–97 in (a) cash terms and (b) real terms. [5216]

Mr. Kynoch: It is plus 2.6 per cent.; and minus 0.1 per cent.

Failing Schools

18. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what policies he is pursuing to deal with failing schools in Scotland. [5217]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Examples of the policies we are following to raise standards and improve quality include:

inspection by Her Majesty's inspectors of schools with appropriate and systematic follow up the requirement on all schools to draw up school development plans, and the publication of extensive information for parents on schools' performance.

Nursery Education

19. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to improve quality and choice in nursery education. [5218]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: We plan to run the pilot phase of our pre-school education voucher initiative from August 1996. We intend to ensure that this initiative delivers high-quality provision and parental choice.

Ministers' Constituencies

20. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance is given to Ministers in his Department in respect of their treatment of their own constituencies. [5219]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Guidance is contained in the Cabinet Office booklet "Questions of Procedure for Ministers", a copy of which is available in the House Library.

Forfar Bypass

21. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the Kirriemuir and Glamis junctions on the Forfar bypass. [5221]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office has recently received three representations about the Kirriemuir and Glamis junction on the Forfar bypass, including one from my hon. Friend. As a result of the representations, a package of measures to address road safety will be introduced at the junctions early in the new year.

Private Nursing Homes

23. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next intends to meet representatives of private nursing homes in Scotland to discuss the powers of health boards in respect of registration and inspection; and if he will make a statement. [5223]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has agreed to meet nursing home proprietors in Tayside to discuss community care issues. The date has yet to be arranged.

Homelessness

24. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people are homeless or living in overcrowded or substandard accommodation in Scotland. [5224]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Information on the number of people homeless at any one time is not available. During the financial year 1993–94—the latest year for which figures are available—a total of 23,000 households containing 40,800 people in Scotland were assessed as homeless by local authorities.

At the time of the 1991 census of population, 213,900 people in Scotland were in accommodation which fell below the occupancy norm used in the census. This represents a very substantial reduction on the 1981 figure of 698,000.

It is estimated from the Scottish house condition survey that in 1991 some 217,000 people were living in dwellings which fell below the tolerable standard.

Income Tax

25. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received concerning the practicalities of a different rate of income tax for Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [5225]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: As I carry out my duties in Scotland I am constantly being made aware of the deep anxiety felt by all sections of the community on the implications of the "tartan tax".

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

26. Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress he is making towards the eradication of bovine spongiform encephalopathy; and if he will make a statement. [5226]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Very good progress is being made towards the eradication of BSE in cattle in Scotland. In 1988 we identified the reason for the sudden outbreak of the disease and took early action to eradicate that cause by banning the use of animal protein in cattle feed. Further control measures have been taken in the light of advice from our independent scientific advisers.

The success of that action is demonstrated by the continuing downward trend of cases which are now at their lowest level for five years. Out of a total number of cattle of over 2 million, the number of confirmed cases of BSE in Scotland in 1995 is expected to be around 600, which is some 27 per cent. of the 1993 level.

Our preventive measures are recognised as being safe and effective by independent experts in the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee, the chief medical officers and international bodies including the World Health Organisation.

Scottish Constitution

27. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received (a) seeking and (b) opposing independence for Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [5227]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In the past six months I have received 44 representations on constitutional issues of which 37 favoured Scotland remaining within the United Kingdom. Of the remainder, two argued the case for an independent Scotland, and five for a multi-option referendum on Scotland's constitutional future.

28. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the future relationship of the Government of the United Kingdom with the Scottish people. [5228]

Mr. Forsyth: The vast majority of Scots remain convinced that Scotland's best future lies within the United Kingdom. The Government agree with that view.

European Regional Fund

29. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total value of grants that Scotland has received from the European regional fund since the fund's inception. [5230]

Mr. Kynoch: Since the inception of the European regional development fund in 1975, Scotland has received awards totalling almost £1.5 billion. The Government place great emphasis on ensuring value for money from these receipts, particularly as the UK is a net contributor to the European Community budget. To ensure transparency of these receipts in the UK's public expenditure system it was announced in the House on 17 February 1992 that the Government would provide automatic cover for, and identify separately, all forecast ERDF receipts.

Crime Prevention

30. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what crime prevention measures he intends introducing for Scotland. [5231]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: On 11 December, my right hon. Friend announced plans for the deployment of 500 additional operational police officers, backed up by improved technology, which we expect will help to prevent crime. I announced, on 13 December, a £4 million CCTV challenge competition for Scotland to help fund more CCTV schemes, which have a clear effect on preventing crime. The Scottish Crime Prevention Council will continue its programme of crime prevention measures, which have achieved much since the council was set up in 1992. My right hon. Friend and I welcome the fact that recorded crime is falling—7 per cent. in the first six months of 1995, following reductions in the three previous years—and further reduction remains a major concern of the Government.

Gaelic

32. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps the European Commission has taken to promote the speaking of Gaelic in Scotland. [5233]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: This information is not held by the Scottish Office. We do, however, have details of EU structural funding of a number of projects which contribute to the promotion of Gaelic.

Monklands District Council

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects Mr. Nimmo Smith QC to complete his inquiry into the employment practices of Monklands district council. [8018]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Mr. Nimmo Smith delivered his report to me on the afternoon of 15 December. I told him that I would advise the House of the completion of his inquiry and the submission of his report. I have now read the report, which is lengthy, and I am placing copies in the House Library today.

Mr. Nimmo Smith's report concludes that Monklands district council has not failed to comply with the requirements of section 7 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. No further action is therefore required by me. I would like to place on record my thanks to him for the speed with which he has conducted his inquiry.

Crime

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he is pursuing to reduce crime.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend and I expect that further reductions in crime will be achieved by the deployment of the extra 500 operational police officers, backed up by improved technology, which he announced to the Scottish Grand Committee on 11 December. I announced, on 13 December, a £4 million CCTV challenge competition for Scotland to help fund more CCTV schemes, which have a clear effect on reducing crime. The Scottish Crime Prevention Council will continue its programme of crime prevention measures, which have achieved much since the council was set up in 1992. My right hon. Friend and I welcome the fact that recorded crime is falling—7 per cent. in the first six months of 1995, following reductions in the three previous years—and further reduction remains a major concern of the Government.

Highlands and Islands

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the economic prospects of the highlands and islands. [5234]

Mr. Kynoch: The highlands and islands area continues to benefit from the Government's careful economic policies. These have helped to reduce unemployment in the highland and islands area by 1,940 between November 1994 and November 1995 and have encouraged new enterprise. Highlands and Islands Enterprise continues to promote economic development and it is estimated that in 1995–96 HIE will have invested some £20 million in highland businesses, attracting around £64 million in private investment and creating or securing 3,000 jobs.

Field Cropping Forms

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many forms MCAP009.114 his Department received and processed in each of the past four years; [2334]

(2) if the information on form MCAP009.119 is held in computer form; what categories of analysis are used; if the information is held centrally; and if the method of information processing is standard for each area. [2336]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 27 November 1995]: The forms referred to are the covering letter requesting details of a farmer's field by field cropping for the period 1982 to 1991 and the blank cropping record itself. These forms are issued to farmers by the Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department in order that the eligibility of individual fields for aid under the arable area payments scheme can be determined.

The information is held locally in the Department's area offices and is not held on computer. The forms are analysed to ensure that individual fields meet the strict EC rules covering the eligibility of land for AAPS aid. Aid can be paid only on land which on 31 December 1991 was not in permanent grass, permanent crops, woodland or non-agricultural use. The process of analysis is standard throughout Scotland.

Information on the number of forms received and processed could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Public Opinion Surveys

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all qualitative and quantitative research projects and surveys carried out for his Department into aspects of public attitudes and opinions (a) in general and (b) in relation to specific policy proposals in each of the past three years to December 1995, indicating for each project or survey (i) the date on which the research was commissioned, (ii) the amount which his Department spent, (iii) who carried out the research, (iv) the number of people surveyed or taking part, (v) the location and time scale and (vi) which individuals and organisations have been given access to the findings. [5980]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 14 December 1995]: Information is not readily available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Department's policy is to canvass relevant views of the public wherever this is appropriate and cost-effective, and to make responses widely available subject to any essential safeguards of confidentiality.

Advertising

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the expenditure of his (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title for each year since 1990–91; and what estimate he has made 1995–96 based on expenditure to date and existing plans. [6558]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Press advertising expenditure by Scottish Office departments was as follows:

Details of press advertising by non-departmental public bodies are not held centrally.

Scottish Conveyancing and Executry Services Board

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the sources of funding of the Scottish Conveyancing and Executry Services Board. [6291]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The Scottish Conveyancing and Executry Services Board receives funding from the Secretary of State for Scotland and when operational will also receive registration fees from qualified conveyancers and executry practitioners.

Mr. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the current membership of the Scottish Conveyancing and Executry Services Board. [6292]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The current membership is:

Professor Philip Love CBE (Chairman)

Ian Buchanan Esq

R. Gavin Burnett Esq

John Murray Esq

Mrs. Joyce Simpson

Hugh Torrance Esq

Duncan White Esq OBE.

Mr. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what have been the annual costs to public funds of the Scottish Conveyancing and Executry Services Board since the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provision) (Scotland) Bill 1990 received Royal Assent; and what is his assessment of such costs in the future. [6293]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The Scottish Conveyancing and Executry Services Board was established in June 1991 and the costs to public funds are as follows:

1991–92: 113,756

1992–93: 108,796

1993–94: 31,093

1994–95: 26,299

1995–96: 10,000.

The costs for 1996–97 are estimated to be £100,000. In future years costs will depend on the volume of business. The board is expected to become self-financing in due course.

Mr. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if practitioners under the Scottish Conveyancing and Executry Services Board will be required to subscribe financially to a guarantee fund at their own expense; [6294]

(2) if practitioners under the Scottish Conveyancing and Executry Services Board will be required to take out professional indemnity insurance at their own expense. [6295]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 December 1995]: Yes.

Scottish National Heritage

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the budget for Scottish Natural Heritage for the financial years (a) 1994–95 (b) 1995–96 (c) 1996–97 (d) 1997–98. [7205]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 19 December 1995]: The information is set out:

£ million

1994–95: £39.9

1995–96: £40.3

1996–97: £36.0.

The budget for 1997–98 has not yet been decided. SNH has, however, been given a planning figure of £36.2 million for each of the years 1997–98 and 1998–99. These figures will be reviewed in the context of the Government's annual public expenditure survey and are subject to possible change in light of survey decisions.

Skye Bridge

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what surveys he has conducted into the popularity of the bridge to Skye among local residents. [5213]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Highland regional council conducted a survey among local residents in 1986 in which 70 per cent. of respondents supported the idea of a bridge replacing the ferries. Earlier this year, and prior to the bridge opening, further research was carried out on behalf of the Scottish Office by PA Cambridge Economic Consultants in liaison with the Transport Research Laboratory as part of a longer-term study of the impacts of the bridge. That work indicated varying perceptions of the bridge. Visitors to the area think the bridge will be of more benefit to residents of the area whereas residents of the area consider it likely to be more benefit to visitors. There have been no surveys since the bridge opened on 16 October.

Scottish Assembly

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has received in favour of a tax-raising Scottish Assembly. [5229]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In the past six months, I have received 16 representations in favour of a Scottish Parliament with tax-raising powers.

Balmoral Estate

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the contents of the memorandum of understanding relating to Scottish Natural Heritage in respect of the Balmoral estate; and if he will indicate the terms of the financial agreement. [5495]

Mr. Kynoch: The memorandum of understanding between Balmoral Estates and the former Nature Conservancy Council was drawn up in 1991. It is designed to cover the management of areas of special conservation interest on the Balmoral and Birkhall estates, bearing in mind that the statutory procedures for the notification of sites of special scientific interest under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 do not apply to Her Majesty's private estates in Scotland.

The provisions of the memorandum include measures for the identification of important sites, the formulation of management plans, dialogue on operations which might harm their special interest and steps which might be taken to enhance the interest.

There is no financial agreement within the terms of the memorandum. It does, however, contain provision for financial terms to be included within any voluntary agreement made in pursuance of the management plans for the site. To date, no such agreements have been entered into.

Forth Road Bridge

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the Forth road bridge was last painted; how many people were involved; what was the cost to public funds; and if he will make a statement. [5496]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Forth road bridge is the responsibility of the Forth road bridge joint board, a statutory body made up of members from Lothian regional council and Fife regional council. However, I understand from the joint board that painting of the Forth road bridge is a continuous process carried out in an eight-year cycle. Some 17 people are involved in painting the bridge, and these include both permanent and seasonal workers. In common with other expenditure on the bridge the costs are met from toll revenue. No public funds are used.

Kincardine Bridge

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if specific funding has been allocated for the replacement of the Kincardine bridge, the building of a bypass and an improved West Fife road network; [6724]

(2) what is the timetable for (a) the replacement of the Kincardine bridge, (b) the construction of a bypass and (c) the improvement of the West Fife road network; [6834]

(3) what plans he has for public consultation on all the options outlined by consultants for routes for a replacement Kincardine bridge and bypass; [6835]

(4) what is his preferred option for the replacement of the Kincardine bridge and bypass; [6836]

(5) when construction will begin on (a) the replacement of the Kincardine bridge and (b) the bypass; [6837]

(6) if he will make a statement on the funding of the Kincardine bridge and bypass. [6931]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend will be holding public consultation early in the new year on the conclusions drawn from studies of the various options at Kincardine. These studies consider the requirements of the crossing and the bypassing of Kincardine village. This will include a public exhibition in Alloa and Kincardine. A number of routes will be exhibited and information will be displayed setting out their relative merits. This will enable the options to be fully examined by the public, and individuals and local interests will be invited to give their views. At this stage my right hon. Friend has not come to any decision on the option which best meets local and national needs and careful account will be taken of all the views expressed.

When the responses to the consultation have been considered, further detailed studies will be undertaken on the preferred option to allow the preparation and publication of draft statutory orders. Subject to those responses and the progress made on that work publication is unlikely to be before mid-1997. No date is fixed for construction, and the further progress of the scheme will be dependent on the reaction of the public to the published orders and on the availability of finance in the light of other competing priorities.

The viability of an improved road between Kincardine and the M90, the West Fife regional road, has been examined as part of the Kincardine studies. However the Government's present view is that such a road could be provided only in the longer term.

Water Supplies

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of the United Kingdom's resources of water for domestic and individual supply is located in Scotland. [7269]

Mr. Kynoch: Some 12.4 per cent. of the public water resources available for domestic and industrial purposes are located in Scotland.

Negative Equity

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the percentage of home buyers in each of the past five years experiencing negative equity in Scotland. [7248]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: This information is not held centrally.

Arable Area Payments Scheme

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money was spent in Scotland in (a) set-aside payments under the arable area scheme and (b) total arable area payments in 1994–95. [7192]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Payments which have been made to farmers in Scotland under the 1994 arable area payments scheme are as follows:

(a) Set-Aside: £22,834,883.66

(b) Total AAPS Payments: £115,992,045.88.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money is forecast to be spent in Scotland in (a) set-aside payments under the arable area scheme and (b) total arable area payments in 1995–96. [7193]

Mr. Robertson: Forecast payments which will be made to farmers in Scotland under the 1995 arable area payments scheme are as follows:

(a) Set-Aside: £23,572,834

(b) Total AAPS Payments: £151,892,010.

Fisheries (Expenditure)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the level of structural support expenditure on fisheries in Scotland from (a) the United Kingdom Government and (b) European Community funds has been in each of the past three years; what is the projected expenditure in each of the next three years; and if he will make a statement. [7286]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The table shows support to the Scottish fishing industry from (a) UK Government public aid sources and (b) EC funds paid in the last three years and forecast for the next three years.

	(a) UK Government public aid sources £	(b) EC funds £
1992–93	8,024,582	2,112,221
1993–94	11,140,188	5,915,329
1994–95	9,654,932	5,887,707
1995–96	13,844,000	8,500,000
1996–97	[1]8,420,000	[1]3,420,000
1997–98	[1]7,250,000	[1]3,750,000

[1] Does not include decommissioning—forecast not available.

Radiation Discharge Levels

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what increase the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority has petitioned Her Majesty's industrial pollution inspectorate to authorise regarding emissions of (a) alpha particles, (b) caesium 137, (c) plutonium and (d) iodine. [7288]

Mr. Kynoch: The United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority has not applied to HMIPI for any increase in discharge limits for releases to the sea for alpha-emitting radionuclides, caesium 137, any isotope of plutonium, or any isotope of iodine. For releases to air, the UKAEA has not sought any increase for alpha-emitting radionuclides or iodine 129. However, the UKAEA has sought an increase in the discharge limit for caesium 137 from seven to 10 gigabecquerels, an increase in the limit for iodine 131 from 3 to 14 gigabecquerels and an increase in the limit for plutonium 241 from 5 to 5.5 gigabecquerels.

Dounreay

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what quantity of (a) alpha particles, (b) caesium 137, (c) plutonium and (d) iodine the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority is authorised to discharge into the air and sea at the Dounreay facility each year; [7287]

(2) what amount of alpha radiation Dounreay normally is allowed to release into the atmosphere in the form of particles of plutonium 239. [7278]

Mr. Kynoch: The United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority is authorised to dispose of radioactive waste to air and sea by two separate authorisations which set limits on the quantity of radionuclides or groups of radionuclides which may be discharged by a variety of routes. Full details of these authorisations are given in the published Scottish Office statistical bulletin—Env/1995/3—entitled "Radioactive Waste Disposals From Nuclear Sites in Scotland: 1990 to 1994" and a copy of the bulletin is available from the Library of the House. The following limits apply specifically to alpha emitting radionuclides, caesium 137, plutonium 241 and iodine 131.

Discharges to sea

Alpha emitting radionuclides (excluding curium 242)	0.75 Terabecquerels per annum
Caesium 137	50 Terabecquerels per annum
Plutonium 241	15 Terabecquerels per annum
Curium 242	1 Terabecquerel per annum

Discharges to air from the Fuel Cycle Area

Alpha emitting radionuclides (including plutonium 239 but excluding curium 242 and 244)	1 Gigabecquerel per annum
Caesium 137	7 Gigabecquerels per annum
Plutonium 241	5 Gigabecquerels per annum
Iodine 129	4 Gigabecquerels per annum
Iodine 131	3 Gigabecquerels per annum
Curium 242	1 Gigabecquerel per annum
Curium 244	0.1 Gigabecquerel per annum

Ms Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what inquiries he has undertaken into the hazards of radioactive elements discharged from the Dounreay facility into the sea and atmosphere. [7251]

Mr. Kynoch: Extensive monitoring of the environment around Dounreay is carried out by both the site operator and Her Majesty's industrial pollution inspectorate. The results of this monitoring are published and copies of the Scottish Office bulletin "Environmental Monitoring for Radioactivity in Scotland" and the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority's publication on "Radioactive Waste Discharges from UKAEA Establishments" are available in the Library of the House. The published results demonstrate that doses to the public as a result of discharges from Dounreay are small and well within internationally agreed limits.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what monitoring of the area around Dounreay, including Orkney coastal areas, is taking place to ascertain where plutonium particles accidentally discharged on 11 February of the current year were deposited. [7259]

Mr. Kynoch: The unplanned discharge of plutonium particulate material from the Dounreay site which occurred on 11 February was small when compared with the authorised discharge limits. These limits are set to ensure that the dose to the most exposed group in the population is extremely low and well within internationally agreed limits. The very extensive environmental monitoring programme in place around Dounreay is adequate to provide information on this and other discharges from the site. Information on this environmental monitoring programme is contained in the Scottish Office statistical bulletin "Environmental Monitoring for Radioactivity in Scotland" and a copy of this bulletin is in the Library of the House.

Food Exports

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of Scottish exports are in the food sector, and what action he is taking to promote the Scottish food sector in international markets. [7268]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: In 1994, the Scottish food and drink processing industry, excluding whisky, accounted for 3 per cent. of Scottish manufacturing exports.

There is a wide range of current initiatives to assist the promotion and marketing of the Scottish food industry in overseas markets. These are either done directly through the Scottish Office or through its economic development agencies Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise and their network of local enterprise companies. In addition to this purely Scottish effort, Food From Britain has a United Kingdom remit to assist British food and drink companies in export markets and to promote British food and drink products.

Inward Investment

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures and what resources are available to his Department for the promotion of inward investment. [5208]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Inward investment in Scotland is promoted by Locate in Scotland, which employs around 95 staff worldwide and has a budget of £8.9 million in the current year. Locate in Scotland also draws heavily on partnership arrangements with other bodies to assist it in its task.

The measures available to support inward investment are those available to support economic development generally, including, in particular, the regional selective assistance scheme.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what major investments have been made by overseas companies in Scotland's economy over the last 12 months. [5212]

Mr. Kynoch: Our continuing success in attracting inward investment to Scotland includes major announcements during the past 12 months by Chungwa Picture Tubes, Shin-Etsu Handotai, Lexmark, MIC Textiles, Selfcare International, Canon, Motorola and IBM, among others.

Community Care

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the progress of the community care arrangements in Scotland. [5210]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Local authorities, health boards and housing agencies are together making considerable progress towards ensuring that vulnerable people receive effective community care services.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if any items accepted in lieu of inheritance tax have been allocated in Scotland since he last made an announcement. [7808]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I am pleased to announce that I am allocating three paintings—"A Village Wedding" by Jan Steen, "The Castle of Bentheim from below" by Jacob van Ruisdael and "The Bird Trap" by Nicholas Berchem—to the Royal Scottish Academy on permanent loan. The paintings have been accepted in lieu of tax arising from the death of Mrs. E. S. Borthwick-Norton.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 268

SESSION 1994–95

4th December—20th December 1995

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
